

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

PREAMBLE.

WHEREAS, A struggle is going on in all the nations of the civilized world between the oppressors and the oppressed of all countries, a struggle between the capitalist and the laborer, which grows in intensity from year to year, and will work disastrous results to the tolling millions if they are not combined for mutual protection and benefit.

It, therefore, behooves the representatives of the Trade and Labor Unions of America, in Convention assembled, to adopt such measures and disseminate such principles among the mechanics and laborers of our country as will permanently unite them to secure the recognition of rights to which they are justly entitled.

We, therefore, declare ourselves in favor of the formation of a thorough Federation, embracing every Trade and Labor Organization in America, organized under the Trade Union system.

Industry and which Departments shall be governed in conformity with the laws of the American Federation of Labor.

SEC. 4. An American Federation of all National and International Trade Unions, to aid and assist each other; to aid and encourage the sale of union-label goods, and to secure legislation in the interest of the working people, and influence public opinion, by peaceful and legal methods, in favor of organized labor.

SEC. 5. To aid and encourage the labor press of America.

ARTICLE III.—CONVENTION.

SECTION 1. The Convention of the Federation shall meet annually at 10 a. m., on the second Monday in November, at such place as the delegates have selected at the preceding Convention.

SEC. 2. At the opening of the Convention the President shall take the chair and call the Convention to order, and preside during its sessions.

SEC. 3. The following committees, consisting of fifteen members each, shall be appointed by the President: First, Rules and Order of Business; second, Report of the President; third, Report of the Secretary; fourth, Report of the Treasurer; fifth, Resolutions; sixth, Laws; seventh, Organization; eighth, Labels; ninth, Adjustment; tenth, Local or Federated Bodies; eleventh, Education; twelfth, State Organization; thirteenth, Boycotts; fourteenth, Building Trades (to which shall be referred all grievances that involve only building trades, and all other matters pertaining exclusively to the building trades).

SEC. 4. The President shall direct the chief executive officers of three National or International Unions, at least ten days previous to the holding of the Annual Convention, to appoint one delegate each from their respective delegations-elect, who shall compose an Auditing Committee. The committee shall meet at such place as the President of the American Federation of Labor may direct, and at such time prior to the Convention as the President may determine is necessary for the proper performance of their duty; and they shall audit the accounts of the Federation for the preceding twelve months, and report upon credentials immediately upon the opening of the Convention. The expense of said committee shall be paid out of the funds of the Federation.

SEC. 5. Resolutions of any character or

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.—NAME.

This Association shall be known as THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR, and shall consist of such Trade and Labor Unions as shall conform to its rules and regulations.

ARTICLE II.—OBJECTS.

SECTION 1. The object of this Federation shall be the encouragement and formation of local Trade and Labor Unions, and the closer federation of such societies through the organization of Central Trade and Labor Unions in every city, and the further combination of such bodies into State, Territorial, or Provincial organizations to secure legislation in the interest of the working masses.

SEC. 2. The establishment of National and International Trade Unions, based upon a strict recognition of the autonomy of each trade, and the promotion and advancement of such bodies.

SEC. 3. The establishment of Departments composed of National or International Unions, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, of the same propositions for changes in this Constitution can not be introduced in the Convention after the fourth day's session, except by unanimous consent.

SEC. 6. The Convention shall have power to order an executive session at any time.

SEC. 7. None other than members of a bona fide Trade Union shall be permitted to address the Convention or read papers therein, except by a two-thirds vote of the Convention.

SEC. 8. Party politics, whether they be Democratic, Republican, Socialistic, Populistic, Prohibition, or any other, shall have no place in the Conventions of the American Federation of Labor.

SEC. 9. The rules and order of business governing the preceding Convention shall be in force from the opening of any Convention of the American Federation of Labor until new rules have been adopted by action of the Convention.

SEC. 10. A quorum for the transaction of business shall consist of not less than one-fourth of the delegates attending a Convention.

SEC. 11. No grievance shall be considered by any Convention that has been decided by a previous Convention, except upon the recommendation of the Executive Council, nor shall any grievance be considered where the parties thereto have not previously held a conference and attempted to adjust the same themselves.

ARTICLE IV.—REPRESENTATION.

SECTION 1. The basis of representation in the Convention shall be: From National and International Unions, for less than four thousand members, one delegate; four thousand or more, two delegates; eight thousand or more, three delegates; sixteen thousand or more, four delegates; thirty-two thousand or more, five delegates, and so on. From Central Bodies, State Federations, Federal Labor Unions, and Local Unions having no National or International Union, one delegate; provided, however, that Local Unions and Federal Labor Unions herein referred to located in one city shall have the right to unite in sending a delegate to represent them unitedly. Only bona fide wage workers who are not members of, or eligible to membership in, other Trade Unions, shall be eligible as delegates from Federal Labor Unions.

SEC. 2. The delegates shall be elected at least two weeks previous to the Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, and the names of such delegates shall be forwarded to the Secretary of this body immediately after their election.

SEC. 3. Questions may be decided by division or a show of hands, but if a call of the roll is demanded by one-tenth of the delegates present each delegate shall cast one vote for every one hundred members or major fraction thereof he represents, but no City or State Federation shall be allowed more than one vote.

SEC. 4. The Secretary shall prepare for use of the Convention printed poll lists, containing the number of votes the delegates from National and International Unions are entitled to, based upon the average membership during the year, from reports made to the office of the Federation not later than September 30 preceding the Annual Convention.

SEC. 5. No organization or person that has seceded, or has been suspended, or expelled, by the American Federation of Labor, or by any National or International organization connected with the Federation, shall, while under such penalty, be allowed representation or recognition in this Federation, or in any Central Body or National or International Union connected with the American Federation of Labor, under the penalty of the suspension of the body violating this section.

SEC. 6. No organization shall be entitled to representation unless such organization has applied for and obtained a certificate of affiliation at least one month prior to the Convention, and no person shall be recognized as a delegate who is not a member in good standing of the organization he is elected to represent.

ARTICLE V.—OFFICERS.

SECTION 1. The officers of the Federation shall consist of a President, eight Vice Presidents, a Secretary, and a Treasurer, to be elected by the Convention on the last day of the session, and these officers shall be the Executive Council.

SEC. 2. The President and Secretary shall be members of the succeeding Convention in case they are not delegates, but without vote.

SEC. 3. All elective officers shall be members of a local organization connected with the American Federation of Labor.

SEC. 4. The terms of the officers of the American Federation of Labor shall expire on the first day of January succeeding the Convention.

SEC. 5. The President and Secretary shall engage suitable offices in the same building at Washington, D. C., for the transaction of the business of the organization.

SEC. 6. All books and financial accounts shall at all times be open to the inspection of the President and Executive Council.

ARTICLE VI.—DUTIES OF PRESIDENT.

SECTION 1. It shall be the duty of the President to preside at the Annual Convention; to exercise supervision of the Federation throughout its jurisdiction; to sign all official documents, and to travel, with the consent of the Executive Council, whenever required, in the interest of the Federation.

SEC. 2. The President shall submit to the Secretary, at the end of each month, an itemized account of all moneys, traveling and incidental, expended by him in the interest of the Federation; and shall report his acts and doings to the Annual Convention of the Federation.

SEC. 3. The President, if not a delegate, shall have the casting vote in case of a tie, but shall not vote at other times. He shall be required to devote all his time to the interest of the Federation.

SEC. 4. The President shall call meetings of the Executive Council, when necessary, and shall preside over their deliberations, and shall receive for his services such sum as the Annual Convention may determine, payable weekly.

SEC. 5. In case of a vacancy in the office of President by death, resignation, or other cause, the Secretary shall perform the duties of the President until his successor is elected. In that event it shall be the duty of the Secretary to issue, within six days from the date of vacancy, a call for a meeting of the Executive Council at headquarters for the purpose of electing a President to fill said vacancy.

ARTICLE VII.—DUTIES OF SECRETARY.

SECTION 1. The duties of the Secretary shall be to take charge of all books, papers, and effects of the general office; to conduct the correspondence pertaining to his office; to furnish the elective officers with the necessary stationery; to convene and act as Secretary at the Annual Convention, and to furnish to the Committee on Credentials at the Convention a statement of the financial standing of each affiliated body; to forward on March 1st and September 1st of each year to the secretaries of all affiliated organizations a list of the names and addresses of secretaries and organizers.

SEC. 2. The Secretary shall keep all letters, documents, accounts, etc., in such manner as the Annual Convention may direct; he shall receive and collect all moneys due the Federation, and pay them to the Treasurer, taking his receipt therefor; provided, that he may retain in his hands a sum not exceeding $2,000 for current expenses, which money shall be paid out only on the approval of the President.

SEC. 3. The Secretary shall submit to the Auditing Committee, for their inspection, vouchers for all moneys expended; close all accounts of the Federation on September 30 of each year, and all moneys received or disbursed after such date shall not be reported in the general balance account of the ensuing Convention. He shall publish a financial report monthly in the "American Federationist," and send one copy to each affiliated body, and such additional number of copies as may be ordered and paid for by any organization connected with the Federation.

SEC. 4. The Secretary shall give a bond of $2,000 for the faithful performance of his duties, and for his services he shall receive such sum as the Annual Convention may determine, payable weekly.

SEC. 5. The Secretary shall issue stamps to Local and Federal Labor Unions, which shall be used by such unions with which to receipt for members' dues.

SEC. 6. It shall be the duty of each International, National, Local Trade and Federal Labor Union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to furnish to the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor a copy of all official reports issued by such affiliated organizations, containing a statement of their membership in good standing, and to furnish such additional statistical data as may be called for by the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor as may be in the possession of the respective unions.

ARTICLE VIII.—DUTIES OF TREASURER.

SECTION 1. The Treasurer shall receive and take charge of all moneys, property, and securities of the Federation delivered to him by the Secretary or other officers of the American Federation of Labor. All funds of the American Federation of Labor, exceeding fifteen thousand dollars, shall be deposited by the Treasurer in bank, or banks, on interest bearing certificates of deposit in the name of the American Federation of Labor, and in order to be cashed shall require the signatures of the Treasurer, the President, and Secretary of the Federation. The Treasurer shall collect the interest on all such certificates or other deposit at the expiration of each six months, and pay the same over to the Secretary. The Treasurer shall deposit in open account in bank, or banks, in the name of the American Federation of Labor as Treasurer, all amounts in his possession not on certificates of deposit, and before any money thus deposited can be drawn, each check shall be signed by him as Treasurer. A copy of this section shall be forwarded by the President of the Federation to each bank upon which the Federation holds certificates of deposit.

SEC. 2. The Treasurer shall pay, through the Secretary, all warrants regularly drawn on him, signed by the President and countersigned by the Secretary, as required by this Constitution and none others.

SEC. 3. The Treasurer shall submit to the Annual Convention a complete statement of all receipts and disbursements during his term of office, and at the expiration of his term of office he shall deliver up to his successor all moneys, securities, books, and papers of the Federation under his control; and for the faithful performance of his duties he shall give a bond in such sum as the Executive Council may determine. The annual salary of the Treasurer shall be $500.

ARTICLE IX.—EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

SECTION 1. It shall be the duty of the Executive Council to watch legislative measures directly affecting the interests of working people, and to initiate, whenever necessary, such legislative action as the Convention may direct.

SEC. 2. The Executive Council shall use every possible means to organize new National or International Trade or Labor Unions, and to organize Local Trade and Labor Unions, and connect them with the Federation until such time as there is a sufficient number to form a National or International Union, when it shall be the duty of the President of the Federation to see that such organization is formed.

SEC. 3. When a National or International Union has been formed the President shall notify all Local Unions of that trade to affiliate with such National or International Union, and unless said notification be complied with within three months their charters shall be revoked.

SEC. 4. The Executive Council shall also prepare and present to the Convention, in printed form, a concise statement of the details leading up to approved and pending boycotts (and all matters of interest to the Convention), and no indorsement for a boycott shall be considered by the Convention except it has been so reported by the Executive Council.

SEC. 5. While we recognize the right of each trade to manage its own affairs, it shall be the duty of the Executive Council to secure the unification of all labor organizations, so far as to assist each other in any trade dispute.

SEC. 6. Whenever the revenue of the Federation shall warrant such action, the Executive Council shall authorize the sending out of Trade Union speakers from place to place in the interests of the Federation.

SEC. 7. The remuneration for loss of time by members of the Executive Council, organizers, or speakers engaged by them, shall be $5.00 per day, hotel expense and actual railroad fare.

SEC. 8. The Executive Council shall have power to make rules to govern matters not in conflict with this Constitution, or the constitution of affiliated unions, and shall report accordingly to the Federation.

SEC. 9. In the event of a vacancy of any member of the Executive Council, other than that of the President, by reason of death, resignation, or other cause, the President shall make such vacancy known to the Executive Council, and shall call for nominations. The names of all nominees shall be submitted to the Executive Council, and it shall require a majority vote of the Executive Council to elect. Upon each unsuccessful balloting the name of the candidate receiving the lowest number of votes shall be dropped.

SEC. 10. All Local Trade Unions and Federal Labor Unions holding charters direct from the American Federation of Labor desiring the assistance of the American Federation of Labor in trade disputes, shall submit to the President of the American Federation of Labor for approval by the Executive Council, the full statement of the grievance, and shall receive within twenty (20) days from the President an answer as to whether they will be sustained or not, and no benefits shall be paid where a strike takes place before the Local Union has received the approval of the Executive Council.

SEC. 11. No charter shall be granted by the American Federation of Labor to any National, International, Trade, or Federal Labor Union without a positive and clear definition of the trade jurisdiction claimed by the applicant, and the charter shall not be granted if the jurisdiction claimed is a trespass on the jurisdiction of existing affiliated unions, without the written consent of such unions; no affiliated International, National, or Local Union shall be permitted to change its title or name, if any trespass is made thereby on the jurisdiction of an affiliated organization, without having first obtained the consent and approval of a Convention of the American Federation of Labor; and it is further provided, that should any of the members of such National, International, Trade, or Federal Labor Union, work at any other vocation, trade, or profession, they shall join the union of such vocation, trade, or profession, provided such are organized and affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

SEC. 12. The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor shall only have power to revoke the charter of an affiliated National or International Union when the revocation has been ordered by a two-thirds majority of a regular Convention of the American Federation of Labor, by a roll-call vote.

ARTICLE X.—REVENUE.

SECTION 1. The revenue of the Federation shall be derived from a per capita tax to be paid upon the full paid-up membership of all affiliated bodies, as follows: From International or National Trade Unions, a per capita tax of one-half of one cent per member per month; from Local Trade Unions and Federal Labor Unions, ten cents per month, five cents of which must be set aside to be used only in case of strike or lockout; Local Unions, the majority of whose members are less than eighteen (18) years of age, two cents per member per month; from Central and State bodies, $10 per year, payable quarterly.

SEC. 2. Delegates shall not be entitled to a seat in the Annual Convention unless the tax of their organization, as provided for in Section 1 of this Article, has been paid in full to September 30 preceding the Convention.

SEC. 3. Any organization affiliated with this Federation not paying its per capita tax on or before the 15th of each month shall be notified of the fact by the Secretary of the Federation, and if at the end of three months it is still in arrears it shall become suspended from membership by the Federation, and can be reinstated only by a vote of the Convention when such arrearages are paid in full, as provided in Section 2 of this Article.

ARTICLE XI.—LOCAL CENTRAL BODIES.

SECTION 1. No Central Labor Union, or any other central body of delegates, shall admit to or retain in their councils delegates from any local organization that owes its allegiance to any other body, National or International, hostile to any affiliated organization, or that has been suspended or expelled by, or not connected with, a National or International organization of their trade herein affiliated, under penalty of having their charter revoked for violation of their charter, subject to appeal to the next Convention.

SEC. 2. It shall be the duty of all National and International Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to instruct their Local Unions to join chartered Central Labor Bodies, Departments, and State Federations in their vicinity where such exist. Similar instructions shall be given by the American Federation of Labor to all Trade and Federal Labor Unions under its jurisdiction.

SEC. 3. Where there are one or more Local Unions in any city belonging to any National or International Union affiliated with this Federation, they may organize a Trades Assembly or Central Labor Union, or shall join such body, if already in existence.

SEC. 4. The Executive Council and Local Central Labor Unions shall use all possible means to organize and connect as Local Unions to National or International Unions the organizations in their vicinity; to aid the formation of National or International Unions where none exist, and to organize Federal Labor Unions where the number of craftsmen precludes any other form of organization.

Sec. 5. No Central Labor Union, or other central body of delegates, shall have the authority or power to order any organization, affiliated with such Central Labor Union, or other central labor body, on strike, where such organization has a national organization, until the proper authorities of such National or International organization have been consulted and agreed to such action.

Sec. 6. Separate charters may be issued to Central Labor Unions, Local Unions, or Federal Labor Unions, composed exclusively of colored members, where, in the judgment of the Executive Council, it appears advisable and to the best interest of the Trade Union movement to do so.

Sec. 7. No Central Labor Union, or other central body of delegates, shall have authority or power to originate a boycott, nor shall such bodies indorse and order the placing of the name of any person, firm, or corporation on an unfair list until the Local Union desiring the same has, before declaring the boycott, submitted the matter in dispute to the Central Body for investigation, and the best endeavors on its part to effect an amicable settlement. Violation of this section shall forfeit charter.

Sec. 8. No Central Body, or Department, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor shall reject credentials presented by a duly elected or appointed delegation of a Local Union, chartered by a National or an International Union having affiliation with the American Federation of Labor; provided, however, that upon written charges signed by at least three delegates, any delegate of an affiliated Union may, upon conviction, after a fair trial, be expelled or suspended. Action of the Central Body, under this section, shall be subject to appeal to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor and no delegation representing Local Unions affiliated, as herein described, shall be suspended or expelled until like action is taken.

Sec. 9. No Central Body shall take part in the adjustment of wage contracts, wage disputes or working rules of Local Unions, affiliated with a National or International Union, unless the laws of the National or International Union permit, except upon the request or consent of the executive officer of the National or International Union affected.

Sec. 10. Local Unions of National or International Unions affiliated with the Departments attached to the American Federation of Labor, in any city where a Local Department exists, shall not be eligible to membership in any Local Department unless they are connected with the chartered Central Body, nor shall they be eligible to membership in the Central Body unless they are affiliated with the Local Department.

ARTICLE XII.—ASSESSMENT IN DEFENSE OF NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL UNIONS.

SECTION 1. The Executive Council shall have power to declare a levy of one cent per member per week on all affiliated unions for a period not exceeding ten weeks in any one year, to assist in the support of an affiliated National or International Union engaged in a protracted strike or lockout.

Sec. 2. Any Union, International, National, or Local, failing to pay, within sixty days the levies declared in accordance with Section 1, shall be deprived of representation in Convention of the American Federation of Labor, and in City Central Bodies, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

ARTICLE XIII.—DEFENSE FUND FOR LOCAL TRADE AND FEDERAL LABOR UNIONS.

SECTION 1. The money of the defense fund shall be drawn only to sustain strikes or lockouts of Local Trade and Federal Labor Unions, when such strikes or lockouts are authorized, indorsed, and conducted in conformity with the following provisions of this Article:

Sec. 2. In the event of a disagreement between a Local Union and an employer which, in the opinion of the Local Union, may result in a strike, such Union shall notify the President of the American Federation of Labor, who shall investigate, or cause an investigation to be made, of the disagreement, and endeavor to adjust the difficulty. If his efforts should prove futile, he shall take such steps as he may deem necessary in notifying the Executive Council, and if the majority of said Council shall decide that a strike is necessary, such Union shall be authorized to order a strike, but that under no circumstances shall a strike or lockout be deemed legal, or moneys expended from the defense fund on that account, unless the strike or lockout shall have been first authorized and approved by the President and Executive Council.

Sec. 3. When a strike has been authorized and approved by the President and Executive Council, the president of the Local Union interested shall, within twenty-four hours, call a meeting of said Union, "of which every member shall be regularly notified," to take action thereon, and no member shall vote on such question unless he is in good standing. Should three-fourths of the members present decide, by secret ballot, on a strike, the president of the Local Union shall immediately notify the President of the American Federation of Labor of the cause of the matter in dispute; what the wages, hours, and conditions of labor then are; what advances, if any, are sought; what reductions are offered, if any; state the number employed and unemployed; the state of trade generally in the locality, and the number of persons involved, union and non-union. Also the number of members who would become entitled to the benefits herein provided should the application be authorized and approved.

Sec. 4. No Local shall be entitled to benefit from the defense fund unless it has been in continuous good standing for one year; and no member shall be entitled to benefit from said defense fund unless he has been a member in good standing in the American Federation of Labor for at least one year.

Sec. 5. When a strike has been inaugurated under the provisions of Sections 2 and 3, the American Federation of Labor shall pay to the bonded officer of the Union involved, or his order, for a period of six weeks, an amount equal to four ($4) dollars per week for each member. Each Local Union shall require its treasurer to give proper bond for the safe-keeping and disbursement of all funds of the Local. No benefit shall be paid for the first two weeks of the strike. The Executive Council shall have the power to authorize the payment of strike benefits for an additional period.

SEC. 6. No member of a Local Union on strike shall be entitled to weekly benefits unless he reports daily to the proper officer of the Local Union while the strike continues, and no member who shall receive a week's work, three days to be a week, shall receive benefits. Any member refusing other work while on strike (providing said work is not in conflict with labor's interests) shall not be entitled to any benefits.

SEC. 7. Any Union inaugurating a strike without the approval of the Executive Council shall not receive benefits on account of said strike.

SEC. 8. In case of lockout the Executive Council shall have power to pay benefits if, upon investigation, it is found that the Local Union whose members are involved did not by their action or demands provoke the lockout by their employer.

SEC. 9. During the continuance of a strike, the executive board of the Local Union shall make weekly reports to the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, showing the amount of money distributed for benefits, and to whom paid, furnishing individual receipts to the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor from all members to whom such benefits have been paid, and all other facts that may be required.

SEC. 10. Before a strike shall be declared off, a special meeting of the Union shall be called for that purpose, and it shall require a majority vote of all members present to decide the question either way.

SEC. 11. In the event of the defense fund becoming dangerously low through protracted strike or lockout, the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor shall have the power to levy an assessment of ten cents on each member of Local Trade and Federal Labor Unions, assessments to be restricted to not more than five per year; and, further, that there shall always be a surplus of five thousand ($5,000) dollars in the defense fund.

SEC. 12. That no Local shall be entitled to any of the benefits of the defense fund unless it requires its members to pay not less than fifty (50) cents per month.

SEC. 13. That the Local Trade and Federal Labor Unions set aside for the maintenance of a local defense fund not less than five cents a month from each member.

ARTICLE XIV.—MISCELLANEOUS.

SECTION 1. Certificates of affiliation shall be granted by the President of the Federation, by and with the consent of the Executive Council, to all National and International Unions and local bodies affiliated with this Federation.

SEC. 2. Seven wage-workers of good character, following any trade or calling, who are favorable to Trade Unions, whose trade or calling is not organized, and are not members of any body affiliated with this Federation, who will subscribe to this Constitution, shall have the power to form a local body to be known as a "Federal Labor Union," and they shall hold regular meetings for the purpose of strengthening and advancing the Trade Union movement, and shall have power to make their own rules in conformity with this Constitution, and shall be granted a local certificate by the President of this Federation; provided, the request for a certificate be indorsed by the nearest Local or National Trade Union officials connected with this Federation, but not more than three Federal Labor Unions shall be chartered in any one city. The President of the American Federation of Labor shall have authority to appoint any person who is a member of any affiliated union to audit the accounts of such Federal Labor or Local Trade Unions as the President of the American Federation of Labor may direct and report the result thereof to the President of the American Federation of Labor. The books and accounts of each Federal Labor and Local Trade Union shall be at all times open to the inspection of auditors appointed under this section.

SEC. 3. The certificate fee for affiliated bodies shall be five ($5) dollars, payable to the Secretary of the Federation, and the fee shall accompany the application.

SEC. 4. The American Federation of Labor shall refer all applications for certificates of affiliation from Local Unions or Federal Labor Unions from a vicinity where a chartered Central Labor Union exists to that body for investigation and approval.

SEC. 5. Certificates of affiliation shall not be granted by State Federations of Labor. That power is vested solely in the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor and the executive officers of National and International Unions affiliated therewith.

SEC. 6. Fraternal delegates attending the Convention of the American Federation of Labor shall be entitled to all the rights of delegates from Central Bodies.

ARTICLE XV.—GENERAL RULES GOVERNING DEPARTMENTS OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

SECTION 1. For the greater development of the labor movement, such departments subordinate to the A. F. of L. are to be established from time to time as in the judgment of the A. F. of L., or of its Executive Council, may be deemed advisable. Each department is to manage and finance its own business.

SEC. 2. To be entitled to representation in any department, organizations eligible to join must first be, and remain in affiliation to the A. F. of L., and to be entitled to representation in local councils of departments, local bodies shall first be and remain in affiliation to central labor unions chartered by the A. F. of L.

SEC. 3. The fundamental laws of each department are to conform to, and be administered in the same manner as, the laws governing the A. F. of L. No department or local council of same shall enact laws, rules or regulations in conflict with laws of the A. F. of L., and in the event of change of laws of the latter, departments and local councils are to change their laws to conform thereto.

SEC. 4. Each department to be considered the official method of the A. F. of L. for transacting that portion of its business.

SEC. 5. All departments of the American Federation of Labor shall have their headquarters located in the City of Washington, D. C., and, if possible, in the same building with the Federation Headquarters.

SEC. 6. All departments of the American Federation of Labor shall hold their conventions, whether annually or less often, during or immediately before or after the conventions of the American Federation of Labor, and in the same city where the conventions of the Federation are held.

SEC. 7. The officers of each department shall report to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor what action, if any, has been taken by the Department, either through its Executive Council or through conventions upon any and all matters that have been referred to the Department by the Federation.

SEC. 8. The officers of the various departments shall submit a quarterly report to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor of the work done by their department, and its general conditions.

SEC. 9. At all regular meetings of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, there shall be present during some period of the Council meeting either the President or Secretary, or both, of each department, to take up with the Council matters that may be of mutual interest.

SEC. 10. A page of each issue of the "American Federationist" to be available to, and to be used by each department for official report or for publication of some subject identified with the Department.

SEC. 11. National and International Unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. shall also become affiliated with any department in which they may be eligible. This section does not apply to the Union Label Trades Department.

ARTICLE XVI.—AMENDMENTS.

This Constitution can be amended or altered only at a regular session of the Convention, and to do so it shall require a two-thirds vote.

THIRTIETH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR 1910

REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS

First Day—Monday Morning Session

November 14, 1910.

Pursuant to law, the regular meeting of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor was called to order at 10:30 a. m., by Mr. Owen Miller, President of the Missouri State Federation of Labor.

The St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Max Zach, entertained the convention until 11 o'clock.

Chairman Miller presented to the convention Mr. Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, as the permanent chairman of the convention.

President Gompers introduced to the convention Honorable Frederick H. Kreismann, Mayor of the City of St. Louis.

Mayor Kreismann: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen, delegates to this American Federation of Labor: I welcome you in behalf, not only of your membership and your people in St. Louis, but in behalf of the citizens of St. Louis. St. Louis people have been most friendly, I believe, to the cause that you represent, and in our midst your work and your effort have told for the upbuilding of our city and its moral status. This great aggregation of men engaged in the industrial life of this country has been recognized by our people now when we are preparing the fundamental law that shall govern this community perhaps another generation. And I trust that this great force, this patriotic gathering and brotherhood of men will find, when this charter and fundamental law of St. Louis is presented to the people that it well recognizes the interests and the rights of this organization. In no way can labor, having established itself as a force of good in this country, having had its just rights recognized in all law and in all regulations, do more for the upbuilding of our country than to devote its force and its strength to the arrangement of all details of life and law.

St. Louis is proud of this assemblage, bids you a hearty welcome and hopes for a successful outcome of your deliberations.

President Gompers: I take pleasure in presenting to you Mr. Owen Miller, President of the Missouri State Federation of Labor.

President Miller: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen and fellow delegates to the American Federation of Labor. It seems a sacrilege, after the magnificent music we have heard, to listen to a poor speech, but as long as I am on the program I will have to proceed. The music we have heard ought to be an inspiration. Perhaps it will be to me—I hope so.

This convention reminds me of two of the stories of Alexander Dumas. You all remember The Three Musketeers. That novel was followed by one called Twenty Years After. This is a little more than "twenty years after," the last convention of the American Federation was held in the city of St. Louis. Twenty-two years ago, to be exact, at Druid's Hall, the American Federation of Labor met. Vast changes have taken place since then. At that time the delegates were less than three-score, and had the first sergeants of the companies of labor called their roll not more than two hundred and forty or two hundred and fifty thousand would have responded. The State Federation of Labor, now such an influential body, was not then thought of, and the Central Trades and Labor Council of St. Louis, today one of the most influential and prosperous bodies in the United States, was in its trades union swaddling clothes. Today we meet with nearly a half thousand delegates, representing 2,000,000 of that industrial army of men who through their labor build all the ships and man all the ships that plow the waters of the earth; that build all the railroads and the cars, and all the vehicles that carry the inland commerce of the earth; that produce all the product that makes up this immense commerce; that build all the cities, all the towns, all the villages and all the hamlets that shelter men; that make all the raiment worn by men and women, rich and poor; that make every article intended for the use or gratification of man, but this army does not receive its full share of this immense product, and to secure at least a fair share was the reason the American Federation of Labor was formed.

In twenty-two years the American Federation of Labor has had to fight enemies from within and enemies from the outside, but it has succeeded in overcoming all, and today stands pre-eminent as the greatest and best conducted organization on the globe. We have other things to do besides getting a fair share of the product of our labor. We also want a fair share of justice as given us by the courts of this country. We are told that every man in this country, rich and poor, stands on an equality before the law. Mr. Joseph Cannon, the speaker of the house of representatives in Washington, who packs the committees that have to pass on the labor bills, made a statement to that effect in New York last January before the Manufacturers' Association. He said that every poor man had just as much chance in the courts as either Rockefeller or J. Pierpont Morgan. There is a silent man just now in Oyster Bay—well named—who would probably use one of his short, curt phrases in regard to that statement. We all know it is not true; but the American Federation of Labor will never cease its efforts until all men receive absolute equality before the law.

As the years roll by we gain experience, and we are getting closer. Day by day we are beginning to understand that there may be many ideas, but only one can prevail and when that does prevail it must be the will of the majority. The American Federation of Labor is, I might say, a great crucible in which is thrown all these ideas, and through debate and discussion they are purified and brought out ready to be applied. The American Federation of Labor has come to stay. While not having overcome all of its foes, those who remain are so weakened that we can resist their attacks.

In the name of the tollers of Missouri I welcome this convention most cordially to the soil of this state. I am particularly proud of extending this welcome on account of the fact that twenty-two years ago when you held a convention here the working men of St. Louis immediately after got together and elected twelve members of the State Legislature. They called them the twelve apostles. Those twelve apostles preached the gospel of labor so well in Jefferson City that today there is on our statute books many laws in our interests. There is an inspection law, a law to compel the street railways to put up a fender for protection, a law to compel the railway companies to block their rails, and, best of all, a law to prevent any thug from coming into the state to act as a deputy. Before that time whenever there was a strike immediately came a lot of convicts, bullies and thugs from Chicago, not to put down trouble, but to make trouble. No peace officer of Missouri can today swear in a deputy who is not a citizen of the state. I hope when this convention adjourns the working men of Missouri will again get together and see if they can not put some more laws on the statute books that will be equally valuable to them.

Missouri is part of the Louisiana Purchase, and is properly named the Imperial State. Missouri's wealth is but barely visible. I say barely visible because the surface has only been scratched, and we also have a large number of wealthy tax dodgers who keep their property away from the gaze of the assessor. Our zinc and lead mines, as you know, are among the greatest in the world. They employ a large number of working men, and we are gradually getting those men organized into the American Federation of Labor. Our factories and other industries are second to none in the United States. Missouri is also a great agricultural state. The Missouri hen has a record throughout the world, and is now more valuable than the gold product of Alaska. And last, but not least, the Missouri mule is also known the world over. That patient animal is found wherever civilized man is found, and wherever the soil is scratched the Missouri mule will be found working. He has one remarkable trait, and I hope more of you will cultivate that same trait. The Missouri mule refuses to be imposed upon, and whenever any one tries it he will feel the mule's heels if he does not hear from him otherwise. I feel that the Missouri mule will be heard from more in the future, after Champ Clark—also a Missouri product—drives up Pennsylvania avenue behind a team of mules to take his place as speaker. We will then have a speaker with a warm heart, a man whose influence will be used for the benefit of his fellow men instead of for special interest. I have known him for a great many years, and I think

I may say that the labor men of this country can trust him.

Missouri has produced some great men. Daniel Boone passed the last days of his life in this state. Thomas Benton, from the time of the admission of the state in 1821, for thirty years thereafter represented Missouri in the Senate. General James Shields was an adopted citizen. Only a few days ago a monument was unveiled to his memory. He is the only man in history, I believe, who had the distinction of representing three states in the United States Senate. The last state he represented was Missouri. We can also claim General Francis P. Blair, who with General Lyon helped to prevent Missouri from joining the Confederacy. From this state also came Eugene Field, who made so many children happy. And last, but not least, we should not forget Mark Twain, who helped to make Missouri famous. His works have been translated into almost every known language.

I sincerely hope that this convention will result in spreading the movement in Missouri, and should we ever be fortunate enough to again welcome you in a convention of the American Federation of Labor I truly hope that every one of the one hundred and forty-two counties that constitute the Imperial State will have a representative at the round table of organized labor.

In behalf of the working men of the state of Missouri I welcome you and hope that your stay may be most pleasant.

President Gompers introduced to the convention Mr. Louis Phillipi, President Central Trades and Labor Union of St. Louis.

President Phillipi: It is with pride and pleasure that I at this time deliver a brief address of welcome in behalf of organized labor of St. Louis and vicinity. I extend a most hearty welcome, and assure you that we expect to make your stay here as pleasant and as agreeable as possible.

This city has been the scene of a number of notable labor fights. At the present time the garment workers are out on strike, and have been for fourteen months, at the establishment of the Marx & Haas Clothing Company. This fight will be as important as the Buck Stove and Range Company fight. The combined clothing manufacturers of St. Louis are coming to the support of Marx and Haas and reimbursing them for every cent they are losing through an effective boycott we are maintaining against them. This is the city where the famous Buck Stove and Range Company fight occurred. That was the most important and the biggest fight in the history of the American Labor movement. This was the home of the late Mr. VanCleave, the bitterest foe labor ever had. He is dead, and in a short time his name will be forgotten; but the labor movement is here to stay, and every day brings us closer together and forces us to display greater determination. In spite of the Parrys, Posts and Kirbys we are today more powerful than ever, and we are in a better position to improve the conditions of the workers generally. The VanCleave, Parrys, Posts and Kirbys may come and go, but I believe the American labor movement will go on forever.

Personally, I want to congratulate the officers and the Executive Council of the American Federation for their untiring effort for us in the Buck Stove and Range Company fight. I know you will appreciate the hospitality of the organized workers of St. Louis, and I hope you will ever have pleasant recollections of the time you spent in this city. I hope all your efforts will be crowned with success, and that your deliberations will be harmonious and fraught with great benefit for the organized workers of this country.

President Smythe: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen: I am not going to detain you very long. You have heard from the Mayor of St. Louis, who has welcomed you in behalf of the city, from President Miller, who has welcomed you in behalf of the State Federation. In behalf of the building trades mechanics of the city of St. Louis, I desire to bid you welcome. And when I say building trades mechanics, I mean those only who are mechanics, and those you will find affiliated with the building trades department where ever you go. In behalf of those men I bid you welcome, and I hope when you go back to your homes you will carry with you a feeling of good will for the building trades of the city of St. Louis.

President Gompers: Ladies and gentlemen: I am sure that I but bespeak your sentiments when I say to the Mayor of St. Louis and the representatives of labor of Missouri and of the city of St. Louis that we are deeply grateful and greatly appreciative of the words of welcome that have been addressed to us this morning. The labor movement of our country and of our time represents more than a mere party platform or a mere declaration of a passing thought. The American labor movement, like the bona fide movement of labor the world over, is governed by a principle as true as the universe itself and as far reaching as humanity. The labor movement of our time is the expressed discontent of the masses of our time; it is a protest against wrong and injustice; it is a demand, an ever living demand, for the rights to which the workers of our country and our continent are entitled. And it can not, it dare not pause in the struggle for the abolition of wrong and the attainment of the right.

It is twenty-two years since the last convention of the American Federation of Labor was held in the city of St. Louis. In a more formal way your attention will be called to the great contrasts existing between that time and this. Missouri, notwithstanding her great waterway and her great railways, is a great industrial as well as agricultural state. And it is one of the very best evidences of Missouri's higher statesmanship—higher statesmanship even than is coupled with the galaxy of names presented to us this morning, the galaxy of names of men who in the Legislature of Missouri and in her municipal legislatures have passed laws for the better protection of the life and limb and the health of the workers—that protection has been given to the home and to the young and innocent children. This is a statesmanship that far transcends achievements upon battle fields or upon practically non-controversial subjects. I think coupled with the names already mentioned should be the name of the veteran in the labor struggles of Missouri, the veteran fighting union man, Owen Miller. He might well be named in the same class as Dave Kreyling, and, if I were not in a public convention I would say, with the whole bunch.

In this convention we find representatives of the workers from all sections of the American continent, and not only that, but also from some of the climes that are not part of the continent. We have not only the workers of all industries, the workers engaged in the transportation of commerce, the transmission of information, but we have also workers from the mines and the workers in the industry even that makes men fly. There is not an important, aye, perhaps not an insignificant industry in the entire country or known man that is not either directly or indirectly represented upon the floor of this convention. And in addition we have the fraternal delegates, one from our neighbor on the north, Canada, and fraternal delegates from the organized labor movement of Great Britain, and I know that even thus informally I but express your sincere desire when I say they are thrice welcome among us.

I shall not burden you now with further remarks. I can only express to you my profound appreciation of the fact that this gathering of the organized workers is perhaps the greatest and most representative ever held in the history of America. We shall have to devote our time to work. We have a great deal of important work to do. The world of friends as well as the world of enemies have attention directed to this convention and the work we are called upon to do. In the measure and in the manner we shall perform that work we shall deserve either the commendation or the condemnation of our fellows.

I can not close without expressing what I am sure is your view, as I am sure it is mine, in regard to the splendid treat we have had served to us through the courtesy of the union musicians, the leader, the director and the members of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. On behalf of the convention of the American Federation of Labor I desire to express our thanks to Mr. Max Zach, the director, and to the members of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

I now declare this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor called to order and ready to transact business. We will hear the report of the Committee on Credentials.

Young, Wm. J. Tracy, Matt Comerford, Frank Feeney, Richard P. Walsh, D. D'Alessandro, J. C. Skemp, Thos. J. Williams, Frank Gengenback.

COMMITTEE ON BOYCOTTS: D. A. Hayes, James M. Lynch, Chas. Dold, C. W. Fry, Jacob Fischer, S. J. Konenkamp, P. W. Collins, F. A. Scoby, S. L. Landers, Jere L. Sullivan, Judson O'Neal, M. Zuckerman, Victor L. Berger, J. J. Chatterton, L. A. Grace.

President Gompers announced the appointment of J. J. Mulcahy, St. Louis, as sergeant-at-arms, and Ed. Coburn, St. Louis, as messenger.

Vice-President O'Connell: I desire to bring a matter to the attention of the convention, to get the views of the delegates for the purpose of directing one of the committees that has been appointed. This hall is located a very great distance from the hotel. I desire to move, in order that the expression of the convention be gathered, that the Committee on Rules be requested to report an arrangement whereby we will continue in one session, not take an adjournment at lunch time, and travel a great distance back to our hotels. We could make the convening later in the morning and the adjournment earlier in the afternoon. This will allow the committees to work. I move you, in order to get an expression of the convention, to direct the Committee on Rules, that we hold one continuous session each day. (Seconded and carried.)

Secretary Morrison read the following telegram:

Hoboken, N. J., November 14, 1910.

Mr. Samuel Gompers, President American Federation of Labor, Convention Hall, St. Louis.

Greetings to the convention. May success crown the work of the thirtieth annual session. New Jersey has five trades unionists in the next legislature—Callantine, printers; Shalvoy, hatters; Adams, carpenters; McGrath, boiler-makers; Ford, printers.

(Signed) CORNELIUS FORD.

President New Jersey Federation of Labor.

President Gompers: The rules of last year's convention will prevail until new ones are adopted. The hour of 12 o'clock having arrived, the convention stands adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

First Day—Monday Afternoon Session

The convention was called to order at 2 o'clock p. m., Monday, November 14, President Gompers in the chair.

First Vice-President Duncan presided while President Gompers, Secretary Morrison and Treasurer Lennon read their reports.

The reports were referred to the Committees on President's Report, Secretary's Report and Treasurer's Report, and follow immediately hereafter:

Secretary Morrison read an announcement from the Women's Trade Union League, in which the women delegates and the women visitors were requested to register in parlor H, Planters Hotel, or in a duplicate book in the rear balcony of the hall.

At 5 o'clock p. m. the convention was adjourned, to reconvene at 9 o'clock a. m. Tuesday, November 15.

PRESIDENT GOMPERS' REPORT.

ST. LOUIS, MO., November 14, 1910.

To the Officers and Delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor :

FELLOW TRADE UNIONISTS: Thirty years ago, upon the urgent appeal of a number of earnest and far-seeing trade unionists, a convention was held in Pittsburg, Pa. There and then the foundation for our Federation of trades and labor unions was laid. Upon that foundation a structure has been reared perhaps far beyond the vision of its builders. Soon after the establishment of our Federation, and after its purposes came to be understood, the toilers began to realize not only that it was eminently practicable but also that it had within its possibilities the elements to inspire hope and courage for the achievement of Labor's highest aspirations. By the years of devoted work of its adherents, and through its attainments, the Federation has earned the respect and the confidence of the workers who rallied to its standard and defended it against its traducers and would-be destroyers.

Twenty-two years ago the American Federation of Labor held an annual convention in this city. That convention reviewed the progress which had been made and it determined upon a well-defined policy for the inauguration of a shorter workday, to the end that an eight-hour day should be established.

The impetus and quickening impulse given to the labor movement and the great cause of justice and humanity for which it stands can only be understood and appreciated by the studious and by the retrospective view to be taken by the workers who will compare the situation and the condition of the wage-working masses then and now. The history of the movement can not be recounted here. So far as it is written, it may be traced in the official proceedings of our conventions, in The American Federationist, in the official trade journals, and in the labor press. The unwritten history and some of its most important work lie in the archives of the offices of the organized labor movement, local, international, and federated. That which is obvious to all is the progress which has been made in the physical well-being, in the mental, moral, political, and social advancement of the toilers. This progress is evidenced in their higher character and more independent spirit, in their recognition of the identity in the interests of all wage-workers and in the solidarity of their feeling and action, together with their wider horizon of duties and rights, their broader sympathies for all mankind, and their determination to struggle on for the eradication of every wrong and the attainment of their every right to which they, in common with their fellow-men, are justly entitled.

Advancement also may be clearly seen in the tribute all pay to the ennobling work of our movement and in the better conception which our people have of the splendid achievements due to the persistent efforts of the organized labor movement of our time.

It may not be uninteresting as an indication of our movement's growth to call attention to the fact that at our first convention in Pittsburg, Pa., only six international unions were represented, with a number of scattering locals. In St. Louis, twenty-two years ago, there were seventeen international unions with a few central bodies and locals. Note the list of delegates to this Convention and the organizations they represent, and, at a glance, the great progress made is apparent. This does not account for several hundred central bodies and local unions affiliated but unrepresented by delegates.

Pursuant to law and custom your President is directed to make an annual report to you as to his stewardship of the rights and interests of the workers which you have placed in his keeping. He is to give an accounting of his acts to protect and advance the sacred cause of labor and he is to offer such advice and make such suggestions as commend themselves to his judgment as being promotive of the welfare of the workers and as making for the common weal. Among the myriad matters which have come before me for action or which I have initiated, it is exceedingly difficult to discriminate as to which are the most important to be submitted to you. While it is true that every event or project in the labor movement is in its way important, all the issues are not vital or imminent, and yet all subjects must receive careful and conscientious attention. Time may render some matters only relatively important. Considerations such as these have determined my course both in the past and in making this report, which I now have the honor to submit.

ORGANIZATION AND GROWTH.

For the fiscal year ending September 30, 1910, there were issued by the American Federation of Labor 384 certificates of affiliation (charters), as follows:

International unions.....	2	Local trade unions.....	152
State federations.....	1	Federal labor unions.....	96
City central bodies.....	88
		Total .....	384

At the close of the fiscal year there were affiliated to our Federation:

International unions.....	130	Local trade unions.....	481
State federations.....	89	Federal labor unions.....	216

The international unions enumerated have approximately 28,000 local unions under their jurisdiction. Attention is called to this fact, so that the error into which many persons have fallen as to the make-up of our Federation may be corrected. As its name implies, ours is a federated body of international, State, central, and directly affiliated locals, the latter having no international unions of their own trade or calling. The international unions have direct jurisdiction over their own local unions or lodges situated throughout the continent. Applications from unions for affiliation are turned over to the international of the trade where one is in existence. During the past year our affiliated international unions report they have issued 2,157 charters to local unions, and thereby and by adhesion to existing locals have increased their membership for the year 218,229 members.

Our State federations and city central bodies are continually extending their sphere of usefulness and becoming of larger advantage to our fellow-workers. They are abreast of the times, improving every opportunity which presents itself, usually taking the initiative in securing reforms in the industrial, political, social, and moral condition of the workers and all our people. Legislatively, they have secured advances too numerous to incorporate in detail in this report. Throughout the length and breadth of our continent the co-operation and spirit of fraternity and solidarity manifested by the members of the organized labor movement is a matter of commendation and deep gratification and must make for a constant growth through organizing the yet unorganized toilers.

Numerically, the membership of our affiliated organizations is near the highest figures in their existence. In 1907-8 we experienced a panic, during which, by reason of unemployment, a decrease in membership occurred. Within the past year a marked increase in both membership and organizations is to be noted. In a report which I had the honor to submit to a former convention discussing the "law of growth" of the trade union movement I took occasion to say in part:

"In connection with this it may be well to call attention to the fact that there is a natural law of growth in the labor movement, a law that is not generally understood. When there is a falling off of membership, no matter how slight, our opponents point to it with satisfaction as an indication of disintegration or dissolution of the labor movement. The unthinking in our own ranks view it with alarm. The fact of the matter is that any temporary falling off in membership is due largely to the failure on the part of those organizations to adopt the means by which the members' best interests are safeguarded. After all, a better intelligence and a revived spirit of workmen soon demonstrate the necessity of organization to protect their best interests, and they soon return to their Alma Mater of the labor movement, the trade union. With this revived spirit the enthusiasm penetrates into the ranks of the unorganized, and these, together with the trend of events in industry and labor conditions, have their compelling force upon the minds of the wage-earners, who in constantly larger numbers join the ranks of the grand army of organized labor, to make common cause for the protection and advancement of all the wage-earners.

"Let pessimists and opponents take unction to their souls for their mastership of the past. The present and the future are for labor, which in its organized, federated movement will stand as a protest against injustice and wrong toward any of our fellow-men, as the vanguard to proclaim and achieve the rights to which the toilers, the masses, are entitled."

The tide of events has changed. The time and opportunity for a more thorough campaign of organization are here, and, during the next few years, "we must take the current as it serves or lose our ventures." No effort should be left untried to bring the toilers within the protective and beneficent fold and influence of our trade union movement. Every labor organization, wherever located, should exert its uttermost efforts to continue organizing. Every dollar wisely expended in the propaganda of organization will yield its fruit in strength power, advantage, wisdom and influence for good.

I would urge upon all our fellow-unionists, officers and members, the great rank and file, that greater and more persistent work of organization be planned and carried into effect.

Let every union member regard it as his mission to organize—to bring at least one fellow-worker into membership of his trade union. Let the slogan be: Organize, Agitate, Educate!

In the campaign of organization, in the great and diversified work which our Federation undertakes in the interest of the toilers, we have often felt the dire need of funds. A scrutiny of our expenditures will disclose that there is not a dollar devoted to any purpose but which makes directly for the workers' welfare.

It is urgently recommended that this Convention adopt a slight increase in the per capita of affiliated organizations. I am convinced beyond all peradventure that with some additional funds at the disposal of your officers great good will be accomplished in the interest of the organizations and the workers generally.

OUR MOVEMENT NOT "NARROW."

"The narrowness of trade unionism." This phrase passes current, at full face value, in every camp and even in every grouplet of "intellectuals." In going the whole round of the "isms," sociological, ethical, legal, political, reformatory, played-out popular crazes, or "just-out" social panaceas, one will hear expressed by the leaders a sentiment that the trade unionists are hide-bound conservatives—because they decline to rush in a body to take the magic medicine for social ills offered by the particular "ism" advocated by the critic in each particular case.

It is a fact that trade unionism in America moves on in its own set and deliberate way. In so doing, it has outlived wave upon wave of hastily conceived so-called "broad" movements that were to reconstruct society in a single season. And it has sufficiently good cause for continuing its own reasoned-out course.

A full defense of trade unionism against the charge of narrowness would require many volumes, were each to be separately devoted to counter-statements and argumentation addressed to every critic advocating his own special "ism" as against trade unionism. But there is one broad bottom fact underlying all the criticisms of trade unionism based on its alleged narrowness. That fact is, that TRADE UNIONISM IS NOT NARROW.

The locomotive engine is not "narrow" because it is not fitted to run on highways and by-ways and waterways as it is for railways, nor is the steamship "narrow" because it can not be made to run on land. But steam, the motive power, can be so applied that it is effective on both land and water. An engine is adapted to a special use; steam in its applications is universal.

Similarly, a trade union is not a machine fitted to the work of directly affecting all the civic, social, and political changes necessary in society. But it first of all teaches the working classes the power of combination. Thenceforward it disciplines them, leads them to perform tasks that are possible, and permits the members of any of its affiliated bodies to attempt any form of social experiment which does not imperil the organization as a whole. The spirit of combination has the immediate effects of self-confidence for the democratic elements in the unions, of growth in the loyalty of workingman for workingman, of constant progressive achievement not confined to restricted limits. It is therefore a motive power continuously and variously applicable as the masses move forward and upward in their individual and collective development.

The spirit of combination in the wage-workers has as a motive power many points of resemblance to that of steam (or for that matter electricity) in the mechanical world. One of these points is that the machine to be moved must not be too big or too complex for the engine. Theorist social reformers beyond enumeration have in vain offered their utopian inventions to the masses because the latter, endowed with common sense, have, on due observation, refused to supply the needed wasteful power to make the inventions go. If they had done so for a time, they could but have exhibited the folly of going to greater pains and troubles than the present social machinery requires. The history of the United States is plentifully illustrated with millennial experiments, illusory for the reason that their maintenance in some way overtaxed their supporters, accustomed to making progress in the freedom and opportunity of America even as it is.

No other mechanism for carrying out the will of the wage-workers in the domain in which they can especially benefit themselves has equaled the trade union and the trade union movement in bringing desired results. No other has equally stood the test of time. No other has thrown anything like the light upon the state of mind of the masses with respect to their economic education. No other has been able to show how intensely practical the workingmen are—nor how devoted they can show themselves to a clearly defined principle, nor how ready they are to trust to their own leadership, nor how they invariably refuse, as a class, to embark in fiction-born utopian ventures. The trade union has been broad enough for all practical purposes.

And yet trade unionism is the soundest base yet laid for every project that gives promise to the working class for a firm and solid advance. Moving step by step, trade unionism contains within itself, as a movement and as a mechanism, the possibilities for establishing whatever social institution the golden future shall develop for the workers as the predestined universal element to be in control of society.

Politically, an invariable problem confronting the trade union movement is how to take action without binding itself to a hard and fast "ism," "ology," or platform. The best of these may quickly develop weaknesses imperiling the hard-won unity of the masses. As a matter of history, American labor organizations, national as well as local, have come to disastrous ending through converting themselves from trade unions, with clear principles and accepted methods and tried leadership, into political parties with vote-catching platforms, campaign methods and heroes of the passing hour for "standard-bearers." The lesson that has been heeded by the rank and file of the trade unions and has been learned by the veterans in the American Federation of Labor is to trust all the time to definite and time-tried trade union economic methods, and to the ballot only in so far as results are to be foreseen to a positive certainty. The political measures to be achieved must, beyond a doubt, form the cause for the workers' proceeding to vote together, but by the side of these measures the fortunes of parties and politicians fall to a subordinate, even a negligible place. From its present position the American Federation of Labor is enabled to throw out feelers all over the continent and ascertain in what respects and how far the ballot may supplement the established and familiar forms of union effort in promoting the well-being of the wage-earning class. The preference the rank and file express for certain public men in some localities comes not so much from interest in the men in question as in the public work they have performed or bind themselves to perform. The votes the organized workers give in support of certain radical parties in other localities is less an indication of an acceptance of platform theories than testimony that the immediate practical demands of these parties are in accord with the needs of the wage-earners and the communities concerned at the present hour. In any case, such activities of the trade unionists in public affairs give contradiction to the charge of narrowness of their institution—the union. They illustrate the fact of an adaptability to occasion and opportunity that in itself is the best evidence of breadth. More, it is a breadth both of view and spirit, consonant with a lasting security of position and with every possibility of continuous experimentation.

It was no narrowness of view, but a clear and comprehensive foresight of the results to be achieved through a change in the mechanism of our law-making, while remaining faithful to fundamental principles, that brought the American Federation of Labor twenty years ago to a support of the initiative and referendum and their collateral reforms in the general plan of restoring to the people the power that by the legerdemain of representative misrepresentation had been taken away from them. In all the States and cities in which these rightful and truly democratic methods have been adopted, great progress has been made toward a satisfactory permanent basis for gradual steps through administrative purity and general reform to the future society of unerring and universal justice, a progress greater than has been made through all those movements of the years which have been characterized either by spasmodic upheavals, usually under unstable leadership, or by feverish propaganda actuated through visions of utopias always illuminated by the most iridescent of rainbows.

The trade unions are the historically and naturally developed labor movement of our time, clime, and conditions. Our federation of trade unions represents and voices the struggles, needs, and the aspirations of the toiling masses of our continent. It helps to bear their burdens and make them lighter; it bears the scars and pain of battle and shares in glorious triumphs already achieved and makes ready for the brighter and better day now, tomorrow, and tomorrow's tomorrow. Nothing daunted, but straightforward and courageous, our labor movement, proud of its past, faces the future with an abiding faith and confidence that that future is ours.

A. F. OF L. DEPARTMENTS.

The relations of the various Departments to the American Federation of Labor have been of the most cordial, fraternal, and helpful character. Every assistance possible has been rendered to the Departments and their respective officers.

It is exceedingly gratifying to find that the Departments have made such substantial headway. It is earnestly hoped that wherever possible further Departments shall be created by and in full affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. Much will depend upon the consistent, cordial, and loyal support which the Departments now in existence will continue to give to the general policy of the trade union movement as understood and practiced by the American Federation of Labor.

It was in this city of St. Louis in 1898 that I had the honor to report to the Convention of the American Federation of Labor upon the subject of industrial divisions or industrial departments. Because of its probable helpfulness as well as appropriateness, I quote the language submitted to the consideration of the delegates to that Convention:

"The thought has frequently occurred to me whether in the near future the basis of our Federation should not be modeled upon a somewhat different basis from the present one, by having the various industries classified by the divisions of these industries, such as, for instance, the iron, steel, or metal industry to have a convention of the representatives of all the trade unions in that industry, the building trades to have their convention of the representatives of the unions in their trades, the railroad employes theirs, and soon, each legislating upon the questions that affect the general interests of their particular trades; these industrial divisions to be in turn represented by their proportionate number of delegates in the Convention of the American Federation of Labor and a representative of each industry elected a member of the Executive Council.

"The conventions of the industrial divisions might be held simultaneously in different halls, of course, but in the city in which the Federation would hold its Convention immediately after their adjournment. The idea may not be practical for immediate adoption, but discussion of it can only lead to good results. One thing is certain, the autonomy of each trade and industrial division would thus be more firmly secured."

It is not because of any particular pride in outlining a plan of organization, now nearly verified, that this suggestion of twenty-two years ago is quoted. It is commended to your attention simply for the purpose of endeavoring to suggest that greater consideration be given to the entire subject of improving and making more effective the entire organized labor movement of America, the hegemony of which is generally conceded to the American Federation of Labor. I recommend that this Convention authorize the selection of a special committee to give consideration to the subject of Departments, the relation of the Departments to the American Federation of Labor, how they can be practically extended and improved, to the end that the cause of labor may be the more effectively pursued and the promotion and advancement of the interests of the workers attain the greatest degree of success.

The reports of the progress made by the Departments are, in condensed form, made part of this report as appendices.

CANADA.

The movement in Canada has shown greater progress during the past year than in any previous year in its history. Numerically, representation in the Congress has increased by 40 per cent over the year 1909, while the balance in the treasury of the Congress over that reported for 1909 was almost 50 per cent. The Congress in its legislative capacity has also exceeded anything done in former years. It secured the appointment of a commission on Technical Education, with its ex-Vice-President as a member of it; amendments to the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act that further protected the interests of those affected by the act; and the exemption of trade unions from the Combines Investigation Act. It offered such strenuous opposition to the Belcourt bill, which was designed to keep International officers out of Canada, that its promoter asked permission to withdraw it, which was agreed to, although the Senate threatened to throw it out bodily.

In fact, says Secretary Draper of the Trade and Labor Congress, "the last session of the Dominion Parliament may be said to have been a labor session, inasmuch as besides dealing with the above matters there were before it for consideration bills dealing with the following matters: Proportional representation; land line and wireless telegraphy on ships for the protection of sailors; to make election day a public holiday, and to do away with the election deposit; to provide for the fortnightly payment of wages on railways instead of monthly as at present; to abolish the Senate; bringing cable companies under the jurisdiction of the Railway Commission, the railway companies, express, telegraph and telephone companies being already subject to the commission; bill for the legalizing of co-operative societies, and other proposed legislation.

"Needless to say these are largely attributable to the activity of the organized workers and of the Trades and Labor Congress representing them.

"Apart from legislation, it is a pleasure to report that the sentiment in favor of international trade unionism is stronger than ever in Canada. Throughout the length and breadth of the land the wage-earners realize that their safety lies in the international bond, and despite the efforts of the employing interests to build up a so-called 'national' movement, the trades unionists of Canada will continue to give their allegiance to their various international bodies.

Looking over the whole field, it can be said that never before was labor so well united and so ready to defend its interests as now. It views with sincere pleasure the growing strength of the American Federation of Labor. It rejoices in the victory for individual liberty achieved by the officers of that body in their fight with the Buck's Stove and Range Company. It watches with true fraternal interest the struggle in the United States for the betterment of the conditions of the workers, and it is prepared to continue its affiliations until such time as the workers come into their own."

PORTO RICO.

The first years of labor organization in Porto Rico witnessed a continuous struggle for the conquest of civil emancipation for the working classes. Through the healthy influence of the American Federation of Labor the organized workmen of Porto Rico are now achieving a worthy civil standing. The Free Federation of the Workmen of Porto Rico, American Federation of Labor, has sent two labor delegations to Washington this year to work for the demands of the people of the island. Last December one of the labor delegations, accompanied by your President and other representatives of the American Federation of Labor, called on President Taft and delivered to him a petition requesting American citizenship for the Porto Ricans and recommending other measures in favor of the people of the island in general and the toilers in particular. President Taft, on my suggestion, referred for investigation the whole question regarding Porto Rican affairs to a Government specialist who has had experience in Porto Rico and besides sent a commission, which included the Secretary of War, Mr. Dickinson, General Edwards of the Bureau of Insular Affairs and other officials, to Porto Rico for the purpose of investigating conditions, with a view to drawing up recommendations for Congress. A bill being introduced in Congress by Mr. Olmsted, of Pennsylvania, providing for American citizenship for the islanders and for a political and civil constitution and a health law, and for thoroughly changing the governmental organization of the island, upon my cabled suggestion the Labor Federation sent a delegation to Washington for the purpose of having labor demands included in the bill. With similar ends in view, on invitation of Governor Colton, of Porto Rico, the political parties and the Federation each sent a delegation to Washington to work together for the island's welfare. Assisted by the American Federation of Labor, the delegations succeeded in having embodied in the Olmsted bill the principal provisions recommended by the Federation of Porto Rico, credit being due for their advocacy to Congressman Wilson, of Pennsylvania.

The main feature in which we are interested is the subject-matter of United States citizenship for the inhabitants of Porto Rico, and in the bill No. 23000—which was finally reported out of committee as a substitute for all other bills and which provides for a civil government for Porto Rico—is incorporated this section:

"That all citizens of Porto Rico are hereby declared and shall be deemed and held to be citizens of the United States."

The bill came up in the House June 15, 1910, and while being debated upon the floor, Representative Wilson, of Pennsylvania, offered several amendments and succeeded in securing three of the most important provisions formulated by organized labor of Porto Rico adopted by the House and incorporated in the act as passed by the House. These provisions are:

"1. The establishment of eight hours as a day's work in all cases of employment by or on behalf of the government or any municipality of Porto Rico.

"2. The prohibition of employment of children under the age of 14 years in any occupation injurious to health or morals, or especially hazardous to life or limb.

"3. That a right of action to recover damages for injuries resulting in death shall not be abrogated, and that the amount recoverable shall not be subject to any statutory limitations whatsoever."

Representative Wilson also offered an amendment specifically directing the establishment of a Department of Agriculture, Commerce and Labor, but it was defeated. The pending bill provides that the Legislature of Porto Rico may create a Department of Agriculture, Commerce and Labor.

Many other valuable provisions were included in the bill looking to the safeguarding of the public health; also stringent regulations governing sanitation and progressive measures for better educational facilities. The bill as amended passed the House June 15 and is now before the Senate Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico, of which Senator Depew is chairman, and from which committee a favorable report is confidently expected at the forthcoming session of Congress. Such a report would be materially helpful in securing its enactment into law.

Governor Colton, who accompanied the delegations to Washington, has been the first American official in Porto Rico who has ever taken up the labor problem intelligently and sympathetically. He believes that the paramount question confronting the island today is the raising of the native workers to a higher standard of living.

The Sixth Labor Congress of Porto Rico was held last March. These congresses are held every two years. Fifty-five delegates, representing seventy-two organizations from all over the island, were present.

The unions organized during the eight months were twelve, with a membership of 1,239. The literature of every class distributed in Spanish reached over 200,000 copies.

Labor Day was most fittingly observed throughout the island. The celebration in San Juan included a civic parade which was photographed and is being now exhibited in moving picture plays in and out of the island. Porto Rican labor has sent more than $1,000 to assist the cigarmakers' strike at Tampa.

The island has made great progress during the last ten years of American government, but the toilers' share has not been in the same proportion, owing to the state of ignorance in which they were kept in the time of Spain's domination.

Governor Colton sent a special message to the Porto Rican Legislature, which the representatives of organized labor of the island had urged him to do. It dealt with the subject of Employers' Liability. The house adopted it, but it failed of passage in the upper house. There are strong hopes of its early enactment. The Governor issued a Labor Day proclamation full of intrinsic merit and urging the people to observe the day in its best sense as a legal holiday. The favorable attitude of the Governor toward labor, and his knowledge of the subject, is due to the persistent work of the American Federation of Labor in Porto Rico, as well as in Washington, in advocating the rights of the people of the island. Indeed, the general consensus of opinion among all Porto Ricans is that to the work performed and the assistance rendered by the American Federation of Labor much of the economic, political, and social progress is due.

At present Porto Rico has 180 local unions, with a membership of over 6,000.

In view of the splendid achievements in the interests of the Porto Rican workers made possible by the assistance of our American trade union movement, and because of the close identity of their people with ours, I strongly urge the continuation of every effort to thoroughly organize the wage-workers of Porto Rico.

IRON, STEEL AND TIN WORKERS.

In compliance with the directions of the Toronto Convention, on November 27, last year, one week after its adjournment, I issued a circular to the officials of affiliated national and international unions calling for a conference, to be held in Pittsburg, December 18, at which a course of action should be outlined, in accordance with the Convention's adopted policy toward the United States Steel Corporation, and toward the workers engaged in their justified struggle with that corporation.

At this conference it was decided to recommend that each national or international union assign at least one organizer, and the American Federation of Labor as many organizers as possible, to assist the Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, all to proceed under the direction of the President of that union. Arrangements were made for financial contributions, and a recommendation adopted that the Tin Plate Workers' Association should amalgamate with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, the new body to be entitled the Amalgamated Iron, Steel and Tin Plate Workers' Association. A special committee was appointed to lay before the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives the grievances of labor in the employment of the Steel Corporation, and, further, to demand a thorough investigation as to the legality of certain actions, as well as the existence, of that corporation. Special committees were also appointed to wait upon the Governors of States and officials in counties and municipalities in which the corporation has plants, to protest against the wrongs inflicted upon the people in such communities and demand that these wrongs be righted.

On January 10 the special committee accordingly waited on the President and submitted to him in writing the charges against the Steel Trust. On February 18 and 26 conferences were had with the Attorney-General, to whom the President had referred labor's charges. This was followed on March 22 by the formal presentation to the Attorney-General in pamphlet form of "The Statement and Evidence in Support of the Petition and Charges Presented to the President of the United States against the United States Steel Corporation by the American Federation of Labor," in the preparation of which your officials had been assisted by Hon. Frank S. Monnett, former Attorney-General of Ohio, and Hon. A. G. Ballard of Gary, Indiana. On March 28, the Attorney-General sent us his reply, the gist of it being: "This Department does not deem it expedient to take any action until the Supreme Court of the United States shall have decided the appeals now under consideration by it from the judgments of the Circuit Courts in the proceedings against the American Tobacco Company and the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, respectively." These cases, the Attorney-General explained, call for a "comprehensive construction and application by the court of the provisions of the Sherman act," under which the Steel Corporation must be proceeded against. The appeals referred to have not yet been decided.

Meantime, the entire corps of organizers who had reported for the work were actively engaged in the Steel Trust's territory. A diversion of effort and of public attention, however, was caused in February by a walk-out of several thousand of the unorganized workmen of the Bethlehem Steel Company, in revolt against conditions as to hours, wages, and dangers to life and limb, the descriptions of which shocked the nation. Consequently, the United States Senate allowed a resolution to pass, introduced at the instance of the American Federation of Labor, which authorized the Federal Bureau of Labor to investigate conditions in the steel works at South Bethlehem. The investigation began March 17, its findings and those of independent investigators being from day to day made public in the press. On March 21 the Steel Trust, bending to public opinion, through its President, directed a limitation of Sunday work in subsidiary companies; on April 15 it announced an increase of 6 per cent in the wages of a majority of its employes, and on April 16 further announced its adoption of a system of accident compensation. While none of these concessions reach the level of either union demands or the standards of disinterested investigators, they are manifestly due to the militant activities of organized labor, evoking a widespread response from the unorganized workers in the industry.

Further incidents of the campaign for organization and inquiry into the status of the Steel Corporation were: Presentation March 30 by American Federation of Labor representatives of a bill of grievances to Governor Marshall, of Indiana, with a petition to investigate the Steel Corporation's subsidiary companies in that State; passage of a resolution in the House of Representatives, inspired by the American Federation of Labor, directing the Attorney-General to investigate the Steel Corporation; passage of a bill by the Senate, also introduced at the request of the American Federation of Labor, directing the United States Bureau of Labor to investigate and report the industrial conditions prevailing in the iron and steel industry of the United States.

Public statements have been made, and it is otherwise currently reported, that the report of the Bureau of Labor will soon be forthcoming and that the same will receive the attention of the Administration.

It is recommended that during the approaching sessions of the Legislatures in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Alabama, and elsewhere, that the State authorities be urged to institute thorough investigations and proceedings against the corporation in so far as it is operating illegally and improperly within the State or States, and it is further urged that the investigation be extended to the industrial and economic conditions prevailing among the workers in the industry. In our time it is not enough that a great industry such as prevails in iron, steel and tin, which has practically become a monopoly, shall be operated within the letter of the law. Such an industrial concern owes to society and humanity a deeper and broader concern for the welfare of its workers.

LADIES' GARMENT WORKERS' STRIKE AND INJUNCTION.

This strike, breaking out the first of July and continuing for nine weeks, involved in the course of its progress as many as 75,000 men and women of the "cloakmaking" industry in New York City. From the beginning it was characterized by an unexpected spirit of enthusiasm, resistance, and solidarity on the part of the workers. Previous to their cessation of work, the vast majority of them had been unorganized. But their experiences had been such that the necessity for a union became so deeply impressed upon them that they decided to refuse to accept any terms that might place their organization in jeopardy. Before August 2, 800 small employers, employing 30,000 persons, had made settlements with the union. An attempt made at that date for a general agreement, through negotiations carried on by representatives of the American Federation of Labor and the counsel for the two sides in conflict, was not successful, but on September 2 the following terms were accepted by the union and the Employers' Association:

"Each member of the manufacturers is to maintain a union shop, a union shop being understood to refer to a shop where union standards as to working conditions, hours of labor, and rates of wages prevail, and where, when hiring help, union men are preferred, it being recognized that, since there are different degrees of skill, employers shall have the freedom of selection as between one union man and another, and shall not be confined to any list nor bound to follow any prescribed order whatever."

The conditions secured by the workers are substantially as follows: Electric power free; no work at home; discipline of any manufacturer proved guilty of discrimination among his employes; six days' work a week and a cash weekly pay-day; all sub-contracting within shops abolished; nine hours' work a day five days a week and five hours the sixth day; the price of piece-work agreed upon by a committee of employes and their employers; double pay for overtime.

Treasurer John B. Lennon was at the outset of the strike assigned to assist on behalf of the American Federation of Labor, and was later joined by Organizer M. Grant Hamilton. Our local organizers were also concentrated on the work, and on request I paid several visits to New York to assist at mass-meetings and at the conferences. The General Executive Board of the union, at its quarterly meeting, September 23, in a resolution after conveying to individual representatives of the American Federation of Labor their deep sense of gratitude for the services rendered in the course of the strike, recorded this minute:

"We all feel that the co-operation of the American Federation of Labor in this strike has done a great deal toward helping us to achieve such a complete and brilliant victory."

An incident toward the close of the strike was the issue of an injunction by Judge Goff, of the New York City Supreme Court, which put before the American people the novel, and undoubtedly fallacious principle that to strike for the so-called "closed shop" is illegal. An immediate effect of the injunction was to arouse a greater determination than ever in the workers to win. While this Judge's action in this case was not taken seriously, either by the press or the public, it served to indicate the necessity that exists for a statute restraining the abuse of power by judges, Federal and State, particularly in the issuance of injunctions by which the liberties of the citizens, when these citizens are wage-workers, are outrageously invaded and denied.

It is not amiss here to call attention to the fact that if workmen may be denied by injunction, or by any other process, the right to leave their employment, either singly or in association, for the reason that they desire to secure the UNION SHOP; if they may be restrained by an injunction from striking in sympathy with their fellow-workers; if they may be enjoined from striking for any given reason whatever, the difference between the so-called free workmen and the workmen who must yield obedience to their masters—slaves—has disappeared. The only reason for slave-holding is to compel men to work in obedience to their masters' will.

If workmen may lawfully leave their employment at all—may strike—and they exercise that right, giving no reason for their act, the judges issuing this species of injunction would not issue an injunction, if we may believe the terms of their injunctive orders. If, on the other hand, workmen give any of the reasons which I have enumerated for leaving their employment—that is, for striking—then these judges will issue injunctions. Attention is called to this absurdity, that the doing of the act—that is, leaving work without giving any reason therefor—is held to be a bar to the issuance of an injunction, but that giving any of the reasons cited for striking affords the grounds upon which these injunctions are issued. It follows that it is not for the act—the strike in itself—that judges enjoin, but for the reasons the workmen give for that act.

But what authority had Judge Goff for his action?

The United States Supreme Court said on January 27, 1908, in its decision on the Adair case (sometimes popularly referred to as the "Blacklist" case):

"In every case that comes before this court where the protection of the Federal Constitution is sought, the question necessarily arises, is this a fair, reasonable, and appropriate exercise of the police power of the State, or is it an unreasonable, unnecessary, and arbitrary interference with the right of the individual to his personal liberty, or to enter into those contracts in relation to labor which may seem to him appropriate or necessary for the support of himself and his family? Of course, the liberty of contract relating to labor includes both parties to it; the one has as much right to purchase as the other to sell labor."

Again, the court said:

"The right of a person to sell his labor upon such terms as he deems proper is, in its essence, the same as the right of the purchaser of labor to prescribe the conditions upon which he will accept such labor from a person offering to sell it. So the right of the employe to quit the service of the employer, for whatever reason, is the same as the right of the employer, for whatever reason, to dispense with the services of such employe."

I quote again from the same case. "It was the legal right of the defendant Adair . . . however unwise such a course on his part might have been, to quit the service in which he was engaged because the defendant employed some persons who were not members of a labor organization." After this ruling, the court emphasized its position by saying: "In all such particulars the employer and the employe have equality of right, and any legislation that disturbs that equality is an arbitrary interference with the liberty of contract which no government can legally justify in a free land."

The court in its final judgment on this case said: "This decision is therefore restricted to the question of the validity of the particular provision in the act of Congress making it a crime against the United States for an agent or officer of an interstate carrier to discharge an employe from its service because of his being a member of a labor organization." And the court decided that the particular provision in the act of Congress was unconstitutional. The court decided that an employer had the right to discharge a man because he was a member of a labor organization. The court decided that the right of that employe to quit the service of an employer for whatever reason is the same as the right of the employer for whatever reason to dispense with the services of such employe. In short, for the courts to permit to employers the free play of discharge must carry with it the corresponding free action of employes to work or not to work, for any cause or for no cause, as they see fit. This inherent right can not be successfully abridged, either by a legislature or by the Congress. And yet within a period of one month judges of three courts in three separate States—Goff, in New York, against the Garment Workers, August 27, 1910; Richardson in Massachusetts, against the Photo-Engravers, July 29, 1910, and Houghton, in Indiana, against the Machinists, August 27, 1910—issued injunctions and decided that if men leave their employment for reasons justifiable to their judgment it will be acting illegally. This, too, in the face of the highest judicial authority in our land, the Supreme Court of the United States.

THE "SHIRT-WAIST" STRIKE.

This strike, which to so large an extent occupied public attention in the winter of 1909-10, brought to the consciousness of the nation a recognition of certain features looming up in its social development. These were the extent to which women are taking up with industrial life, their consequent tendency to stand together in the struggle to protect their common interests as wage-workers, the readiness of people in all classes to approve of trade union methods in behalf of working women, and the capacity of women as strikers to suffer, to do and to dare in support of their rights.

The number of women engaged in the shirt-waist strike was at least 20,000. Previous to their going out they had little or no organization. Their employers at first regarded their unexpected cessation from work as nothing more than an affair of a few days, at the end of which they must return to their places in the workshops, defeated, sobered, and ready to accept once more their accustomed routine and disheartening conditions. The employers were mistaken. The girls were willing to go hungry, and many of them did so; they braved the ruffianly police while peacefully picketing, went to imprisonment as a part of their duty to their comrades when sentenced by unsympathetic magistrates, skilfully and energetically aroused a sentiment in their favor in the community, and finally convinced their employers that they had learned the merits of combination for their plainly just purposes. It required twenty-three weeks to work their revolution in the shirt-waist industry, but it was accomplished. The bulk of the 450 shops of the trade in New York signed agreements with the union, and those which held out against formally signing generally accepted the terms for which the union had contended.

Under the agreement, wages were arranged in each shop, there being much variety in the character of the work done in the different shops. For overtime, price and a half and double price scales came into operation, in most cases for the first time. A fifty-two-hour week was established for the industry, even for the non-union shops. A limit of two hours overtime was fixed. As there are about four months in the slack seasons of the year, it is desirable for the union to devise a scheme of extending the working seasons. Abolition of sub-contracting, the establishment of a fixed wage scale, and the maintenance of hygienic work-place conditions are among the union purposes to be noted. It is a matter of congratulation to the women of the country that the organization of the shirt-waist girls of New York is now in good working order as a regular trade union, a local of the International Ladies' Garment Workers of America.

In connection with this subject, attention is called to the fact that after the strike's successful termination one of the employers brought suit against the international and the local union, its members, and several of the public-spirited, non-wage-working women who assisted the girls in the strike. The suit was brought for $150,000 under the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, the complaint as alleged being upon the same lines as that brought by Loewe & Co. against the United Hatters of North America.

MINERS' STRIKES AND OTHERS.

The members of the United Mine Workers of America at the last regular annual convention of their union declared for an increase of wages and for other improved conditions of their labor. The failure of many of the mine owners to agree with the representatives of the men resulted in a strike in the bituminous regions of more than one hundred thousand men which lasted more than five months. It resulted in the full demands of the men being conceded.

In western Pennsylvania several thousand miners have been on strike for conditions more nearly alike to those enjoyed by their fellow-craftsmen in the region and in the industry. These contesting miners were comparatively unorganized when they entered upon the strike. They became unionized soon after the strike was inaugurated. In view of the drain upon the funds of the United Mine Workers, in consequence of the great strike of a large part of its membership, that organization could not financially aid these other men to the extent both officers and members desired, yet every possible financial and moral assistance has been rendered. These men have made and are still making a splendid and heroic struggle for better wages and conditions, and for the right to organize for their protection and advancement. It is difficult to understand the awful privations these men, their wives and children, have endured and are enduring in the endeavor to secure to them a standing in their relations with their employers which makes for the consideration and justice to which these workers are entitled. They demand a voice in the determination of the wages, hours and conditions under which they shall dispose of their only possession, their labor power.

Numbers of organizations report that the largest gains and improvements in conditions have been received by conference and agreement.

DIRECTLY AFFILIATED LOCALS.

In regard to the struggles of our directly affiliated local trade unions and Federal Labor Unions, it is to be said that they have been unusually successful. A number have been engaged in protracted strikes, all of them but one proving successful. Even the one lost strike resulted in securing some improvement over former conditions and some relief from the conditions under which the workers suffered before the effort was made. With the experience and aid of our Federation's officers and organizers, these directly affiliated locals have been guided aright, and they have gained many advantages without the necessity of a strike. The fact that these locals have the advice and moral support of our Federation's officers and organizers, and if necessary the financial support of the American Federation of Labor, is regarded by the workers and their employers of sufficient potency to compel respectful consideration of Labor's needs and rights.

In addition to general strikes there have been a number of trade contests in many parts of the continent, but these have been local in character. They have been quite as important as those specifically mentioned, but they have generally been confined to well directed efforts by organized bodies to obtain higher wages, shorter hours, and better conditions. But better than all have been the improved conditions in respect to wages and hours which have been secured by the workers without the necessity of the cessation of labor through a strike or lockout.

In recent years a lesser number of international unions have been formed from directly affiliated unions than has formerly been the case. This is due largely to the fact that the directly affiliated local unions have urged that they are now under the immediate direction and advice of the Federation's officers and organizers, as well as to the fact that the American Federation of Labor has accumulated a considerable fund, to assistance from which they are entitled in times of stress. These benefits together with the prestige they enjoy of direct affiliation to the Federation, are of great advantage to them in dealing with employers—advantages which they declare they would not otherwise have had for a long time. They assert that by reason of the inexperience of their own men when dealing with the industrial interests of their fellow-workmen, and in the administration of the affairs of an international organization, and on account of the time necessary for the accumulation of funds for the promotion and protection of their rights and interests, they would comparatively suffer in the meantime.

In several of the trades there is a sufficient number of organizations to form a national union, and I have endeavored, and our officers should continue to endeavor in the future, to have international unions formed whenever there is a sufficient number of local unions of a trade or vocation to institute such a body. Men learn more by their own experience than by the advice or leadership of others. These unions must be organized into national or international unions some time, and they should begin at the most convenient practical time.

CONGRESS—ITS DECADENCE AND RENAISSANCE.

In establishing the new Nation the great statesmen who reared the structure of our Republic conceived the idea of providing three separate, distinct and co-ordinate departments of government, the legislative, the executive and the judicial. Each of these departments was designed to be within itself absolutely independent of the other, exercising supreme and exclusive jurisdiction in its respective sphere, and yet all were intended to be interdependent.

No similar experimentation with government had ever been attempted in other lands. This new plan was born out of the iron law of necessity. It was ideal in form, although somewhat cumbersome in operation when compared with the monarchical form, which it was designed to replace. The cardinal idea, the thought that inspired all, the intent that riveted the attention of those pioneers, was to show the whole world that no one man was or could ever be wise enough or good enough to control the destinies and the welfare of other men.

That cardinal point must be clearly understood for a comprehension of the basic principles upon which our Republic was founded.

In connection therewith these early pioneers of the new government saw farther than merely exhausting their energies by making protests which were heard around the world; they coupled with those protests one of the most constructive features of self-government. The central thought was that the destinies of the people of the new nation should be left in the hands of the people themselves. For want of better machinery, with which the people might express their will, the old English system of expressing their collective will through representatives, our representative form of government, was established.

For years the fathers wrestled with this great problem of self-government. The spirit that had called forth the sentiments and principles of the Declaration of Independence struggled and contested for a popular government in all that that expression implies. The opposition, fearing to intrust the people with full sway, exerted their greatest efforts to limit the people's power. Yet all agreed upon one point, and that was, that the source of all power, of all new legislation, of every vital principle of law, should rest in the hands of the people through their representatives in Congress; aye, and by a two-thirds vote even over the veto of the President. In short, the Congress, composed of the House of Representatives and the Senate, was charged specifically under the basic laws contained in the Constitution to make provision for revenues and expenditures, to establish a fiscal system, and above and beyond all to form a code of law, in respect to which the executive and judicial branches of the Government were and are required to yield obedience, these branches on this point being not co-ordinate, but subordinate. For example, the executive was granted no authority to create law; the judicial department was granted no prerogative to make law; the law was to be made solely and distinctly by the people's representatives in Congress, and then it was designed that the judicial department should administer the law as it found it, and the executive should execute the law as it was clearly written and interpreted.

If present conditions were not so serious, it would appear absurd that at this late day such a restatement of fact and principle should be found necessary. But flagrant departures from the Constitution in the recent past not only justify but compel criticism and protest. When others who should speak are silent, when others are willing to allow the vital principles of self-government to be either misapplied or betrayed, it is time that the men of labor should speak, directing the attention of their fellow-workers and fellow-citizens to the evils that threaten.

One of the greatest dangers now confronting the people and the people's government is the effort to overrule, to disregard, to treat with contempt that part of the Government nearest the people—the House of Representatives. This is not generally understood, but it is a fact nevertheless, and the character and the composition of the House in the last decade are chiefly to blame. For sake of party, of party harmony; for patronage, or its possible loss; for the sake of a re-election, the members have sat idly by, closed their eyes, refused to listen to the voice of duty, until such weakness has culminated in establishing the custom by Representatives of "holding their tongues" for fear they might lose caste with the Speaker whom they periodically and mechanically elected as their servant, yet to whom they have submitted as their master. For fear they might be considered fault-finders, for fear they might be called "irregular," for fear of their non-appointment on important committees, for fear they might lose the patronage the President has to bestow, they have acted as though paralyzed. Fear! Fear! Fear! Always the ghostly apparition of fear haunts the life of the average Congressman, and while this un-American attitude prevails the privileges, the dignity, the unquestioned prerogatives of legislation, the bedrock basis of constitutional rights, the fundamental requirement of fearless, faithful representation that gave this nation birth—these precious, valued, and holy elements of liberty are being gradually alienated from the House of Representatives by the courts and by the Presidents, and all that is now left of the power of the House is a theoretical recognition by the other departments that the House shall "hold the money bag" and provide revenue for the operation and continuation of the Government. That the House has not availed itself of even this power is current history patent to any observer.

HOUSE NEW RULE.

That the American Federation of Labor has made the people's fight its fight was demonstrated in the House of Representatives on June 17, when it adopted the new rule under House Resolution 808, which reads in part as follows:

"Any member may present a motion in writing to discharge a committee from further consideration of any public bill or joint resolution referred to such committee," and "Recognition for such motions shall be in order in which they have been entered . . . and shall have precedence over motions to suspend the rules and shall require for adoption an affirmative vote of the majority of the membership of the House."

Taking advantage of this new rule, that faithful and alert Representative, Mr. W. B. Wilson, of Pennsylvania, on June 24, moved to discharge the Committee on Judiciary from further consideration of H. R. 25188. The number of this bill on the new "Discharge Committee" Calendar is 24.

Special attention is invited to these matters; first, because it indicates progress, and second, because it justifies the American Federation of Labor in its incessant struggle to regain and re-establish a fundamental principle in representative government which has so long been denied the people by Speaker Cannon and his cohorts.

It is therefore confidently expected that the anti-trust and the anti-injunction bills will be discussed by the House of Representatives at the coming session of the present Congress, instead of being smothered by committees, and if the present Representatives and other Congressional candidates have been definitely pledged on these bills during the campaign just closed, it may be reasonably hoped that they will be enacted into law before the close of the next session of the Sixty-first Congress. If so, the fight will have been worth while, and the most important step toward maintaining the original form of true representative government will have been won through the initiative and activity of the American Federation of Labor.

SUMMARY AND STATUS OF LABOR LEGISLATION.

The following is the summary of legislation passed by the Sixty-first Congress in which Labor is particularly interested:

Amendment to the Employers' Liability Law and the creation of a Commission to inquire into the subject of extending employers' liability and the establishment of compensation.

The law requiring the standardization of equipment, such as ladders, running boards, grab irons, on cars of railroads.

The law requiring common carriers to report to the Interstate Commerce Commission all accidents of whatever character, and the cause.

The law for the better enforcement of the Child Labor Law of the District of Columbia.

The application of the Eight-Hour Law to the construction of government vessels by private contractors.

The establishment of Postal Savings Banks.

The creation of a Bureau of Mining for the investigation of the causes of accidents in mines and their prevention, and the rescue of workmen when accidents may occur.

The following are several of the most important bills pending before Congress, the enactment of which Labor seeks:

The Wilson bill, H. R. 25188. This bill is intended to remedy the injunction abuse and to restore to Labor the rights of which it was deprived through the interpretation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. It is now with the Judiciary Committee. Mr. Wilson offered a motion to discharge the committee from further consideration of the bill. Pending in the House.

The Eight-Hour Bill, H. R. 15441, before the Committee on Labor. Mr. Hughes, of New Jersey, offered a discharge motion so that the bill may come before the House. Pending in the House.

The bill to regulate the labor of convicts, H. R. 12000. Ordered reported favorably by the committee to the House for passage.

The Spight and LaFollette Bill, H. R. 11198 and S. 6155, for the protection of seamen and the prohibition of undermanning of seagoing vessels, and the training of the youth for the American Merchant Marine. Still in committee.

The Locomotive Boiler Inspection Bill, S. 236 and H. R. 9736, 9965, and 10689. Still in committee.

The Forty-Eight Hour Bill, S. 5900, H. R. 19796, being the eight-hour day or forty-eight hour week for Post-office clerks. Still in committee.

Bills to limit and regulate immigration. Before the various committees of the House and Senate. Mr. Gardner, of Massachusetts, introduced a bill requiring the educational test. A discharge motion is before the House.

The Asiatic Exclusion Bill passed the House and is before the Senate Committee.

The creation of a Federal Department of Labor ordered to be reported favorably by the Committee to the House.

H. R. 19546 and S. 3731, are bills to accord to those engaged in the Civil Service the political rights exercised by all citizens. The bills are before the committees of the House and Senate.

S. 4676 and H. R. 2374, being Industrial Education Bills. Before committees.

H. R. 19718, providing citizenship for Porto Ricans and other measures in the interest of labor and the people of the island. Bill still in committee.

The bill to secure to the official journals and our fraternal societies the second-class postal rates, H. R. 22239, passed the House and is pending before the Senate Committee.

ANTI-TRUST AND INJUNCTION.

In spite of our best endeavors it seemed impossible to obtain consideration by the House Committee on Judiciary of H. R. 3068, or as it was with Labor's advice later reintroduced by Representative Wilson as H. R. 25188. The majority membership of the committee was composed of the most docile representatives whom Speaker Cannon could have possibly selected. His ingenuity in his choice of this most important committee was characteristic. It became the object of derision of the Sixty-first Congress. One of its members, Mr. Reuben O. Moon, of Pennsylvania, obeyed orders and introduced "the administration bill" H. R. 21334. It was a bill providing legal authority for the issuance of injunctions, an authority which does not now exist. The President at first urged him and the committee to report the bill, but party exigency evidently forbade it. On March 2, 1910, I addressed a letter to Mr. Moon, and not hearing from him in response thereto I sent to each member of the committee an identical letter, inclosing a copy of the letter I had submitted to Mr. Moon. I herewith submit both these letters as an appendix to this report.

To the identical letter I received formal acknowledgments from Messrs. Parker, Nye, Howland, Malby, Carlin, Henry, and Denby, with assurances that the matter would receive their careful consideration. Messrs. Nye and Henry said they would oppose the Moon bill, both in committee and in the House.

President Taft, in an address at Passaic, N. J., on May 9, after discussing the provisions of the Moon bill, said:

"The great difficulty in respect to the matter is that if the bill is reported from the committee and put upon its passage in the House there will be a movement to introduce amendments in accord with the recommendations of the Federation of Labor, by which a jury trial shall be required in contempt cases and boycotts shall be made legitimate. It is feared that if such amendments were proposed they might pass and thus make the bill an obnoxious one. Whether a parliamentary condition can be created which will prevent the submission of such amendments or not is a question that I can not anticipate."

In other words, the President was apprehensive that if that bill which he favors came before the House of Representatives amendments would be offered securing to the workers the rights to which Labor is entitled equal with all other citizens, and that these amendments would be adopted by the House. Further, he hoped that a parliamentary condition might be created to prevent Labor's amendments being brought to the consideration of the House. Of course, it is a misstatement, more than likely an unintentional one, when the President declared that Labor has asked for a jury trial in contempt cases. The President's misinformation upon this subject indicates clearly that he has not understood the provisions of the Wilson bill, H. R. 25188. As a reading of the bill will disclose, we have not asked anything of the kind. For convenience, a copy of the bill is made an appendix to this report.

The session being then well advanced, it was found impossible to obtain further attention, but a well organized portion of the House members was prepared to attack the bill if it came up and also to add to it as an amendment the Wilson bill, H. R. 25188. This information coming to the President, he relaxed his eagerness to obtain the passage of the Moon bill. He feared that if that bill came before the House the opportunity would come to carry the Wilson bill as an amendment and by that means extend to Labor the legitimate relief for which it has been contending and to which he is aggressively opposed.

It might not be amiss to call attention to an occurrence in the early part of the year which showed an invasion by a court of the prerogative of a legislative branch of the Government and a supine acquiescence and surrender on the part of the House of Representatives. Each house of Congress for convenience conferred upon one of its committees power to pass upon and determine matters which otherwise itself would have to determine. Justice Wright, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, issued an order to the members of each of these committees of Congress citing them to appear and show cause why a writ of mandamus should not be issued compelling the committees to perform a certain act upon which the committees had discretionary power. The Committee of the House and of the Senate each reported back to its respective chamber, asking for instructions as to the attitude to be taken toward the court. The Senate instructed its committee to disobey the order and not to put in an appearance, and to so notify Justice Wright. The House instructed its committee to make appearance and to answer, thus surrendering its right and independence as one of the legislative bodies representing a distinct arm of the Government, whose deliberations are constitutionally defined to be free from judicial interference. Justice Wright later dismissed the writ of mandamus on what he termed "its merits," yet the fact remains that by yielding to the court's order the House left the original subject to the discretion of the court, that is, whether the House committee should be compelled to perform an act which might be contrary to the judgment of the committee or the House itself and contrary to the interests of the people. The action of the House established what Justice Wright aimed to secure, the jurisdiction of his court, and therefore the jurisdiction of any court in issuing an order compelling a legislative branch of the Federal Government to perform an act contrary to its will.

In addition, your attention is called to the fact that the writ of mandamus and the writ of injunction differ only in this respect: a mandamus compels the doing of an act; an injunction forbids the doing of an act. If a court has the right to issue a mandamus or writ to compel the doing of a certain act by Congress or by one of its committees, it follows that the court has also the right to issue an injunction forbidding it to do that same act or to pass some other act. What is of additional interest to Labor is that the Senate in totally disregarding the order of Justice Wright did not incur his wrath; he did not have the temerity to exercise his power and cite the Senate or its committee before him for their refusal to disobey his mandate. If his order was not void, he had the right and the power to punish for contempt through disobedience.

It is not pleasant to be compelled to record such observations and reflections as these relative to a department of government generally considered the most popular, and which is and must always naturally be the closest to the people, but it is useless to wait longer for time to correct these deficiencies, and it is absolute folly to expect that reformation and regeneration will be primarily effected inside the House. To purify and rehabilitate are achievements that must originate with the people themselves, never forgetting that eternal vigilance is essential to secure and preserve that priceless treasure, liberty. The popular branch of the Congress must be restored to its original intent, and our Congressmen must be prompted by the people to exercise their every constitutional right and to jealously conserve their inalienable prerogatives.

If the House of Representatives had exercised the power and the rights with which it was originally endowed, the men of labor would not have occasion to persistently protest against the application and abuse of the writ of injunction in labor disputes. Neither would they be confronted with the confusing interpretations of law which have emanated from our courts in the latter's attempts to link up a trade union with an industrial or commercial trust DEALING IN THE PRODUCTS OF LABOR.

For ages before our Government was organized there had been an irrepressible conflict between two distinct forms of government—government of law and personal government, or government by discretion. In the long run civilization has always made progress toward government by law, not court-made law, but law formally enacted by representatives of the people (and at least in theory) with the people's approval.

One of our chief grievances is the tendency of our modern American courts to get away from government by law—statutory law—law enacted by the people through their duly accredited representatives—and to hark back to the old system of personal government, government by discretion, that discretion resting with men; good men, strong men, frail men—Judges.

To submit to such a reaction would be the extreme of folly; it would be equivalent to setting the hands of the clock backward. It would be an admission on our part that the struggle of the Revolutionary fathers was all in vain and that government by the people is a delusion.

We can not, we dare not, permit this tremendous power to be in the hands of any one man or any few men, and we most assuredly must not permit one man, or a small proportion of men, to arrogate to themselves a discretion amounting to dominion over the lives and the liberties of the people. Yet when our courts issue unwarranted injunctions in labor disputes restraining men from persuading, from inducing, from congregating, from soliciting, from speaking, from printing, from performing the simplest acts clearly compatible with the inherent, and inalienable rights of every citizen, or of a number of citizens, the courts have come to assume a power that the Constitution and the laws do not confer upon them, and indeed explicitly deny to them.

Judges must have a substantial basis of concrete law upon which to base their decisions. The Congress must provide this basis; if it has been and still is unwilling or incapable, the people in their might and by the exercise of their constitutional rights must compel the remedy.

The habit of countenancing courts in their invasion of the most sacred rights of man, and then allowing such invasion to be followed because of precedent, no people deserving freedom can long tolerate or, tolerating, can long retain their freedom.

Congress must come to the rescue in an intelligent, courageous, progressive manner and reassert the personal rights of men and lay down definite laws from which the courts may not depart.

In short, the Congress must legislate, the courts must administer, the executive must execute, and the people's will must prevail. When these separate and co-ordinate departments re-establish themselves within their authorized and constitutional limitation and jurisdiction, the dangers of usurpation shall have been curbed and the people shall have set the faces of their servants once more toward the horizon of the rising sun of progress, liberty, and everlasting justice.

We must reassert an old truth in a new way, and herald it broadcast: The courts are made for the people, and not the people for the courts.

Let me close these observations on this vital subject by quoting a guarantee contained in the Massachusetts Constitution of 1780:

"In the government of this Commonwealth the legislative department shall never exercise the executive and judicial powers, or either of them; the executive shall never exercise the legislative and judicial powers, or either of them; the judicial shall never exercise the legislative and executive powers, or either of them; to the end that it may be a government of laws and not of men."

That declaration contains the whole pith of genuine representative republican government. If the Congress and the courts and the executive had observed these first principles there would not now be any need of protest on this issue from the men of labor, who, by reason of their position in and relation to society, must of necessity be the defenders and standard-bearers of true freedom.

INJUNCTION-CONTEMPT-APPEALS.

It becomes my duty to report to you the status of the injunction issued by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, as sustained after being modified by the Court of Appeals of that District, and of the contempt case resulting in the sentences imposed upon "Gompers, Mitchell, and Morrison," of twelve, nine, and six months' imprisonment, respectively. The American Federation of Labor directed that such steps as may be necessary be taken to carry both the injunction case and the contempt case growing out of it to the Supreme Court of the United States, in order that we may obtain a decision which shall define Labor's rights in so far as it can be done in connection with these cases.

It is not necessary to burden this report with a repetition of the history of the case. That history may be found in the reports which the Executive Council and I had the honor to submit to the Toronto Convention, printed proceedings of which have been provided here for each delegate.

In compliance with instructions, our counsel took an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States in the Buck's Stove and Range Company's suit for injunction, and they also presented a petition, supported by brief, for the issuance of a writ of certiorari in the contempt proceedings under which "Gompers, Mitchell, and Morrison" were held as guilty of contempt of court for an alleged violation of the injunction and sentenced to imprisonment. The petition was presented to the court November 29, 1909. The petition and brief are so lucid and interesting that I commend them to your consideration and to that of all others interested in this phase of the law. I deemed them of sufficient importance to publish them in the issue of The American Federationist of January, 1910. The U. S. Supreme Court took the petition under advisement, and a week later, that is, on December 6, granted the petition. It should be stated that the counsel opposed to us also appealed against the modified injunction of the Court of Appeals, and that after the granting of the writ of certiorari the U. S. Supreme Court directed the two branches of the case to be considered and discussed at the same time.

In consequence of two vacancies in the U. S. Supreme Court, and the general recognition of the prime importance of the principles involved in these cases, it was deemed advisable by our counsel that an effort should be made to have the cases argued before and decided by a full bench. With this view the U. S. Supreme Court agreed at the October, 1910, term and deferred the argument until January 16, 1911.

The origin of these cases was in the dispute between organized labor and the Buck's Stove and Range Company, which, under its old management and policy, sought the injunction and obtained the decree in the contempt proceedings. It is gratifying to report officially that the industrial dispute between organized labor and the Buck's Stove and Range Company was, in July last, adjusted upon mutually honorable terms. The decease of the President of the company, Mr. Van Cleave, gave the opportunity for the new manager of the company to carry out his lifelong policy of friendliness toward and co-operation with organized labor.

And now the opportunity is afforded to disclose the correctness of the position which we took in the contempt proceedings; that is to say, the American Federation of Labor's representatives made earnest efforts to come to an honorable understanding and adjustment of the matters in dispute between the Buck's Stove and Range Company and organized labor before the company's products were placed on the "We Don't Patronize" list. The negotiations were conducted then, as they were later, by Vice-President Valentine, who, being President of the International Molders' Union, was authorized to make, and did make, efforts to bring about an adjustment. At that time we were not warranted in making public the names of the men either directly or indirectly associated with the company through whom such efforts were made. Since Labor's agreement of last July with the company we feel justified in stating that the efforts were made through Messrs. Hogan and Cribben, the then executive officers of the National Stove Founders' Defense Association, of which the Buck's Stove and Range Company was a member, and Mr. F. W. Gardner, the present chairman of the board of directors of the company. This fact disproves the position taken by Justice Wright when he declared that no such effort had been made by us.

The agreement reached between organized labor and the Buck's Stove and Range Company was published in the September, 1910, issue of The American Federationist, and a later agreement in compliance therewith was entered into at St. Louis, September 7, 1910. In connection with the published agreement, attention should be called to the fact that upon advice of our counsel the representatives of Labor requested that those provisions in section four of the agreement by which the company was to withdraw its attorneys from the cases pending in the courts, be nullified. The company readily agreed to our request.

It will be remembered that the counsel opposed to us in the case is retained by the so-called Anti-Boycott Association, and had appeared for the company as a member of that association. Under the old management and policy this was agreeable to both company and association. Our attorneys advised us that if we desired the U. S. Supreme Court to pass upon the principle underlying the judicial controversy, it would be unwise to insist upon the company's withdrawal of its attorneys of record in the case. In view of this fact, and the further fact that the attorneys of record opposed to us are equally with us fully intent upon having these fundamental principles determined by the U. S. Supreme Court, we were glad to avail ourselves of the suggestion of our attorneys, which, as already stated, was cordially acceded to by the company.

However, from any standpoint, it has been the purpose of the American Federation of Labor, ever since injunctions of this character have been issued, to have the U. S. Supreme Court pass judgment upon them. They are fundamental. They strike into the very bottom of the principles of personal liberty and equality before the law. If it were our purpose to avoid the consequences of the assertion of our rights, there has not been a time during these entire proceedings in the last five years when we could not have avoided them. But there had been developed in employers of labor and business men a mental attitude and a condition in which they undertook to deny to the working people of our country rights which are accorded to all other citizens. The issue was clean-cut, and we have been glad of the opportunity to meet it. For years we have endeavored to make this issue before the courts. The dispute with the Buck's Stove and Range Company and the injunction issued upon its petition afforded the desired opportunity. At our own wish, as well as upon the direction of the American Federation of Labor, advantage was taken of this injunction in order that the case might be made full and complete and the issue tested before the several judicial tribunals until it had reached the U. S. Supreme Court. Inasmuch as the opportunity is afforded equally to Labor's opponents, I feel confident that they also will be glad that the questions at issue shall be determined by our highest judicial tribunal.

SUITS AGAINST LABOR UNDER ANTI-TRUST LAW.

There are three suits for damages now pending in the Federal Courts under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law:

1. Loewe & Co. against the United Hatters of North America.
2. A. Sitomer against the Shirt-Waist Workers and the Ladies' Garment Workers' unions and others, and—
3. C. W. Post against the officers of the American Federation of Labor, the officers of a number of affiliated organizations and the new management of the Buck's Stove and Range Company.

Inasmuch as I have discussed the Hatters' case in the leading article in the March, 1910, issue of The American Federationist under the caption of "The Hatters' Case—The Sherman Law—Amend it or End it," and in the editorial, "Labor Organizations Must Not Be Outlawed—The Supreme Court's Decision in the Hatters' Case," printed in March, 1908, issue, and in view of the fact that the Executive Council will deal fully with this subject in its report to this Convention, I deem it but necessary to state that after a trial before the Federal Court of the District of Connecticut, running from the first Monday in October, 1909, to February 4, 1910, the jury, under instruction of the Judge, awarded damages against the Hatters, the sum being $222,000, with costs and counsel fees.

In connection with the strike of the shirt-waist makers of New York, a suit was brought under the terms of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law by A. Sitomer against the officers and members of the local union, the officers of the Ladies' Garment Workers' International Union, and a number of humane women who interested themselves in securing victory for the girls engaged in that great contest. Injuries in the amount of $150,000 are alleged and $450,000 damages demanded. An endeavor was made to have the defendants in this suit present a comprehensive defense, so that the fundamental principles involved in Labor's contention in regard to the Anti-Trust law may again be brought to the attention of the courts. My hope is that if a defense is made which shall comprehensively and fundamentally bring the cause before the lower courts, and if necessary through the other courts until it shall reach the United States Supreme Court, we may have a full review by the courts and a possible substantial reversal of the decision in the Hatters' case.

Concurrent with the unsuccessful effort of C. W. Post to secure an injunction to restrain Labor from carrying out its agreement with the Buck's Stove and Range Company, he brought suit as a minority stockholder against the officers of the American Federation of Labor and the officers of a number of affiliated organizations jointly with the Buck's Stove and Range Company, alleging $250,000 damages, and claiming threefold damages, or $750,000. As a minority stockholder of the company it is the firm conviction of leading members in the legal profession that the suit can not be successfully prosecuted, and yet it has been necessary to be represented by counsel and to put in an appearance. All parties named in the complaint, and who have been served with a process, have conveyed to me power of attorney, as President of the American Federation of Labor, to defend them in the case and to share equally the costs of defense.

In the October issue of The American Federationist the matter is more fully stated in an editorial under the caption, "Post—Cheap Mischief Maker." This matter must necessarily receive due consideration at the hands of this Convention and further authority and directions given.

In New Orleans seventy-five workmen were indicted by the Federal Grand Jury under the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, because the men authorized a strike in sympathy with fellow-workers engaged in a dispute with their employers.

A few months ago six farmers in Kentucky were indicted, tried, convicted and sentenced to various terms of imprisonment under the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, their offense being that they had co-operated to obtain better prices for their product.

Let any right-thinking, liberty-loving American read these cases, the reports of which have been made to the American Federation of Labor conventions, the editorials in The American Federationist dealing with these subjects, as well as the grave opinions by high legal authorities which have been published therein, and he will become convinced of the great injustice done to the workers by the interpretation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. By that interpretation its provisions have been extended to the voluntary organizations of the working people, and by it the toilers are and may be mulcted in damages for the exercise of their personal endeavors to protect and promote their own interests. Further, by that interpretation, at the whim, fancy, or pique of a Federal administration, its officers or subordinates may proceed criminally against the men of labor because of efforts they may make in furtherance of a fair standard of wages, hours, and conditions of employment by withholding their labor-power and their patronage. Labor will continue to emphasize its protest against the conception and decision, whether judicial or otherwise, which would place in the same category the trusts and corporations, dealing with material things, the products of labor, and the voluntary associations of men and women, the sole purpose of which is to protect the physical well-being of their members.

Every effort made by the American Federation of Labor and the men of labor, whether political, legislative, or industrial, in the past several years, was not only justified, but necessary to safeguard the right of organization of the toilers. Their safety and well-being are involved. It is the bounden duty of the workers to subordinate political partisanship in the one great effort to which we should concentrate our best energies, to attain the right to organize.

In view of the fact that these matters will be dealt with more fully in the report of the Executive Council, by the proper committee, and later on by this Convention, there is no necessity for more than this brief statement of facts in regard to these subjects.

HUGHES AMENDMENT—PROSECUTION OF LABOR.

The President carried his opposition to such an extreme that he exercised the limit of his power, working with all his might and main on June 22 and June 23, to defeat the amendment our friend, Mr. Hughes, of New Jersey, proposed to the section of the Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill on June 2, 1910. The section provided an appropriation for the prosecution of the criminal trusts. Mr. Hughes' amendment was as follows:

"Provided further, That no part of this money shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement having in view the increasing of wages, shortening of hours, or bettering the condition of labor, or for any act done in furtherance thereof NOT IN ITSELF UNLAWFUL."

An interesting debate occurred on the amendment, as the Congressional Record discloses. The House, in Committee of the Whole, adopted it by a vote of 82 to 52. The bill with the proviso went over to the Senate and after debate was defeated by that body by a vote of 34 to 16.

Because of the disagreement the entire bill was sent to conferees of both houses. They reported to their respective bodies their inability to agree. The majority of the conferees on the part of the House, while obeying the House instructions, opposed the proviso in the House. They were out of sympathy with, indeed were hostile to, the proposition they were supposed to urge on the conferees of the Senate.

On June 21 the House, by a vote of 164 "yeas" to 106 "nays," 12 answering "present" and 119 "not voting," indorsed its former action and instructed its conferees to insist upon the Hughes proviso being retained in the bill.

The Senate again rejected the proviso and the bill again went to conference, Speaker Cannon again naming the majority of the House conferees who were hostile to its enactment.

The situation evidently angered the President as he immediately took the matter into his own hands. He suspended other public business and swept aside every engagement. He called "wavering" Representatives to the White House and insisted upon their active opposition, even going so far as to say that if it cost him the support of every laboring man in the country he would not approve of such a proviso in the law. It is reported that when he learned that the House had receded from its insistence upon the proviso by the close vote of 138 to 130, he made no effort to conceal his great gratification because he had succeeded in defeating Labor to this extent.

Your attention is called to the Hughes proviso. It directed that no money should be expended by the Government in the prosecution of any organization or individual in an effort to increase wages, shorten hours of labor, or bettering the conditions of labor when that effort was "not in itself unlawful." The proviso was important in a declaratory sense. What is the obvious inference from the action of its opponents? None other than that, notwithstanding every action of Labor should be fully within the law, they desired to hold over the heads of the toilers the threatening sword of Damocles—criminal prosecution.

Since the vote taken on June 23, some representatives have said that they would vote for a direct measure to exempt Labor from the provisions of the Anti-Trust Law when it comes before the House. Others have said that they can see no reason why the great corporations should be continually exempted from the law while the labor organizations are subjected to and continually harassed by it. Others, again, have said that they have come to the conclusion that Labor had made possible the fight that had been made and was being made in Congress for the benefit of the whole nation, and that henceforth they intended to make our fight their fight.

IRRATIONAL ANTAGONISM TO ORGANIZED LABOR'S PROTEST AND PROGRESS.

There are men prominent in the industrial and political affairs of our country who do not or will not understand the present trend of economic and social development, nor the position which the organized labor movement takes relative thereto, expressing as it does an orderly and rational progress, and they consequently set themselves against the projects and aspirations of the toilers. They will, as a matter of grace, yield a crumb of materiality, yet deny to the toilers the fundamental principle of freedom—freedom to exercise those personal activities necessary in the struggle to work out their own amelioration and emancipation. It is most unfortunate that opponents assume such an attitude of hostility to the growth of the much misunderstood and misrepresented labor movement of our country and our time, and endeavor to circumscribe its activities within such limitations as would deprive its members of their inherent, natural, and constitutional rights.

For what does organized labor contend if not to improve the standard of life, to uproot ignorance and foster education, to instill character and manhood and an independent spirit among our people, to bring about a recognition of the interdependence in modern life of man, and his fellow-man? We aim to establish a normal workday, to take the children from the factory and the workshop and give them the opportunity of the school, the home, and the playground. In a word, the unions of labor, recognizing the duty to toil, strive to educate their members, to make their homes and lives more cheerful in every way, to contribute an earnest effort toward making life the better worth living, to avail their members of their rights as citizens and to bear the duties and responsibilities and perform the obligations they owe to our country and to our fellow-men.

In the constant struggle, in the struggle of the ages, as well as of our time, the self-same elements of bitter antagonism have been and are now encountered. Labor contends that in every effort to achieve its praiseworthy ends all honorable and lawful means are not only commendable but should receive the sympathetic support of every right-thinking, progressive man. The wheels of industry must not be turned back nor the movements of commerce halted. The industrial and commercial development can not and must not be checked.

Concentration of wealth continues. The tools of labor have been alienated from the toilers. Vast and intricate machinery has supplanted them. The toilers must work. Their economic position in society is changed. They can no longer act as individuals to redress a wrong or to attain a right. They must pool their individual effort for their associated protection and weal, and if the concept of the sovereignty of citizenship is not a meaningless phrase the toilers must in their common effort under modern industrial conditions be accorded the exercise of their rights as citizens, as men, and as workers, to protect themselves from the tyranny which concentrated wealth and industry impose if left unchecked, and wherever necessary to contend against that tyranny and to work for a higher and better opportunity to live and to progress. Judicial decisions and legislative enactments are to be expected in the course of the evolution through which we are passing, but whatever their character the workers in our Republic must be accorded at least the same rights as those enjoyed by the subjects of the monarchy of Great Britain and of nearly every other civilized country.

Because the labor movement in our country is so thoroughly imbued with the consciousness and the responsibility to rationally, naturally, and in an orderly manner work out the great problems of the relations of the workers to society and to the evolution of industry and commerce, and particularly with the necessity to work for a higher and better life for the workers and for common humanity, I regard the attitude of such hostility as I have recalled from men prominent in political and industrial affairs as not only unjustified, but highly prejudicial to the best interest of all our people and particularly dangerous to an orderly adjustment and solution of the economic problems and social difficulties of our time.

In all countries of the civilized world the economic problem is up for discussion, and its solution, gradual, peaceful, or otherwise, is a question of imminent importance. What in many other countries is sought or accomplished by force or the show of force is in our movement undertaken or achieved by the American methods of agitation, education, and organization, and the exercise of the personal rights of man in association with his fellows—rights which must not under any pretense be denied by the subterfuge of injunctions or outlawed by the perversion or interpretation of law.

If the labor movement of America can be outlawed and its normal endeavors in the interests of the toilers and all the deprived stratum of humanity made impossible, the discontent of our people with existing wrongs and their efforts for relief will find their expression in another form, a form perhaps not quite so rational or orderly. On another occasion I have expressed this thought, whereupon malicious opponents have perverted it to make it appear the utterance of a threat. It is not a threat; it is a diagnosis of societal conditions; it is a prediction—a prediction based upon a knowledge of the struggles of the peoples in the past and an understanding of human nature.

The toilers must, for their own safety now and for the future, organize. Their organizations must be accorded the full legal status recognized in all voluntary associations dealing with purely personal affairs and instituted not for profit. In the same degree that these rights are recognized and conceded by present irrational opponents, will the great economic and industrial problems of our time and of the future be rationally, safely, and peacefully solved. Solved they must be at all hazards.

EXTENSION OF EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

The experiences encountered were many and varied during the past session of Congress in the effort to obtain effective legislation extending the beneficent provisions of the Federal eight-hour law to all Government employees and employes of contractors and sub-contractors engaged on work for the United States Government. So far as the results obtained with the regular eight-hour bill before the House Committee on Labor are concerned, it is not possible to report any progress, but nevertheless some material progress was made in other ways toward extending the eight-hour law, in spite of the House Committee on Labor, which was more deliberately and ingeniously packed by Speaker Cannon than ever before. First, he repeated his unfair practice of appointing on the committee eight of the majority party to five of the minority party; second, he appointed a majority of the members from distinctly non-industrial districts, who do not know anything and seemingly care little about the lives and welfare of the workers in congested urban centers; third, he selected several members to serve on the committee whom he knew to be openly hostile to labor—men who spare no pains to show their antagonism to the real welfare of the toilers. In fact the chief aim of the Speaker toward this committee has been to use the Committee on Labor as a mortuary, instead of a cradle, for Labor's hopes and aspirations.

It was not until February, 1910, that the Committee on Labor held its first meeting (long after other responsible committees had got down to work and disposed of considerable public business), and its only proceeding then was to afford an opportunity to Chairman Gardner to vote for his own bill and report it out of committee, but instead of seizing the opportunity he deliberately adjourned the committee meeting over the protest of the other members present, thus making clear his lack of sincerity in behalf of his own bill. The committee met again February 15, and referred the bill to a hostile sub-committee after a motion was defeated on a regular party division (8 to 5) to report it out March 1.

After considerable urging, the committee met again on March 24, when Mr. Madison of Kansas, moved to instruct those interested to furnish the committee by April 8 with written statements or briefs upon the constitutionality of the bill; that time was extended to April 18, and on that date the time was further extended in order to permit hostile interests to furnish additional briefs. I report these proceedings in detail to indicate the subterfuges adopted by the committee in order to prevent any action being taken on this bill.

On April 6 I replied to the committee's request for a brief, affirming the constitutionality of the bill, and protesting against any further policy of delay, but the sub-committee refused to print my letter in the public document containing the briefs. In the meantime, on April 23, I addressed a letter to each member of the committee, reciting in detail the history of the effort to obtain this legislation and furnishing them in substance what I had previously submitted to the sub-committee on the constitutionality of the bill. A copy of my letter to the committee was published in the June, 1910, issue of The American Federationist. In addition thereto the attorney for the International Association of Machinists submitted an argument and brief affirming the bill's constitutionality.

Every available influence was used and every possible effort made to secure action by this committee. Many thousands of circulars were sent out by the American Federation of Labor and the International Association of Machinists. Every Member of Congress was deluged with petitions from his constituents. Members were personally interviewed and a substantial majority of both houses committed favorably to the bill, but it was impossible to get action from the committee either of the House or the Senate. The Senate Committee's determined not to meet. Call after call was issued by its chairman, Senator Boral, a member polled by our Legislative Committees the day before and the morning of the meeting, but without avail. The Congressional Committees on Labor are wrongly named. They should be called Committees of Indolence. They are either afraid to labor or afraid of the justice of Labor's demands and unworthily shirk their duty. Nevertheless, progress has been made by dint of some strategy and persistent effort on Labor's part, aided by faithful representatives in the House.

The appropriation bill providing for the construction of revenue cutters was amended by Mr. Hughes of New Jersey, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to construct the vessels in accordance with the provisions of the Federal Eight-Hour Act approved August 1, 1892. The bill as amended passed the House March 2, 1910, and the Senate April 14, 1910.

When the Naval Appropriation bill was before the House April 8, Mr. Fitzgerald of New York offered an amendment requiring the contract for the construction of the vessels to contain a clause making it mandatory for the contractors to observe the Federal eight-hour law of 1892. The amendment passed the House by a vote of 131 in favor to 15 against. The manufacturers' and shipbuilding interests made a desperate effort to persuade the Senate to eliminate this amendment, but the vigorous, persistent work of the American Federation of Labor, with its affiliated organizations, particularly of the metal trades, overcame the opposition. On April 23 I addressed a personal letter to each Senator giving the history of the many endeavors made by us to obtain an eight-hour law covering contractors and sub-contractors doing work for the United States Government, and in it I brought documentary evidence to the attention of the Senators as to the undignified, un-American tactics of opposition employed by the Fore River Shipbuilding Company of Quincy, Mass. The result was that no opposition was made to the proviso on the floor of the Senate when it passed the bill with the amendment intact.

This eight-hour provision was referred by the Secretary of the Navy to the Attorney-General for an opinion as to the extent of its application. On July 8, he rendered his opinion, in which he said:

"I think it clear that the provision in the Naval Appropriation Act must be construed to apply simply to work done upon the vessel itself at the place where it is built, and not as applying to the manufacture of machinery or other material elsewhere which is to enter into the construction of the vessel. This would limit the provision to work upon the vessel at the shipyard."

This limitation of the interpretation of the Fitzgerald eight-hour amendment as applied to the construction of the vessels authorized by Congress may be in accordance with the letter of the law, but it is not in conformity with its spirit. However, some progress has been made, but we must apply ourselves to the extension of the law until all work done by or for the Government shall, as provided in our bill, come under the operation of an eight-hour workday.

When the Sundry Civil Bill was before the House June 4, Mr. Kendall, of Iowa, twice sought to include eight-hour amendments to apply to contracts provided for in that appropriation bill, but in both cases the amendments were ruled out on points of order and sustained on appeal by the House by a vote of 99 to 61.

Much more could be said upon this important subject, but it must suffice to add that the immediate prospects for eight-hour legislation are brighter now than ever, and if we persistently continue our efforts it will be secured in the very near future.

I make this statement without reserve and predicate it upon these reasons: first and best, our fellow-workers are determined to obtain this legislation; second, the new element aspiring to political preferment is committed to the eight-hour workday on principle as well as policy; third, we have succeeded in breaking the thralldom that has hitherto bound Members of the House of Representatives.

By our incessant efforts, we, the members of the American Federation of Labor, have succeeded in obtaining a larger measure of freedom for our Congressmen. They need not be bound and gagged as formerly. They can command attention; they can get their bills out into the open daylight by means of the new rule adopted June 17, 1910, viz., House Resolution No. 808, referred to elsewhere in this report.

Taking advantage of this new rule, Mr. Hayes, of California, on June 20, moved to discharge the House Committee on Labor from further consideration of H. R. 26984, which is a meritorious eight-hour bill. Its number on the "Discharge Committee" Calendar is 16.

On the same date, Mr. Hughes, of New Jersey, made a similar motion relative to H. R. 15411. Its number on the calendar is 21. Once these bills come squarely before the House, they will use, and Chairman Gardner's vain boast that he is "sitting on the lid to prevent consideration of labor measures" will be finally and forever exploded, and he will be deprived of the perch which could have been his, of being the "father of the eight-hour law."

The discussion and vote in both houses of Congress show clearly that when definite propositions have been before them providing for the extension of the eight-hour workday, favorable action has been taken. The fact stands out clearly that the greatest obstacle to success on this line of action is the failure or refusal of the committees to report the labor and reformatory bills which have been referred to them.

CHILD LABOR.

The persistency and patience of the organized workers in behalf of the children of the nation are being rewarded.

After years of heroic effort and weary periods of misrepresentation and misinterpretation by the gradgrinds of industry, the goal of ultimate success gradually but surely is being reached.

The child, our nation's most priceless possession, is at last being recognized by society as its most valuable asset.

Some other influential portions of society have at last, after our repeated warnings, continual struggles, and gratifying successes, been convinced that we are right in asking protection for the child. They are taking a leaf from our book of endeavor and aspiration and are now rendering us valuable aid in behalf of better child labor laws. This is as it should be, and as it should have been years ago. If it had been so, our newly discovered auxiliaries could more consistently claim credit they are now appropriating without stint. This is another evidence of the truism, "Nothing succeeds like success."

The period has now arrived when the average Member of a Legislature is proud if he can make a good record on "child labor legislation," and while this inclination prevails it will be well to press home in every State Legislature the most complete and efficient measures in the interest of the children.

The Ohio law is without doubt the most enlightened and humane. It provides fourteen years as the age limit for employment of children in factories, fifteen years in mines (during school term), and sixteen years in dangerous or unhealthful employments. That State has also enacted a law making eight hours a maximum day's work for children, including girls up to the eighteenth year.

The most essential feature now required in some States is more capable factory inspectors to enforce the child labor laws of the State. These can be obtained if a firm demand is made for them.

We succeeded in having the child labor law of the District of Columbia strengthened during the last session of Congress. Formerly, inspectors were appointed at the option of the District Commissioners. We protested that the duty should be made mandatory, instead of optional. The District of Columbia appropriation bill now contains a provision requiring the detail of two privates of the Metropolitan police for the enforcement of the provisions of the act to regulate the employment of child labor.

Several efforts have been made by persons interested in exploiting the labor of children to have what they are pleased to call "broad and liberal interpretations of the law," but the courts have decided otherwise. The last case, under Judge De Lacy, was decided October 6, 1910, in which he held that the spirit as well as the letter of the law should be strictly observed, saying: "Violators of the child labor law deserve the severest censure. The boys and girls taken from school and play are deprived of their birthright. Those who exploit them should be punished severely." It is not so long ago that when Labor's representatives made similar statements they were denounced as "blatant agitators" "dreamers," etc., but through their righteous endeavors we have lived to enjoy hearing judges, ministers, statesmen, and even politicians, applauded for such lofty sentiments.

Forty-four States now have child labor legislation of some form. In twenty-eight States the working age limit is fourteen years; in ten, twelve years; in three, sixteen years; in two, fifteen years, and in one State (Georgia) ten years. Five States now have a forty-eight-hour week for children; five, a fifty-four-hour week; two, a fifty-five-hour week; two, a fifty-six-hour week; two, a fifty-eight-hour week; twenty-four, a sixty-hour week; two, a sixty-six hour week.

The law should provide that the maximum working hours for minors should not exceed eight hours per day. Uniform State legislation in this regard should be immediately urged.

LABOR OF CONVICTS.

The chief argument of those who exploit the labor of convicts under the contract system and those who defend the exploiters—for profit to themselves—has been that the convict must be employed during incarceration. This cry, as old as the contract system of convict labor itself, is hypocritical and sophistical. The use of it by profit mongers is an endeavor to place labor in a false position and to cover their own heartlessness and perfidy.

Certainly no thoughtful, humane person, and most assuredly no trade unionist, wants the inmates of our prisons to remain idle. Every one is in agreement that they should be employed. No labor representative has privately suggested or publicly expressed a desire to keep these offenders against society in idleness.

Impositions upon the credulity of the people have always been inspired by the grasping prison-labor contractor and his hirelings. And the sole plea of those who fatten upon the misery and shortcomings of the unfortunates, and those who have successfully thrived upon the cupidity of State legislators, is an imposition.

The convict contract labor system is a curse to the convict, the State, the prison officials the fair employer, the short-sighted merchant, and the honest toiler for wages.

The contract system of prison labor is inhuman, dishonest, and stupid. It is a disgrace to our highly trained scientific twentieth century and a blot upon our boasted civilization. It is deceptively presented to the representatives of a State as a device that will procure ample revenue to reimburse the State for the expense of caring for the convicts, allow the convicts to "earn something for themselves," and of late a more specious but not less transparent claim is made that the "poor convict" is being taught a trade so that when he is released he can procure honorable employment at good wages.

Not one of these statements can be successfully maintained. They fall of their own weight when analyzed. In the first place, the largest part of the profit of the labor of the prisoners under the contract system does not go to defray his expenses to the State. It does not go to the convict himself. It goes to the third party, the contractor who has no interest whatever, either in the welfare of the convict or the interest of the State, other than to add to his swollen profits from the misfortunes of the criminal. Consequently, no reformation results. The prisoners are not deceived. They know they are robbed. They become hardened and learn to hate society for the crime society permits to be practiced upon them under the name of law.

"The contract system furnishes revenue to the State," say the prison labor contractors and their apologists. Your attention is called to what Mr. Scates confessed at the last hearings before the House Committee on Labor. Said he:

"I speak by the book. I had seven years' experience in the Maryland Penitentiary on the shoe contract. Maryland is one of the few contract States which nets a profit from its prisoners. . . . I know the State made about $40,000 one year. . . . At that time the contractor divided with his partners. One got $5,000, another $10,000, another $15,000, and he took $35,000 as his own profit from the Maryland Penitentiary."

The State got $40,000 and the contractors $35,000. The contractors got over 70 per cent of the total, nearly two and one-half times as much as the State obtained from the labor of its convicts.

Mr. Floyd, a member of the committee, testified that in his State (Arkansas) the contractors pay the State 50 cents per prisoner per day and then hire them out to the railroads and on the public works of the State for $1.75 per day. Could any scheme be more venal or more stupid?

The suggestion that men are taught trades in prison under the contract system is ridiculous. They learn how to make shirts and overalls, which is women's employment. They make hollowware, which is now a prison monopoly. They make chairs, and by so doing have driven fair employers and honest wage-workers in that industry out of business. "Your prisons," recently said an eminent English penologist, who, visiting the United States in connection with the International Prison Congress, had concluded a tour of investigation, "are not reformatories. They are factories."

This transparent fraud must be abolished. Convicts must be employed by the State direct on its own account and not on account of the contractor. The State may derive economic, but it must secure social, advantage from the labor of the convict. The first consideration must be the welfare of, and the influence upon, the prisoners during incarceration and after their release; the second, consideration of the free, honest citizen workman, and third, the interest of the State as a financial and political entity.

Prisoners should be employed at useful and practical productive toil. The labor of the States' unfortunates and derelicts should never be exploited for profit and certainly never for the private profit of contractors. Let our States employ their prisoners in the production of the necessities of life, for the maintenance of themselves and the inmates of the other State eleemosynary institutions, or else road building.

The police power of a State undoubtedly extends without question to all laws regulating the health, the morals, and the general peace, comfort, and safety of the community, and is broadly construed to include all laws that promote the general welfare. In no essential can the general welfare of the State be better protected than for the Congress to assure each State of its right of home rule within the confines of the State, so that no State should become without its will the dumping ground for goods made by convicts of other States. The enactment of H. R. 12000, now before Congress, would give the Legislatures of the States the right and power to protect their own citizens from the unfair competition of the contract convict labor of those States which care more for the profits of their prison labor contractors than for their prisoners, and whose only success is the dumping of the products of that labor on other States. Such a law would destroy the arrogant boastfulness of some prison officials, who declare that they can sell their goods against the will and desire of the people of the State in which they dump their unfair products.

The enactment of such legislation, which will mark in fact a progressive growth and outcome of the necessities of an intense economic, industrial, commercial, and social struggle, the American Federation of Labor must bend its best energies to secure from the Federal Congress and State Legislatures.

Several hearings were held by a sub-committee of the House Committee on Labor on the Convict Labor Bill, H. R. 12000, indorsed by the American Federation of Labor, at which our representatives were greatly encouraged and their arguments strongly fortified by many statements of incontrovertible facts presented by influential employers of labor, representatives of national committees on prison labor, attorneys of employers, prison officials, and other penologists. This was a new but gratifying experience, and the representatives of the American Federation of Labor called the attention of the committee to the fact that the presence of such advocates from other walks of life and their corroborative arguments vindicated and justified the contentions made by Labor before this committee for several years past.

The sub-committee was sympathetic; it refused delay or extension of time for further hearings to the opponents of the bill. The hearings closed March 31, and a peremptory order issued that all briefs and written arguments upon the subject, pro and con, were to be in the hands of the committee by April 11. On May 20 the sub-committee reported the bill favorably to the full committee, and on June 17 the full committee agreed to report it favorably to the House, which was done on June 22. Its number on the House Calendar is 294.

On June 24, the chairman reported H. R. 12001, a bill to prevent any officer, employe or agent of the Government from contracting for products in which the labor of convicts entered. Its number on the House Calendar is 299.

Owing to the fact that so much unnecessary delay was caused by the full committee in reporting these bills, and to their unfavorable position on the calendar, it is scarcely expected that any action will be taken on either during the forthcoming short session of the Sixty-first Congress, unless great pressure is brought to bear upon Representatives and Senators. I urge that every effort be put forth in the hope that despite appearances success may crown our efforts before the close of this Congress.

IMMIGRATION, GENERAL AND ASIATIC.

A veritable flood of bills designed to check immigration was introduced during the last session of Congress.

Even reactionary members of Congress and others who have obeyed every whim of the Speaker in a most docile manner apparently refused to be longer held in check. In response to the nation-wide sentiment they introduced bills tending to regulate and limit the avalanche of immigration of recent years.

These bills have covered every imaginable phase of the subject, such as deportation of felons, of defectives, of the insane and otherwise diseased persons, higher head taxes, illiteracy tests, so-called white slave regulations and prohibitions, Asiatic exclusion, etc.

The House Committee on Immigration held extended hearings upon the several bills and upon the special features contained in the bills, with the result that one act covering deportation and prohibition of white slaves was passed, and another measure, supplementary to the first, prohibiting interstate commerce in white slaves was enacted.

Great interest was manifested among the representatives on the general subject, so much so that it was finally arranged that the House Committee should take a vote on March 14, 1910, on the propositions to increase the head tax and establish an educational test for immigrants, but when the committee was convened for that purpose it was found impossible to reconcile the contending factions, so it was finally agreed to defer any further legislation until the next session of Congress, awaiting the report of the Immigration Commission, which has been ordered by Congress to make its complete and final report by December 1, 1910.

Later on Representative Gardner, of Massachusetts, moved to discharge the Committee on Immigration from further consideration of his bill, H. R. 15413, requiring an educational test for immigrants. Its number on the "Discharge Committee" Calendar is 24.

ASIATIC EXCLUSION.

Representative Hayes, of California, was active in his endeavors to obtain practical and effective legislation excluding Asiatic immigrants. He succeeded in obtaining the passage through the House, on May 2, 1910, of an amendment to section 2169 of the Revised Statutes.

The Hayes bill, H. R. 24993, which passed the House as an amendment to the Revised Statutes, declares specifically which foreigners shall be eligible to citizenship in the United States, and by omitting Chinese, Japanese, Koreans, Hindoos, and Malays consequently denies them the right of naturalization. The bill is now pending before the Senate Committee on Immigration.

In the meantime Mr. Hayes followed this success by pressing another bill, H. R. 20379, as an amendment to section 2 of the present immigration law by adding the following:

"That the following class of aliens shall be excluded from admission into the United States:

... Persons who, under the provision of section 2169 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, are ineligible to become citizens of the United States, unless they are merchants, teachers, students, or travelers for curiosity or pleasure."

Representatives of the American Federation of Labor consulted with Mr. Hayes on this line of procedure and aided him in pressing these measures. The latter bill was reported out of committee on February 10, 1910, and is No. 86 on the House Calendar. It is confidently expected that if these two measures can be enacted into law, Asiatic emigration to the United States will be effectually prevented.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY-COMPENSATION.

Thirty-seven States have enacted some form of employers' liability law, very few of which, however, have been interpreted favorably for the workers by the courts. This is to be accounted for largely because the courts have clung tenaciously to certain former precedents, arising out of peculiar judicial reasoning, which have at times been referred to as the "unholy trinity," viz, the "assumption of risk," "contributory negligence," and "fellow-servant" rulings. As if these obstacles were not enough to offset a workman's claim for damages, another method has been devised, which the courts have duly recognized as affording grounds valid and sufficient to prevent an injured employe from obtaining an award for damages. This cunning device has been to induce—manifestly in the last analysis through coercion—an employe when arranging for employment to sign a contract "waiving his rights," or his widow's and orphans', to sue for damages in case of injury or death during employment.

The following States have abrogated the defense of "fellow-servant" responsibility, either for general employments or in particular industries (usually transportation): Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma (by constitution), South Dakota, Texas, and Wisconsin. The Colorado law is the most notable example. It completely eliminates the defense of the "fellow-servant" rule in all employments, and upon a test case being made (in Vindication Mining Co. vs. Firstbrook, 36 Colo., 496) it was upheld as constitutional. To the credit of organized labor, this humane measure was introduced in the Colorado Legislature and pressed to a successful enactment by a trade unionist member of the General Assembly.

In California, Mississippi, Ohio, Oregon, South Carolina, Utah, Virginia, the "fellow-servant" rule is modified without being abrogated.

Several States have enacted legislation modifying the old common law rulings of "assumed risk." Others have modified the rulings of "contributory negligence" to what is more euphemistically termed "comparative negligence," but such tinkering and trifling with measures of such grave import to the workers in industry is but transparent pettifoggery. Just, humane, positively affirmative and effective legislation must in honor and duty be enacted by the States and by the United States. All legislation on identical subjects should be uniform among the States, but, pending the time when that desirable end can be reached, it is essential that legislation dealing with the important subject of employers' liability should be uniform among the States, not only uniform in technique, but uniformly good—effective legislation that will forever abolish the antiquated, barbarous, so-called common law defense known as "fellow-servant" rule, "contributory (or comparative) negligence," and "assumption of risk," as well as the waiving of rights. If any reason ever existed for these circumscribed rules, formulated by judges, the time has long since passed when they should be applied.

The modern use of steam power, electricity, compressed air and explosives, often under control of men who fail to understand their nature, and whose routine duties make them so accustomed to danger that they fail to realize it, has made it utterly impossible to protect society against the weakest of all human agencies, viz, the failure or forgetfulness of the human factor. Then also must be considered the dangers to life and limb in the operation of fast-driven intricate machinery as well as the accidents due to the massing together of great numbers of workers in modern industry.

The stubborn resistance of corporations, common carriers, mine owners, and other employers to the most moderate laws for the protection of human beings from injury, and their general reluctance to provide protection through their own volition, ought to convince reasonable and fair-minded legislators that true justice demands an expansion of the law, with more humane interpretation of it on the part of judges, instead of there being, as the court reports in many of the States now so amply record, a studied effort to restrict the law and apply new exceptions to it, to prevent the allowance of damages for the injured and killed workmen in industry.

Seemingly the American public has just awakened to the fact that of all civilized countries of the world, Turkey and the United States are the only two left that still cling to the old common-law doctrine of liability with respect to industrial accidents. This awakening will force upon the workers of the United States some kind of workmen's compensation legislation, and unless Labor takes an active part in the movement its interests in regard to this will not be properly safeguarded.

Industry must bear the financial burden of accidents to the human being, exactly as it does now in case of accidents to machinery or to other property.

The organized workers are thoroughly aroused on this subject, and in several States, notably New York, Minnesota, Ohio, New Jersey, Washington and Illinois, commissions have recently been appointed to deal with it as an all-important life-conserving measure. Life-conserving is the true title, because if it becomes too expensive to the employers to maim and kill employes in industry, more and better safety devices and measures will be speedily adopted to prevent the massacres rather than cure the patients or pay money for injuries.

Through the instrumentality of the organized workers an "automatic compensation act," passed by the Congress May 30, 1908, took effect August 1, 1908. It granted to certain employes of the United States engaged in hazardous occupations the right to receive compensation from the Federal Government for injuries sustained in the course of their employment. On June 25, 1910, Congress passed a joint resolution providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate the subject-matter of employers' liability and compensation to workmen for injuries sustained during employment, with instructions to report to Congress through the President December, 1911. This commission is composed of United States Senators William Warner, of Missouri, and C. J. Hughes, of Colorado; Representatives W. G. Brantley, of Georgia, and Edwin Denby, of Michigan; Daniel L. Cease, editor of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen's Journal, and W. C. Brown, President of the New York Central Railroad. The commission held its first meeting in Chicago October 22.

The Employers' Liability Law (applicable to common carriers by railroads in interstate commerce only) approved April 23, 1908, during the few months of its operation has been found to be defective because of certain rulings by the courts. The courts held, first, that an injured employe could only bring suit when the defendant railroad company could be found, that is—the headquarters of the company; second, that in case of death, either before suit for damages was instituted or during pendency of suit, the right of action did not survive to the benefit of the widow and children or other dependents on the deceased employe; third (by the Supreme Court of Connecticut in the case of Hoxie vs. The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company), that the State court had no jurisdiction. In the latter case the court went further and declared the act unconstitutional after rendering a decision bristling with all of the old out-of-date and cruel exceptions common to courts in such cases.

All of these defects were corrected by an act passed during the last session of Congress. The organized labor movement, comprising the American Federation of Labor and Railroad Brotherhoods, is entitled to the credit of presenting all of the above-mentioned measures to Congress and pressing them to a successful passage.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR.

Very interesting hearings were held on May 25 and 26 before a sub-committee of the House Committee on Labor, in support of H. R. 3046, by Mr. Sulzer, Representative in Congress from New York, which provides for a Department of Labor with a Secretary at its head, to be a member of the President's Cabinet. No one appeared before the committee in opposition, and the committee expressed itself as being in favor of the general principle contained in the measure. On June 14 the sub-committee reported the bill favorably to the full committee, with the recommendation that Chairman Gardner redraft the bill so as to provide for an enlarged scope of activities for the proposed Department of Labor. The full committee accepted the report of the sub-committee and on June 17 decided to report the bill favorably to the House when redrafted, but in spite of many urgent requests made to Chairman Gardner he failed to report it before Congress adjourned.

Many Members of Congress seem to be favorably inclined toward this proposed "Department of Labor," and it is within reasonable possibilities that the administration will favor it and urge its early passage. Continued demands, with pressure from the ranks of organized labor and other broad-minded citizens in behalf of this measure, are sure to meet with favorable response and action.

The hearings and arguments on the bill to create a Department of Labor are printed by Congress as a public document. Copies can be obtained without cost, by citizens or organizations, upon application to the Congressmen of their respective districts. The matter contained in the hearings is of great interest to all labor.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

Conservation is one of the topics uppermost in the mind of the American public today, but there is one phase of conservation which is not receiving the attention which it deserves; I refer to the conservation of the brain and brawn of our American youth. Our school systems are giving only a one-sided education; the boy may go to school and prepare himself for professional or commercial life, or he may drop out of school and enter a trade with no particular preparation and become a mediocre workman. Training of brain and muscle must go together for the complete preparation of men.

While the public schools and colleges aim only at teaching professions, the greatest need of America, educationally, is the improvement of industrial intelligence and working efficiency in the American youth. We need an educational uplift for the work of the boy who will work with his hands, and we not only need to give an educational uplift to craftsmanship, but the school needs the help of the workman and his better work in education. We should realize better the interdependence between our common education and our common industries. This can be effectuated only by a system of industrial schools, differentiated from the manual training schools, which shall actually train workmen for the trades and at the same time give them a broader mental culture.

In accordance with a resolution passed by the Toronto Convention, a committee was appointed to confer with Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor and with Commissioner Neill of the Bureau of Labor, to present the request of the convention that the United States Department of Commerce and Labor investigate the entire subject of Industrial Education. The committee, consisting of Vice-Presidents Mitchell and O'Connell, Secretary Morrison, and myself, conferred with Secretary Nagel and Commissioner Neill December 20, 1909, and after an exhaustive discussion of the matter in all its phases it was agreed that an investigation was desirable to all interests concerned and should be undertaken within the year. The investigation was begun April 8, 1910, and is now nearing completion.

From my observation and information it is evident that the investigation comprehends a thorough and exhaustive study of all schools in the United States which are giving real trade or vocational training—that is, training which will fit a boy (or girl) wholly or in part for a trade or vocation.

The interest of organized labor in industrial education has always been progressive as in contrast to the employers' interest. For five years the employers in associations have been talking, but they have made little progress. The trade unions have talked, but they have also accomplished something. A special committee made a deep study of industrial education and has reported. That report we published and it has had a wide circulation. Action upon the report has been taken by us. The Federal investigation, as already shown, was brought about through the efforts of organized labor.

In pursuance of the recommendation of your Committee on Education, Labor's bill for congressional action was drafted. This Vocational Education Bill, better known as the Dolliver bill, was introduced by the late Senator Dolliver, and through the efforts of your committee was put upon the calendar.

The bill provides for educational co-operation with States, and consists of five parts; (1) (sec. 2) Providing $5,000,000 for instruction in the trades and industries, home economics, and agriculture in the city high schools; (2) (secs. 3 and 4) Providing $5,000,000 for State district agricultural high schools and branch experiment stations; (3) (sec. 5) Providing $1,500,000 for extension departments in the State colleges of agriculture and mechanic arts; (4) (sec. 6) Providing $1,000,000 for the preparation by State normal schools of vocational teachers; and (5) (secs. 7, 8, and 9) Providing $70,000 for the administration of these funds and for assistance to the States by the Departments of the Interior, Agriculture, and Commerce and Labor.

Prior to 1910 employers announced themselves willing to indorse the Davis bill provided the words "Trade Training" be substituted for "Manual Training." The proposed legislation comprehends training for "Trades and Industries," but subsequent action (or lack of action) by employers would suggest only a transient interest on their part in the promised Federal legislation. They were not even sufficiently interested to attend the hearings on the Vocational Education Bill before the Senate Committee.

Taking advantage of the new committee discharge rule, Hon. Charles R. Davis, Representative from the Third District of Minnesota, on June 20 (only three days after the adoption of the rule by the House) moved to discharge the House Committee on Agriculture from further consideration of the bill (H. R. 20374) and for the House to consider the bill directly. This action by Mr. Davis will undoubtedly bring this bill before the House at an early date when Congress convenes for its next session, and there is scarcely a doubt that the House will give this very essential and progressive legislation favorable consideration.

The fact that industrial education, like academic education, is becoming a public function and that it should be paid for by public funds is fast gaining supporters. At a recent meeting in Indianapolis the department of superintendents of the National Education Association placed on record its approval of the general plan, and especially emphasized the desirability of enlarging the work of the Federal and State Departments and Bureaus which have to do with public education. But most significant is the following declaration by that organization:

"That the department, while heartily approving every agency that may be used to advance the educational interests of both States and Nation, places itself on record as disapproving any appropriation made by either legislatures or Congress for any institution which is not supported exclusively by public funds and which is not subject to complete Federal and State control and investigation."

May 6, 1910, at a joint meeting of the American Education and Co-operative Farmers' Union and the American Society of Equity, the following resolution was passed:

"Resolved, That we approve the provisions of the Dolliver Vocational Education Bill, which provides national funds for the establishment of rural high schools to be administered by State authority, and earnestly urge members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives to favor this bill."

In the death of Senator Dolliver the cause of industrial education has lost one of its ablest and most enthusiastic supporters. Late in December, 1909, the representatives of the American Federation of Labor and a representative of the farming interests conferred with the Senator for the purpose of interesting him in the matter of vocational education, and for the specific purpose of having him introduce a bill in the United States Senate making provision for legislation covering this general subject. On its being explained, he expressed himself emphatically in favor of the proposed legislation, and he introduced the bill on the reconvening of Congress after the holiday recess. In addition it is only just to say that Senator Dolliver in the last years of his life realized the great humane cause which the labor movement espoused. On one occasion, a few months before his demise, he declared that the labor movement is the most potent force to secure the present day needs of the people and to work out the great problems for the future, adding, "God being willing, in the future Labor's fight will be my fight."

SECOND-CLASS MAIL RATES.

In accordance with instructions of the Toronto Convention (Resolutions Nos. 6 and 71), every effort was made to have Congress amend the postal laws to allow trade union publications to carry advertisements and to permit the membership to subscribe for these publications through the monthly per capita tax or dues paid by the members. Suitable bills were prepared and introduced in the House by Representative Dodds, of Michigan, and in the Senate by Senator Owen, of Oklahoma.

Extended hearings were held by the House Committee on Post-Office and Post-Roads, at which representatives of the American Federation of Labor united with the representatives of the Railroad Brotherhoods, the National Fraternal Congress, and the Associated Fraternities, in behalf of the purposes embraced in the bill H. R. 22230, which was suitably amended to cover every detail and to embrace all interests. It was reported out of the committee June 2 and passed by the House without opposition June 6, 1910. The bill then went to the Senate, and every effort was made there to get the Senate Committee on Post-Office to make a report upon it. Thousands of petitions were sent to the Senators and many interviews held with the members of the committee, but because the Chairman, Senator Penrose, was absent, no meeting of the committee could or would be held by its other members, and consequently no action was taken by it on the bill.

Outside of the Post-Office Department no definite opposition has been made apparent, and when the Postmaster-General, Mr. Hitchcock, was interviewed on the subject by members of the Executive Council, he agreed not to press the departmental rulings pending the outcome of the anticipated legislation or until reasonable time was allowed international organizations to adjust their laws requiring personal subscriptions for the publications.

INSURANCE LAWS AND TRADE UNIONS.

In March last the Commissioner of Insurance of South Carolina notified the General Office of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America that that organization comes within the scope of the insurance laws of the State and that it was required to take out a license in order to do business in the State. Correspondence being unsatisfactory, Mr. Frank Duffy, Secretary of the Brotherhood, and Mr. D. F. Fentherston, one of its organizers, proceeded to Columbia, S. C., and held a conference on the subject with Insurance Commissioner McMaster. They informed him that the Brotherhood is a labor organization, a voluntary, unincorporated association, not paying insurance in any form, merely making an allowance of a funeral benefit, to provide decent burial for deceased members. A copy of the constitution of the Brotherhood was submitted to him, with the list of its various trade union purposes and the sections governing the payments of benefits marked. In reply the Insurance Commissioner informed the labor representatives that he adjudged the Brotherhood fraternal, rather than otherwise, it having a restrictive method of gaining admission to its meetings, with its own form of transacting business. Coming under the head of fraternal associations, it must be governed by the provisions of the act recently passed by the Legislature of that State for the regulation and control of such bodies. Not being classed as an insurance organization, and not falling under the provisions requiring either a deposit or a bond, the Brotherhood's sole financial qualification to do business in the State would be attainable by taking out a license from the Commissioner at a cost of $25 a year. Without a license the organization could have no standing and would be prohibited from doing business in the State. Further, under the law in its present provisions, the Brotherhood must show that it admits members of one race only (the Commissioner admitting that on this point the law would require remodeling); and it must file an annual financial statement, giving its income with the sources thereof, its expenses and for what purposes, its assets, money invested, indebtedness, etc. Among the additional requirements was registration with the Commissioner of each organizer, person, agent, or representative going into the State to do business for the organization, neglect of which rendered the person soliciting membership liable to a fine of $100 or imprisonment for thirty days. A similar fine or imprisonment might be inflicted for neglect to comply with any other provision of the act.

The Commissioner warned the Brotherhood's representatives not to solicit new membership in the State until complying with the law and holding a license. In reply, they informed him that the General Executive Board, which was to meet in July, would take up the question, and that the entire matter would be placed before the Annual General Convention, which was to take place in Des Moines, Iowa, in September. The Commissioner cautioned the representatives against admitting new members in any of the local unions of the State in the meantime. This means that the work of organizing is forbidden in the State until a license should be procured. At a meeting of the Brotherhood's General Executive Board the General President was instructed to procure a license from the South Carolina Insurance Commissioner and also to communicate with the President of the American Federation of Labor, and with the labor organizations similarly affected as the Brotherhood, asking that joint action be taken to have the insurance laws of South Carolina and of the various States modified to such an extent as to exempt from the operations of laws never intended to cover them—the voluntary organizations of labor.

In connection with this subject your attention is called to the fact that in several States discriminatory laws have been enacted against labor organizations at the instance of insurance companies organized for private profit. The companies realize that in the voluntary co-operative effort of trade unions to protect their membership against the vicissitudes of life the greatest benefits result to the membership, and that the work is done at a minimum cost and with the avoidance of red tape and circumlocution.

It is recommended that this Convention make further declaration on this question, directing that such assistance be continued to be rendered and such further action be taken as to protect and promote the rights of organized labor in the humane work in which our trade unions are engaged.

OKLAHOMA CONSTITUTION.

The railroads and other vested interests early this year undertook to have the excellent constitution of Oklahoma changed in their own interests. The effort was unsuccessful. An energetic campaign was carried on by the organized wage-workers and farmers to prevent the proposed amendments being adopted. The Oklahoma State Federation of Labor, together with Organizer M. Grant Hamilton, representing the American Federation of Labor, carried on a vigorous campaign throughout the State. Besides the railroads and other vested interests favoring these amendments, the Railway Employees and Investors' Association had agents in the field advocating their adoption. The representatives of the Oklahoma State Federation of Labor and the representative of the American Federation of Labor, as well as the advocates of the amendments, appeared before the Governor of the State at the same time and debated the provisions contained in the amendments. As a consequence of this joint meeting the Governor of Oklahoma issued an open letter against the amendments. I issued a letter to the workers and farmers of Oklahoma urging them to perform their duty and defeat the amendments. The letter was reproduced and largely circulated throughout the State. There is no question but that the assistance rendered by the American Federation of Labor and the State Federation materially aided in arousing the people to the serious situation so that they cast their vote and encompassed the defeat of the amendments. The proposed amendments were submitted to a referendum vote of the people of Oklahoma on June 10, with the result that they were defeated by almost 40,000 majority.

CONSTITUTIONS—ARIZONA AND NEW MEXICO.

On June 20, 1910, an act that had passed Congress granting statehood to Arizona and New Mexico was approved by the President of the United States. In passing this bill Congress evidently had in mind the constitution adopted by Oklahoma and the provisions therein relative to the initiative, referendum, right of recall, and particularly that clause in that constitution upon the issuance of injunctions. It must have been the evident fear of Congress that the constitutional conventions in both of the new States might adopt similar provisions, and therefore it embodied in the act granting statehood to New Mexico and to Arizona the following conditions:

"That when said constitution and such provisions thereof as have been separately submitted shall have been duly ratified by the people of New Mexico as aforesaid a certified copy of the same shall be submitted to the President of the United States and to Congress for approval, together with the statement of the votes cast thereon and upon any provisions thereof which were separately submitted to and voted upon by the people. And if Congress and the President approve said constitution and the said separate provisions thereof, or, if the President approves the same and Congress fails to disapprove the same during the next regular session thereof, then and in that event the President shall certify said facts to the Governor of New Mexico," etc., etc.

The elections in both the proposed new States for delegates to the constitutional conventions have been hotly contested, centering around the plank calling for the initiative and referendum and right of recall. In each State the Democratic platform advocated this plank, the Republican platform opposed it. In Arizona a majority of the fifty-two delegates elected to the constitutional convention were elected on a platform pledging them to incorporate this plank in the constitution. New Mexico elected a majority of Republicans to the convention, five-sixths of whom are opposed to the initiative and referendum, while the measure is favored by all the Democrats, the minority. The New Mexico constitutional convention, however, adopted a provision by which the entire judiciary is to be elected by the people.

I have endeavored to be of assistance to our fellow-citizens in the two new prospective States so that they, like Oklahoma, may start aright in statehood. We should all endeavor to be of such further assistance as is possible in this direction.

The subject of the initiative and referendum has also been under consideration in other States and in the city of Denver, Colo. The State of Arkansas voted upon this proposition in its late election, giving it a splendid majority. In Denver, after an intense and exciting campaign, in which "the interests" were arrayed against any really progressive legislation, the initiative, referendum and recall were established on a popular vote.

OREGON.

Of all the States in the Union, Oregon has taken the most advanced ground in the establishment of the people's rule. There they have the initiative and referendum, the recall, the direct primary, and the corrupt practices act as well as the election of United States Senators by direct instruction of the people. Recently, however, the old and almost discarded political bosses, acting at the behest of "the interests," attempted to swing the people back to the old condition of bossism through the manipulation of party conventions, where they could corral, coerce and dominate, despite the people's will. In conformity with the declarations of our Federation upon this subject, I have deemed it my pleasurable duty on all occasions to render such assistance as lay in my power so that the people of that State might retain the splendid vantage ground they have achieved. In connection with this, your attention should be called to the masterful address delivered by Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., in the Senate of the United States, May 5, 1910, giving a clear and concise exposition of the admirable form of government in Oregon, which should prove an example and an incentive to the toilers and to the people generally in extending its principles to our entire system of government, Federal, State and municipal.

LABOR'S PRACTICAL POLITICAL ACTION

Some of the fruits of organized labor's participation in the political activities of the States and the Nation are coming to the surface.

We who have been conscious of what has been and what is being accomplished have had the gratification of witnessing the fact that other influential sections of society have also seen fit to make some effort to cleanse politics of contaminating influences.

Since the American Federation of Labor has taken a more active part in the political affairs of the Nation, we have had the satisfaction of removing from office many bitter opponents to Labor's advancement, which includes and implies the advancement of the interests of the whole people.

We have curbed the sordid, self-seeking agents of predatory interests—now somewhat softened by the new title of "big business." We have seen Mr. Cannon, the most potent evil influence against the people's rights and interests, stripped of his autocratic, arbitrary power as Speaker of the House of Representatives. We have seen the Rules Committee of the House reconstructed and reformed so that it shall respond to the will of the majority rather than be the pliant tool of "the interests" under domination of Speaker Cannon or any future Speaker of a like caliber and make-up.

When we said in the now historic "Bill of Grievances," which we submitted to the President, and to the chief representatives of both houses of Congress in 1906, that unless the rights to which Labor is entitled were accorded by legislation we should appeal from the Representatives in Congress "to the conscience and the support of our fellow-citizens," the declaration was jeered at by those at that time entrenched in power in the House, and we were damned from Dan to Beersheba by the penny-a-liners who scribble for a hostile press as being dictators to Labor and scheming to "deliver the Labor vote." But their rantings were in vain. Their efforts to hold the workers of America in mental servitude to party idolatry and party slavery have been abortive. The militant organized wage-workers have been so aroused, and the appeals to the people on the ground of humanity, liberty and justice rewarded with such manifestations of accord and co-operation, that success now appears on the horizon. Our achievements in both the industrial and political fields, especially during the year now closing, warrant the justification of our brightest hopes and the prediction of greater successes as time goes on.

Passing, as we are, through the gravest crisis ever faced by the workers in the history of this country, Labor has not faltered. It has not abated one tittle of its activity. It has not hesitated in the face of the most trying circumstances to stand loyally, faithfully, and tenaciously for the rights of the toilers, for the rights and liberties of all the people.

When we pledged ourselves to exert every possible legitimate effort to secure for the workers their inalienable liberties as a vital portion of the fabric of our civilization, a new declaration of human rights was recognized by our associates, and when we further pledged our fealty to carry on this work until every industrial and political right of the workers shall be guaranteed its permanent place and sphere of usefulness in the progress of our country, we challenged our opponents to try to prevent the achievement of these aspirations—if they dared.

Today we are standing on the threshold of successful accomplishment. By the persistency of our endeavors in the interest of human welfare we have shaken the crafty and the greedy out of their position of confident self-assertion and converted them into apologists before their fellow-citizens.

A great majority of the public news-venders have conspired to keep silent on our extraordinary political successes in California, Washington, Oregon, Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, New York, Maine and elsewhere throughout the country. They ascribe a thousand and one fictitious reasons for the uprising of the people. Anything and everything in their eyes has been responsible except the one real cause.

When so many elements, through their common interests, tacitly or by agreement try to suppress or pervert the truth, and thereby to keep the people in ignorance as to the most potent factor which has caused the important political upheaval and the legislative reforms in recent times it would be a false modesty, a modesty which is not a virtue, it would be wasteful and wrongful, did not organized labor claim the just credit due it after the years of struggle and sacrifice which the toilers have undergone to bring about these achievements; achievements in the cause of a progress which is but at its beginning. Labor—militant organized labor—owing allegiance to no political party or formulated partisan creed, inspired the revolution of independent political thought and action and with practical aims called upon the people to claim their own.

The political defeats that have taken place this year in districts and States which can be named, whereby many of our opponents have been consigned to political oblivion, have demonstrated beyond all quibble what element was responsible and hence is deserving of credit for the upheaval. The wholesale overthrow of the legislative and political jugglers with the people's rights and interests can unerringly be traced to organized labor's appeals to the people to defend their common interest and precious rights.

In this day of reckoning which has arrived I am firmly convinced that the American Federation of Labor is most directly responsible for the strength of the aroused indignation of an offended and aggrieved nation.

In this great awakening our men of labor have brought forcibly to the attention of the rest of our people the evils with which we have contended and still have to contend. We protest and shall protest against the abuse of the injunction writ by the courts—against being denied the manifest and fundamental right of equality before the law. We have been denied our constitutional rights of free speech and free press; we have suffered under laws primarily enacted to regulate and control great combinations of capital which have been interpreted to apply to the voluntary organizations of working people. We have so forcibly called these grievances to the attention of the public mind that we are now meeting with an unmistakably sympathetic response. If Labor will but maintain the vantage gained and persistently pursue the course it has adopted, it will not only effectively prevent any reaction or possibility of returning to the old basis of injustice and misrepresentation, but it will also steadily advance toward the goal of justice and freedom, the consummation of Labor's aspirations.

We must never forget—never forget the men and their associates who did their utmost to reduce Labor to a bargain-counter commodity; never forget that the courts were made for men and not men for courts; never forget that legislators for State or Nation are but the representatives of the citizens, in duty bound to enact such laws as shall make secure the freedom of all our people and be in furtherance of their rights and interests.

In connection with this subject of injunctions your attention is called to the high legal authorities quoted in the letter to Mr. Moon and which is an appendix to this report.

Attention is also called to the report of the Labor Representation Committee to the Executive Council which will in turn be submitted by the Executive Council as part of its report.

LABOR'S RIGHTS AND ITS ECONOMIC POWER.

Essential to the welfare and independence of the masses is the free exercise of certain of their rights and powers in the economic field. This truth becomes clear to our minds when we consider it as applied to the individual possessing those rights and powers. Let a man have the right to decide when he is to work or is not to work, and let that decision be backed by his power to keep himself from being obliged by immediate necessity to offer his labor to an employer, and the consequence must be that he will not sell his labor-power until the terms offered him are the best that the industry can warrant. Similarly, when a number of associated persons may freely decide as to whether they shall work or not, and uphold that decision, they have in their hands the economic power to secure to themselves from the products of industry a share restricted only by industrial success.

In the mere statement of the conditions indicated by my words there are suggested the reasons why Labor is compelled in present circumstances to engage in the political struggle. It is, in a word, in order to set itself free.

Labor is bound by the fetters of unjust laws. It is Labor's task to break those fetters one by one. The first to be removed are necessarily those which are the most painful, binding, and destructive of Labor's rights and powers.

There must in justice be no law, formulated by judge or lawmaker, which can deprive a wage-worker of his own exclusive ownership of himself, or, in other words, of those rights over his own labor-power which are guaranteed by the Constitution and the concepts of liberty implied in the fundamental principles of our Republic.

There must be no law which can deprive the laborer of his right over his power to purchase or to refrain from purchasing whatever is legitimately on sale in the community.

There must be an end to the untenable doctrine that a right pertaining to an individual singly becomes a wrong when exercised by him in combination with other individuals legally enjoying the same right singly.

These examples illustrate points at which the labor movement comes into contact with politics, since only by force of law-making can present laws be abrogated or the limits of law-making itself be outlined.

As the defense of rights, manifestly varying in their scope with respect to men, women, and children, and in times of peace or war, is the legitimate domain of government, so the defense of those rights which peculiarly bear upon the wage-worker is inevitably the especial concern of the labor movement. I am impressed with the conviction, however, that with the free exercise of the rights which will leave untrammelled the regular and recognized functions of trade unionism, the workers of this country will move forward by leaps and bounds to a general condition of unexampled welfare. With those rights in full play they will be possessed of the economic power to enable themselves to push forward to greater successes, to justice, freedom and a better humanity, the goal of Labor's aspirations.

Trade unionism is self-help. The possibilities of self-help by its means have never yet been reached nor with certainty foreseen by any authority however prescient. The dividends thus far declared in its history by trade unionism have been immeasurably the highest ever known to any movement of the unprivileged and deprived classes. Every trade or calling in each year since the formation of our Federation has moved its members upward from the state in which they previously lived. In every walk of life the men of this continent recognize the benefits worked through trade-unionism. By far the greatest of its benefits have come through the exercise of its economic power. Let that lesson be taken to the hearts of all workingmen. Let that thought be kept uppermost with any of them when in danger of being lured away from union work by any political party, whatever its name or its pretenses or its promises.

POLICE OPPRESSION—THE "THIRD DEGREE."

It seems to me proper to call the attention of the delegates attending this Convention to a police practice, not only unauthorized by the law, but in positive terms forbidden by the law, which nevertheless has become a public scandal throughout the civilized world. I refer to what is known as "the third degree," or obtaining confessions from prisoners held for trial through terrorizing or brutally maltreating them. From the nature of this outrageous measure it is difficult to obtain legal evidence of its existence. However, that it does exist, and is regarded by the police as one of their functions tacitly accepted by the courts, we have the testimony of the press in general and even of that branch of periodicals which is devoted to recording and commenting on the proceedings of the courts. One of the latter journals recently said:

"It would be unjustly disparaging the dignified and learned gentlemen who preside at the trial of criminal cases in our courts to say that they do not at least suspect what every child in their community knows, to wit, that the alleged voluntary confession ordinarily relied on was not the spontaneous outpouring of a guilt-burdened conscience, quickened into action through grateful response to the touching kindness of captors and keepers. Things don't happen that way."

While it is the very first maxim in criminal law that every man is presumed innocent of crime until proven guilty, the police "sweat-box" proceedings are based on the idea that when a man has been arrested the presumption that he is guilty must amount almost to a certainty, and that if sufficiently frightened or put in pain he will tell the truth. This idea men in general know is often without foundation, for a poor and innocent man may be accused and thrown in prison by powerful enemies through revenge or even by the police themselves in default of detecting the really guilty. Moreover, on several recent occasions psychologists of the foremost standing have testified to the fact that innocent prisoners who had made confessions of guilt had done so under mental conditions superinduced by their third-degree tormentors. It may with truth be said that a State or a country which will permit the police to act in any other capacity than detainers of persons charged with crime is in danger of a tyranny over men's persons that is without bounds, and it is from this aspect of the case that our duty arises to protest against any such powers being exercised by them. Public attention has not yet been fully aroused to this danger, which everywhere is beginning to menace the plain citizen. While the law itself positively prohibits police officers from exerting any other authority than securing the person of an accused or suspected man, bringing him before a magistrate for examination without unreasonable delay, keeping him meantime in security to answer the charge made against him, the power is assumed by detectives and policemen of the higher ranks to put prisoners in special lock-ups for convenience of "sweating," to cross-question, browbeat, and maltreat them by physical force, and even to resort to means so terrible as to be compared with those of the inquisition, in order to extract a confession. This is the uttermost perversion of law. As a fact, a confession made as a result of either an inducement or a punishment is inadmissible as evidence if the law itself is to be obeyed.

I repeat that it is a principle in law as well as in every concept of justice that "a man is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty." This applies with equal force to the man who may be subsequently proven guilty of the most heinous crimes as to the accused who may be subsequently proven entirely innocent. The correction of this police abuse of power lies primarily in the hands of our judges on the bench and finally in an aroused public conscience against such a flagrant violation of rights to which even the most insignificant of the human race is entitled. When the police so far abuse their powers and violate the rights of man, no matter how insignificant or vile that man may be, it endangers the rights and the liberties of all the people. It is the beginning of tyranny— injustice. The constitutional and inherent rights of the citizen are not wholly invaded and destroyed with one fell swoop. Their beginning is ushered in under the pretense that a righteous purpose is to be served. The people having accepted invasion by degrees, it is extended until no man's liberty or life is safe. Our people are not unfamiliar with the history of police tyranny in other countries as well as our own.

This Convention should take cognizance of this subject and make some declaration and take such action as may be deemed necessary in regard to it. In addition, the State Federations and city central bodies, indeed all organized labor, should express itself upon this question.

MAINTAIN LABOR DAY'S SIGNIFICANCE—LABOR SUNDAY.

It is well within the limits of the truth to assert that Labor Day, 1910, was fittingly celebrated throughout the country wherever Labor is organized.

The co-operation of the organizations of labor in the various cities in the observance of Labor Sunday was also enthusiastic and hearty. Many letters and a large amount of printed matter relating to Labor Sunday were sent to ministers of every denomination. In addition the various committees appointed by different organizations to request the ministers in their respective localities that they prepare a special sermon to deliver on the Sunday preceding Labor Day, that day to be known as Labor Sunday, were provided with circulars and leaflets on the subject. At headquarters numerous letters from ministers have been received in reply, and it is interesting to report that these show a deep interest in the cause of labor and a sincere desire for information, the writers expressing their intention of rendering every possible assistance in the work of the labor movement.

While it is a fact beyond contradiction that as time passes observance becomes more general of the day set apart for the honor of Labor, the commemoration of its achievements, and the public testimony to its essential dignity and its fundamental worth to society, there yet remains a fraction in the ranks of organized labor which is inclined to believe that the money cost of parades and other non-revenue features of Labor Day may be a waste of means that ought to be devoted to objects more obviously material. Consequent upon this reasoning, demonstrations on Labor Day have on occasions been suspended in one or other industrial centers.

In my judgment this course is mistaken. A sincere, heartfelt, enthusiastic, and general demonstration is in a high degree practical, both in its methods and results. The very base of organized labor's work lies in aroused sentiment—in the spirit of fraternity, the avowal of unity, the public declaration of each to share in the struggles of all, the expressed willingness to obliterate occupational or other sectionalism, and the appeal through massed numbers for a common loyalty among all who toil. Besides, the spectacle of organized labor declaring itself and its purpose by the time-honored means of procession, music, and banners is impressive to all elements in society.

Defense funds are necessary, trade unions are often forced by stress of circumstances to watch carefully the outlay of each dollar for every purpose, and men of experience in the movement become in the course of time deeply impressed with the importance during unavoidable emergencies of having an adequate union treasury to meet the demands of those workers who are in stress and struggle. These men are right in warning their fellow-members against unpreparedness for the certain coming day of need. Themselves convinced and veteran unionists, familiar with the routine of their associated work, they may at times, however, overlook the conditions in America which place the ceaseless promotion of general organization in the forefront of union duties and indeed union necessities.

Every locality and every occupation sees a stream of new workers incessantly pouring into it, to mingle and perhaps to compete with the old. Besides, the changes in industry constantly tend to the disintegration of certain occupations while building up others. In these conditions, organized labor is confronted with, not the choice, but the urgent necessity of organization, reorganization, and adaptation to change. The ignorant must be informed as to what union labor is doing, the apathetic must be re-inspired, the disheartened once more encouraged.

Labor demonstrations are in themselves a protest against wrong, an agitation for the right, a solicitation to the unorganized to join with their brother workmen, a notification to opponents that labor is up and doing in its own cause. They are an attractive feature in union education of the children of the masses as well as an appeal to the conscience and the emotions of non-unionists, which leads them to put an end to their isolation from those who are fighting their battles.

Moreover, as a matter of fact, if the question be put on the mere basis of the management of finances, a Labor Day demonstration pays frequently as a proclamation and advertisement. The notices it receives in the public press bring up the issue of unionism in every household, obtain for the trade union a general recognition as a national institution closely in touch with community life, and put before readers of all classes the addresses made by labor's spokesmen. The publicity thereby gained for organized labor's objects, sentiments, and principles alone more than repays all outlay incident to the demonstrations.

Before any Central Labor body decides upon giving up the now generally accepted features of Labor Day demonstration, including the parade, meetings, and addresses, let its delegates discuss what would happen if these observances should be abandoned for a single year in all the cities of the country. Opponents would declare that the labor movement had collapsed, non-unionists would no longer on Labor's own day be made to feel the reproach of their absence from among the defenders of their rights, the press would remain silent where it now is a helpful vehicle for the cause of unionism, and much of the opportunity and occasion for our propaganda of unionism would be lost.

If the emphasis of Labor Day as an American holiday should come to be placed on mere jollifications for private profit, which has generally been the tendency when genuine Labor Day demonstrations have been suspended, the significance, the honor, the pride of trade unionism would receive a serious blow.

All the men and women in a labor demonstration, and all who line the sidewalks to cheer the passing procession, feel that they are doing something for the cause the event represents. They are participators, not mere spectators to be amused. To all of them, banner, motto, and slogan, the serried rank and the marching step, symbolize and consecrate principles and ideals for which they desire to manifest their devotion. The least interested outside observer is impressed by the enthusiasm and warmth of fellowship evinced by the throngs united on a great purpose.

The labor movement of our time owes it to the future that the inherent purposes and principles of our cause be upheld and maintained with constantly increasing intensity. In line therewith nothing is more important than that the one day in the year secured by labor, for labor, and for all the people—Labor Day—shall be celebrated in the best and most effective manner, in larger numbers, and with a deeper resolve to work on for the day of Labor's disenfranchisement from every vestige of wrong and injustice, for the attainment of a higher and better life, and the establishment of the universal brotherhood of man.

In the past the governors of several States issued annual proclamations urging the people to appropriately observe Labor Day. This practice in later years has almost gone by the board. There is no good reason why the custom should not be revived and extended, not only to the governors of States, but also to the President of the United States. And if deemed advisable by our Canadian fellow-workers, such proclamations might be urged upon the proper officials of the Dominion government.

In connection with the subject of Labor Sunday it should be stated that several protests have been made against what has been termed discrimination against religious sects—Seventh Day Adventists and Jews—who celebrate their Sabbath, or day of rest, on Saturday. It surely was not our purpose to make any such discrimination; we urge and welcome the co-operation of all men in the great uplift work of our labor movement. I therefore suggest a declaration by this Convention on the subject.

INTERNATIONAL SECRETARIAT.

The Toronto Convention having decided that the American Federation of Labor should become affiliated with the International Secretariat, I duly transmitted information to that effect to the Secretary in Berlin. This Federation was thereupon placed in the list of the organizations connected with the Secretariat. The annual dues, amounting to $567.21, were forwarded in August. The dues are 30 cents per thousand members of affiliated organizations.

A considerable correspondence has since been carried on between Secretary Carl Legien and myself, among other matters dealt with being the methods to govern international contributions for assistance in case of labor disputes, the attitude to be preserved toward one another by the national organizations of different countries, the steps to be taken to prevent the transfer of employers of strike-breakers from one country to another, and the character of the contents of letters or circulars to be sent from the headquarters of the Secretariat to the affiliated organizations.

The last-named point refers to a matter of some passing interest to this Convention. Just before adjournment of the Paris Conference, September, 1900, the Secretariat directed its secretary to send to the various organizations a copy of a lengthy communication from America which had been received too late for reading and discussion. On receipt at our headquarters, it turned out to be a protest against the admission of the American Federation of Labor to the Secretariat coming from a so-called "National Industrial Union of Textile Workers," speaking on behalf of the so-called "Industrial Workers of the World," and claiming the latter to be the only bona fide American labor organization entitled to representation in the Secretariat. The contents of the communication were beneath notice except as having a value in informing the various European bodies affiliated with the Secretariat as to the sort of fanatical ravings and malicious fabrications which continually emanate from the all-round malcontents who mislead the corporal's guard of "yellow" unionists that makes up the Industrial Workers. The document has, indeed, served in Europe a good purpose for the American Federation of Labor, in showing our comrades there who have read it the improbability that the perpetrators of such criminal literature could ever accomplish more than attempting to assassinate character and disgracing those elements in the wage-working class which endeavor to move upward in the light of reason and by virtue of patience, forbearance, insistence and truth. The International Secretariat in due time received from me sufficient information relative to the I. W. W. to permit a fair judgment of the organization to be formed.

The International Secretariat meeting at Stuttgart, 1902, made the following decision: "Only one national center of trade unions will be recognized for each country, and only representatives of this national center will be admitted to the international conferences."

Our affiliation to the International Secretariat has afforded a greater feeling of international fraternity among the workers of the various countries, and has helped pave the way for a larger, freer mutual acceptance of clear cards of trade unionists. It has also given the opportunity by correspondence to a better understanding of the American trade union movement, its history, its struggles, and its aspirations. With such extension and development of the International Secretariat as we hope to witness, it must be helpful in bringing to a minimum and possibly the entire abolition of the fratricidal wars between nations of men.

As per your instructions, which were approved by the Toronto Convention, I submitted for consideration to the Paris Conference two propositions, as follows:

"Resolved, That the International Trade Union Congress recommends to the trade union centers (general trade union federations and congresses) of all countries the discussion of the proposition of establishing an International Federation of Labor, the autonomy of the trade union movement of each country being ordained and guaranteed, the purpose of the Federation being for the protection and the advancement of the rights, interests and justice of the wage-workers of all countries and the establishment of international fraternity and solidarity."

"Resolved, That it shall be the purpose of the labor movement of all countries to endeavor to the fullest extent to prevent the workers from one country being induced to emigrate to other countries during periods of industrial depression or when trade disputes exist or are in contemplation; that it shall be the duty of the recognized representatives of the labor movement of the country affected to notify the International Secretary, who in turn shall at once communicate the situation to the representatives of the trade union movement of each country."

These propositions were ordered to be placed upon the program for consideration and action at the Budapest meeting, August, 1911. If when these propositions come before the meeting during the coming year they shall be adopted, I feel confident that a bond of unity and fraternity will be more firmly established and an effective International Federation of Labor brought into existence to help in the great work of amelioration and final disenthralment. The American Federation of Labor is entitled to, and undoubtedly should select or authorize to be selected, a representative to attend the Budapest meeting, August, 1911.

In connection with the correspondence which I have had with the international secretariat, I found myself placed in an unsatisfactory situation by reason of the fact that I have been unable to furnish any sort of a detailed statistical report of the work of our affiliated organizations, particularly in respect to wages, hours of labor, strikes, payments by members, and benefits paid to them and for what purpose. Most of our international unions lack such statistics by reason of the fact that so many of them have no uniformity of initiation fees, dues, assessments, and benefits throughout their jurisdiction. As a matter of fact, these are largely determined by the local unions, the internationals having in these respects no jurisdiction and often no knowledge.

Then again, a number of our organizations have relied upon the State and national Bureaus of Labor to collect and publish these statistics when the organizations of labor should gather and promulgate them. Our unions have done so much for Labor that there is no need for them to hide their achievements, and even in instances where great progress and results can not be shown it must be remembered that in our industrial struggle and enlightened time, often the very weakness of some of our organizations forms the sympathetic tie that grips the hearts and consciences of our people and turns to their advantage and strength. We should earnestly press upon all organizations the need of high dues, extension of benefits, greater uniformity and discipline in methods and preparation for a statistical showing of trade union achievements.

VITAL STATISTICS.

Under present conditions of employment there is constant temptation to misstate the age of the child seeking work. Valid evidence of the date of birth is often lacking. Many of the States have wisely set limits to the age at which children may work in gainful employment. Without a birth certificate the age of a child is always in doubt. In such case neither the employer nor the factory inspector can feel safe in permitting the child's employment. In a recent paper an authority said:

"Of 28,600 children, native-born and foreign-born alike, who get working papers each year in New York City, between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years, three-quarters have birth certificates. The remaining quarter, who fail to get birth certificates, are native American children and those who come from certain parts of Russia or from the earthquake district of Italy. What earthquake and revolution do in Europe, official slovenliness accomplishes throughout the greater part of this nation, in depriving the children and citizens of the most fundamental of all vital and industrial statistics, the record of births."

It is thus seen that the registration of births lies at the basis of vital statistics, the necessary foundation of modern health organization, and hence is indispensable for the safety of the lives of children as well as the older members of the communities in cases of preventable diseases, but, what is especially to the point with the wage-workers of any community, is most important in order that the legislation for the prevention of child labor shall be carried out thoroughly. Evidence should be furnished by certificate made out at the time of birth by the attending physician, filed with the local registrar of vital statistics, and preserved at the office of the State Registrar at the capital of the State, according to the requirements of the model law for the registration of vital statistics which has been recommended by a number of the foremost health and medical associations of the union, as well as by the Bureau of the Census, and has already been carried out in practice in several States.

If laws providing for a free and happy childhood and the prevention of the ills which follow from the employment of children under legal age are to be enforced, there should be the means of obtaining evidence of age beyond doubt.

Members of organized labor should take a personal interest in this matter from its importance to their families. Through their unions questions such as these might be asked of the public authorities:

"Is there a law for the registration of births and deaths in State and city? Is it thoroughly enforced? Are the births of children registered, and if not, why not?"

Information upon this subject may be obtained from the Division of Vital Statistics, Department of Commerce and Labor, Bureau of Census, Washington, D. C. The officers of our Federation will certainly aid in securing this information.

OUR EFFECTIVE CORPS OF ORGANIZERS.

Since my last report the number of volunteer organizers I have commissioned has been 430, a large majority of whom have entered upon their labors since the close of last winter. The number of new unions formed and membership in existing unions has correspondingly increased. The total number of organizers now holding commissions October 1 is 1,462.

When it is remembered that these organizers perform their duties without remuneration or emolument, moved entirely by their loyalty to our cause, the value and merit of their services will be appreciated. They see a benefit which they can accomplish, and paying no attention to the selfish motives which by many are supposed to actuate the man of today, they follow wherever duty leads them. Not only are the results which they bring about good in themselves, but their actions are illustrative of the sturdy manhood inherent in the character of workmen and indeed which seems to be nurtured by their daily life and experiences. If the maxims of success common in those walks of life which are wont to shun hard labor tend to teach men to calculate every move with a view to one's own profit, since, as alleged, self-sacrifice is no longer a living virtue, on the contrary, in the labor world there is often to be witnessed an uncontrollable tendency on the part of the strongest men to risk everything personal for the sake of doing good for the mass. And on the part of the many there is a response in appreciation that is spontaneous, enthusiastic, and more precious than gold to the man thus evoking the admiration of his fellow-workmen.

It is a part of the record of our organizers that they are in every particular exceptionally law-abiding men, and ascertaining their own and the workers' rights as American citizens they proceed accordingly. At the meetings at which they speak, the people in attendance are instructed in immediate and practical means of bettering their condition and in those laws regarding conditions of employment, in which they, as husbands and fathers, are directly interested. Little time is wasted in vain declamation or empty promises. To qualify himself to be a worthy organizer of the American Federation of Labor requires a man to voluntarily subject himself to a course of discipline and education that will always remain of profit to him as a man of character. Let us all thank our organizers for the good they do.

THE LABOR PRESS.

Again I direct the attention of the trade unionists of the country to the excellent services on their behalf performed by the labor press. In the work of organizing, of giving correct information to union men during controversies with employers, of carrying on the discussions of questions arising in the course of the movement, a newspaper which is labor's own is indispensable in every large organization and in every considerable industrial community.

The patronage extended by unions or individual unionists to the labor press is an investment in support of a principle. As such the amount contributed ought to be made at all times as great as possible. A full and truthful account of an incident during an emergency in the course of the struggles of an organization may turn the tide of affairs in its favor, and an intelligent defense of the justifiable actions of Labor's representatives may at the opportune moment save the members from hurtful misunderstandings and even disastrous dissension. The average labor periodical of America affords to its readers an opportunity to keep up with the discussion of the important social problems of the day. Every union man, therefore, should bear in mind his obligations to the labor press, and regard it as an imperative duty to give a liberal support to the periodicals which can be called on at any and all times to defend union principles and promote union projects. It may be said without invidious reflection upon the efforts of labor-press managers and editors in the past that a steady advance is observable in the appearance and contents of labor newspapers, while the number is increasing. I urge Labor's representatives to vote and work for the assistance of their printed messengers, even when any immediate beneficial result may appear doubtful. A good labor paper, like a good tool, is a thing which it is well to have at hand.

AMERICAN FEDERATIONIST.

Necessarily, during the last twelve months the issues of our official magazine have contained much matter relating to the principles of the law bearing on the case of Labor now before the Supreme Court of the United States. It has been my good fortune as editor to be able to place before the readers a number of excellent articles, emanating from pens that command the respect of our country, showing the strength of the position your officials have taken in the matter in question. Indeed, whatever the outcome otherwise, the case has assuredly had the effect of familiarizing Labor with its fundamental rights as expounded in the courts by many eminent jurists. The file of the year 1910 of The American Federationist is valuable in this respect to unionists wherever their liberties may be endangered.

Our magazine has also attracted more than usual attention on account of the controversial articles it has contained in the course of the year. Whether or not opponents have been convinced of the errors of their ways, it has been my aim to accord to those entertaining differences in opinion a treatment never lacking in due courtesy. In no instance has an opponent been able to charge the magazine with unfairness or error of importance in its statement of facts. It may be said also that the general contents of The American Federationist have given contradiction to those who charge the trade union movement with narrowness and selfishness. Tolerance has been exhibited toward all organizations whose aim is social betterment. If it is in any degree a part of the function of this magazine to suggest to the labor press and the labor platform the plane on which subjects germane to our movement should be treated, I trust that in this respect its pages have not failed to uphold proper ideals.

The issuance of The American Federationist was not originally directed for any financial returns it might yield. The authorization for its publication by the Convention of 1893 was "for the discussion of labor and its interests in all its phases," and in the seventeen years of its regular monthly issues it has been my single aim to make it ring true to the cause, the rights and interests of the toiling masses of America. And through it all The American Federationist as an advocate and defender of our great cause—the cause of humanity—has been of insignificant financial cost to our fellow-workers or our Federation itself.

In view of the good service our magazine has performed and the greater good it could render if a wider clientele were secured for it, I earnestly hope that greater interest be generally manifested by the rank and file of organized labor to extend its circulation and to secure for it a larger number of subscribers.

CONCLUSION.

It would be unpardonably remiss in me did I not acknowledge the deep sense of gratitude which I owe to my colleagues of the Executive Council, who by their advice and co-operation have so materially aided me in the duties which I have been required to perform, and the many difficulties I have had to encounter. Our relations have been sincere, fraternal and helpful.

To the officers of our organizations, and to the mass of the workers I am eternally obligated because of their kindly consideration and helpful support in bearing the burdens of our ennobling cause, and in giving it an essential impetus and an enduring impress. If we shall but be true to ourselves, true to one another, true to the best that is in us, we shall in our time contribute our share to the early realization of that day when man to man shall brothers be—"for a' that and a' that."

The foregoing subjects, as covering the most important features of the year's work, I have deemed it my duty to report to you for your consideration and action. The report which the Executive Council will make to you deals largely with matters of an executive character. To some of these I have made reference. I am conscious of the unsatisfying character of this report, even to myself. And yet it is submitted to you with an abiding faith that you will esteem it for the purpose it is designed to serve, rather than to censure it for its shortcomings.

Such as it is, this report is made to you, and through you to the rank and file of labor, to the thoughtful, earnest men of our time, and to the great mass of humanity, whose rights, whose liberties, whose progress it has been my one aim in life to serve.

Fraternally yours,

SAMUEL GOMPERS,
President, American Federation of Labor.

APPENDIX A.

BUILDING TRADES DEPARTMENT.

This Department, authorized by the Norfolk Convention, was instituted at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor, February 8, 1910. Twenty international unions participated in the formation of the Department, nineteen of them subsequently ratifying the action of their representatives. One international union has since been admitted, making the present total membership twenty. These are:

International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers.

Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners.

United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

American Brotherhood of Cement Workers.

International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers of America.

International Union of Elevator Constructors.

International Union of Steam Engineers.

The Granite Cutters' International Association of America.

International Hodcarriers and Building Laborers' Union of America.

International Union of Wood, Wire, and Metal Lathers.

International Association of Marble Workers.

Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance.

Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America.

Operative Plasterers' International Association of the United States and Canada.

United Association of Plumbers, Gas-fitters, Steam-fitters, and Steam-fitters' Helpers of the United States and Canada.

International Brotherhood of Roofers, Composition, Damp and Waterproof Workers of the United States and Canada.

International Association of Steam and Hot Water Fitters and Helpers of America.

Journeymen Stonecutters' Association of North America.

Ceramic, Mosaic, and Encaustic Tile Layers and Helpers' International Union.

With one exception, the foregoing represent the eligible organizations of building mechanics.

Intimations were made by other international unions of a desire to join the Department. But its policy is to admit to membership only those international unions a majority of whose membership are strictly employed in the building industry. Two State charters and 181 local charters have been granted since the time of organization; 170 are at present in good standing.

The revenues of the Department from the time of organization until the close of the fiscal year, August 31, 1910, amount to $48,980.70, as against a total disbursement of $40,157.14 expended in the creation, development, and maintenance of the Department. Besides organizing local councils, the Department has devoted its efforts in large measure to the adjustment of jurisdictional differences in the building industry. As a result of these efforts agreements have been entered into by the following organizations:

American Brotherhood of Cement Workers and Operative Plasterers' International Association of the United States and Canada; Ceramic, Mosaic, and Encaustic Tile Layers and Helpers' International Union and Operative Plasterers' International Association of the United States and Canada; United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America and International Hodcarriers and Building Laborers' Union of America; United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America and International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers; United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America and International Association of Marble Workers; Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance and International Union of Wood, Wire, and Metal Lathers; Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance and International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers.

In jurisdictional disputes in which the parties in interest failed to reach a mutually satisfactory agreement, the Department rendered decisions affecting the following organizations:

United Association of Plumbers, Gas-fitters, Steam-fitters, and Steam-fitters' Helpers of United States and Canada and International Association of Steam and Hot Water Fitters and Helpers of America; International Hodcarriers and Building Laborers' Union of America and American Brotherhood of Cement Workers; American Brotherhood of Cement Workers and International Hodcarriers and Building Laborers' Union of America; International Union of Wood, Wire, and Metal Lathers and International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers; Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance and United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

In the work of the Department a difficulty has been encountered in requiring local unions to identify themselves with chartered councils. A number of the international unions have not so amended their constitution as to give the officers a right to discipline a local union for its failure to carry out the constitution of the Department. It is expected, however, that all organizations will be vested with the necessary authority to require their local unions to join the councils organized under the Building Trades Department.

It is gratifying to report that in the larger cities of the country the Department has been successful in adjusting all adverse local conditions that have for so long a time kept the building tradesmen apart. Indeed, it may be said that in the cities of the greatest size there is the best general feeling prevailing among the workmen in the building industry that has been manifested in the past decade, and with the fusion of the local unions in the councils of the Department there has immediately followed a steady improvement in the condition of the workers and a gradual movement toward the final elimination of those abuses against which organized labor has been constantly compelled to contend.

METAL TRADES DEPARTMENT.

The broad scope of this organization has brought its members to realize the need for greater uniformity of laws among its affiliated unions, joint action implying equalization, especially in per capita tax, strike and lockout benefits. These needed changes have been recommended in conventions to the Department's affiliations. The Executive Board of this Department will therefore call general conferences of the officers of the affiliated internationals to discuss changes in laws and policies pertaining in general to the Metal Trades.

International Association of Machinists,

International Molders' Union of North America,

Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance,

International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths,

Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Ship Builders of America,

International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers of America,

International Union of Steam Engineers,

International Association of Steam and Hot Water Fitters and Helpers of America,

International Brotherhood of Foundry Employes,

Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers, and Brass Workers' International Union of North America,

Patternmakers League of North America,

Stove Mounters' International Union, representing approximately a membership of 280,000. With the exception of the International Brotherhood of Stationery Firemen, all internationals declared eligible have affiliated.

The organizing of local councils has been accomplished almost entirely by correspondence, showing a ready response from metal trades locals. Sixty-seven local councils are now organized. The delegates to the last Department convention favored having each affiliated international insert in its by-laws a section making it compulsory for all locals to affiliate with local Metal Trades Councils.

A council's efforts are in the direction of organizing all metal trades, it being the medium by which all trades can be organized and kept alive. Acting upon instructions, by resolution of the Toronto Convention, that all general and special organizers of the American Federation of Labor organize the men in the blacksmith trade into the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers, the Executive Board of the Department, previous to the adjournment of the convention, adopted the following:

"Resolved, In view of the fact that the resolution calls for an adjustment of jurisdictional claims and instructs that all organizations admitting to membership blacksmiths other than the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, be called into conference for the purpose of adjusting the claims contained in the resolution, the board recommends that inasmuch as all organizations involved were not eligible to affiliation with this Department, therefore having no jurisdiction over these internationals, and having no power to enforce a decision on unaffiliated internationals, we recommend that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, with the recommendation that the blacksmiths' claim of jurisdiction be granted."

This recommendation has been agreed to.

Much dissatisfaction being expressed by members employed on the Panama Canal Zone because the annual leave granted to the per annum employes is six weeks, whereas that to the per diem employes is only fifteen days, the Department had the matter up with the Canal Commission, the War Department, and the President of the United States. The Department feels confident that some additional leave will be granted the per diem employes. The Department's attention was recently called to the fact that the molder on his enlistment in the service was given the corresponding rating to that of blacksmith, $55 per month. The Department took the matter up with the Bureau of Navigation of the Navy Department, with the result that the molder can now, during the time of his first enlistment, obtain a rating equal to that of chief machinist's mate, which is the highest rate paid in this branch of the service. An attempt will be made to equalize navy yard ratings according to the rates paid outside of the service.

With the view of preserving the permanency of the eight-hour day in San Francisco much work was done by various representatives on the Pacific Coast in the months previous to June 1, 1910, in organizing, and it is believed that the eight-hour day will be established on the Pacific Coast. The last Convention of the Department considered setting a date on which the metal trades of the United States and Canada should demand the eight-hour day. This question has not as yet been decided by the Department Executive Board.

The last Convention also instructed the incoming Executive Board to meet and confer with the Executive Board of the Building Trades Department and other Departments, to the end of securing their co-operation for mutual advancement. In turn the Building Trades Executive Council instructed its officers to confer with the Executive Officers of the Metal Trades Department, with a view to working out some tangible plan of understanding, to be later reported to the Executive Council for adoption. There are therefore prospects of an early conference, which will result in benefit to all concerned.

RAILROAD EMPLOYES DEPARTMENT.

In this Department are represented the following organizations:

International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths.

Brotherhood of Railway Clerks.

Switchmen's Union of North America.

International Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes.

Order of Railroad Telegraphers.

Brotherhood of Railroad Freight Handlers.

International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders of America.

International Association of Machinists.

International Association of Car Workers.

Thus far this Department has issued charters to eighteen System Federations.

The various System Federations are striving to get other affiliated class organizations to join them in the movement, and there is good reason to believe that they will be successful. They have adopted a broad and liberal policy in the matter of entering into working agreements with any and all legitimate organizations, whether affiliated or not, on any railroad system where such an arrangement may be mutually agreeable. The employes on any and all railroad systems now have the necessary machinery at their command to bring all organizations into close compact with each other whenever they desire to do so.

The employes on many other large systems of railroad besides the eighteen specified have taken the preliminary steps toward applying for System Federation charters, and it is confidently expected that the employes on all the large railroad systems in the United States and Canada will adopt this method of conserving their own interests.

UNION LABEL TRADES DEPARTMENT.

Practically all matters with reference to the union label brought up at the general offices have been referred to the Union Label Trades Department for its consideration and action. The Convention of the Union Label Trades Department was held in this city just prior to the opening of this Convention, and in conformity with the Constitution of the American Federation of Labor the officers of that Department will make a report to this Convention. During the year the Secretary-Treasurer of the Union Label Trades Department has reported from time to time through the columns of The American Federationist the work in which that Department has been engaged.

Reports shows that a wider and deeper interest is being taken than ever before in the history of our movement in the promotion of the sale of union label products and the patronizing of such establishments as display union store or shop cards.

The Union Label Trades Department has affiliated with it at the present time thirty-nine national and international unions, with an approximate membership of about 432,000. There are still a few organizations that issue labels, store and shop cards and buttons which have not joined the Department, and it is strongly recommended that these organizations immediately take such steps as may be necessary to bring about the desired affiliation.

APPENDIX B.

LETTER SENT TO HON. REUBEN O. MOON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 2, 1910.

HON. REUBEN O. MOON, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The bill you introduced in the House of Representatives, H. R. 21394, entitled "An Act to Regulate the Granting of Restraining Orders and Injunctions," seems to be entirely superfluous, unless it is fathered with the intention to issue to the judiciary a title in fee simple to a territory of jurisdiction which thus far has remained unrecognized by statute law. A most careful reading of your bill does not disclose any section or any idea that will materially alter existing conditions. The injunctions issued by many of our courts would be changed in little or no particular. The famous (or otherwise) injunction issued by Justice Gould in the Buck's Stove and Range Company case was issued after following the lines laid down by your bill. There was a citation to show cause why a temporary injunction should not issue. Hearings were had. The company proved (to the satisfaction of the court) that its business was being interfered with, the income from its investments diminished, and upon the proposition, contested by us, that the right "to carry on business" is a property right, the injunction was issued. It was so broad in its scope that if its terms had literally been obeyed it would have been impossible even for our attorneys to enter an appeal.

There is nothing in your bill which limits the jurisdiction of the court. It is true your bill provides that "a restraining order shall not be valid for more than seven days unless hearings are had, and that an irreparable injury shall be set forth. So far as I can see, these are the only distinctions from the present practice, or at least in some of the courts. The petitions upon which injunctions have been sought all alleged irreparable injury and were so held to exist by the courts issuing the order.

Some conscientious judges have refused to issue injunctions in similar cases, whether because they doubted the jurisdiction or the justice of the claims of the complainants I know not; but if your bill be enacted into law even those judges will have no discretion. Jurisdiction being conferred, courts will practically be instructed to furnish a remedy, the statutory authority of which is now in serious dispute.

Quite apart from the interest which Labor has in this question, the question of the equality before the law of the workers with all other citizens of our country, we protest against this bill because we protest against the use of the equity power to regulate the personal relations of our people. We believe, and we insist on being right in believing, that the relation between the employer and employe, between possible seller and buyer, can not be property relations.

There can be no property rights either in the labor power of the employe or prospective employe, or in the patronage or possible patronage of the public or any individual member thereof. The Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States stands as a bar in either case. Within its proper field equity power is necessary and beneficent. Within its true sphere it prevents the immediate invasion or destruction of property or property rights, and within that sphere of usefulness and necessity its operation must be swift and certain. If, however, equity power is permitted to invade the sphere properly belonging to the courts of law, it will attract to itself and exercise all jurisdiction. Permit me briefly to call to your attention a few quotations from some eminent jurists:

In October, 1897, Hon. W. H. Moody, now Justice of the United States Supreme Court, said:

"I believe in recent years the courts of the United States, as well as the courts of our own Commonwealth (Massachusetts), have gone to the very verge of danger in applying the process of the writ of injunction in disputes between labor and capital."

Hon. Thos. M. Cooley, President of the American Bar Association, said:

"Courts, with their injunctions, if they heed the fundamental law of the land, can no more hold men to involuntary servitude, for even a single hour, than can overseers with a whip."

Judge M. F. Tuley, of the Appellate Court of Illinois, used these words:

"Such use of injunction by the courts is judicial tyranny, which endangers not only the right of trial by jury, but all the rights and liberties of the citizens."

Governor Sadler, of Nevada, said:

"The tendency at present is to have the courts enforce law by injunction methods, which are subversive of good government and the liberties of the people."

Hon. J. H. Benton, Jr., of Massachusetts, said:

"The courts have gone too far. It is impossible for them to go in the course they have taken and retain the confidence of the people or preserve their own powers. It is idle to say that the popular complaint on this subject means nothing, or that, as one judge has said, 'nobody objects to government by injunction except those who object to any government at all.' It does mean much. It means that the courts have, in the judgment of many of the most intelligent and thoughtful citizens, exceeded their just powers; that they have, by the so-called exercise of the equity power, practically assumed to create and to punish offenses upon trial by themselves without a jury, and with penalties imposed at their discretion.

"The people will not, and they ought not to, submit to decisions like those in the Northern Pacific and Ann Arbor cases" (Taft's injunction).

Prof. F. J. Stimson, of Harvard, one of the greatest legal authorities, in his new work on "Federal and State Constitutions," after citing many authorities, says:

"These are sufficient to establish the general principle that the injunction process and contempt in chancery procedure, as well as chancery jurisdiction itself, is looked on with a logical jealousy in Anglo-Saxon countries as being in derogation of the common law, . . . taking away the jurisdiction of the common law courts and depriving the accused of his trial by jury."

Judge John Gibbons, of the Circuit Court of Illinois, declared that:

"In their efforts to regulate or restrain strikes by injunction, they (the courts) are sowing dragons' teeth and blazing the path of revolution."

In the last edition of his great book, the legal authority, High, on "Injunctions," says:

"Equity has no jurisdiction to restrain the commission of crimes or to enforce moral obligations in the performance of moral duties; nor will it interfere for the prevention of an illegal act merely because it is illegal, and in the absence of an injury to property rights it will not lend its aid by injunction to restrain the violation of public or penal statutes or the commission of immoral or illegal acts."

Hon. S. S. Gregory, in his address before the graduating class of the John Marshall Law School, Chicago, 1909, among other things, said:

"He who attacks trial by jury impeaches the capacity of the people for self-government; for it is in this that the people directly and immediately participate in the administration of justice, the highest concern of government.

"He who has no confidence in juries must indeed believe in the Rule of the Few and not in popular government.

"Another serious and quite analogous invasion of popular and constitutional right is threatened in the disposition shown by some courts to restrain the liberty of speech and freedom of publication under pretext of enjoining so-called boycotts and conspiracies against trade. . . . The question of law is, can a court of equity, under pretense of enjoining a conspiracy against trade, deny freedom of speech and publication by injunction; and then, having issued such an injunction, can the court try a person charged with its violation upon information, nominally for contempt, but really for slander or libel?

"It would seem as if to ask this question as an abstract proposition were to insult the intelligence of any well-informed lawyer familiar with the glorious traditions of Anglo-Saxon liberty and the long and toilsome march by which we have arrived at our present free and happy condition. . . . But the way free speech and free publication are attacked contrary to the Constitution in this class of cases is by equity arrogating and drawing to itself jurisdiction in matters essentially criminal and then disregarding, as in the libel prosecutions in England over a century ago, the safeguards of human liberty approved by the wisdom and secured by the labors and sacrifice of ages of patriotism and struggle.

"If equity courts persist in administering criminal law they must observe the limitations imposed on similar procedure in other courts. What has equity to do with punishing the crime of conspiracy? Yet this and every other opinion in a strike case deals at large with this subject.

"Every person may freely speak, write, and publish on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty."

"That I understand to be declaratory of the right of free speech and publication known to American constitutional law. Of course, it does not furnish immunity for libel, for slander, for seditious utterances and persuasion to crime.

"But no agency of the State may stifle or prevent speech on the ground that libel, slander, or sedition is to be the theme of the speaker. Any other rule means a censorship which would destroy absolutely this inestimable privilege."

We believe that popular government, democratic institutions, can not exist together with the unlimited discretionary power of either a king or a judge.

Equity power always was the prerogative of sovereignty, and as government by law—popular government—has been advancing, equity power—discretionary power vested in individual man, however exalted his position—has receded, and vice versa.

The history of years demonstrates that man's nature is no more altered by being robed in the ermine than by being covered with the crown.

Discretionary power, at least in so far as personal relations and personal rights are concerned, is as dangerous in the hands of a judge as it ever was, and even now is, if lodged with a king.

Individual freedom that is not broad and extensive enough to permit individuals to voluntarily associate, to collectively protect their individual rights, is an empty phrase.

In our day, when the collected products of human labor are used to compel the individual worker to obedience, we are as helpless as individuals as is an individual sparrow in the presence of a hawk.

It was generally understood that your bill represented the wishes and desires of the administration, and the President's recent letter to you on the subject has confirmed this. It is further claimed that the last general election authorizes and instructs the enactment of this bill. This last we dispute.

That other matters, perhaps better understood by the electors, were controlling, you will find fairly well confirmed by the article written by the President and published in McClure's Magazine, June, 1909; but be that as it may, even if the election had turned upon that one point alone, it would make the principle involved no more just, no more proper, no more patriotic, no more constitutional.

If in framing the bill you had had the advice of the National Association of Manufacturers and their counsel, Emory and Davenport, no more effective measure than your bill could have been devised to defeat the growing conviction among our people to correct the perversion of the injunctive process.

If the subject with which your bill deals were of a sociological character we might profit by experience, accept a little, and in time, build thereon, for time and growth continually make for improvement; but the question with which your bill deals involves fundamental principles of right, of justice, of equality before the law. In our Republic, where each citizen is sovereign, there can be no compromise, particularly when a compromise would for the first time give statutory authority for the commission of a grave injustice, an injustice which, though existing, exists by the judicial invasion of the law-making domain.

If the workers of our country can not at present obtain the consideration to which they are entitled at the hands of Congress, we may have to bear the burden and suffer cruelty, injustice and discrimination, but we shall have the satisfaction that we are enduring them for the right of all our people now and for the future; that we shall live on and struggle on in the hope, and confident, of ultimate success; that the people of the United States, through their Congress, will at no distant date re-establish by statute law, fully establish, justice and equality before the law of all our people.

In the meantime, we shall protest against the enactment of any bill of the character and species of which yours is a type.

Respectfully yours,

SAMUEL GOMPERS,
President, American Federation of Labor.

Identical letter to members of the House Judiciary Committee—Hon. William G. Brantley, Hon. Edwin Denby, Hon. Charles C. Carlin, Hon. Henry Clayton, Hon. Herman P. Goebel, Hon. Richard Wayne Parker, Hon. John A. Sterling, Hon. George R. Malby, Hon. Robert L. Henry, Hon. Paul Howland, Hon. William P. Sheffield, Hon. Edwin Y. Webb, Hon. Gerritt J. Diekma, Hon. Frank M. Nye, Hon. Edwin W. Higgins, Hon. Charles C. Reid, Hon. Charles Q. Tirrell:

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 23, 1910.

DEAR SIR: The workers of our country have been patiently waiting for some action on the part of the Judiciary Committee to report out bills affecting the status of labor and to grant relief in so far as it is concerned in the application of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law to the voluntary organizations of the workers, and also relief from the abuse of the injunction writ.

Numbers of articles in review of the situation have been written and printed, all of which have been forwarded to each member of Congress.

It is noted with much interest and great regret that some bills have been presented dealing with these subjects, and which instead of bringing relief will simply fix more definitely the wrongful situation and make it more acute. One of the bills to which I refer is the one introduced in the House by the Honorable Reuben O. Moon of Pennsylvania. When I saw a copy of the bill and studied its features, I addressed a letter to Mr. Moon, and believing you should have a copy thereof I inclose it herein. It is commended to your serious consideration. At the same time permit me to express the hope that the Judiciary Committee of the House will at an early date report the Bill H. R. 3068.

Very truly yours,

SAMUEL GOMPERS,
President, American Federation of Labor.

APPENDIX C.

SIXTY-FIRST CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION, H. R. 25188.

In the House of Representatives, April 29, 1910.—Mr. Wilson, of Pennsylvania, introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed:

A bill to regulate the issuance of restraining orders and injunctions and procedure thereon and to limit the meaning of "conspiracy" in certain cases.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That no restraining order or injunction shall be granted by any court of the United States, or a judge or the judges thereof, in any case between an employer and employe, or between employers and employes, or between employes, or between persons employed and persons seeking employment, or involving or growing out of a dispute concerning terms or conditions of employment, unless necessary to prevent irreparable injury to property or to a property right of the party making the application, for which injury there is no adequate remedy at law; and such property and property right must be particularly described in the application, which must be in writing and sworn to by the applicant or by his, her, or its agent or attorney. And for the purposes of this Act no right to continue the relation of employer and employe, or to assume or create such relation with any particular person or persons, or at all, or to carry on business of any particular kind, or at any particular place, or at all, shall be construed, held, considered, or treated as property or as constituting a property right.

SEC. 2. That in cases arising in the courts of the United States or coming before said courts, or before any judge or the judges thereof, no agreement between two or more persons concerning the terms or conditions of employment, or the assumption or creation or termination of any relation between employer and employe, or concerning any act or thing to be done or not to be done with reference to or involving or growing out of a labor dispute, shall constitute a conspiracy or other civil or criminal offense, or be punished or prosecuted, or damages recovered upon as such, unless the act or thing agreed to be done or not to be done would be unlawful if done by a single individual; nor shall the entering into or the carrying out of any such agreement be restrained or enjoined unless such act or thing agreed to be done would be subject to be restrained or enjoined under the provisions, limitations, and definitions contained in the first section of this act.

SEC. 3. That all acts and parts of acts in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

SECRETARY MORRISON'S REPORT.

To the Officers and Delegates of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor:

FELLOW-UNIONISTS—I have the honor to submit a report to you of the receipts and expenditures for the past twelve (12) months, beginning October 1, 1909, and ending September 30, 1910.

It is with much pleasure that I report at the close of this fiscal year $182,914.96 in the treasury. Of the amount on hand $121,963.59 is in the defense fund for the local trade and federal labor unions and can be used to pay benefits only in the case of a strike or lockout of the members of these local unions. The balance, $60,951.37, is in the general fund. Of that fund only $5,557.88 is available for the general expenses of the American Federation of Labor. The balance, $55,393.54, is divided as follows: In the fund created by the one-cent assessment levied by the Executive Council, in accordance with the recommendation of the Norfolk Convention, and the receipts from the appeals issued for the same purpose, i. e., to be used for the legal defense of the officers of the American Federation of Labor and officers and members of affiliated unions in the injunction suit of the Buck Stove and Range Company, $34,079.04. In the fund created by the three-cent assessment for the Hatters' strike, $63.91. In the fund created by the two-cent assessment levied by the Executive Council to take an appeal from the decision rendered against the United Hatters in favor of Loewe & Company, $21,196.80. In the fund created by the one-cent assessment levied by the Executive Council, in accordance with the recommendation of the Norfolk Convention, for the purpose of placing organizers in Los Angeles and other cities, to offset the efforts of the Manufacturers' Association, which were, and now are, endeavoring to disrupt the labor organizations, $58.79.

The total receipts from all sources are $198,470.84; the total expenses are $177,859.84; leaving a balance of receipts over expenditures of $15,611.50.

TWO-CENT ASSESSMENT.

This assessment was levied on the membership of all affiliated organizations on April 22, 1910, upon the application of the officers of the United Hatters based upon the instructions of the Denver Convention of the American Federation of Labor to the Executive Council to take whatever action was necessary to carry into effect the resolution adopted by that Convention, pledging the moral and financial assistance of the American Federation of Labor in their struggle. The proceeds of this assessment are being used to defray the expenses in taking an appeal from the decision of the Federal Circuit Court of Connecticut, under which the Loewe Company was awarded damages against the members of the Hatters in the sum of $223,000, to the Supreme Court of the United States.

CHARTERS—Reports from the Secretaries of 16 of our National and International organizations furnish us with the information that 2,194 charters have been issued during the past year and 1,513 surrendered—1,347 of the charters surrendered were locals of the National and International unions and 166 affiliated direct with the American Federation of Labor.

GAIN IN MEMBERSHIP—The gain in membership reported by the Secretaries of 62 International organizations over the membership on the last of September last year is 218,299.

STRIKES—Reports from 80 International organizations and from a number of local unions, show that there were 827 strikes in which there were 41,448 involved. Of that number 502,996 were benefited and 12,309 not benefited. The total cost of the strikes reported on was $1,737,277.83. Adding to that amount the donations made by local unions to other unions, we have a grand total of $3,890,994 expended to sustain members on strike during the past year.

Your attention is called to the fact that the amounts herein reported as having been expended by the international unions on account of various benefits in the past year, are those paid directly by the internationals, and therefore the totals represent but a small proportion of the aggregate sum paid by trade unions in the way of benefits. A number of international unions have not as yet established benefit features, and others pay only partial benefits. It must be borne in mind that in every trade, local unions have existed independently prior to the formation of the international union, and almost without exception, they provide death, sick, out of work, etc., benefits for their members. In these instances benefit features have thus become identified and recognized as belonging to the jurisdiction of a local union. This system has retarded international unions in establishing and extending benefit features, for the reason that it is difficult to bring locals that have to support their own benefit funds to consent to increase the tax to such an amount as would enable the internationals to secure the means for such purpose. In most instances, benefits paid by internationals are supplemental relief, paid to members in addition to the benefits provided by their local unions.

Attempts to reduce wages were successfully resisted.
- Textile Workers.—Charters issued, 87; surrendered, 11. Number of strikes, 2; won, 1; lost, 1. Cost of strikes, $5,000. Death benefits, $70.
- Tile Layers and Helpers.—Charters issued, 1. Gain in membership, 200. Number of strikes, 5; won, 4; compromised, 1. Number of persons involved, 275; benefited, 275. An average gain in wages of 20 per cent per member per day. Gains in other respects: Union shop and an 8-hour day in several cities. Cost of strikes, $1,000. No reduction in wages in the past year. Among the advantages that have accrued from organization, are a higher standard of workmanship, better wages, shorter hours and a fuller understanding on the part of the members as to their responsibilities as mechanics. Donations to other unions, $500.
- Tin Plate Workers.—Number of strikes, 1, lost. Persons involved, 2,000. Cost of strikes, $40,000. As a result of organization wages have been increased from $1.50 to $3 per day and hours reduced from 12 for a seven-day week, to 8 for a five and one-half day week.
- Tip Printers.—Gain in membership, 50. A reduction of one-half hour per day in the hours of labor were secured for 60 members without strike. No reductions in wages in the past year. As a result of organization the hours of labor have been reduced from 5½ to 48 hours per week.
- Tobacco Workers.—Charters surrendered, 3. As a result of organization, through the influence of the label, members have secured better regulation of wages and improvements in working conditions. Death benefits, $1,250; sick benefits, $5,271. Donations to other unions, $1,600.
- Travelers Goods and Leather Novelty Workers.—Charters issued, 5. Gain in membership, 218. Number of strikes 1, won. Number of persons involved, 32; benefited, 32. An average gain in wages of 10 per cent per member per day, with one hour per day reduction in the hours of labor. Cost of strikes, $170. Higher wages and shorter hours were secured in two cities without strike. No reduction in wages attempted in the past year. As a result of organization wages have been increased from 10 to 25 per cent and hours shortened from 10 to 9 and from 9½ to 9 hours per day. Death benefits, $300; sick benefits, $462. Donations to other unions, $72.

Tunnel and Subway Constructors.—Charters issued, 1. Gain in membership, 1,000. Average gain in wages of $1 per member per day, and average reduction of two hours per day in the hours of labor. Number of persons benefited, 600. Gains in other respects, by-monthly pay-day. Gain in wages of from 70 to 75 cents per day, secured for a number of members without strike. No reductions in wages in any instance. Death benefits, $1,200; sick benefits, $600; traveling benefits, $1,600; unemployed benefits, $800. Donations to other unions, $900.

Typographical Union (for year ending June 1, 1910).—Charters issued, 52; surrendered, 21. Gain in membership, 4,991. Number of strikes, 15; won, 6; pending, 7; lost, 2. Persons involved, 202; benefited, 122; not benefited, 19. 142 locals were successful in their negotiations for higher wage scale. Defense fund expenditures, $78,046.21. Death benefits, $3,045. Old-age pension, $106,740. For support of Union Printers' Home, $64,648.38; library annex, $28,718.50.

Weavers, Elastic Goring.—Gain in membership, 1. Seventy-nine members secured an average reduction in the hours of labor of one hour per day. Where the trade is organized, hours of labor have been reduced from 55 to 50 per week. Death benefits, $500; unemployed benefits, $144. Donations to other unions, $5.

Weavers, Wire.—No reductions in wages in the past year. Organization has been successful in maintaining good conditions. Death benefits, $1,056.60; sick benefits, $200. Donations to other unions, $200.

REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS

It is gratifying to note the gradual increase in the defense fund for local trade and federal labor unions since its inauguration in 1902. In connection with this it should be borne in mind that the greatest increase occurred from 1902 to 1906, when it showed an increase of $74,916.74, while during the past five years it has increased only $27,047.19.

The average membership of the local trade and federal labor unions increased from 18,971 last year to 20,951 members this year, a gain of 1,980 members—which is satisfactory when we consider the fact that the membership of these unions is being continuously absorbed by the national and international organizations.

The laws governing the distribution of the defense fund are ample, and I strongly advise against amendments which would permit a union chartered less than one year to receive strike benefits. The requirement that members of local unions should have a continuous membership of one year to be entitled to strike benefits should not be interfered with. If either or both of the above requirements were amended it would endanger the stability of the defense fund and encourage newly-organized unions to enter into hasty and ill-advised strikes. The number of strikes and threatened strikes this year has been greater than heretofore. An unusual number of settlements were made through the agency of the organizers. The assistance of the organizers resulted in the adjustment of innumerable controversies which would otherwise have caused strikes and would have been a drain upon the defense fund.

While the foregoing statement shows that there was received $12,575.45 into the defense fund, and there was paid out $6,484, leaving a surplus of $6,091.45, yet if the organizers of the Federation had not been successful in adjusting a number of strikes and preventing others that were threatened of unions with a large membership, the amount received would not have been nearly sufficient to meet the expenditures, and instead of reporting an increase this year, we would have been compelled to report a deficit. The fact that the Federation has a substantial defense fund to protect the members of the local trade and federal labor unions, in case of strike or lockout, enabled the organizers to work to better advantage in bringing about conferences and adjustments.

The following are the receipts and expenses and yearly balances from the time that the fund was inaugurated up to the end of this fiscal year:

MEMBERSHIP.

A résumé of the progress made numerically and financially by the American Federation of Labor during the past fourteen years can not but encourage the trade unionists in their efforts to educate, organize, and federate the wage-workers. The growth of the American Federation of Labor was phenomenal from 1896 to 1904, when it increased from 272,315 to 1,676,200. It was to be expected in the order of normal growth that the membership would decrease somewhat from the highest point it reached during the time the intense organization wave held sway.

The average membership paid upon each year to the American Federation of Labor is not the total membership of the affiliated organizations. The Federation requires international organizations to pay one-half cent per month for every member for whom they receive per capita tax from their local unions. The local unions, in many instances, fail to pay their international organizations upon their full membership. A great number of the international unions, during the period of strikes or lockouts, do not receive per capita tax from their local unions for members who are on strike; hence, in turn, the Federation does not receive per capita tax on such members.

While the average paid-up membership for the twelve months is 1,562,112, the membership paid and reported upon for the month of September of this year is 1,644,444. Adding to this number 100,000 members, which is a low estimate of the membership of the various international organizations for whom per capita tax has not been paid to the American Federation of Labor for September, because of strikes, the organizations affiliated to the Federation have a grand total of over 1,744,444 members.

Judging from the reports received, I am safe in prophesying that the coming year will show a marked increase over the membership reported upon this year.

The following is the average paid-up membership for the past fourteen years:

Year.	Membership.	Year.	Membership.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR HEADQUARTERS.

The following statement shows that during the twelve months ending September 30, 1910, there has been issued from headquarters an average of 1,253 letters, circular letters, and packages per day, as follows:

Packages of supplies forwarded by express and post.....	8,294
Packages of literature and miscellaneous supplies for organizers and others.....	146,000
Official and circular letters in two-cent envelopes.....	75,559
Circulars and circular letters in one-cent envelopes.....	158,798

CONCLUSION.

In conclusion, I desire to express my appreciation of the splendid efforts put forth by the organizers, and the assistance and encouragement received from the officers of the international organizations, and from my colleagues of the Executive Council, during the period I have served as Secretary of the American Federation of Labor.

Respectfully submitted.

FRANK MORRISON,

TREASURER'S REPORT.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., November, 1910.

To the Officers and Delegates of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, Greeting:

With renewed faith and confidence in the efficiency of the trade unions and in our Federation, I submit this, my twenty-first consecutive report as Treasurer. The year now closed has been full of both difficulties and victories, both of which have stirred our membership to a splendid activity in the work of our movement for human uplift—morally, socially, and industrially. And while the harvest has not been all we hoped for, yet the picket lines of the trade unions have not been forced to retreat, but today occupy a position in advance of that occupied one year ago. Much of our work is necessarily of an educational character, and this requires considerable time to develop and reach that point where it becomes effective in creating a public opinion that brings the reforms desired. Our agitation upon the abuse of the use of the writ of injunction in labor disputes shows considerable progress; some judges have seen rays of light, and even many of the politicians are conceding that our contentions are right. The cases that have arisen under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law have attracted wide attention, and substantial gains have been made in creating friends among our people generally favorable to our contention that this law should not apply to labor. Upon both of these vital matters we have made progress that gives promise of tangible results in the no distant future. I am constrained to believe from my observation, that a very important field of work for trade union activity has been, and is now, almost entirely neglected, and that is among the children of the wage-workers. I find that entirely too many of our boys and girls develop the idea that labor with the hands is in some degree dishonorable, and in many cases the boys and girls look askance at the trade union movement and its objects and its methods. Our children must soon fill our places and it should not be necessary to convert them to the righteousness of our cause, but such unfortunately very often will be the case. The fathers and mothers of the present should become more active in their attention to education in the schools, and should endeavor to supplement the schools by taking time at home to explain to the children the struggles, the victories, the hopes and aspirations of labor. Is it not possible for us to give some special attention to the children, in order that they shall, en masse, become more efficient trade unionists than ourselves?

I herewith submit a statement of the financial transactions of my office for the past year and trust that my services may meet with your approval:

Second Day's Proceedings—Tuesday, Nov. 15, 1910.

The meeting was called to order at 10 a. m., Tuesday, November 15, 1910, President Gompers in the chair.

Absentees—Noschang, Dolan (C. T.), Gengenback, Licht, Feeney, Comerford, Hannahan, Glass, Shamp, Morton, Rickert, Larger, Landers, Rosenberg, Dyche, Nestor, Maher, Marshall, McSorley, Dolan (T. J.), Keegan, Price, Daly, Perry, McCullough (E. S.), Winkler, McGivern, Donlin, Tracy (Wm. J.), Roth, Gavlak, Evans (Jo), Brals, Casey, Drake, Faulkner, Skaggs, DeNedrey, Leary, Lee (Chas. H.), Joyner, Cathon, Jennings, Courtenay, Flynn (John J.), Klefer, Andrick, Kleyhauer, Tate, Wilson (Geo. F.), Ford, Smith (J. U. P.), Silger, Koepf, Smith (O. P.), Howley (Geo. B.), Roach, Guye, Bell, Keough, Peters, Leonard, McDonald, Cotter, Rizzie, Stafford, Voll, Gaede, Swenson, Lippert, Harris, Brice, Nihil.

President Gompers announced the appointment of Mr. C. P. Connolly, a member of Typographical Union No. 8, of St. Louis, as Assistant Secretary. No objection being offered, the appointment of Mr. Connolly was confirmed.

Delegate Quick read the following report:

Report of Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

To the Officers and Delegates of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor:

Greeting: We, your Committee on Rules and Order of Business, beg leave to submit the following report:

Rules.

We recommend the adoption of the following rules for the government of the convention:

Rule 1—The convention shall be called to order at 10 a. m. and remain in session until 4 p. m., except on Saturday, on which day the session of the convention shall be from 9 a. m. to 12 o'clock noon.

Rule 2—If a delegate, while speaking, be called to order, he shall, at the request of the Chair, take his seat until the question of order is decided.

Rule 3—Should two or more delegates rise to speak at the same time, the Chair shall decide who is entitled to the floor.

Rule 4—No delegate shall interrupt another in his remarks except it be to call him to a point of order.

Rule 5—A delegate shall not speak more than twice upon a question until all who wish to speak shall have had an opportunity to do so.

Rule 6—A delegate shall not speak more than twice on the same question without permission from the convention.

Rule 7—Speeches shall be limited to ten minutes, but the time of speaking may be extended by vote of the convention.

Rule 8—A motion shall not be open for discussion until it has been seconded and stated from the Chair.

Rule 9—At the request of five members, the mover of a motion shall be required to reduce it to writing.

Rule 10—When a question is pending before the convention, no motion shall be in order, except to adjourn, to refer, for the previous question, to postpone indefinitely, to postpone for a certain time, to divide or amend, which motions shall have precedence in the order named.

Rule 11—Motions to lay on the table shall not be debatable, except as limited by Roberts' Rules of Order.

Rule 12—A motion to reconsider shall not be entertained unless made by a delegate who voted in the majority, and shall receive a majority vote.

Rule 13—That the reports of committees shall be subject to amendments and substitutes from the floor of the convention, the same as other motions and resolutions.

Rule 14—Any delegate failing to present his card within 30 minutes after the convention is called to order shall be marked absent, but in the event of unavoidable absence he may so report to the Secretary and be marked present.

Rule 15—It shall require at least 30 members to move the previous question.

Rule 16—All resolutions shall bear the signature of the introducer and the title of the organization he represents.

Rule 17—No motion or resolution shall be voted upon until the mover or introducer has had a chance to speak, if he or she so desires.

Rule 18—No resolutions shall be received after Thursday's session, November 17, without unanimous consent of the convention.

Rule 19—When a roll-call vote has been taken, and all delegates or delegations present have had the opportunity to record their votes, the ballot shall be declared closed.

Rule 20—When a roll-call ballot has been ordered, no adjournment shall take place until the result has been announced.

Rule 21—Roberts' Rules shall be the guide on all matters not herein provided.

Rule 22—The main body of the hall shall be reserved for delegates.

Order of Business.

1—Reading Minutes of previous session, which will be dispensed with unless called for.

2—Report of Committee on Credentials.

3—Report of Officers.

4—Report of Regular Committees.

5—Report of Special Committees.

6—Unfinished Business.

7—New Business.

8—Election of Officers.

9—Selection of Next Meeting Place.

11—Adjournment.

Respectfully submitted,

L. W. QUICK, Chairman,
J. C. SHANESSY,
M. M. DONOGHUE,
JOHN SULLIVAN,
FRANK BUTTERWORTH,
HARRY CRIST,
THOMAS RUMSEY,
JEROME JONES,
CHAS. HERTENSTEIN,
ARCHIE GRANT.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be adopted as a whole.

Delegate Furuseth: I move to amend by striking out "ten" and inserting "nine," and by striking out "four" and inserting "three," to make the meeting begin at nine in the morning and close at three o'clock in the afternoon. (Seconded.)

Delegate Furuseth spoke in favor of the amendment. Delegate Proebstle and Delegate Quick opposed the amendment.

The motion to amend was lost. The motion to adopt the report of the committee as a whole was carried.

President Gompers: In making the committee appointments yesterday an error crept into the headings of the Committee on Organization and the Committee on Local and Federated Bodies. The headings should be transferred.

Vice-President Duncan, for the Executive Council, read the following report:

Report of the Executive Council.

St. Louis, Mo., November 15, 1910.

To the Officers and Delegates of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor:

Greeting:

At each annual convention of our Federation, your Executive Council has duly presented to you a summary or resumé of the more important matters which have come before us during the year, together with such suggestions and recommendations as have appealed to our judgment as tending to best advance the cause of labor in general and the direct interests of those involved in the cases under consideration in particular. We, therefore, submit to you herewith our annual report for the fiscal year of 1910.

During the year the Executive Council has held five meetings, as follows:

At Toronto immediately after the adjournment of the Toronto Convention.

At headquarters in January.

At headquarters in March.

At headquarters and at Atlantic City in June.

At St. Louis since our arrival here Thursday evening.

It was our intention to hold a meeting of the Executive Council on the Pacific Coast, and to address meetings and confer with representatives of labor in various cities going and returning from the coast, the members of the Executive Council to be divided up in groups for the accomplishment of the best results on the trip. By reason of the fact of the important engagements the members of the Executive Council had to meet, the project had to be abandoned. The instructions of the convention to President Gompers to accept the invitation to visit the Pacific Coast, he could not carry out for similar reasons.

At the earliest opportunity your President and Executive Council should undertake such a trip in the interests of our fellow workers in the Western and Pacific States.

During the year President Gompers has submitted to the Executive Council either by letter or telegram 128 subjects dealing with various matters, some of the most important of which we shall make part of this report.

For a number of years it has been customary for the Executive Council to hold meetings from time to time during the sessions of the conventions. It will no doubt be necessary for such meetings to be held during this convention. We earnestly request that in view of the engrossing and constantly increasing importance of the work of the convention, the necessity for attendance upon the meetings of the various committees, etc., that only the most pressingly important matters should be referred to the Executive Council during the sessions of the convention, but that all other matters should be taken up at the meeting which will be held after the adjournment.

Organization and Its Extension.

To the very fullest limit of the Federation's treasury we have endeavored to comply with the many requests made from time to time from every section of the country for the appointment of special organizers, and, where such appointments could not be made, as far as practicable and possible in rearranging itineraries for the special organizers of the A. F. of L. we endeavored to include the localities from which these requests were made. In some instances there seems to exist on the part of the officers and members of our affiliated organizations considerable misunderstanding as to the Federation funds available for organizing work. It may not be amiss here to bring to your attention the fact that under the provision of the Constitution of the A. F. of L. the moneys which have been contributed by the directly affiliated local trade and federal labor unions toward the Defense Fund can not be used for any purpose whatsoever except for the assistance of these local trade and federal labor unions when involved in trade disputes and controversies with the concerns and companies by which their members are employed.

Considerable success has been made in an effort for the organization of the workers in the Fore River Shipyard at Quincy, Mass. An organizer was assigned to that work, covering a considerable period of time, and had the beneficial advice and co-operation of Vice-President Duncan. A number of international unions assigned some of their best organizers to that mission. While considerable progress has been made, more remains to be done.

In connection with the subject of organizing work, we desire to impress strongly upon the delegates to this convention and the officers and members of affiliated unions the obvious fact that that assistance is best which is rendered unto one's self; in other words, that though the American Federation of Labor has done what it can and though it will work for the more thorough organization of our fellow workers, yet we are firmly convinced that each organization itself should be primarily engaged in unionizing the men who follow its craft and calling. After all, the work of the American Federation of Labor in connection with organization should be supplementary to the work of the international unions rather than tending to supplant their efforts.

The reports of our officers which have been submitted to this convention set forth the increase in the membership and in the number of locals of our affiliated bodies within the last year. An analysis of the reports demonstrates that the membership of organized labor is larger than at any previous time in the history of the American labor movement. The results achieved in organization and by organized effort both in the industrial and the political field must be gratifying to all, yet it can not be regarded as at all satisfying. So long as there are any unorganized wage workers, it will be our duty to devote a large part of our energies to bring them within the beneficent fold and influences of our trade union movement; so long as there is a right denied or a wrong to be redressed, there is important work for the men of labor to do. To do it, how to do it, and the means with which to do it, are matters to which we must give our attention. Your executive officers have been very much hampered in our work by reason of the lack of finances with which to carry it on. While conventions of our Federation instruct and direct the doing of work and the carrying out of policies and campaigns, it frequently occurs that we are limited in what can be done by reason of the lack of the means wherewith to do it.

We recommend:

That the international unions and the local unions which have not yet done so establish high regular dues among the membership, the payment of benefits being commensurate with the dues, and create large funds properly safeguarded to stand the workers instead in time of industrial stress and storm, the accumulation of which will make unnecessary many of the industrial disputes which now occur, the rights and interests of the membership being thereby the better protected and advanced.

We feel confident that if this recommendation is carried out it will result in a vastly increased membership of all unions and in a larger number of unions, and that our entire labor movement will be given an impetus in growth, extension and influence for good of which we now can only have a faint conception. There is not a dollar which organized labor may expend in the extension of organization among our fellow workers but will bring back advantages a hundred-fold.

Unions.

The fiscal year just closed has witnessed the issuance of charters to two International Unions as follows:

Tunnel and Subway Constructors International Union.

Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America.

Charters have also been issued to one State Federation of Labor, 83 Central Labor Unions, 152 local trade unions, of which there are no national or international unions of the trade, 96 federal labor unions, making a total of 334 charters issued.

Western Federation of Miners.

On June 22, at our Executive Council meeting, formal application was made by the Western Federation of Miners for charter from the American Federation of Labor. The claim of jurisdiction set forth in the application was as follows:

"The character of work is such as is required in the metalliferous and mineral mining industries, excepting coal mining.

"The jurisdiction claimed by the Western Federation of Miners includes all underground and surface wage-workers in said industries, also all of those employed in mills, smelters, refineries and other reduction works which treat the products of said mines."

Objection was thereupon interposed by the International Association of Machinists and the International Union of Steam Engineers against the issuance of the charter to the Western Federation of Miners unless it recognizes the established jurisdiction over machinists and engineers.

We referred the matter to a conference of the representatives of the International Association of Machinists, President Valentine of the International Molders' Union, and the representatives of the Western Federation of Miners, and selected Vice-President Mitchell to represent the American Federation of Labor. Quite some time was given to the conference, but the report was made to us that no agreement or adjustment in the mooted question had been reached.

The matter was again before the Executive Council, the officers of the organizations each insisting upon their respective claims and protests. We thereupon directed President Gompers to enter into a further correspondence in regard to the application for charter and to communicate the results thereof to us. There has been much correspondence upon this subject, but we finally, on the occasion of the special convention of the United Mine Workers of America, and inasmuch as President Gompers was aware that President Moyer of the Western Federation of Miners would be at Indianapolis in attendance at that convention, authorized him to invite the representatives of the International Association of Machinists, of the United Mine Workers of America, and the Western Federation of Miners to participate in a conference with several representatives of the Executive Council in Indianapolis on August 18, during the date of the special convention of the United Mine Workers of America to endeavor to come to an agreement so that a charter might be issued to the Western Federation of Miners. Two sessions were held and the following agreement reached:

"Indianapolis, Ind., August 18, 1910.

At a conference held in the city of Indianapolis, Ind., in which the following participated: James O'Connell, President, International Association of Machinists; Charles H. Moyer, President, Western Federation of Miners; T. L. Lewis, President, United Mine Workers of America; W. W. White, International Organizer, U. M. W. of A.; John Mitchell, Vice-President, American Federation of Labor; Wm. D. Huber, Vice-President, American Federation of Labor; Samuel Gompers, President, American Federation of Labor, for the purpose of agreeing upon terms of amity and co-operation and the best interest of the men in and around the mines, and the workers generally could best be conserved, the following was agreed between the International Association of Machinists and the Western Federation of Miners and approved by the participants in the conference, and that the same be submitted to the Executive Council of the A. F. of L.:

1. That wherever locals of machinists under the International Association of Machinists now exist, their status shall not in any way be disturbed by claim to jurisdiction by the Western Federation of Miners.

2. That the officers of the organizations in this conference represented agree to aid to the fullest in furthering the mutual interests of all workers in and around the mines.

James O'Connell,
T. L. Lewis,
John Mitchell,
Charles H. Moyer,
W. W. White,
Wm. D. Huber,
Samuel Gompers."

In view of the declaration of the Scranton Convention as corrected by the Minneapolis Convention upon the subject of trade autonomy and jurisdiction, we were persuaded that the claim of the Western Federation of Miners to jurisdiction over engineers in and around the mines was well founded, and when copies of this agreement were transmitted to us, we were fully convinced that the obstacles to the issuance of the charter had been removed.

President Moyer of the W. F. of M., however, wrote a letter to President O'Connell of the I. A. of M., asking the latter's interpretation of the first clause of the agreement. In order that the matter may be fully understood, the correspondence upon the subject between President Moyer, President O'Connell, and President Gompers is herewith given:

"WESTERN FEDERATION OF MINERS.

Denver, Colo., August 24, 1910.

Mr. Jas. O'Connell, President, I. A. of M., Washington, D. C.:

Dear Sir and Brother—I have just returned to our headquarters in Denver on this date, and in studying over the proposed agreement between the International Association of Machinists and the Western Federation of Miners, which was outlined in our conference of August 18, before submitting same to our Executive Board, I deem it wise to have a more definite understanding, especially as to Clause 1 in the proposed agreement. This clause reads: 'Wherever locals of machinists, under the International Association of Machinists, now exist, their status shall not in any way be disturbed by the claimed jurisdiction of the W. F. of M.'

While I am absolutely clear on this matter, and have every reason to believe that the other members of the committee are also, and that we all had in mind the locals of machinists now existing in the mining camps in the jurisdiction claimed by the W. F. of M., of which I believe there are not to exceed three, the same being located in different camps in the State of Montana, yet I am familiar with the fact that certain locals of the I. A. of M. situated in large centers, such as Denver, Colo., and Salt Lake City, Utah, have members working in mining camps where there is no local of machinists, said camps being located a long distance from the above-named places, and I consider it wise, in fact, absolutely necessary that it be understood that Clause 1 shall not apply to local unions of the I. A. of M. other than those that are situated in the mining camps. In other words, if one local in a State, for instance such as Salt Lake City, should claim jurisdiction over the machinists in the different mining camps of that State, and it is intended that Clause 1 shall secure them in their claim to such jurisdiction, then the same could not be considered at all by the W. F. of M., as it would be practically conceding to the machinists jurisdiction over machinists in every State where metal or mineral mining is carried on and where a local of the International exists. In order that there may be no confusion in the future, I would like you to wire me immediately upon receipt of this letter as to whether I am correct in my interpretation of the proposed agreement in that it only applies to the local unions of machinists now existing in mining and smelting camps. My reason for requesting that you reply by wire is that I understand the A. F. of L. Council will convene on the 12th of September, and as I shall not submit this matter to our Executive Board until hearing from you, it is a question whether we would have sufficient time for the Board to pass on the question if compelled to await a communication.

Wishing you the fullest measure of success, I am,

Yours fraternally,

President Western Federation of Miners."

"INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MACHINISTS.

Washington, D. C., August 27, 1910.

Mr. C. H. Moyer, President W. F. of M.,
Denver, Colorado:

Dear Sir and Brother—I have your esteemed favor of the 24th and wired you today as follows:

"Washington, D. C., August 27, 1910.

C. H. Moyer, Denver, Colorado:

Letter twenty-fourth received. Your interpretation of our proposed agreement not according to my understanding. We are to have same jurisdiction we now hold wherever our members are located throughout your jurisdiction. Just received word lodge at Salt Lake secured eight-hour day with 50 cent rate at one of the large smelters employing 20 machinists. Lodge at Milford has large number machinists working mines and smelters in that section. Letter following."

My understanding of the proposed arrangement at Indianapolis to be submitted to our general executive boards in the proposition which provides "wherever locals in the I. A. of M. now exist, their status shall in no way be disturbed by claim of jurisdiction of the W. F. of M." is that it does not confine us to a lodge located as you indicate in the mining camps, but means that where a lodge exists in the I. A. of M. and has members working in mines and smelters, their status shall not be disturbed. For instance, our lodge at Salt Lake has a large number of machinists employed in and about the smelters in that vicinity. Lodge No. 244, at Milford, Utah, has also a large number of members working in the mines and smelters in that vicinity. Lodge 568, Bingham Canyon, I believe also has a large number of members in the smelters and mines. I am not sure our lodge at Denver has many, if any, employed in the mines and smelters of Colorado.

Therefore, if we were to confine our jurisdiction exclusively to lodges in the mining camps, for instance, Butte and Anaconda, we would simply be giving up claim upon a large number of members holding membership in the lodges in that vicinity, which lodges may not be located within some miles of the mining camp.

I believe, Brother Moyer, if the proposition is adopted and we agree to carry same out with a liberal spirit of co-operation with each other, with a view to advancing the interests of our respective organizations, the best interests of all parties concerned will be served, and beg to assure you that we will not hitch on any small technicalities to place your organization, officers or members in an embarrassing position, but stand ready to assist you in every way possible to advance the interests of the W. F. of M.

With the assurance of my best wishes, I am,

Yours fraternally,
(Signed) Jas. O'Connell,
International President.

Mr. Charles H. Moyer, 605 Railroad Building, Denver, Colorado:

President O'Connell just showed me your letter. It seems to me the first paragraph of the agreement is quite clear and fully understood by participants in Indianapolis conference to mean that wherever machinists' locals now exist they shall not be interfered with. It is doubtful whether Executive Council meeting will be held for two months, but that fact is not likely to interfere with issuance of charter if agreement is reached. In the interest of miners, machinists and all labor I urge that every effort be made to bring about affiliation, unity and co-operation.

Samuel Gompers,
President American Federation
Labor."

"Denver, Colo., August 30, 1910.
Sam. Gompers, 801 G st. N. W., Washington, D. C.:

O'Connell claims jurisdiction wherever his members are working throughout our jurisdiction. Your telegram refers not to members, but to locals now existing. Do you mean locals in our jurisdiction or in general?

Chas. S. Moyer,
President, W. F. of M."

"Washington, D. C., September 1, 1910.
Mr. Charles H. Moyer, 605 Railroad Building, Denver, Colorado:

Statement in my telegram August 27th in exact accord with first provision of Indianapolis agreement. Existing machinists' locals are not to be interfered with. The right of the locals to remain undisturbed carries with it the right of their members to work without claim to jurisdiction over them by another organization. This telegram has been read to Mr. O'Connell and he approves it. I again urge that after all the matter is not of great importance to your organization and should not stand in the way of its affiliation.

Samuel Gompers,
President American Federation
of Labor."

WESTERN FEDERATION OF MINERS.

Denver, Colo., September 2, 1910.
Mr. Samuel Gompers, President American Federation of Labor, Washington, D. C.:

Dear Sir and Brother—Your telegrams of the 27th and 1st received, and while the former left me somewhat in doubt, the latter makes your position absolutely clear and as it permits of no other interpretation than that the International Association of Machinists shall have jurisdiction over machinists employed in the mining industry, regardless as to whether or not they have a local in the mining or smelting camp, I am compelled to say that the intent of the proposed agreement was not so understood by President Lewis of the United Mine Workers, and myself, and that I was much surprised that such a construction could be placed upon it by any member or members of the Indianapolis conference.

When filing our application for certificate of affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, I believe that it was accompanied by a copy of the joint report which was adopted by the United Mine Workers and the Western Federation of Miners. I remember that your attention was called to Clause 4, which provided that application for affiliation was to be made on condition that the present jurisdiction of the Western Federation of Miners and the United Mine Workers of America should be recognized by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor. The present jurisdiction of the United Mine Workers referred to in this report included all workers in the coal mining industry. The jurisdiction of the Western Federation of Miners, as I explained to you in my letter, was that which is claimed in the constitution of the organization.

In filing our application we were guided by the instructions of the 22d convention, United Mine Workers of America, and the membership of the Western Federation of Miners, and in defining our jurisdiction in the application, the opinion as to both organizations as to what they believed was for their best interests was set forth in a way that could not be misunderstood. I mention this because of the fact that in your wire of the first you state that in your opinion the matter of jurisdiction between the International Association of Machinists and the miners' organizations is not of great importance. When the committees representing the miners' organizations, appeared before your Council in Washington we were informed that several protests had been filed against the issuing of a charter to the metalliferous miners because of the question of jurisdiction, and it developed later that the one entered by President O'Connell of the International Association of Machinists, was considered of the greater importance by the Council for the reason, as I understand, that in the jurisdiction of the Western Federation of Miners there had been for a great many years, local unions of machinists, and when on August 18th we met in conference in Indianapolis, it appeared to be well understood by all participants, in fact, it was so stated by yourself and other members representing the Council, and if I mistake not, President O'Connell included, that the only obstacle which stood in the way of issuing the charter was the local unions of machinists in Montana in the jurisdiction of the Western Federation of Miners. I believe that you remember that I asked President O'Connell as to the number of these locals and he replied, "One in Butte, one in Anaconda, and possibly one in Great Falls." I then said that as I understood there were not to exceed three locals involved. He replied that was all he had any knowledge of. This is some evidence at least that the matter under discussion was not the general jurisdiction between the International Association of Machinists and the Western Federation of Miners, but certain locals existing in the jurisdiction of the latter organization.

Then, again, it is evident to me that in drafting the agreement you had in mind, first an agreement that would permit the locals under discussion to continue; second, the defining of the jurisdiction generally between the two organizations. My reason for these conclusions is that after reading to the conference your draft of an agreement, President O'Connell objected to your reference to the miners having jurisdiction over all machinists in mining camps where there were no locals of machinists. You will remember his reasons for so doing, which were that any such reference in the agreement would only have a tendency to arouse his membership, but that if there was no mention made of this and the charter issued on the application, the general jurisdiction would be covered, and by an understanding as to the locals existing in Montana, whereby they might continue undisturbed by claimed jurisdiction of the Western Federation of Miners, that the situation could be tided over, and because of the position assumed by Mr. O'Connell, that portion of your draft was stricken out. This, it occurs to me, is further evidence that the question involved and which we had under discussion, and which the proposed agreement was intended to cover, was the local unions of machinists now existing in the jurisdiction of the Western Federation of Miners. I am unable to understand how it could have been possible for any member of the conference to have inferred from the position which I took that I was willing to enter into an agreement which would concede general jurisdiction in the mining industry to machinists. In the first place, I had no authority from the Western Federation of Miners to do so, and would have broken faith with the United Mine Workers under the provisions of the joint committee's report. I submitted President O'Connell's letter and telegram, also my letter to Mr. O'Connell to President Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, and in a telegram to me dated the 29th, he informs me that his understanding of the proposed agreement was the same as mine.

I maintain that the construction which is placed on the first paragraph of the proposed agreement by Mr. O'Connell and yourself is a complete concession of jurisdiction to the International Association of Machinists over that craft in the mining industry, and if carried out as interpreted by him there would be a continuous conflict between the two organizations. I contend that under the terms of this proposed agreement as construed by Mr. O'Connell, that, in the State of Colorado, as an example, where the machinists have no locals in the mining industry, but where possibly some of their members have been, and are, at this time, being permitted to work by the Western Federation of Miners, regardless of whether there was even a local of Machinists in the state or territory. Carried to its conclusion, it would mean that the jurisdiction of a local union in the city of Chicago or New York would extend to British Columbia, simply because, as I have said, there might be one or more of their members in each of the mining or smelting camps in the province.

If the present status as to members working throughout our jurisdiction is proposed to be continued, then what rule would apply in case the force in a mine or smelter should be increased and other members of the machinists be placed in positions. Would they become members of the Western Federation of Miners or continue in the jurisdiction of the International Association of Machinists? Or in cases where the force may be made up partly of members of the international of machinists and non-union workers, according to Mr. O'Connell's interpretation of the proposed agreement the machinists would have jurisdiction over their members and the Western Federation of Miners over those who had not as yet become members of any organization. This, in my humble opinion, would bring about a condition which could not be for the best interests of the two organizations, and one of many which it was our desire to avoid by a definite settlement of jurisdiction before becoming a part of the American Federation of Labor.

The possibilities of two organizations undertaking to divide the jurisdiction over workers of certain crafts in an industry such as is the mining, would not result, in my opinion, in bringing about that unity and co-operation desired, but on the other hand, would lay the grounds for a continuous friction. If it is the desire of Mr. O'Connell to avoid this, then it appears to me that the proper course to pursue is to have a distinct understanding that either one or the other organization shall have jurisdiction over the machinists in the coal and metalliferous mining industry, and after carefully studying the report of the Autonomy Committee of the Scranton convention, which received the endorsement of the delegates, I believe that I am justified in my contention that they should belong to the paramount organization, which in all instances where the workings are permanent, is composed of the miners.

In conclusion, and in order that my position may be fully understood, I desire to say that my understanding as to the intent of Clause 1 of the agreement, which reads as follows: "Wherever locals of machinists under the international of machinists exist, their status shall not in any way be disturbed by the claimed jurisdiction of the Western Federation of Miners," is that local unions of machinists in the jurisdiction of the Western Federation of Miners at the time our application for charter was made and which President O'Connell stated was not to exceed three, should not be disturbed in their present status, and that with this agreement between the International of Machinists and the Western Federation of Miners, the charter shall issue from the American Federation of Labor on the application. I would further call your attention to the fact that while the proposed agreement provides that the same shall be submitted to the Executive Council of the A. F. of L., yet, upon your suggestion, President O'Connell and myself met at the headquarters of the United Mine Workers on the following day—Mr. Mitchell, Mr. White and Mr. Lewis also being present—and it was agreed on, at the suggestion of Mr. O'Connell, that the matter should first be submitted to the Executive Boards of the two organizations. As it would now appear impossible for President O'Connell and myself to agree as to the intent of the proposed agreement, no good could result from submitting it to the executive boards, therefore the matter, as it seems to me, stands as it did before the Indianapolis conference, and the application of the Western Federation of Miners for charter is before the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor for their consideration.

I can assure you that I regret exceedingly that this matter could not have been amicably adjusted and our affiliation have taken place at an early date, and I still trust that the council will see its way clear to pass favorably on the application. I have worked diligently for more than one year to bring about a closer alliance between the American Federation of Labor and the miners' organization, and assure you that I ever stand ready to do that which reason points to me as being for the best interests of the working class.

Trusting to hear from you in regard to this important matter at your earliest convenience, I beg to remain,

Yours fraternally,

(Signed) Charles Moyer,

President Western Federation of Miners."

We have had the correspondence and the Indianapolis agreement transmitted to us for consideration, but have had no meeting for the discussion of the subject until our coming to this city. At this meeting we entered fully into the subject and our interpretation of the point in dispute is:

That the agreement reached at Indianapolis does not require any member of the International Association of Machinists working within the juris-isdiction of a local thereof, to become a member of the Western Federation of Miners.

The Executive Council has authorized the issuance of the charter to the Western Federation of Miners upon the agreement reached at Indianapolis and this interpretation thereof.

Brotherhood of Railway Carmen—International Association of Car Workers.

Among the charters which we authorized and directed be issued was the one to the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen. For several years that organization made application for charter, and in each instance it was denied. At the Denver Convention the newly-formed Railway Employees' Department, through its president, Mr. Henry B. Perham, held conferences with the officers of the Brotherhood and the officers of the affiliated International Association of Car Workers. An agreement was reached by which there was to be submitted to a referendum vote of the membership of both organizations the subject of the selection of a committee with power and authority to consummate the amalgamation of both bodies. That agreement was ratified by our Denver Federation Convention. The membership of the Brotherhood ratified the agreement; that of the International rejected it. In our report to the Toronto Convention we called attention that we believed it our duty to put forth every effort possible to secure some mutually satisfactory agreement between the organizations and possible amalgamation. We, therefore, directed our president to continue the efforts and correspondence. It resulted in a meeting of the representatives of the two organizations, the meeting being held at the Victoria Hotel, New York City, concurrent with our Executive Council meeting, and we delegated Vice-President Perham to act in the name of the A. F. of L.

An agreement was reached that inasmuch as the Brotherhood had authorized and selected its committee, with power to amalgamate, and that the International had not, the representatives of the International should recommend to the Executive Board thereof the submission of a proposition to authorize the appointment of the committee with power to act. The Executive Board of the International Union declined to submit the proposition to the membership. For a better understanding we quote from the official proceedings of our last convention, as follows:

"In view of the fact that the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America voted to affiliate with the A. F. of L. application for charter was made by its officers. We have had this application under consideration, but were in hopes that amalgamation of the organizations would be completed. We, therefore, held the matter in abeyance. We have not given up hope that amalgamation may be accomplished, even at this convention, but unless this convention or the Executive Council is advised on or before the close of this convention that amalgamation will be effected, we recommend that the Executive Council be authorized to charter and affiliate to the A. F. of L. an amalgamation of the men in this industry under one charter.

A motion was made, and seconded, that the report of the committee be adopted.

Delegate Richardson: I have no objection to the report of the committee, except in so far as it authorizes the Executive Council to issue a charter to the amalgamated organizations. That would authorize the Executive Council in my opinion, to revoke the charter of the International Association of Car Workers, in violation of Section 12, Article IX, I feel the report of the committee is in violation of that section, and raise that point of order.

President Gompers: The chair decides the point of order is not well taken. At the meeting of the Executive Council when this subject was under consideration, the very course stated by Delegate Richardson was stated to be the course which must necessarily be pursued in this convention: that is, the attention of the convention will be called to all that is implied in the report, and that this proposition must be decided by roll call and require a two-thirds vote to adopt.

Delegate Mahon: I would like to have it made clear when this conference is to take place.

Delegate Lewis, secretary of the committee: The committee was unable to say when the conference would take place. It states that the conference will be held in the city of Washington, D. C., at the earliest possible date. There are two organizations involved in this controversy—the International Association of Car Workers and the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen. An effort was made to get the organizations together and agree upon a basis of amalgamation. The representatives of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, its executive officers, are here with full power to amalgamate on any basis. They represent approximately 20,000 men. The International Association of Car Workers, the affiliated organization, is represented here with no power to agree upon the terms of amalgamation. Representatives of both organizations admitted in the committee that amalgamation would best serve the interests of the car workers of this country. When the question was put to the representatives of the affiliated unions, whether or not they would recommend to their constituents, who are affiliated with this body, any plan of amalgamation that might be agreed upon, they did not answer the question. Another question entered into the controversy. The non-affiliated organization has an indebtedness obligated by those 20,000 or more men in the way of strike benefits. Their representatives were asked if they expected the amalgamated organization to take care of that indebtedness, and they replied that they did not, that their membership would take care of it.

The question was discussed by Delegate Mahon at some length.

Delegate Braggins: I move that the report of the committee be amended to limit the time when this meeting shall occur to February 1. That will give more than sixty days.

After a short discussion, Delegate Braggins moved, as an amendment to the report of the committee, that the time in which the meeting shall be held be limited to four months. (Seconded.)

The question was further discussed by President Gompers, Vice-President O'Connell, Delegate Mahon, Delegate Richardson, and Delegate Braggins.

The amendment offered by Delegate Braggins was lost.

President Gompers: The chair desires to ask if a roll call is waived.

Delegate Richardson: I ask for a roll call under the law.

President Gompers: The secretary will call the roll.

Delegate Richardson: I am not asking it on the report of the committee, but on Section 12.

Roll call on report of Committee on Adjustment on the question of the International Association of Car Workers and the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen.

The report and the recommendation of both the Executive Council and the Committee on Adjustment were adopted by vote of 12,189 to 1,377.

We authorized the continuation of the efforts to bring about amalgamation, the officers of both organizations appearing before our Council meeting. In view of the opposition manifested by the officers of the International, the Brotherhood insisted that it had the right to expect the issuance of a charter to that body. It was, however, again left in abeyance, and President Gompers directed to invite the officers of both organizations to a conference for the purpose of effecting the desired result. That conference was later held, and he devoted two days and evenings thereto. It being necessary for him to leave headquarters to attend to important work in connection with our movement, he authorized, in our name, Secretary Morrison to continue the effort. Our secretary devoted two days of his time thereto, the officers of the organizations themselves holding several days' conference thereafter, but all to no avail. The officers of the International claimed that inasmuch as the Brotherhood had a debt, their members would be liable to bear the burden equally with those of the Brotherhood. They exhibited a legal opinion to that effect. This entire matter, together with the legal opinion, was submitted to Hon. J. H. Ralston, our Federation's attorney, for an opinion as to whether provision could be made to guarantee the present members of the International Union from any such indebtedness. He not only gave an affirmative opinion, but drafted a provision by which this could be accomplished. Notwithstanding this, the officers of the International declined to consider any proposition looking toward an amalgamation. The officers of the International then submitted to their membership a proposition forbidding their officers or representatives from participating in any conference or negotiations looking toward amalgamation until the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen liquidated its entire indebtedness.

We regarded that course on the part of the officers of the International as a subterfuge; as a breach of faith and in contravention of the declaration of the Toronto Convention. Not only the proposition prohibiting conference for amalgamation as submitted, but the language employed in its submission so prejudiced the issue as to make it a foregone conclusion that the membership would vote as they did, prohibiting conference and amalgamation. We therefore believe we acted within the spirit and purpose of the unanimous instructions of the Toronto Convention when we ordered that in the event of the rejection by the membership of the International prohibiting the organization's participation in negotiations and conferences for amalgamation, that a charter should be issued to the Brotherhood, and that in that event the charter was authorized and directed to be issued. It was issued under date of August 9, 1910. A letter of transmittal of the charter was sent. The letter contains the conditions upon which the charter was issued. The letter is as follows:

August 9, 1910.

Mr. M. F. Ryan, President, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, 507 Hall Building, Kansas City, Mo.:

Dear Sir and Brother—For sometime an application from your organization has been in this office for a charter to be issued by the American Federation of Labor to the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America. By reason of the fact of the affiliation of the International Association of Car Workers, and its protest against the issuance of such charter, the subject has been one of many and prolonged conferences, and it has received the attention of conventions of the American Federation of Labor.

It was the hope that the amalgamation of the two car workers' organizations would be effected. The matter was fully presented in the reports of the officers of the A. F. of L. to the Toronto Convention, November, 1909, and referred to the Committee on Adjustment which subsequently made comprehensive report, which in turn was adopted by the convention by a vote of 12,189 in the affirmative and 1,377 in the negative.

In conformity with the instructions of the convention, the Executive Council and other officers of the A. F. of L. made persistent effort to bring about amalgamation so that a charter might be issued to an international body of car workers, but without avail, insurmountable obstacles having been placed in the way to achievement within the limit of time contemplated by the instructions of the Toronto Convention. Recently the International Association of Car Workers, despite the overwhelming declaration of the Toronto Convention, decided to refuse to enter into any negotiations or conferences whatsoever for the purpose of bringing about amalgamation of that organization with the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, until the $80,000 for which the latter organization is indebted to its members is fully paid, and this decision was reached notwithstanding the positive and absolute binding declaration that the B. of R. C. of A. will assume full responsibility for the liquidation of that debt, and that the members of the I. A. of C. W. will be safeguarded from any financial or other obligation in regard to this indebtedness.

Thus the Executive Council is confronted with a situation in which it must act in conformity with the spirit and purpose of the Toronto Convention's decision and instructions, and in furtherance of the best interests of the men employed as carmen and car workers, and in furtherance of the best interests of the labor movement of America.

Having all these matters in mind, the Executive Council decided as follows:

"In the effort to adjust the differences between the organizations of car workers and to amalgamate them as per the action of the Toronto Convention we found two obstacles, viz.: that the International Association of Car Workers objected to amalgamation until certain debt said to be due by the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of a number of its members had been paid; and that the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers objected to an amalgamated charter being issued until the painting now done by both the Car Workers' International Unions was transferred to the painters' jurisdiction.

"In order, however, to give official recognition to the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, and to permit of both objections being cleared up to the mutual satisfaction of all interested parties, a charter to the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen as per its application for affiliation be issued and that the efforts of the A. F. of L. for amalgamation of the car workers' unions be continued and at the earliest possible date consistent with the welfare of the workers in interest a charter be issued to the amalgamated union."

It is understood by the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. that the decision and the conditions upon which the charter is issued to your organization, shall be fully and in good faith carried out, that is, that there shall be an effort made for harmonious agreement by your organization with the International Association of Car Workers; that your Brotherhood will continue, and if possible to make further efforts for the earliest possible liquidation of its indebtedness; that after the indebtedness has been paid that earnest effort at amalgamation will be made between the B. of R. C. and the I. A. of C. W.; and that whatever claim the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers may justly have shall be given full consideration, fair treatment and honest fulfillment.

It is clearly understood that in issuing this charter to your organization it shall in no way infringe upon the jurisdiction of any existing national or international union, nor the work that may belong to either. It is the expectation that every effort be made by your organization to co-operate with the organized toilers of America to bring about greatest possible unity, harmony and success.

Permit me to extend to your International Union a hearty welcome into the family of our great trade unions under the banner of the American Federation of Labor. I sincerely hope that you will be entirely successful in your efforts to improve the condition of your fellow craftsmen and by your organized efforts contribute to the success of the labor movement in general.

The per capita tax which your organization is required to pay to the American Federation of Labor is one-half cent per member per month. The same should be paid regularly and thus avoid allowing indebtedness to accumulate, which then might become burdensome or difficult to pay.

You are respectfully requested to report to the American Federation of Labor at regular intervals provided by the Constitution of the A. F. of L., and at such other times as anything may come under your observation of interest to our movement.

You are kindly asked to notify this office upon receipt of your charter and give the name of your organization in all of your communications to this office.

The practice has become almost general among the affiliated organizations, to print on their letterheads and official documents, in addition to their own title, the following: "Affiliated to the American Federation of Labor." It is respectfully suggested that in future printing for the Brotherhood you will adopt the usual practice. Of course, you understand that it is in no way obligatory.

Enclosed please find receipt for $5.00 which was forwarded for charter. Charter was mailed to you on the 9th instant.

With best wishes. I am,

Fraternally yours,

(Signed) Samuel Gompers,
of Labor."

The International holding its convention in Detroit last month, we authorized Secretary Morrison to appear before the officers and delegates with the endeavor to have that body submit to the membership a proposition authorizing and empowering its officers to continue their efforts for amalgamation of the two bodies, the carmen and car workers, into one comprehensive International Brotherhood of men employed in that trade. The effort was not successful. The entire subject matter is reported to you for such action as you may further direct.

Actors—White Rats of America.

Early in the year a complaint reached President Gompers of alleged misconduct on the part of our affiliated Actors' National Union upon a matter of legislation. The complaint was informal, and yet the statement was that the White Rats of America would affirm the complaint. For the purpose of giving our affiliated organization the opportunity of meeting its accusers, our president called a conference in New York inviting the representatives of both organizations to meet him. The conference was protracted, but an agreement was reached regarding the subject of legislation in which both organizations were interested. Later, however, a disagreement again arose between them.

On July 20, 1910, the White Rats of America made application for charter, and claimed absolute and sole jurisdiction in regard to all theatrical performers. The Actors' National Union being affiliated and claiming exclusive jurisdiction, a charter under these circumstances was impossible. President Gompers invited the representatives of the Actors' National Union, of the White Rats of America, of the Central Federated Union, and Organizer Frayne to meet him in conference for the purpose of endeavoring to bring about the amalgamation of the two organizations, or the arrangements of such conditions by which the charter could be issued to the White Rats. Vice-President Mitchell was invited and co-operated in this conference. The conference resulted in a declaration in favor of one organization of the theatrical performers of America, and also an agreement to select three members each representing the two organizations primarily in interest, and an agreement by these six upon the seventh member, who was to act in an advisory capacity without vote.

Both organizations agreed upon President Gompers. He called the conference which was held on Monday, November 7, in New York City, when an agreement was entered into by which the two organizations became amalgamated into one, part of the name of both organizations being accepted under the following new title: The White Rats Actors' Union of America.

Other arrangements for the consolidation of both organizations were made and the application for charter of the consolidated organizations substituted for the one issued and the one for which application was made. We gladly approved the agreement and the issuance of the charter was authorized.

Electrical Workers.

We regret to report that the controversy between the affiliated and the unaffiliated International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers remains unadjusted. The Toronto Convention unanimously reaffirmed the agreement adopted by the Denver Convention, and by the same vote provided for means by which the amalgamation of both organizations shall be effected, and referred its consummation to a committee of three, composed of one representative selected by the affiliated brotherhood, one selected by the unaffiliated organization, and the other selected by our president. The following were the appointees made respectively: Frank Duffy, F. L. Urick, and John P. Frey. These appointees were confirmed by the convention.

The committee held several prolonged meetings at Springfield, Illinois, and Cleveland, Ohio, but were unable to accomplish the desired result. It is impossible in this report to comprehensively state the grounds for the cause of the committee's inability to amalgamate the two organizations. A summary can give no just conception of all the features involved. A presentation of all the documents is entirely out of the question. They consist of printed proceedings of our convention, printed proceedings of conventions of the two organizations involved, official journals of both organizations, innumerable letters, court petitions, court orders, attorney's briefs and attorney's letters and opinions, as well as court opinions and decisions.

It is our opinion that if the entire matter is referred to the Executive Council for the exercise of their good offices, and without instructions binding them to any specific course by this convention, our Federation may, in the course of time, bring about amalgamation. Any Executive Council which this convention will elect will be in all honor and in duty bound to aim to accomplish the best results in the interests of the men employed in the Electrical Workers' trade, and to advance the cause we all have the honor to represent. Certainly, it is quite evident that the method provided by the Denver and Toronto Conventions to bring about that result has completely failed, notwithstanding the best efforts of the men engaged in that mission.

Elevator Constructors—Machinists.

Obedient to the action of the Toronto Convention on Resolution No. 54, our president immediately instructed an investigation in regard to the controversy of the elevator constructors and the machinists' locals of Chicago. Resolution No. 54 contains a number of preambles and a resolution. This was referred to the Adjustment Committee, which reported thereon. That report, as amended and adopted by the convention, reads as follows:

"That the president of the A. F. of L. be instructed to immediately institute an investigation in regard to the controversy of the elevator constructors of Chicago. If it is found that the claim of the Elevator Constructors' Union is correct with reference to the situation in Chicago, in our opinion, the men now on the jobs of the striking elevator constructors should be taken off and the controversy in Chicago should be adjusted by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, or some representative member of the Executive Council.

"That the machinists be requested to remove their men, pending the investigation, so that we will be on equal terms."

President Gompers immediately conveyed the request contained in the action of the convention to President O'Connell of the International Association of Machinists, to which he replied that if he was notified of the time the committee appointed to make the investigation would meet, and who the members of the committee would be, the date set when it would proceed with the investigation, he has every reason to believe that the request made by the A. F. of L. would be complied with.

Our president, in compliance with the instruction, appointed John R. Alpine president of the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers of the United States and Canada; J. W. Kline president of the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, and George L. Berry president of the International Printing Pressmen's Union.

The officers of the elevator constructors and of the machinists were informed of the time and place when the investigation would be held, and were in attendance at Chicago. The following are the report, findings and recommendations of that committee:

"Chicago, Ill., December 16, 1909.

Samuel Gompers, President American Federation of Labor:

We, the committee, appointed by President Gompers, in accordance with the decision of the Toronto Convention, to investigate the conditions relative to the machinists and elevator constructor's controversy, ask leave to report our findings as follows:

Two meetings between the contesting parties and the committee were held in the Briggs House, Chicago, December 7 and 8 respectively, and one meeting was held between the interested parties also at the Briggs House, December 8, at which meeting Bro. Berry was present.

These meetings were without results, so far as a settlement of the controversy was concerned, and the representatives of both organizations declared that they were satisfied they had presented their respective arguments completely.

The machinists manifested a desire to arbitrate, but the elevator constructors maintained that nothing would suffice save the removal of all machinists from the contested work. The machinists made the following proposition to the elevator constructors:

If the special committee were able to bring about an adjustment whereby all unemployed elevator constructors in Chicago were to be reinstated under the conditions and working rules and wage scale agreed to, would you be willing to have special committee recommend to the Executive Council that they shall proceed to send out amalgamation plan, the machinists to agree that they will support wage contentions to the extent of withdrawing their men from the Otis Elevator Company; all elevator constructors now out of work or who were in the employ of the Otis Elevator Company, May 1, 1909, to file application at office of elevator constructors within fifteen days after a truce is declared and agreed to by special committee and both parties to the controversy? This was rejected by the elevator constructors.

Since your committee felt that a full investigation would not be effected without receiving the version of the employers principally concerned, a visit was determined upon by the committee with the Otis Elevator Company, December 9, by Brothers Alpine and Kline, and the entire situation was reviewed from the employers' standpoint.

The representatives of the machinists and elevator constructors agreed to meet with Brothers Alpine and Kline at the offices of the Otis Elevator Company on December 11—with the hope that some mutual satisfactory arrangement would be effected which would relieve a situation rapidly growing more intense.

This conference, however, proved fruitless. The elevator constructors were immovable. The company manifested a desire, and were anxious to assist us in effecting a settlement. The machinists were also willing at this time to agree to a reasonable proposition that the elevator constructors may offer.

Nothing, however, would satisfy the latter but the immediate removal of all machinists from the disputed work.

The company at this time made the following proposition: We will employ one hundred elevator constructors, out of work, immediately, or an equivalent of one elevator constructor to one machinist, and helpers likewise. They also agreed to pay the five dollars and ($5.20) twenty cents to all elevator constructors and machinists, pending action of the Executive Council of the A. F. of L., or until the first of May. This, be it understood, is the wage rate for which the elevator constructors are on strike.

This proposition was agreed to by the machinists, but immediately rejected by the elevator constructors. In other words, any and all propositions and overtures were rejected by the elevator constructors, and your committee, realizing that further discussion was useless, the meeting adjourned.

In summing up our investigation, it shows that the controversy between the constructors and machinists has extended over a period of several years, and the feeling has become more intense from year to year. Conferences have been held between local and international officers of both organizations in an endeavor to settle the dispute, with no results. The proposition to amalgamate has been talked on for nearly a year, and hostilities had practically ceased, pending the consummation of the plan. It had been decided by both organizations to meet in Chicago, May 3, 1909, to consummate the plan of amalgamation.

The machinists, who had notified the Otis Company in March, 1909, of their intention to cover all of the installation of machinery in their agreement, under the advice of their general officers, allowed their members to remain at work after the first day of May, 1909, even though their agreement expired on that date, in order that no trouble might arise during the deliberations of the two organizations in their attempt to perfect amalgamation plans. It was understood by the machinists that the elevator constructors would do likewise; however, this they did not do, and removed their men the first day of May before the Joint Executive Council had met. This in itself we consider showed bad faith on the part of the elevator constructors, and according to the evidence offered the New York meeting, showed that it was the desire of the meeting that hostilities should cease during the attempt to amalgamate.

The machinists made no attempt to force the acceptance of their agreement on the Otis Elevator Company until the elevator constructors had refused to send out the proposed plans of amalgamation agreed on by the joint meeting. As soon as they refused to do this, however, the machinists, in conjunction with other trades connected with the Associated Building Trades, notified the officials of the Otis Elevator Company of their desire and intention to formulate an agreement covering all of this work.

Such an agreement was drawn up on June 12, 1909, was signed by the various organizations and endorsed by the Associated Building Trades, and work commenced and is being performed at this present time.

The removal of the machinists would have, we think, at this time, a tendency to complicate the situation instead of helping it, as the trades working in conjunction with the machinists on this work would undoubtedly make trouble for the constructors in behalf of the machinists and themselves. In addition to this is the fact that the Metal Trades Department may become involved in the shops and embroil other crafts not directly interested in this difficulty. An additional reason why it would be inadvisable to order the machinists to desist work on the contested claims is the fact that the Associated Building Trades Council will undoubtedly consolidate with the Building Trades Department local section on or before January 1, 1910. This action is the order of the Building Trades Department and all signs indicate that the consolidation will ensue.

We feel, therefore, were we to take radical action, such action would have a tendency not alone to create additional strife between the machinists and elevator constructors, but would also have a tendency to impede the progress made by the Building Trades Department—and which progress seems in a fair way to result satisfactorily.

All things considered, we, your committee, would recommend that all elevator constructors who went out on strike May 1, 1909, should return to work at the rate of five dollars and twenty cents ($5.20) per day, which represents the wage demanded, and they shall work in peace and harmony with the machinists until such time as the Executive Council shall perfect the amalgamation plan adopted by the Toronto Convention, and in which we heartily concur.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) John R. Alpine,
J. W. Kilne,
Geo. L. Berry."

At our meeting January 10-15, 1910, we considered the report of the committee, together with the instructions given us by the Toronto Convention, that "the controversy in Chicago should be adjusted by the Executive Council of the A. F. of L." The following is taken from the minutes of our Executive Council meeting containing the decision and recommendations which we made thereon:

"The Executive Council having under consideration the controversy between the locals of the Elevator Constructors' Union and the locals of the International Association of Machinists, in Chicago, concerning the jurisdiction of their respective organizations, together with the report of the special committee appointed by authority of the Toronto Convention, submits to all parties at interest the following recommendations:

We are convinced that the best interests of the members of the Elevator Constructors' Union would be promoted and protected by pursuing the following course:

1. That all members of the Elevator Constructors' Union in Chicago who are now unemployed or who left the employment of the Otis Elevator Company about May 1, 1909, be given the opportunity of resuming work for that company at $5.20 per day, the wages demanded by them.

2. If the Otis Elevator Company has not a sufficient number of places open to give employment to all the members of the Elevator Constructors' Union, as provided above, that a sufficient number of members of the Machinists' Union be withdrawn from the places now filled by them, to make places for the members of the Elevator Constructors' Union.

3. That pending the further consideration of the question of amalgamation, members of the Elevator Constructors' Union and members of the International Association of Machinists should work in harmony and co-operation.

4. That if during this period the Otis Elevator Company should find it necessary to decrease its force in Chicago, the men to be first laid off should not be the members of the Elevator Constructors' Union.

5. We recommend and urge that the plan of amalgamation endorsed by the Toronto Convention should be submitted for ratification to the local unions of the Elevator Constructors' Union at the earliest practicable date, and in any event prior to April 1, 1910."

Copy of the report, findings and recommendations of the committee, together with the recommendations of the Executive Council, were transmitted to President O'Connell, of the International Association of Machinists, and to Secretary William Young, of the International Union of Elevator Constructors. The former, for the machinists, approved the same; the latter, for the elevator constructors, rejected them. We can make no further report upon this subject, as we have no further official information in regard thereto.

In connection with this entire subject, however, attention is called to the important features contained in the supplementary report the Executive Council had the honor to submit to the Toronto Convention upon the relations of the machinists and elevator constructors, and the plan for their amalgamation; also to the report of the committee having the subject in charge and the discussion by the convention thereon. The matter is published on pages 83, 119, 238, 241, 295, 297 of the proceedings of the Toronto Convention.

However, we understand that the situation in regard to the entire matter in dispute between the organizations involved has become more acute, and as the representatives of both organizations are now in this city, we intend to continue our efforts for an adjustment of the dispute between the two organizations.

Amalgamated Carpenters—U. B. of Carpenters.

The officers of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners, through Resolution No. 31, appealed to the Toronto Convention against the action of the convention of the Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L., held at Tampa, Florida, in October, 1909. The Toronto Convention referred the appeal to the Executive Council. We have given the matter much thought, discussion and consideration. President Gompers has had considerable correspondence with all parties involved. Acting upon our authority, he endeavored to arrange a conference between the representatives of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and the Amalgamated Society, in the early part of the year. After much correspondence the Amalgamated Society requested that the proposed conference should be deferred until some time in October, as that would give sufficient time for the American representatives of their General Council to return, as their constitution provides for their attendance at such conferences in England. This suggestion was also made by reason of the fact that at the meeting of the General Council of the Amalgamated Society in June, the question of the revision of their constitution would be dealt with and it was anticipated many changes would be made.

In the meantime the convention of the Brotherhood was held at Des Moines, Iowa, September 16-30. After the adjournment of that convention, Secretary Duffy submitted a letter to President Gompers. A copy of Secretary Duffy's letter, together with the exhibits to which reference is made therein, was submitted to the officers of the Amalgamated Society and to which they made answer.

This subject came before your Executive Council at our meeting since our coming to this city, and we in turn desire to submit the entire subject to this convention. All the exhibits and correspondence in connection with the case will be at the disposal of the committee to which the matter may be referred.

Resolution No. 31, of the Toronto Convention, together with all the matters pertaining to the subject, are to be found on pages 140, 141, 309, and 310, of the Toronto printed proceedings.

United Brotherhood of Carpenters—Amalgamated Wood Workers.

The Toronto Convention endorsed an agreement for the amalgamation of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the Amalgamated Wood Workers' International Union into one organization and instructed your Executive Council to carry into effect the details of the proposed agreement. At our meeting last March we directed our president that if either organization failed to ratify the agreement, he should call a conference of the executive officers of both organizations in conjunction with one member of the Executive Council, for the purpose of carrying out the instructions of the Toronto Convention.

President Gompers immediately entered into correspondence with the executive officers of both organizations with that purpose in view. The Executive Board of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters gave the opinion that as the plan of consolidation as authorized by the Toronto Convention is practically the same as previously adopted by the Minneapolis Convention and approved by a referendum vote of the entire membership of the United Brotherhood, under date of May 13, 1907, that that vote still stands, and that a matter once disposed of by referendum vote of the entire membership becomes the action of the entire organization unless ordered by the next general convention to be re-submitted for a vote. Later, after the national convention of the United Brotherhood, we were advised that the convention accepted the plan of consolidation with the Amalgamated Wood Workers as proposed by our last annual convention, the consolidation to take effect November 1, 1910.

The delegates from the Amalgamated Wood Workers' International Union, as shown by the official proceedings of the Toronto Convention, opposed the passage of the report of the Committee on Adjustment on this subject. The General Executive Council of the Amalgamated Wood Workers and the membership at large approved this action. The officers of the Amalgamated Wood Workers therefore expressed themselves as willing and ready to confer with the representatives of any body of organized workers with a view to the settlement of controversies, but they declined to enter into any conference with the U. B. of Carpenters with the object of effecting an amalgamation of the two organizations.

We were reluctant to exercise the implied power contained in the action of the Toronto Convention, in so far as concerned the revocation of the charter of the Amalgamated Workers, inasmuch as the United Brotherhood of Carpenters has accepted the Toronto agreement of amalgamation and the Amalgamated Wood Workers' International Union has rejected it, we recommend that unless the latter organization complies with the decision of the Toronto Convention of the American Federation of Labor and becomes amalgamated with the United Brotherhood of Carpenters on or before April 1, 1911, the action and decision of the Toronto Convention shall become effective on that date.

Brewery Workers, Firemen, Teamsters, and Engineers' Trouble.

In the report to the Toronto Convention we stated that comparative peace had prevailed between the above named organizations during the year we had passed and that there was only one controversy existing—that in New Orleans, La. At the March meeting of the Executive Council representatives of the United Brewery Workmen requested that a member of the Executive Council be delegated to proceed to New Orleans and, in conjunction with the representative of the Brewery Workers, endeavor to thoroughly organize the brewery workers of that city, it being understood that the brewery workmen would recognize the contract that the employing brewers had with the Teamsters' Union, and that any contracts entered into should terminate November 5, 1910, which is the date the teamsters' contract expired. At that time and at no time since has it been possible for any member of the Executive Council to go to New Orleans to take up this matter. The Executive Council voted that they will render every assistance in their power to bring about the organization of the brewers and bottlers of New Orleans.

In conformity with the agreement entered into between the Brewery Workers and the Steam Engineers' International Unions at Denver, 1908, and approved by the American Federation of Labor Convention in that city, a referendum vote was taken on Saturday, October 29, 1910, upon the question whether the engineers who are members of the Brewery Workers' International Union shall withdraw therefrom and become members of the International Union of Steam Engineers.

• The agreement provided that two representatives of the Brewery Workers and two selected by the Engineers' International Unions shall be appointed in each city or town in which brewery-engineers, members of the brewery workers, are employed. It further provided that the president of our Federation appoint one member for each city or town to act as inspector of the voting. The respective appointments have been made, the votes have been cast and transmitted to the brewery workers' headquarters at Cincinnati.

The balloting resulted as follows:

In favor of withdrawing from the Brewery Workers and joining the Engineers.....	62
Against withdrawing from the Brewery Workers and joining the Engineers.....	1,092
Blanks .....	5

Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers—Bridge and Structural Iron Workers.

The appeal to the Toronto Convention by the representatives of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers, Resolution No. 72, against the decision of the Tampa Convention of the Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L. in the jurisdictional dispute between that organization and the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, was referred to your Executive Council. This subject was taken up by the Executive Council in its regular order of business, and we decided that:

The action of the Tampa Convention of the Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L. was an interpretation of the decision of the Denver Convention of the Building Trades Department;

That, therefore, it was not in violation of the constitution of the Building Trades Department, and for that reason:

The appeal of the International Union of Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers against the Building Trades Department is denied.

Whereupon the executive officers of that international union served notice that an appeal would be taken to this convention. The entire subject should be given your thorough consideration and a decision rendered.

Sheet Metal Workers—Stove Mounters.

We desire to report to you that at our meeting in Toronto, after the adjournment of the Toronto Convention, the following agreement was entered into between the president of the Sheet Metal Workers International Alliance and the president of the Stove Mounters' International Union:

"Memorandum of understanding reached between Mr. M. O'Sullivan, president Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance, and Mr. D. W. Ottinger, president Stove Mounters' International Union:

"That the stove mounters will waive all claim to the name 'Steel Range' in their title, and that the stove mounters should proceed with the organization work as they had done heretofore prior to the jurisdiction controversy."

Since that time the officers of the Stove Mounters' International Union have made application for change in title so as to read "Stove Mounters and Range Workers' International Union." We recommend favorable consideration of this application for change in title.

Jewelry Workers' Jurisdiction.

The Toronto Convention directed the president of the A. F. of L. to have a thorough investigation made of the merits of the claims of jurisdiction made by the Jewelry Workers' International Union, through Resolution No. 20. The matter involved a great deal of correspondence with the various organizations whose interests were involved in the claims of the jewelry workers as set forth in this resolution. Finally, on June 23, a conference was arranged at the New York office of the A. F. of L. at which were the representatives of the Jewelry Workers' International Union, the International Brotherhood of Tip Printers, the International Typographical Union, the United Textile Workers of America, Badge Makers' Local No. 12,249, New York City; Badge Makers' Local No. 11,555, Jersey City, N. J., and Organizer Frayne of the A. F. of L. The Amalgamated Association of Sheet Metal Workers was invited to be represented at the conference, but failed to do so. As the result of the conference, the following understanding and agreement was reached:

"The work in the manufacturing of ribbon badges and ribbon fobs of all descriptions shall come under the jurisdiction of the badge makers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

"All badges coming under the jurisdiction of the badge makers' unions and bearing the label of the A. F. of L. must contain the name of the manufacturer printed on a tag attached to the back, said printed tag to bear the label of the Allied Printing Trades.

"All ribbon used in the manufacture of badges, fobs and other decorations, to be recognized as a union product bearing the label of the respective organizations on the metal parts and the label of the American Federation of Labor when used by the badge makers. So far as possible, preference to be given to ribbon made in organized mills whether using the label or not of the United Textile Workers of America.

"The stamped parts of badges, fobs, medallions, cross-bars, frames and buttons stamped from sheet metal such as tin, zinc, copper, brass, galvanized or black iron up to No. 10 gauge, belong to the jurisdiction of the sheet metal workers and must bear the label of that organization.

"Any badge or fob containing a metal button, bar or medallion must bear the label of the organization under whose jurisdiction they belong.

"All gold, silver or metal printing on any part of badges comes under the jurisdiction and belongs to the International Brotherhood of Tip Printers.

"The setting of all type for cold or hot printing of all description was conceded to the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union.

"All badges, medals and medallions that are stamped from gold, silver, bronze, brass, aluminum or other metals not in conflict with sheet metal workers' jurisdiction, and where the parts are assembled together by chains, loops or any other metal fastening, this work belongs to the jewelry workers and shall bear the label of that organization.

"The making of buttons of all descriptions, with metal backs or frames and celluloid fronts, shall come under the head of novelties and bear the label of the A. F. of L., besides the different parts coming under the jurisdiction of other unions must bear the label of these organizations before it can be recognized as a strictly union-made product. All descriptive printing and designs on buttons with celluloid fronts, mirrors, measuring tapes and other novelties composed of metal and celluloid, shall come under the jurisdiction of the Badge Makers' Union and bear the label of the A. F. of L., together with the organizations who make any part of the novelty before being assembled.

"All women and girls now members of the International Jewelry Workers' Union who work on ribbon badges or ribbon fobs, to be turned over to the Badge Makers' Unions in the jurisdiction in which they are located. The transfer shall be made without any additional initiation fee other than a transfer card. They shall be accepted on the presentation of said transfer card to the Badge Makers' Union in the jurisdiction in which they belong. This privilege of transfer to hold good for a period of sixty (60) days from date."

This agreement was approved by your Executive Council. We trust that this convention will endorse our action in this matter.

Pavers and Rammermen—Bluestone Cutters—Granite Cutters.

The International Union of Pavers, Rammermen, Flag-Layers, Bridge and Stone Curb Setters made application at the Toronto Convention for the right to accept and organize the bluestone cutters within their ranks. The entire subject matter contained in Resolution No. 58, together with the application, was referred by the Toronto Convention to a conference consisting of the representatives of the stone-cutting trades. In conformity with that direction, the representatives of the stone-cutting trades were invited to hold a meeting in New York City. The matter was fully gone over at the conference, and the following conclusion reached:

"1. That the propositions submitted by the bluestone cutters' delegates were contradictory in nature, infeasible and impracticable, and consequently did not meet our approval.

"2. That the request contained in Resolution No. 58, of the Toronto A. F. of L. Convention, to 'give the International Union of Pavers, Rammermen, Flag-Layers, Bridge and Curb-Stone Setters the right to accept and organize bluestone cutters, be refused; and, as the stone cutting in question and the tools used in doing it are identical with the tools and cutting of granite that the bluestone cutters make application to and become affiliated with the Granite Cutters' International Association, under its general constitution, and in accordance with its laws governing bluestone cutting.

"3. That this conference recommends to President Gompers that he immediately direct the pavers, rammermen, etc., to disassociate all bluestone cutters and bluestone cutting from their membership and jurisdiction, and that the Central Federated Union of New York be notified through President Gompers of the action of this conference and of his official notification to the pavers, rammermen, etc., that such action was necessary in accordance with the laws and forms of procedure in the American Federation of Labor.

"4. That in compliance with the above action, we recommend that the bluestone cutters be also given jurisdiction over bluestone flag-laying."

The Executive Council received and approved the finding and decision of the conference of the stone-cutting trades.

The International Union of Pavers and Rammermen was duly advised of this action, as was also the Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L. We further notified the New York Central Federated Union that it should refuse to recognize the delegates from the Bluestone Cutters' Union until such time as it should affiliate with the Granite Cutters' International Union.

Up to the time of the preparation of this report, the New York C. F. U. had not acted in conformity with the decision of your Executive Council, and neither has the Pavers and Rammermen's International Union. The latter organization gave notice of appeal to this convention, but we have held that inasmuch as the Toronto Convention referred this matter to the representatives of the stone-cutting trades, the action of the representatives of these organizations was binding upon all parties concerned.

The International Pavers and Rammerman's Union having refused to comply with the decision of the stone-cutting trades conference, we recommend that unless the Pavers and Rammermen's International Union complies with the decision on or before April 1, 1911, the charter held by that organization be revoked on that date. Also, that the New York C. F. U. be again informed to promptly comply with the laws and decisions of the American Federation of Labor and thereby prevent the penalty being imposed.

Hod Carriers and Building Laborers.

The Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor decided that a special convention should be held at which the representatives of the Hod Carriers and Building Laborers' International Union and the representatives of isolated local unions of building laborers and hod carriers should be represented; the latter locals to contribute their share in advance to bear their part of the expenses of such special convention. An insufficient number of these local unions contributed to insure anything like a successful convention, and the officers of the department, in conference with us, decided that they would not be justified in calling a special convention. However, it was agreed that a conference should be held at which the president of the department and the president of the American Federation of Labor should be in attendance. The conference was held, the representatives of the international and of a few locals being in attendance. Our president was otherwise engaged on other important matters, and directed Secretary Morrison to act in his stead. In some respects the conference was satisfactory, particularly in insuring the international of its entity and the support of the department, as well as the A. F. of L. itself.

We recommend that every possible effort be made to the end that all hod carriers and building laborers be brought under the jurisdiction of the international union.

Brass Molders.

The question of jurisdiction over brass molders as considered by the Toronto Convention under the provisions of Resolution No. 15 is as yet unadjusted. A conference was held between the representatives of the International Molders' Union and the representative of the metal polishers. The representative of the metal polishers stated that his international union would carry out the provisions of Resolution No. 15 on the following conditions:

"1. That brass molders and core-makers will be turned over to the Molders' International Union, if the Molders' International Union will accept all without any discrimination.

"2. That no initiation fee or any penalty of any character be required of brass molders transferred by the polishers to the Molders' International Union.

"3. That the same amount of funeral benefits to which these members are now entitled in the polishers' organization be granted to such transferred members by the iron molders immediately upon their transfer.

"4. That the brass molders shall have the right to regulate their own affairs in their own locals.

"5. That if the brass molders now in the polishers' organization refuse to transfer to the molders on above conditions, that in such case they will be put out of the polishers' organization."

The representatives of the International Iron Molders stated that they would permit the brass molders to have their own locals, regulate their own affairs, subject only to the limitations of the constitution of the International Molders' Union.

Considerable friction exists between these two organizations upon the questions at issue. We are confident that there is no obstacle to an adjustment of this dispute which can not be overcome if the matter is approached in a spirit of mutual good will.

Paper Hangers—Painters.

The Toronto Convention directed President Gompers to attend the convention of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers, which was held in Cincinnati the week beginning December 6, 1909, for the purpose of presenting to the convention the claims of the paper hangers, and that the terms of the agreement entered into between the paper hangers and painters for the amalgamation of the latter with the former be restored, and to which all should strictly adhere.

President Gompers attended the convention and addressed the delegates upon the subject. The convention referred the subject matter to a committee. It is gratifying to report that the committee's report was unanimously adopted. The delegates from the paper hangers' locals were entirely satisfied with the result.

International Ladies' Garment Workers' Strike.

On June 16, Secretary Dyche, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, appealed to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor for moral support and assistance in an anticipated strike against employers in New York City. Treasurer John B. Lennon was assigned to assist the union, and at a later period Organizer M. Grant Hamilton was also assigned for the same purpose. About July 1, the strike was declared and finally involved 85,000 men and women engaged in the ladies' cloak and suit-making industry. It lasted a long period, during which the president and secretary of the American Federation of Labor paid several visits to New York in connection therewith. A conference was held on August 2, at which were present the representatives of the American Federation of Labor—Messrs. Louis Brandeis, attorney; A. Lincoln Filene and Myer London, counsel for the organization. Negotiations were entered into in the direction of bringing about a settlement of the difficulty. In the meantime, 800 of the small employers had made a settlement with the organization and about 30,000 had resumed work. On September 2, however, a complete settlement was made by the representatives of the Employers' Association, agreeing to the terms set forth in the president's report to this convention.

This settlement was not made, however, until after an injunction had been granted the manufacturers by Justice Goff, of the supreme court of New York, in which he ruled that any strike called to demand the "closed shop" was illegal and in restraint of trade. This injunction was so unfair, unjust and ridiculous that even if the strike had not been ended to the satisfaction of the employees it would have necessarily fallen of its own weight. The conditions granted by the manufacturers to their employees are given in the president's report.

Unquestionably this was one of the greatest struggles in the history of the clothing trade, and much suffering was endured by those who were engaged in this difficulty. Even on the eve of the settlement eviction papers were on the point of being issued that would have thrown at least ten thousand men and their families out of their homes and onto the street.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union has won a splendid victory, and has recruited thousands of members and will gain others. This organization has made great progress and by wise direction is destined to become one of the strongest in the family of trade unions affiliated to the American Federation of Labor.

Paper Makers—International Paper Company.

The delegates from the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers at the Toronto Convention requested the assistance of the American Federation of Labor in its industrial controversy with the International Paper Company. This was the subject of much correspondence and discussion during the year on the part of the Executive Council and the officers at headquarters. We are exceedingly gratified to be able to report a satisfactory adjustment of the questions at issue between the company and the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers; the International Association of Machinists, the International Association of Steam Fitters and Helpers, the International Union of Steam Engineers and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. The agreement was also signed by an official representative of our Federation, who had been delegated to assist the several organizations in the trouble with the International Paper Company. The agreement was witnessed by a representative of the Board of Mediation and Arbitration of the State of New York.

The injunction secured by the company against the organizations was withdrawn, as was also the contemplated suit in the sum of $100,000 against the general officers of the paper makers.

Status of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers' Struggle With the United States Steel Corporation.

The complete history of the struggle with the United States Steel Corporation would fill volumes. It is not within the province of the Executive Council to go into exhaustive detail; neither its time nor the time of this convention can be so occupied, but the economic importance of the campaign that has been waged against this giant corporation is such that a condensed and concise chronological presentation of the efforts made must at least be given. The historical value of the following compilation of endeavors will be at once apparent:

1. The Toronto Convention adjourned November 20, 1909, and on November 27 President Gompers issued a circular letter to the officials of affiliated national and international unions, calling a meeting in Pittsburg, December 13, 1909, for the purpose of outlining the best course to pursue.

The conference prepared and issued two circulars to all affiliated unions on January 1, 1910, calling for financial assistance.

The conference recommended to all national and international unions that they assign at least one organizer to assist the Iron, Steel and Tin Workers and that the A. F. of L. place as many of its organizers as possible in the field for the same purpose. All such organizers to be directed to work under the assignments given by President McArdle, of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

Other recommendations by the conference were that the Executive Council should prepare and issue at stated periods additional circular letters appealing for aid and financial contributions. It was also recommended that the Amalgamated Iron, Steel and Tin Workers should amalgamate with the Tin Plate Workers' Association, to be known as the Amalgamated Iron, Steel and Tin Plate Workers' Association, and it was decided that the financial contributions on behalf of the workers of both organizations and all involved in the contest should be received by one officer. To this the representatives of both organizations agreed. Secretary-Treasurer Williams, of the amalgamated Association, was selected to receive such contributions. A special committee was appointed to wait upon the president of the United States, the president of the United States Senate and the speaker of the House of Representatives for the purpose of laying before them the grievances from which labor suffers at the hands of this corporation. The special committee was also instructed to demand a thorough investigation as to the legality of the actions and the existence under the law of the United States Steel Corporation.

The conference appointed special committees to wait upon the governors of States and other official representatives of counties and municipalities as are in control where the United States Steel Corporation has plants located, for the purpose of presenting to these officials the great wrongs inflicted upon the people of such communities and demanding that such wrongs be immediately righted.

A full report of this conference is contained in The American Federationist for January, 1910, entitled "Labor and the Steel Trust."

2. On January 6, 1910, the special committee appointed at the conference waited upon President Taft and submitted to him a written document containing formal and specific charges against the United States Steel Corporation. The president referred the same to Attorney-General Wickersham, who acknowledged receipt and asked for evidence. This document was printed in The American Federationist for February, 1910.

On February 18, and February 25, 1910, conferences were held with the attorney-general.

On February 17, 18, 19, Hon. Frank S. Monnett, former attorney-general of Ohio, and the Hon. A. G. Ballard, of Gary, Ind., visited headquarters and prepared the legal evidence in the case, which, together with the "Economic and Sociological Phases" prepared at headquarters, constituted the "Statement and Evidence in Support of the Petition and Charges Presented to the President of the United States Against the United States Steel Corporation by the A. F. of L." This document was printed in pamphlet form and submitted to the attorney-general of the United States, March 22, 1910. On March 28, 1910, he replied as follows:

"Washington, D. C., March 22, 1910.

"Mr. Samuel Gompers, President American Federation of Labor, 801 G St., N. W., Washington, D. C.:

"Sir: I have carefully examined the petition and charges presented by you to the president of the United States, against the United States Steel Corporation, and the statement and evidence referred to me under date of March 22, 1910. This statement involves consideration of two separate questions:

"1. Facts going to show that the United States Steel Corporation and its subsidiary companies, and their officers and directors, are engaged in a combination to restrain interstate and foreign trade and commerce in steel and iron and their products, and in endeavoring to monopolize the same.

"2. That a number of assaults and batteries, and acts of oppression, have been committed by officials of the steel corporation and its various subsidiary companies in different parts of the country. The evidence as to this latter class of offenses is also adverted to as illustrative of the monopolistic character of the combination maintained by the steel corporation and its subsidiary companies.

"Except as evidence of the last mentioned character, none of these acts would seem to be within the jurisdiction of the federal courts, but all of them, if the facts be as stated, would constitute offenses against the laws of the respective States where the particular transactions took place. As to the first and broader question, and, indeed, that which comprehends the entire matter presented, this department does not deem it expedient to take any action until the Supreme Court of the United States shall have decided the appeals now under consideration by it from the judgments of the circuit courts in the proceedings against the American Tobacco Company and the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, respectively. Both of those cases call for such a comprehensive construction and application by the court of the provisions of the Sherman Act, that it appears to me to be essential to await their decision before entering upon the consideration of the question whether or not the United States Steel Corporation and its subsidiary companies constitute a combination in restraint of trade, or an attempt to monopolize the interstate and foreign trade and commerce of the United States in products of iron and steel, within the meaning of the Anti-Trust Act of 1890.

"Respectfully,

(Signed) "Geo. W. Wickersham,
"Attorney-General."

3. In the meantime all the organizers that could be assigned by the international organizations to aid the iron, steel and tin workers were pressing their work forward to the best possible advantage. On March 1 and March 18, 1910, additional circulars were sent to the affiliated unions soliciting financial aid for the men on strike. While the struggle was being waged in the centers where the United States Steel Corporation had plants, a sudden revolt occurred among the unorganized workmen of the Bethlehem Steel Company, at Bethlehem, Pa., and several thousand workers came out on strike February 4.

1910. This upheaval aroused so much commotion that the United States Senate allowed a resolution to pass which had been introduced at the instance of the American Federation of Labor, authorizing the United States Bureau of Labor to make an investigation of the industrial troubles at Bethlehem. That investigation began on March 17, 1910, and on March 21, 1910, Judge Gary ordered the officials of all the subsidiary companies of the steel trust limiting Sunday, or seven-day, labor to a minimum.

The agitation by the men of labor and the revolt at Bethlehem compelled the autocratic United States Steel Corporation to give some recognition to the workers, so it peremptorily stopped unnecessary Sunday work on March 21, 1910. Next it announced, on April 15, 1910, an increase of 6 per cent in wages to most of the employees, and on April 16, 1910, the steel corporation announced that it would furnish compensation to its workers incapacitated by accident. None of these betterments is entirely satisfactory. Still they have come to thousands of the unorganized wholly and solely because of the militant campaign conducted by the organized workers.

4. On March 30, 1910, a delegation waited upon Governor Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana, and presented a bill of grievances with evidence against the United States Steel Corporation operating in Gary, Ellwood, etc., in Indiana, petitioning him to institute an investigation and proceedings against the corporation and its constituent companies, in so far as they operate illegally and improperly in the State of Indiana under the laws of the State, and to grant such other relief to labor as the laws will permit. Governor Marshall evinced great interest in the matter and promised to take it up with the legal department of the State. He requested to be furnished with a brief on the matter.

5. On June 18, 1910, under the provisions of House Resolution No. 732, passed by the House of Representatives, Attorney-General Wickersham was directed to investigate the United States Steel Corporation. This resolution was introduced in the House upon the request of the A. F. of L. It will afford the attorney-general every opportunity to disclose the inner workings of this corporation to congress. A more sweeping inquiry was asked for in House Resolution No. 813, but the speaker referred it to the Committee on Rules, where it lies buried.

On June 23, the United States Senate passed Senate Resolution No. 237, in which the United States Bureau of Labor is directed to investigate and report to the senate the industrial conditions prevailing in the iron and steel industry of the United States. This resolution was also introduced at the instance of the American Federation of Labor.

6. On or about September 1 the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers declared the strike off, but the International Tin Plate Workers' Protective Association decided to continue the struggle in the tin houses of the corporation.

Secretary-Treasurer Williams, of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, reported that a total of $39,649.41 was received by him on the A. F. of L. appeals for aid from affiliated unions.

It is recommended that during the approaching sessions of the legislatures in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Alabama, and elsewhere, the State authorities be urged to institute thorough investigations and proceedings against the corporation in so far as they are operating illegally and improperly within the respective States. And that further sociological investigations be made and necessary improved conditions be demanded.

Ohio Federation of Labor.

In Ohio there existed two State federations, one affiliated, the other without charter. Rivalry and antagonism existed. At our June meeting, Mr. Val Kanouse, a member of the International Association of Machinists, appeared and inquired whether any efforts which he might make toward the amalgamation of the two bodies would be agreeable to us. We assured him that this would not only be satisfactory, but that we were anxious for its completion.

Through his efforts and correspondence with President Gompers a conference was held by the representatives of both State bodies, but without successful results. Then, in accordance with our authority, he directed the representatives of the two bodies to again meet, and Secretary Morrison was delegated to attend the conference. After an entire day and late into the night conference, he succeeded in bringing about an amalgamation. The circular call for the convention of the unaffiliated body was withdrawn, and in compliance with the agreement President Gompers issued a circular to all local unions and central bodies of Ohio to meet in the convention of the affiliated State Federation of Labor of Ohio. The convention has been held and a united, solid phalanx presented of the organized workers of the State, to protect and promote the rights and interests of the workers within its borders.

Syracuse Situation.

As per your instructions at our last annual convention, in connection with the situation in Syracuse, N. Y., as set forth in Resolution No. 106, the matter received a great deal of our time and consideration during the year, as well as much correspondence from A. F. of L. headquarters. Vice-President Alpine was directed to proceed to Syracuse and act as the representative of the A. F. of L. We are glad to be able to report that the Trades and Labor Assembly of Syracuse has complied with the decision of the American Federation of Labor and that the officers of the plumbers have notified their local in Syracuse that it shall take immediate steps to become affiliated with the central body and with the local building trades section. Since then the International Association of Steam Fitters has protested against the action taken as regards local No. 104 of that city.

Buffalo Central Body.

By Resolution No. 92 of our last convention, charges were made against the United Trades and Labor Council of Buffalo to the effect that it had not been conducted in conformity with the laws of the A. F. of L. Upon investigation, the charges as set forth in Resolution No. 92 were denied in every part by the United Trades and Labor Council. Representatives of the A. F. of L. and representatives of the Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L. have devoted considerable time to the situation in Buffalo, in the hope of re-establishing unity and harmony in the movement there. The report of the representative of the A. F. of L. sustains the statement made by the United Trades and Labor Council that the Millwrights' Local Union, to which reference is made in Resolution No. 92, has not been represented in the central body since August, 1909.

Walters' Unions of San Francisco.

At the last convention a discussion arose as to the action of the San Francisco Labor Council, with which body a sum of money was deposited by a number of waiters' local unions of that city and of Oakland, Cal. The money entrusted to the central body was that which these locals withheld from payment to the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America, the international having suspended these locals for non-payment of per capita tax, the locals being willing to pay but contending that their rights were disregarded.

Through the instrumentality of Secretary Gallagher, of the San Francisco Labor Council, and a representative of the international union an agreement was reached that the question in dispute should be referred to President Gompers for decision, each party agreeing in advance to abide by that decision.

In the meantime the money held by the central body was transmitted to the headquarters of the international, and the unions placed in good standing. All parties in interest having agreed to the proposition, the entire subject was submitted to our president in briefs. They contained comprehensive and voluminous arguments and a great quantity of printed matter. President Gompers rendered his decision and the matter is now removed from the field of controversy.

Moving Picture Machine Operators.

agreement between the representatives of the Theatrical Stage Employees and the representatives of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in the matter of the disputed question of jurisdiction over moving picture machine operators. He met in conference with the representatives of both organizations on February 21. After a general discussion by representatives on both sides, it was mutually agreed that the entire matter should be referred to the Executive Council, whose decision would be final and binding upon both parties; and that the representatives of both organizations should file a brief of their respective cases within thirty days from the date of the conference. The brief of the Theatrical Stage Employees was duly filed. The Electrical Workers failed to file their brief and the matter still remains unsettled.

Upholsterers—Siegel-Cooper Company.

The last convention referred to us the proposition to bring about a better understanding between the Upholsterers' Union and the Siegel-Cooper Company, of New York. We entrusted President Gompers with the mission. He invited the co-operation of Vice-President Mitchell. They had a protracted and cordial interview with the representatives of the company which was followed by an interview of the representatives of the Upholsterers' Union with the company, at which a mutually satisfactory agreement was reached.

Chicago Building Trades Situation.

An exceedingly difficult situation presented itself in the division of the building trades unions of Chicago, one set of unions being represented in the Building Trades Council affiliated to the American Federation of Labor Building Trades Department, another set of unions being represented in what was called the Associated Building Trades Unions. Unions contended with unions for their field of activity and in one trade (painters) fought against other unions of the trade. A severe contest was waged, to the detriment of all.

At our request, President Gompers went to Chicago, and associated with him was Vice-President Alpine. The executive officers of several building trades unions were invited to come to Chicago. Conferences were held with them and with the representatives of both building trades bodies and the foundation laid for the final dissolution of the Associated Building Trades, whereupon the unions formerly therein represented attached themselves to the Building Trades Council. The unions of the trades which had fought each other were consolidated. An increase of wages followed and it is gratifying to report that there is greater unity, better feeling, and more fraternity in the Building Trades of Chicago than have existed there for a considerable period of time. In the accomplishment of this work the officers of the Chicago Federation of Labor rendered invaluable service.

Labor and Baseball.

The dispute between the Building Trades Council of Cleveland, Ohio, and the baseball club of that city was a subject of discussion at our last convention, and was referred to the Executive Council.

By reason of the friendly relations existing between Vice-President Mitchell and President Johnson of the American Baseball League, we authorized Brother Mitchell to endeavor to bring about an adjustment. His first efforts were unavailing, but finally, at a conference at which were present the representatives of the Building Trades Department and Central Body, Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Johnson, an agreement was reached by which every question in dispute was adjusted satisfactorily to all parties concerned. The agreement, which provides for union conditions, applies to all the parks of the American League.

Newspaper Solicitors' Union—San Francisco Call.

This matter has been before the Executive Council during the entire year. The controversy was brought about by the Newspaper Solicitors' Union demanding of the management of the San Francisco Call the recognition of that organization. This demand having been denied by the management of the Call, the Newspaper Solicitors' Association of San Francisco placed a boycott upon the Call, against which a protest was entered by the officers of the International Typographical Union, the International Printing Pressmen's Union, and the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union. An application for endorsement of the boycott was made to us. We obtained all the evidence available from all parties, with the result that the following decision was rendered and transmitted to the secretary of the Newspaper Solicitors' Union and other parties in interest at San Francisco:

"Upon the complaint of the officers of the International Typographical Union, the International Printing Pressmen's Union and the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union, against the action of the Newspaper Solicitors' Union No. 12,766, of San Francisco, Cal., for levying and prosecuting a boycott upon the San Francisco Call, it was moved and adopted that the officers of the American Federation of Labor be instructed as follows:

"1. To notify the Newspaper Solicitors' Union No. 12,766, of San Francisco, Cal., that it is a violation of the law and decisions of the American Federation of Labor for a local trade or federal labor union to levy or prosecute a boycott without the approval of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor.

"2. That Newspaper Solicitors' Union No. 12,766, having levied or prosecuted a boycott in San Francisco, they be informed that having done so without the authority of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, they are hereby directed to withdraw the action complained of upon the San Francisco Call immediately, and if after complying with this order the union still claims to have a grievance against that newspaper and presents same to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, it will be investigated and action taken thereon."

Notwithstanding the decision of the Executive Council, it is contended by the management of the San Francisco Call that the Newspaper Solicitors' Union and others, in violation of the decision rendered, continued to boycott that paper.

Communication was entered into between the management of the San Francisco Call and the officers of the union, urging them to meet in conference and adjust the differences which existed between the two parties in interest. The officers of the Newspaper Publishers' Association of San Francisco, of which the San Francisco Call is a member, have on several occasions insisted that the Newspaper Solicitors' Union is composed of men whose relations to the newspapers are of such a character that they ought not to be chartered by the American Federation of Labor as a union; that the charter issued to the union should be withdrawn; that the newspaper proprietors could not negotiate with the newspaper solicitors as a union; and the management of the San Francisco Call has declared it can not act as an individual institution against the declared attitude of the San Francisco Publishers' Association. Whatever protest may be made against the issuance to or the holding of a charter by the newspaper solicitors, we have held that a protest on the part of employers is not the one upon which we, on behalf of the American Federation of Labor, could base any action.

The justification of an action of any directly affiliated local union may properly come before the Executive Council for consideration and action, and as we have just stated, we have considered and acted upon the complaint made as to the actions of the union in question, but we can not pass upon the validity of an organization or its bona-fide character simply upon complaint of employers.

On the part of the union a complaint is made that the San Francisco Call has discriminated and is discriminating against members of the organization. The San Francisco Call management emphatically denies this.

The officers of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union, in a communication under date of September 16, state that they have been informed that another effort is being made to induce the San Francisco Labor Council to boycott the Call. They entered protest against the same, and submitted copy of the resolution adopted by the convention of the stereotypers and electrotypers. All the mechanical departments of the Call are organized and working under agreements with the various international unions in interest.

Every effort has been and is being made in the direction of bringing about a settlement of this controversy, to have it adjusted amicably and to the best interests of all concerned.

Hatters' Case.

On February 3, 1908, the Supreme Court of the United States rendered a decision declaring that under the terms of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, Loewe & Co., hat manufacturers, of Connecticut, could maintain an action against the members of the United Hatters of North America, because in their effort to obtain union conditions in the factory of that company the hatters sought to divert trade from Loewe & Co. to other hat manufacturers. Thereupon the suit brought by Loewe & Co., for the recovery of the three-fold damages they alleged they suffered, was remanded by the Supreme Court for trial. For months the attorney for the company traversed the continent in the taking of depositions. The counsel for the hatters necessarily were required to be present. On Monday, October 4, 1909, the trial began. It ended February 4, 1910. The judge instructed the jury to find for Loewe & Co., and they awarded damages in the sum of $74,000, which, being tripled, amounted to $222,000. They also awarded costs of the trial and the counsel fee for Loewe & Co. Counsel who conducted the case for the hatters, and counsel consulted since, claim that the rulings of the presiding judge were so at variance with legal procedure, that he showed such bias in his conduct of the case, that there can be no question but that the higher courts will reverse the findings and the award.

The question directly concerning us is the fact that the United Hatters of North America had been engaged in a great lockout running many months, involving the expenditure of enormous sums of money, but in which contest they were successful; that in the trial they had expended more than $100,000. Thus in their extremity they appealed to the Executive Council for such aid as our Federation could afford. Our Denver Convention adopted a series of preambles and resolutions in connection with the legal contest in which the hatters are engaged, as follows:

"Whereas, For the past five years the United Hatters of North America have been and are now contending with the non-union hat firm of D. E. Loewe & Co., of Danbury, Conn., to have established in said firm's factory humane conditions, to-wit: a fair earning power and reasonable working hours; and

"Whereas, The said firm of D. E. Loewe & Co., having instituted suit against the United Hatters of North America, under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, for two hundred and forty thousand dollars ($240,000.00); and

"Whereas, The said firm of D. E. Loewe & Co. has caused to be attached the homes and personal savings of two hundred and fifty (250) members of the United Hatters of North America; and

"Whereas, The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that the firm of D. E. Loewe & Co. would be entitled to damages if the court finds that the company has suffered loss by reason of the withdrawal of the patronage of organized labor and its friends; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in Twenty-eighth Annual Convention assembled, do hereby pledge to the United Hatters of North America, and especially to the two hundred and fifty (250) members of that organization whose homes and bank accounts are attached, moral and such financial support as may be necessary in the pending contention; and, be it further

"Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor is hereby authorized and instructed to take such action as will at the proper time carry these resolutions into effect."

It may not be amiss to call attention to the fact that during the trial the counsel for Loewe & Co. undertook to impress upon the jury and court that the men who were sued would not have to bear the brunt of the damages which might be awarded, but that the damages would be borne by the members of the organizations affiliated to the federation. This contention was not denied or controverted by counsel for the hatters.

The officers of the Hatters' Union, with their counsel, appeared before us at our meeting in the early part of the year for the presentation of this matter to our consideration, and to attain the financial assistance wherewith the opportunity could be presented for making the appeal. We took the ground that the Denver convention, in adopting the resolution it did upon the subject, did not contemplate or even have in mental reservation the possibility of meeting and paying the damages or contributing toward any damages which a jury might award. Our federation is not a financial institution and could not, under any circumstances, assess the members of our affiliated organizations or obtain voluntary contributions sufficient to meet such a demand. Our position on this question was cordially accepted. We were convinced, however, that the Denver Convention instructed the Executive Council to render not only moral but such financial support as might be necessary in the pending cases. In compliance therewith, on April 10, we levied an assessment upon each affiliated organization to the extent of 2 cents per member thereof, this to be exclusively used in counsel fees, printing, etc., involved in such appeals as may be necessary to be made. The assessment was levied and the amounts received therefrom are accounted for in the secretary's report. One of the conditions upon which all parties agreed was that the Executive Council, with the officers of the United Hatters of North America, both in the selection of counsel and the manner and matter of the appeals, should have the authority to have the cases conducted.

We authorized the retention of the chief counsel in the original case, Hon. John K. Beach, and then retained Hon. Frank L. Mulholland, of Ohio, and who later had the consulting advice of Hon. Alton B. Parker, of New York. The records were necessary to be printed, and they consist of five volumes, amounting to 2,770 pages in all. The cost of printing these records thus far has been $3,000. We are hopeful, and counsel advise us that the higher courts will beyond a doubt reverse the decision and award of the lower court.

Assessments Levied—Appeals Endorsed.

We have received a number of applications requesting that assessments be levied upon the affiliated organization. We realize the situation in which many of our international unions are placed and also the fact that they themselves have been engaged in trade disputes which have taxed their ability to meet their obligations and their duty to their fellow craftsmen. We, therefore, did not feel warranted in levying such assessments despite our earnest desire to be helpful in this as well as in every other way to our struggling fellow workers. The only assessment which we levied during the year was one of an essential character, and as we have already reported was for the prosecution of the appeals in the hatters' case—the case by which the members of the United Hatters were mulcted in the sum of $222,000.00.

We endorsed the appeals for financial aid for the following named organizations:

Appeal for Swedish Workers.

Iron and Steel Workers.

South Bethlehem, Pa., Iron and Steel Workers.

International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

United Mine Workers of America.

At Peace With the Buck's Stove and Range Company.

At our June meeting, Vice-President Valentine called attention to the fact that by reason of the demise of Mr. J. W. Van Cleave, the Buck's Stove and Range Company went into the hands of a new management and that an opportunity was afforded to successfully renew the efforts at the adjustment of the dispute with the company where it had failed some years before under the old management. We authorized him to make such effort as he could; that we were desirous, as we always have been, of coming to an honorable adjustment of any difficulty which we might have with employers. Through his efforts a conference was held at Cincinnati, July 19, 1910, at which officers of the Stove Founders' National Defense Association, representing the Buck's Stove and Range Company, conferred with the following representatives of labor: Joseph F. Valentine and John P. Frey, representing the International Moulders' Union of North America; T. M. Daly and Charles R. Atherton, representing the Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers and Brass Workers' International Union of North America; Frank Grimshaw and J. H. Kaefel, representing the Stove Mounters' International Union; George Bechtold, representing the International Brotherhood of Foundry Employees, and Samuel Gompers, representing the American Federation of Labor. The conference lasted all day and until late in the night, and an agreement reached. The agreement was published in the September issue of the American Federationist. This agreement was carried out by two subsequent agreements, one in the matter of the labor conditions which were to prevail in the company's plant, and in the other changing the original agreement by which the attorneys of the company should be withdrawn from the case pending before the United States Supreme Court. The new management of the company has declared that it has always been its policy to live in terms of good will and friendly relations with organized labor and that it proposes to continue to conduct its business affairs on these lines in the future. We deemed it our duty to state to organized labor, its friends and sympathizers, that the industrial struggle between labor and that company has come to an end by mutual honorable adjustment, and that the company, like all other employers fairly disposed toward organized labor, is entitled to the courtesy, consideration and patronage of all.

Injunction and Contempt Cases.

The appeals to the United States Supreme Court in the injunction growing out of the former dispute with the Buck's Stove and Range Company, and the contempt cases by which President Gompers, Vice-President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison were sentenced to twelve, six and nine months' imprisonment, respectively, are fully covered in the reports which our president and secretary have submitted, and hence need no further presentation on our part in this report. The Executive Council requests this convention shall approve every effort put forth to test before the courts the rights to which labor is justly entitled. Our counsel have expressed their full confidence that the United States Supreme Court will take a broad, enlightened view of the inherent and constitutional principles involved in these appeals.

Injunction and Boycott Pamphlet.

As per instructions of the last convention, we caused to be printed and published a pamphlet containing Vice-President Mitchell's address. In addition thereto it was deemed advisable to publish in the same pamphlet a compilation of the reports of the Executive Council and President Gompers to the Toronto Convention, together with the report of the Committee on President's Report, and the report of the Committee on Boycotts. The pamphlet contains an editorial from The American Federationist, "Labor's Contention on Injunctions;" part of the report made to the Norfolk Convention on "Man's Ownership of Himself;" "Some Expert Opinions on Injunctions;" and extracts from an address by Hon. S. S. Gregory, former president of the American Bar Association, to the 1909 graduating class of John Marshall Law School, of Chicago; 1908 decision of the Montana Supreme Court; an epic on injunctions, "Why Injunctions Should Not Apply," by Hon. Edward J. Livernash; and extracts from "Labor's Protest to Congress," presented March 19, 1908. The pamphlet is a most interesting one. Supplementary to the issuance of that pamphlet we issued another containing the dissenting opinion of Mr. Chief Justice Shepard of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia in the contempt case of "Gompers-Mitchell-Morrison," as well as a comprehensive article by former Judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, Hon. Henry Clay Caldwell, entitled "Trial by Judge and Jury." Large numbers of these pamphlets have been forwarded to labor men and to students, without cost. A small price has been placed upon them for sale, just sufficient to cover the cost of printing and forwarding.

Legislation.

Both in our meetings and through correspondence the Executive Council has discussed the subjects of legislation and the means whereby we could carry out the directions of the American Federation of Labor, and in some instances we have initiated it. Particularly is this true in regard to the Wilson Bill, H. R. 25,188. This bill, which is pending before the House, is the result of full discussion and consideration and is what is regarded as an improvement in every respect on former bills. Its purpose is to remedy the abuse of the writ of injunction in labor disputes and to restore to the organized effort of the workers the rights of which they were deprived by the interpretation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

Attention should be called to the fact that the Labor Representation Committee, consisting of President Gompers, Vice-President O'Connell and Secretary Morrison held frequent conferences. In addition a number of conferences were held by them with ten of the members of the House of Representatives who are members in good standing in their respective unions. The subjects of legislation in the interest of the workers were thoroughly discussed at these conferences and plans formulated for their enactment into law. It was at one of these conferences that the suggestion was made for the change in the Wilson Bill and approved by us, and later introduced in the House.

The Labor Representation Committee invited a number of members of the House of Representatives to attend a conference for the purpose of having presented to them legislation affecting the rights and interests of the workers. Forty-seven members of the House of Representatives attended. A number of others were unable to attend by reason of absence from Washington. The following also participated in the conference: Andrew Furuseth, of the Seamen's Union; Thomas Tracy, secretary of the Union Label Trades Department; Wm. J. Spencer, secretary of the Building Trades Department; A. E. Holder, A. F. of L. legislative committeeman; John Colpoys, president Washington Central Labor Union; D. F. Manning, of the Retail Clerks' Union; Luke Ludlow, of the Washington Central Labor Union.

President Gompers was called upon to lay labor's case before the conferees, which was subsequently discussed. A number of representatives in Congress participated in the discussion and declared their purpose to do all within their power to be helpful. While no action was taken binding upon the participants in the conference, the general consensus of opinion was that advantage should be taken of every parliamentary opportunity presented, or such opportunity should be created, whereby the Wilson Bill could be brought before the house for discussion and passage.

Just before the close of Congress, and during the time of our Executive Council meeting in June, we invited a number of representatives in Congress who were the most ardent advocates of our cause to meet with us, when there was an interchange of views upon the situation and a campaign for the future outlined. The members of our Executive Council, particularly those at headquarters, with the Legislative Committee, have been active in the work of furthering the interests of our fellow-workers through legislation. We directed that Brothers Gompers, O'Connell and Morrison be constituted the A. F. of L. Labor Representation Committee, and we submit their report herewith. We present that committee's report as made to us and submit it to the consideration of this convention and to our fellow-workers and friends generally. In view of the fact that President Gompers has in his report submitted in detail the various matters of legislation in which we are particularly interested, it is not necessary that we should discuss the subject further in this report.

We should add that we deemed it inadvisable to make a general appeal for funds in order that the Labor Representation Committee could conduct the campaign outlined by our federation to defeat hostile members of Congress and State Legislatures and to elect labor men or those committed to our cause.

We, however, authorized and directed Secretary Morrison, in the name of the Executive Council, to request a number of international unions to contribute a specific small amount, in order that some funds might be at the disposal of the Labor Representation Committee for printing, postage and the sending of a number of men to important points. The total amount voluntarily contributed by the internationals was $2,-829.49.

We now submit:

Labor Representation Committee's Report.

St. Louis, Mo., November 14, 1910.

To the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor:

Colleagues—We herewith submit to you, and through you to the Convention of the American Federation of Labor, a report of our stewardship of the matters confided by the American Federation of Labor to you and by you to the undersigned.

Two years ago, acting upon the authority and by the directions of the Convention of the American Federation of Labor, you selected the members of the Executive Council located at Washington as the Labor Representation Committee, and authorized and directed this committee to carry on labor's political campaign in the furtherance of the purposes, principles and rights upon which the American Federation of Labor had made declaration. We were at all times to act in consonance with these declared policies and subject to your further direction and approval. From time to time we have made report to you, the substance of which was conveyed to the conventions.

During the meetings of the Executive Council in the early part of the year you instructed us to inaugurate and conduct an active campaign to the full limit of our opportunities. We have had many meetings, the details of which were conveyed to you both by correspondence as well as at our meetings. It is impossible here to recount all in detail. Suffice it to say that we have endeavored to carry out all the instructions of the American Federation of Labor, as well as yours; that is, to endeavor to elect labor men, or men friendly disposed toward and pledged to the organized labor movement in the demand for the justice and equality before the law to which labor is entitled, but which it has been denied; to defeat labor's opponents, particularly those who have proven themselves hostile to the cause of labor and justice.

Our Federation directed that special effort should be made in regard to candidates for Congress and State legislatures. This we have done to the fullest limit of our opportunities, first in the primary nominations and second in the recent campaign and elections.

Realizing the necessity of some funds with which to carry on this work, the various means by which such funds could be obtained within the legitimate domain of our movement, the Executive Council, in consequence of several industrial disputes, deemed it inadvisable to appeal to local unions or the members of organized labor as individuals to make financial contributions to such a fund. You authorized us to make a request upon the officers of affiliated International Unions for some specific small contribution from each. This request was made by Secretary Morrison in your name.

We have received from the International Unions and a few small contributions, the following amount:

Total receipts.....	$3,488.48
Expenditures .....	3,148.73

Balance on hand, Nov. 9, 1910...$ 339.75

The expenditures were partially for organizers in conducting the campaign, but largely for printing literature and postage.

We sent out a number of circulars at stated periods, calling the attention of our fellow-workers to the great importance of the pending nominations and elections for members of Congress and State legislatures. This was continued until a few days before the recent elections. Perhaps one of the most effective documents which we printed was the one giving the record votes of congressmen upon the now well-known Hughes Amendment to the Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill, more than a quarter of a million of which were circulated throughout the country.

We are not yet in a position to give the definite results of our efforts. Realizing that the press was not likely to publish the specific information in regard to the election of labor men, or men pledged to the support of labor in its demands for legislation, we authorized Chairman Gompers to issue a letter to the officers and organizers of the labor movement of the country, requesting them to fill in blanks which were furnished, giving the names of Congressmen and members of the State legislatures who were elected and who were nominated or endorsed by labor, or those who were known to be favorable to labor's demands.

Two hundred and seventy-five replies have been received since our arrival in St. Louis. They are now being tabulated and we hope to be in a position to make a report to you before the close of the St. Louis A. F. of L. Convention.

We have said that we have no definite information, and yet from the knowledge which has come to us we are now in a position to say that considerable success has attended labor's effort in the national and state legislative field.

Though our activities were devoted to congressional and state legislative candidates, yet incidental to the activities of the workers, many labor men have been elected to offices of importance in State and municipal governments.

Summing up, we may say that labor has cause for gratification at the results achieved; and we take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation of our fellow workers and friends for the active co-operation and earnest work in the political field in the cause of economic and industrial rights and human liberty.

Fraternally yours,

Samuel Gompers, Chairman,
James O'Connell, Vice-Chairman,
Frank Morrison, Secretary.

Labor Representation Committee,
A. F. of L.

We present this report of the Labor Representation Committee with our full approval and expression of appreciation of the efforts which they put forth in the interests of our cause.

Uniform Laws to Protect Human Life.

At the conference held in the city of Washington, January 17-19, 1910, to consider "Uniform State Legislation," representatives of the Executive Council were in attendance. President Gompers and Vice-President Mitchell addressed the conference and other representatives of labor joined in the discussions. The Toronto Convention directed the Council "to devise ways and means to establish uniform laws to protect human life in the various States," and to this end the following resolutions were introduced by the representatives of labor and were adopted by the conference:

"Resolved, That this conference recommend to the governors, the adoption of uniform laws for the protection of children employed in industries.

"Whereas, The present remedies for compensation for industrial accidents throughout the various States are slow, uncertain, and wasteful; and

"Whereas, There is not, and can not be, any equitable solution thereof, based only on fault of the employer; and

"Whereas, Twenty-three of the more progressive commercial nations abroad have bettered, and in some instances solved, the problem on the basis of Workmen's Compensation Acts; and

"Whereas, We believe that such acts can be adequately substituted for our present laws and applied to our institutions with equal satisfaction and profit; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That this conference recommend to the governors of the several States now assembled in this city, and to the States, that Workmen's Compensation Acts, fair to the employer and employe and just to the State, be uniformly substituted for the present system of Employers' Liability for injuries received in and arising out of the course of employment."

"Whereas, The increasing loss of life in American mining operations and the enormous waste of resources essential to both the present and future welfare of the nation, plainly indicate the need of more uniform, rational, and enforceable mining laws and regulations in each of the several mining States; and

"Whereas, There is now pending before the Congress of the United States a bill to establish a Bureau of Mines in the Department of the Interior, for inquiry and investigation, to aid in the accomplishment of these purposes; now, therefore, be it Resolved, By the National Conference on Uniform Legislation that we earnestly urge upon the governors of the several States the importance of co-operating with the federal government to procure uniformity upon which intelligent State legislation may be based."

It behooves all interested in the cause of the protection of human life and in the interests of the people generally and the workers particularly to see to it that the largest measure of legislation, uniform in character, shall be enacted by the several States of our country.

Organized Farmers.

Our last annual convention directed that efforts be continued to promote amicable relations between farmers' unions and organized labor. With that object in view, President Gompers, as the representative of the A. F. of L., attended a convention of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of America, held at St. Louis, May 2-6. As a matter of future record for the proceedings of this convention, as well as of interest, we incorporate herein the report of the committee appointed by that convention to consider the subject of establishing relations between organized farmers and organized industrial workers. This report was adopted by the convention. It is as follows:

"First. In so far as the Farmers' Union and its constitution permits, we, for our organization and the great rank and file which we have the honor to represent, pledge to our fellow workers in industrial pursuits the best efforts we can exert, to the end that their rights and liberties in common with our own shall be secured and maintained against any and all attempted encroachments.

"Second. That the officers of the Farmers' Union be and they are authorized and directed to confer with the officers of the bona-fide organized labor movement of America, with the purpose of carrying into effect the objects of our respective organizations, the protection and uplift of America's workers engaged in all fields of productive activity.

"Third. That we will give our preference to the product of the industrial workers who manifest their intelligence to protect themselves by organization and urge the reciprocal purchase of farm products, the labor of union farmers.

"Fourth. That our officers and legislative committee co-operate with similar officers and committees of organized labor to secure such relief and reformatory legislation as may be necessary to the rights, protection and freedom to which the workers as men and as citizens are, under our constitution, entitled.

"Fifth. That without regard to political partisanship we join in the effort to secure larger representation in our national, State and local law-making bodies, men who are engaged in the creative industries.

"Sixth. That our efforts in the directions herein stated and indicated shall apply to the country, the States and to the municipalities, and that we co-operate with organized labor in every field of activity which may be fruitful of beneficent results to the American wealth producers, the manhood, womanhood and childhood of our country."

We recommend the continuation of efforts to more firmly establish co-operative relations between organized farmers and organized labor.

Industrial Education.

The special committee, created by authority of the Denver convention to study and report upon the subject of industrial education, made its report to the Toronto Convention. That report was referred to a special committee which, in turn, made report. In compliance with instructions, we caused to have these reports printed in pamphlet form. They have been widely circulated and have been regarded by the best educators and thinkers upon the subject as the best expressed word upon industrial education.

Upon Labor's request, the Federal Bureau of Labor has undertaken a comprehensive investigation of the subject, and Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, who recently died, introduced a bill at our instance to promote industrial education. We have met with the special committee and discussed the ways and means to further the cause embraced under this heading.

We recommend that the special committee created by authority of the Denver Convention be continued, and that they be urged and authorized to prosecute their investigation and to lend every assistance to the accomplishment of the extension and completion of comprehensive industrial education in every field of activity. We suggest that this report, together with the report of the president on the subject, as well as the Dolliver Bill, and the pamphlet to which which we refer, be submitted to a special committee for consideration and report to this convention.

Investigation of Women and Child Labor.

The Toronto Convention adopted a resolution petitioning the Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor to establish in the Bureau of Labor a specific department for the investigation of the conditions of women and child labor in the industries of our country. President Gompers corresponded upon this subject with the Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor and with the Commissioner of Labor. Later, he, together with Vice-Presidents Mitchell, O'Connell and Secretary Morrison, had an interview with the Secretary and Commissioner and they were assured that the matter of the establishment of a permanent bureau would be fully considered and more than likely favorably determined.

As to the appointment of a woman as the head of the bureau, as further petitioned in the resolution of the Toronto Convention, they expressed the opinion that the only question they had to determine would be that of competency, rather than sex.

We recommend that authority should be given to continue the effort to secure the establishment of this bureau.

Conservation of Natural Resources.

The Toronto Convention authorized the continuation of the A. F. of L. Committee on the Conservation of Natural Resources. Correspondence with the National Conservation Association has been continued. The Second Annual Conservation Congress was held in St. Paul, Minnesota, September 6-9, at which splendid work was outlined.

We have during the year kept in touch with the work being done by the Conservation Committee, and in correspondence with the officers. We recommend the continuation of the Federation Conservation Committee during the coming year.

Civil Service Employees Bridled.

In response to the instructions contained in Resolution No. 96 and at the request of the American Federation of Labor, bills specifically guaranteeing to employees of the United States Government all of their civil rights, were introduced in Congress by Senator Jones and Representative Poindexter, both of Washington. The bills were referred to the appropriate committees on civil service reform. Many efforts were made to secure consideration of these bills by the committees. The chairman of the Senate Committee, although engrossed with other measures, made several endeavors to secure a meeting of the committee to consider the bill introduced by Senator Jones, but without avail.

The House Committee failed to give the Poindexter Bill, H. R. 19,546, any consideration, partly because it seemed anxious to secure retirement legislation for which it was claimed civil service employees made an insistent demand, and partly because it was claimed no particular interest was manifested by civil service employes in the Poindexter bill.

The federal executive orders issued are being rigidly enforced in the Post Office Department more pronouncedly than in any other of the federal departments. Post office employes are prohibited from exercising their most valued personal rights; they dare not post bulletins, circulate information, make complaints to or petition Congress for relief from injustice or to secure improved conditions; they are not permitted to actively identify themselves with city central bodies, or in any normal way express disapproval of onerous conditions under which they are employed, without running the risk of being discharged. Silence is the order imposed upon the post office employes, and implicit obedience is rigidly enforced.

It now remains for the American Federation of Labor to champion the interests of these faithful public servants more vigorously than ever, and during the next session of Congress urge representatives and senators to so revise the federal statutes that government employes may be guaranteed the right of exercising all of their inherent citizenship rights without interference or fear of being discharged—notwithstanding adverse executive orders or departmental rulings.

Union Label Law Digest.

We had hoped to be able to report to you the completion of the compilation and its publication of the Union Label Law Digest, but for unavoidable reasons the matter is not yet in print, although much of the manuscript copy has been completed. It is hoped that in the near future the book will have been printed and ready for distribution.

Affiliation with International Secretariat.

As directed by the Toronto Convention, the American Federation of Labor has now become affiliated with the International Secretariat, which is constituted by the trade union movement of the following countries: Great Britain, France, Germany, Netherlands, Belgium, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland, Austria, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Hungary, Croatia-Slavonia, Serbia, Bulgaria, Switzerland, Italy, Spain and the United States.

Considerable correspondence has passed and much information mutually imparted which has been helpful for the cultivation of the best possible fraternal relations between the workers of the civilized world.

Last year a communication was received at Paris by the International Secretary, Mr. Legien, but it was received too late by him for submission to the Congress, as he declared he had not the sufficient time to have it translated into the different languages. It was therefore decided that he should in due time send copies to the different countries translated into their respective languages. The nature of the document was entirely unknown to anyone at the Paris Congress. When copy of the letter was received at Washington, it was found that it emanated from the so-called Industrial Workers of the World and contained most unwarrantable and maliciously false accusations against the American Federation of Labor, its affiliated organizations, and their best known representatives. Realizing the fact that a charge made and repeated sufficiently often which is undenied or unexplained will find some believers, President Gompers replied by defending the A. F. of L., its affiliated organizations and representative men, but declined to say anything in his own defense against the aspersions cast upon him. Later, this so-called Industrial Workers' organizations, the only important part of which is its presumptuous title, entered protest against the A. F. of L. being accorded affiliation with the International Secretariat, and demanded for itself that affiliation for the United States. The International Secretariat furnished us with a copy upon which this protest and application are predicated.

Before our affiliation to the International Secretariat scandalous accusations without having any basis in fact or truth and malicious misrepresentations were sent broadcast throughout the world to the trade unionists and other organized workers of these countries—sent by the enemies of the American trade union movement—the enemies to the progress and success for the protection and promotion of the interests of the toilers of our continent. Since our affiliation to the International Secretariat we are kept advised of such calumnies and misrepresentations which at least we will receive in an official capacity. The International Secretariat has notified the American Federation of Labor, and at the same time officers of other international trade union centers, that the subject will receive the consideration of the Congress of the International Secretariat, which is to be held in Budapest in August, 1911. In view of all circumstances we realize the advantage, as well as the necessity, of America's organized workers to be in full affiliation with the International labor movement of the world under the auspices of the International Secretariat.

We recommend that a delegate be selected by this convention to attend the Congress at Budapest in 1911.

We also recommend that the following, which we authorized President Gompers to submit to the Paris Congress in 1909 and which the Congress referred to the forthcoming Congress and which was approved by the Toronto Convention, be an instruction to the delegate from the American Federation of Labor to the Congress of the International Secretariat at Budapest, 1911:

Resolved, That the International Trade Union Congress recommends to the trade union centers (General Federation of Congresses) of all countries the discussion of the proposition of establishing an international federation of labor, the autonomy of the trade union movement of each country being ordained and guaranteed, the purpose of the federation being for the protection and the advancement of the rights, interests and justice of the wage-workers of all countries and the establishment of international fraternity and solidarity.

Resolved, That it shall be the purpose of the labor movement of all countries to endeavor to the fullest extent to prevent the workers from one country being induced to emigrate to other countries during periods of industrial depression or when trade disputes exist or are in contemplation; that it shall be the duty of the recognized representatives of the labor movement of the country affected to notify the international secretary, who in turn shall at once communicate the situation to the representatives of the trade union movement of each country.

We also recommend that such delegate be instructed to secure action from the Congress that shall put an estoppel to the promulgation, at least through an official source, to the scandalous misrepresentation of the labor movement from one country into another.

The affiliation of the American Federation of Labor to the I. S. was effected by the unanimous vote of the Toronto Convention, per capita tax having been paid for the years 1909-10, 2,382 marks, or $567.21. The official printed proceedings of the Paris Congress of the International Secretariat held in 1909 at Paris, have been sent to the executive officers of affiliated national and international unions. Additional copies can be secured from the International Secretariat through the A. F. of L. upon the payment of twenty-five cents, which includes postage. The report for the year, which our President had the honor to submit on behalf of the A. F. of L., is also incorporated in the proceedings of that Congress.

American Federation of Labor Office Building.

The conventions have several times specifically authorized the Executive Council to erect an office building for the American Federation of Labor, and provided a part of the means for the construction of such a building. We have given the subject much thought and investigation, and we have heretofore reported to you upon it. We have paid $4,107.00 rental for the A. F. of L. offices for the last fiscal year. That would be slightly over four per cent on $100,000. We receive three per cent on that amount now from the banks.

There are obstacles to overcome, but we feel that the amount heretofore authorized to be devoted from the funds for such a structure is insufficient to the erection of an office building which will not only afford ample convenient office room, but will permit of the renting of some offices in such a building which will contribute toward the payment or the minimizing of the A. F. of L. office expenses.

The Executive Council has endeavored to obtain expert opinion as to plan, space and expense of such a structure and should continue these efforts and report to the next convention the progress made.

Wages and Production Ratio.

In accordance with Resolution No. 36, we authorized the communication with the Census Bureau to affirm, correct, or explain the purport of the resolution relating to the average wages and the average value of production. The director of the Census Bureau made answer which was incorporated in an editorial in the June issue of The American Federationist, under the caption, "Statistics Which Lead to Varying Conclusions."

Convention Date.

As we already reported, we have been more active in recent years in the political field than heretofore. Considerable success has attended our efforts, but our endeavors have been materially handicapped by the fact that our Federation conventions are held exactly six days after the general elections throughout the country. Because of the necessary time required of our officers in preparatory work for our conventions, they can scarcely give any attention to the political work outlined and demanded by direct instructions of our Federations conventions. In other words, at the time when Labor's efforts are needed on the political field in carrying out the campaign, our officials must of necessity either abandon or at best give cursory attention to these important considerations and actions at the time when their services would be of greatest importance.

The first two Federation conventions were held in November. In 1883 and 1884 conventions were held. This date was changed in 1884 to December, and in 1901 again changed to the present time, the second Monday in November. The reason given for the last change was that our conventions sometimes interfered with the delegates' preparations for the Christmas holidays. The fact now is that our present date of holding conventions interferes not only with the preparation and celebration of Thanksgiving Day, which is quite manifest now, but it materially interferes with the most effective work during the most important time in connection with the political activity of the workers in furtherance of the cause of labor.

Having all these facts in mind, we recommend that the date for holding the annual conventions of the A. F. of L. be set for the third Monday of November in each year.

Convention City.

Your attention is called to the fact that we are at times confronted with many vexatious questions in making preparations for conventions in the cities in which it is designated the conventions shall be held. Time and again representations are made to conventions for the selection of a city in which the next convention should be held, and though often they are founded upon fact, sincerity and good faith, it not infrequently happens that the entire situation is changed before the time has arrived for the making of arrangements for the then forthcoming convention. The fact has impressed itself upon our minds, particularly in recent years, that the labor movement of any city which through its delegates presents a city for the holding of conventions, should be required to guarantee on behalf of the local labor movement of their cities that the promise for necessary and adequate accommodations for the holding of the convention shall be fulfilled.

Conclusion.

As you realize, it is not possible in the confines of a report such as this to go as fully into the year's work as is desirable; it has been our endeavor to pass in review before you those subjects and matters which have appealed to us as being of the most vital interest and greatest moment to our movement. We earnestly hope that they will be given the thoughtful and careful consideration of this convention. To place the trade unions of the American Federation of Labor upon a still more exalted plane; to be of yet further and greater advantage to our fellows; to aid to the fullest in securing material, economic, social, and moral conditions for the toiling masses and for all our people, is the mission of our great movement. To the attainment of these high aims and purposes, we, the members of your Executive Council, have devoted the best efforts of which we are capable.

Fraternally submitted,

Samuel Gompers, President,
James Duncan, First Vice-President,
John Mitchell, Second Vice-President,
James O'Connell, Third Vice-President,
D. A. Hayes, Fourth Vice-President,
Wm. D. Huber, Fifth Vice-President,
Jos. F. Valentine, Sixth Vice-President,
John R. Alpine, Seventh Vice-President,
H. B. Perham, Eighth Vice-President,
John B. Lennon, Treasurer,
Frank Morrison, Secretary.
Executive Council American Federation of Labor.

During the reading of the report of the Executive Council, Governor Hadley, of Missouri, entered the hall. The reading of the report was suspended to hear an address of welcome from Governor Hadley.

President Gompers: The convention is honored this morning by the presence of the chief executive of the state of Missouri. Yesterday we had present the Mayor of St. Louis and the representatives of organized labor of the state and city. We were hearing the report of the Executive Council when the Governor of Missouri entered the hall, and we gladly halted that important work in order that we might hear from him. The fact that you received him as you did, with manifestations of approval and appreciation, attests to the fact that he is not a stranger to you, notwithstanding that you are not all Missourians. I shall confine myself to this brief introduction, and now take pleasure in presenting to you Honorable Herbert S. Hadley, Governor of Missouri.

Governor Hadley: Mr. President and members of the American Federation of labor: I am glad, indeed, to come here this morning as the chief executive of this state, to extend to you a cordial welcome and to express the wish that your meeting here may be a pleasant one, and that your deliberations may result in good to organized labor and to the entire country. I am very glad of the opportunity to be here for this purpose. I regret that my welcome is about twenty-four hours late, but I assure you it loses nothing in its sincerity by reason of the fact that it is delayed. I am glad of the opportunity to renew the pleasant associations and acquaintanceship I have formed with some of the representatives of this Federation in public meetings in the past.

I do not know but that I ought to take advantage of this opportunity to tell of an experience I had with the President of the American Federation of Labor, and of a very valuable service he rendered to me on the occasion of our first meeting. It was at a meeting of the Civic Federation in Washington something over a year ago at a dinner given the members of that body. In company with a number of other corn-fed governors, who were seated together, I was fortunate enough to be located near the President of the American Federation of Labor. One of the dishes given to us at that dinner perplexed us, because we didn't know whether to eat it with sugar or salt, or with a knife, a fork or a spoon. I consulted with my brother executives, and they were as much non-plussed as I was. Finally in desperation we appealed to the President of the American Federation of Labor to advise us what those delicate viands were and how we should eat them. He told us we had presented to us a dish of terrapin.

I told him when he was instructing the governors of the state how to eat terrapin he was no representative of labor, but a plutocrat in disguise, and I would take the first opportunity to expose him to the country. In defense he informed me when he was a cigar maker in Baltimore and was working at his trade he carried his noonday lunch in a tin bucket, and instead of the pork or beef we would carry in this western country he carried terrapin, because it was cheaper than the other. I hope I may have an opportunity on the occasion of this visit to initiate him into the mysteries of consuming some of our favorite products, perhaps how he should eat the things we produce, and if he wishes any further instructions in eating and drinking I shall be glad to reciprocate for the service he rendered me a year ago in the city of Washington.

I am glad on this occasion to be able to welcome the representatives of organized labor to a state that enjoys the desirable experience of being so evenly balanced between the two great political parties of the country that neither of them can afford to be unfair to or discriminate against any class of our citizenship. I regret that I am not able to welcome you to a state in which labor and capital are in entire accord, but I am glad to be able to say that the fact that there now exists differences is not because the chief executive of the state has not endeavored in every way to bring about a fair and amicable adjustment.

I am glad also to be able to welcome you to the state that has already given evidence by concrete legislation of a desire to do what can be done in a practical way to protect the interests and advance the welfare of those who live by toil. We have here a factory inspection law and a child labor law, not ideal, it is true, but still they are steps in the right direction and better, perhaps, than exist in most of the states in the Union. And I am glad to be able to tell this convention that the man who is placed in charge of that department who has imposed upon him the duty of enforcing these laws is a representative of organized labor himself.

We have a Mine Inspection Law and a Mine Inspection Department. We have a law in this state limiting the hours of labor in underground mines, a law which it was my pleasure and privilege as Attorney General of this state to sustain the constitutionality of in the Supreme Court of the United States; and I have appointed as the five men charged with the enforcement of those laws members of organized labor, men who have known of the dangers and the trials which confront the man who works in underground mines by actual experience in such employment. And through the efficient manner in which they have performed their duties in the last twenty-one months we have reduced the number of deaths and accidents in underground mines thirty-three and one-third per cent as compared with the last preceding period. I hardly think it would be necessary to say to an audience such as this, that such a correction in the conduct of public affairs may mean to some women and some families the averting of the greatest tragedy human life can impose.

We have also sought to enforce in this state a principle which I undertake to say will receive the approval of this audience, as I believe it receives the approval of all audiences in the state of Missouri, and that is the principle that in this state no combination of money or power can place itself above the law and none can violate the law with impunity. We have an anti-trust statute in this state, that does not apply to organizations of laboring men as it does to the monopolies which are formed for the purpose of increasing the cost of living to those who have to live by honest toil.

I do not wish to convey to you the impression that there exists here ideal conditions, or that we have by any means arrived at utopian conditions of life in the relations between the employer and the employee. We have still room for advancement, and I trust the deliberations of this convention will open up many lines of improvement. There are many lines of thought that appeal to such an organization as yours. There is the question of whether it shall undertake a general propaganda looking to the advocacy of some new theory of society or industry, the propaganda for changed conditions in which different rules shall apply for the distribution of that wealth that is so largely the result of labor. There is the other proposition that comes before any organization such as this, the proposition as to whether they shall undertake the accomplishment of progressive results through the advocacy of certain concrete measures that in themselves will work a certain and a definite improvement in the conditions of those whom they represent and for whose welfare they are principally concerned.

I have had occasion as a practicing lawyer, as the chief law officer of this state and as the chief executive officer of the state, to have my attention directed to and to become interested in a proposition I consider as second to none in importance to the laboring men in this country. I refer to the inadequacy of our present system for compensating those who are injured in the conduct of modern industrialism. Perhaps, to state it more clearly, the reduction of the dangers and the injuries incident to the modern system of industrialism; because, to my mind, what the laboring men of this country primarily are interested in is not so much the question of recovering compensation for the injuries they may suffer, or providing a system by which those dependent for support upon the labor of others can secure compensation for their deaths; but by providing such a just, such a prompt and such a certain system of compensation that it will bring about a reduction of the dangers and the risk incident to modern industrialism itself. In other words, what the laboring man is interested in is not in recovering damages, but in securing safety; and what the wives and children of those who toll are concerned in is not in a certain right of action for the loss of their protector, but in having the protector come back to his home and family at the end of each day of labor safe and sound as when he went away in the morning.

It is a reflection upon the capacity of the American people for self-government that here in this great, free country of ours we are clinging to archaic and almost barbaric system of compensating those who are injured in the modern system of industry, after almost every civilized country on the face of the earth has abandoned it. Notwithstanding all these laws for the inspection of factories, for the prevention of child labor, for the improvement of safety of mines and other dangerous occupations, the toll that modern industrialism still exacts from those who conduct it presents a tragedy unequalled in the history of civilization.

It is unnecessary, I take it, to tell you that the deaths incident to modern industrialism are greater than the deaths from a war in which two great armies were constantly engaged. From statistics obtained from newspapers recently I learn that the deaths on railroads during the year ending June 3, 1910, amounted to almost 4,000, an increase of 1,000 over the last preceding year, and practically what it had been for a number of years prior to that time. And the people injured on the railways of the country numbered nearly 80,000. It has been estimated that if the present rate continues, in the next fifteen years 2,000,000 railroad employees will be either killed or injured in the conduct of the railroads of this country. Statistics show that something like 10,000 miners lose their lives each year in this country. This is unnecessary, and to a certain extent is due to our present inadequate system of compensating those injured in the conduct of modern industry. This is shown by the fact that scarcely one-fourth as many are injured or killed in certain foreign countries as are injured and killed in this country in the operation of underground mines.

While the two occupations I have named are among the most dangerous, yet there was exhibited recently in the city of Boston a miniature guillotine which arose and fell ten times every minute, indicating the number of lives sacrificed in this country in the conduct of modern industry, and a light flickered and went out twice each minute to indicate the deaths due to tuberculosis, a disease that often results from unhealthy employment and insanitary conditions in those employments. This is the toll modern industry has exacted from the laboring men of this country. The economic loss of these human lives present a figure that almost staggers comprehension, and that makes other economic questions seem insignificant in comparison. And yet, notwithstanding this great loss, we still adhere to the old system of saying to a man who is hurt in the conduct of modern industry, "You can only recover damages if you can prove it was due to the negligence of your employer, that it was not contributed to by your own negligence or the negligence of a fellow servant." The only compensation for yourself in case of injury, or for your family in case of your death, must rest upon a preponderance of testimony before a jury that the injury or death was due to the negligence of the employer, and was not to a risk incident to the employment or contributed to by your own negligence or the negligence of an employee.

Statistics from our courts show that of those injured by modern industrialism not over fifteen per cent have a cause of action under our present system for the injuries they have received, because not over fifteen per cent of those injured, according to the decisions of the courts, are through the negligence of the employers. About fifteen per cent are due to the negligence of fellow servants, and the balance fall in the class of risks incident to the trade or contributory negligence. Consequently, under our present system of legal procedure, with all of its inadequacies, with all of its delays and all its rules which seem apparently to prevent recovery, there exists no hope for compensation in eighty-five per cent of the cases.

At least eighty per cent of the employers of this country are protected by what are known as accident liability policies, and during the course of the last five years they have paid to the liability insurance companies $95,000,000, and during that time the insurance companies only paid to those who were injured $40,000,000. The result was a pure loss to this country of $55,000,000, which went to the insurance companies to pay the expenses of administration, or as attorneys' fees in resisting the claims of those who brought suits against employers. Five million dollars more was received and kept by the insurance companies than was paid to those who were actually hurt. I know it will be unnecessary to say to this audience that of the $40,000,000 that actually went, or was supposed to go to the man who suffered the injury, not over fifty per cent actually reached him, because the expenses of litigation and the attorneys' fees consumed fifty per cent. In fact this feature of the case is best presented by the story of the Irishman who was hit on the head by a brick. He finally succeeded in recovering damages, but only got a small per cent. In a spirit of indignation he asked the lawyer, "Say, was it you or myself that got hit by that brick?" I think all who are familiar with the result of such cases will admit it was the Irishman who was hit by the brick.

Another phase of this proposition is that the expense in the court costs that the people themselves pay for the support of that portion of our judges who are engaged in the trial of this class of cases, is greater than the amount recovered by the injured persons. And consequently it would be cheaper from a public standpoint for the people to do away with one-third of their judges and pay to those injured in modern industrialism the money they now receive than to retain our present, system of litigation. If we could adopt some different rule for giving compensation to those who are injured in modern industrialism we could do away with at least one-third of our judges and perhaps one-half of our lawyers, and that, according to the minds of many people, is a consummation devoutly to be wished.

Efforts to bring about a correction of these conditions in the past have principally found expression in the passage of child labor laws, factory inspection laws and laws intended to secure greater safety in the operation of dangerous industries. It is significant to know that all of these laws have been tested as to their constitutionality in the courts. The employing classes have apparently never recognized the ultimate benefit that would be derived by society from the greater protection to those who conduct our modern system of industrialism. It has been usually the experience that when factory or mine inspection laws, or laws limiting the hours of labor in dangerous and injurious occupations are taken into the courts, the first experience has been that the courts have declared them unconstitutional. One of our unfortunate experiences in government has been that many of our judges have apparently seemed much more solicitous about protecting the rights of property than in protecting the rights of the people.

As you all know, in the state of New York, the bakeshop law when first passed was declared unconstitutional, and because one of the great leaders of national thought and action in this country—and I might say in the civilized world—Theodore Roosevelt, undertook to publicly criticise the reasons upon which that decision was based he was bitterly assailed, because it was said he was assaulting the very citadels of our liberty when he criticised the courts. I have never recognized that any department of our government is immune from criticism. I know the executive department has never been immune from criticism, and I know of no more reason why a man who is elected to a judicial office should enjoy any immunity from having the correctness or the wrongfulness of his acts or of his reasoning subject to public criticism than should an executive or a member of the legislative department. In fact, it seems to me as though the protection of the just judge is to establish the rule that criticism should be directed against the unjust judge who renders decisions not based upon good reasons or upon public morals. Otherwise there is no incentive to the proper performance of those duties.

I feel that in this country that perhaps we have been a little bit too tender and solicitous and fearful about criticising judges who render wrong decisions. If we had been a little bit more assertive in this respect perhaps we would not have had so much bad judge-made law. The line of distinction, of course, it is necessary should be clearly drawn. While a case is under advisement it is manifestly improper that that case should be the subject of criticism, to the extent that the man who is rendering the decision should be criticised in advance for a decision he may or may not render; but when the final decision is rendered and it then becomes the law and all people will have to obey it until it is changed by a subsequent decision or an act of the legislature it becomes the right, and not only the right, but the duty of American citizens to criticise that decision if they think it is wrong. Otherwise progress would never be secured. And so we find today that public thought has advanced to such an extent that the judges express the judgment of the people upon a great public question; because, after all, legislature-made law or court-made law is only the expression of the moral judgment of the people and the period to which it applies.

When I began litigation against the Standard Oil Trust in this state, something like four years ago, it was at peace with the entire world, protected by a rule of law that had been laid down by the Supreme Court of Missouri and the Supreme Court of the United States to the effect that a corporation, through its officials, could not be required to produce books or papers or make statements that might subject it to a penalty or a forfeiture. When I summoned those officers in, the state of Missouri they refused to answer my questions because it would subject the corporation they represented to a penalty or to a forfeiture. I said a corporation was a creature of law, that it came into existence under a contract with the state, that it should obey the laws of the state, and the state had a right to call it to account and require it to show whether it had obeyed its contract or not. That was answered by the statement that it enjoyed the same immunity that did an individual. Temporarily defeated here I went to New York and summoned the chief officers of that company, and the claim again was asserted that a corporation was above the law that brought it into existence, because it could not be compelled to incriminate itself.

That question was fought through the Supreme Court of New York, the Supreme Court of Missouri and the Supreme Court of the United States, and all three of those courts within a period of a few weeks rendered decisions overruling their previous decisions, and holding that a corporation was a creature of law and could not set itself above the sovereignty that created it. That was an example of the advancement in public thought. And the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, of the Supreme Court of New York and the Supreme Court of Missouri registered in the year of grace 1906, the moral judgment of the people and the period to which it applied, while their previous decisions rendered some ten years before registered the judgment of the people of that period. The way to secure progress in just law, whether through legislation or judicial decisions is by a free and frank discussion of the soundness of the reasons upon which laws are based.

This great economic waste incident to our modern system of industrialism demands a correction, and the question is how it is going to be secured. The progress made in foreign countries is familiar in a general way to most of you. They have either adopted a changed rule of employers' liability or adopted laws requiring compulsory insurance of employees, or workmen's compensation laws which give to them automatic compensation for injuries received in industry. In this country we are standing but at the threshold of an investigation into this question, and we are just beginning to realize the importance of applying a new principle in the conduct of industrial affairs in this country. No one is surprised or shocked if you say that when a man engages in the manufacturing business he should distribute as a part of the cost of conducting the business the wear and tear upon a machine that he places in his factory. That is an expected part of the cost of production. But we must recognize the necessity of impressing upon the public mind the correctness of the principle that it is just as right that when he puts in his factory a human machine there must be distributed upon the public the cost incident to the wear and tear of that human machine. The public will not object when a fair and a just system can be devised in the payment of this charge. Because it is wrong in principle, it has been demonstrated that it is pernicious and ineffective in actual practice to let the loss incident to modern industry fall upon those least able to bear it.

Under the limitations of our constitutions, state and national, I question how far it will be possible for us to go along the lines of compulsory insurance of workmen's compensation laws. I am certain, however, as a lawyer, that we can do this: We can do away with some of those old fictions of the law that now always work for delay and usually work for injustice. We can do away with the defense of contributory negligence, with the doctrine of assumption of risk, we can do away with the defense of the negligence of the fellow servant, because all three of these rules were devised in a simple system of industry that has no application at all to the condition existing in modern industry. They were devised at a time when industry was limited largely to the employer, the employee and the apprentice, and yet we have continued those old, archaic rules, and have hung onto them long after the reason for the theory had ceased to exist.

In Germany, under compulsory insurance laws, instead of less than 40 per cent of that paid in by the employer going to the injured persons, 80 per cent of that paid for the purpose of insurance goes to the injured person, and only a very small portion goes to the expense of administration, and a very smaller proportion, to the expense of litigation. New York, Wisconsin, and I believe Oregon also, have adopted laws on this subject. Minnesota and Illinois have commissions investigating the subject, and we are at last beginning to realize the importance of legislation on this question; we are beginning to recognize the importance of doing away with the system that has neither resulted in just compensation nor in the protection of those who live by labor.

In this state I announced some time ago that I intended to appoint a commission to investigate this subject. The State Federation of Labor has recommended members of that commission. Both the leading political parties have endorsed it in their platforms, and I hope to see the next legislature in this state adopt some measure to correct our present system and provide, as far as existing constitutional limitations will permit us to provide, for the protection of those who labor. This suggests therefore one of those concrete problems which confronts the associations of laboring men in this country how best to secure something immediate and something practicable. A just modification of the rule of employers' liability and optional workmen's compensation law, or an optional insurance law, will not bring about the millennium, it will not reorganize society, it will not reorganize industry; it will not correct all the defects of modern civilization, but it will be something concrete, it will be something practical, and the securing of results of that kind, to my mind, justifies not only the existence of such organizations, but makes them a positive benefit, not only to the laboring men, but also to society itself.

And if the American Federation of Labor can help to bring about results such as this it will justify the labor and the time that has been given to it by all these great leaders in the cause of labor in this country during the thirty years of its existence. And the fact that we are making progress, not only in the states, but also in the national government, judging from the statements by our national leaders as well as by laws that have been enacted, is a matter of congratulation. Discussing this in a message to Congress our former president, Theodore Roosevelt, said:

"It is neither just, expedient, nor humane; it is revolting to judgment and sentiment alike, that the financial burden of the accidents occurring because of the necessary exigencies of their daily occupation should be thrust upon those sufferers who are least able to bear it, and that such remedy as is theirs should only be obtained by litigation which now burdens our courts."

In a communication to the public issued by President Taft during the course of the last few months he called attention to the fact that at the last session of Congress the employers' liability law which had previously been enacted was amended to correct certain defects therein that had been discovered by the technical scrutiny of some of our Federal courts; that it had been perfected so as to enable injured employees to recover damages; that a bureau of mines had been created, with power to establish rules and regulations which would lessen the danger of injury in connection with mining; that the Interstate Commerce Commission had been given ampler powers to define the needed safety appliances for the prevention of accidents to employees and passengers on railroads. And, in addition to these laws that Congress had also created a commission to report a practical bill for the fixing of workmen's compensation for injuries received in the course of their employment on interstate railways, as risks in the business to be fixed and allowed by arbitrators, graduated according to the extent of the injury and the earning capacity of the injured person. Mr. Taft said in reference to this law:

"This is important not only as affecting interstate commerce railways, but, if adopted, as furnishing a model to the country for a beneficial change in the legal relation between employer and employe. This reform would put an end to the vexatious and costly litigation through which an injured employe must go in order to recover damages—litigation which, on account of the poverty of the employe, frequently serves to defeat the ends of justice, and in other instances leads to exorbitant and unjust verdicts."

Consequently I can congratulate today the representatives of organized labor upon the progress you have secured in a most important matter affecting the interests of those who live by honest toil. It is needless, I think, for any one to say there would not exist today this attitude on the part of the leaders of national and state thought and action had it not been that the pathway along which we must travel in the correction of these inadequacies and inefficiencies of our present system had been blazed by such labor leaders as John Mitchell, Samuel Gompers and Frank Morrison, who have pointed out the defects of our present system and have pointed out the evils which demand a correction.

I congratulate you, therefore, upon the favorable prospects for effective legislation along these lines. I trust there are other things I can congratulate you upon. I congratulate you that your conditions are better than have existed before. I can congratulate you that while we do not enjoy an equal distribution of the products of labor and capital, yet there exists an effective organization among those who do more than any others to produce wealth which has as its object the securing of the proper and just distribution of that wealth of which labor is the principal source.

I thank you for your attention.

President Gompers: Governor Hadley, when I had the pleasure of presenting you to the convention I said that this convention was honored by having you with us today. I think the delegates will bear me out when I say that I have not used that expression in the case of any other public man who has appeared upon the platform of the American Federation of Labor, and I did not make that remark to cause an invidious distinction, for at no time has that thought occurred to me. But, knowing you as I do, knowing your record as I do, knowing your strong characteristics as I do, knowing that for which you stand as I do, I use the term advisedly when I say that the convention of the American Federation of Labor is honored by your presence and by your magnificent address.

There are all too few men in positions of responsibility and authority who have the brain and the grit to declare the truth to the men of labor. Personally, I want to express my great appreciation of your splendid address. There was not an utterance to which one sincere trades unionist represented on the floor of this convention could take exception. And when I say trades unionist I mean the term in its best sense: I mean the men and women who are applying themselves in our present struggle to the great problems with which we are confronted and which we are trying to solve as best we can. We are trying to build up, to construct, not to destroy.

There are some few men who, having the time to understand this great labor movement, have not the ability, or who, having the ability have not the time, and then there are still fewer who, having the time have the inclination to learn; and then there are a still lesser number who, having all these, have the courage to declare that which they have learned. And when we find a man here such as you, Governor Hadley, occupying the honorable position of governor of one of the greatest of the sovereign states of this Union, who has not only given his mind to the study of these great problems, but whose heart beats in unison with them, who has the courage and the manhood to declare them, we must express our appreciation for what he has done. And there is a desire to misinterpret and misrepresent just such utterances of strong men. Men may suffer in their times for convictions publicly proclaimed, and as one of them, expressing yourself as strongly as you have to us and as I know you have on other occasions, with whatever may be implied, with whatever may be the consequences of possible misrepresentation, misrepresentation such as has been suffered by former President Roosevelt on that subject, but inasmuch as you enjoy your own self-respect and your own good will in your determination to utter that which is truthful and to stand for that which is good, to proclaim the righteousness and the justice of a cause—well, Governor, you stand in a class almost by yourself.

Vice-President Duncan: Before resuming, I desire to offer the following motion: That the secretary of the American Federation of Labor be instructed by this convention to print the address we have heard this morning, including the story about the brick, in the proceedings of this convention. (Seconded, and carried by unanimous vote.)

Delegate O'Flaherty: While I appreciate the story about the brick, I do not see any color that represents the Irishman. I wish to present to the convention this little flag to help decorate the hall.

Delegate O'Flaherty presented to President Gompers a small Irish flag, which President Gompers draped on his desk.

President Gompers announced reference to the following portions of the report of the Executive Council to the various committees:

"Organization and Its Extension," to the Committee on Organization. "Union," to the Committee on Organization. "Electrical Workers," to Committee on Adjustment. "Elevator Constructors—Machinists," to the Committee on Adjustment. "United Brotherhood of Carpenters—Amalgamated Woodworkers," to Committee on Adjustment. "Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers—Bridge and Structural Iron Workers," to the Committee on Adjustment. "Brotherhood of Railway Carmen—International Association of Car Workers," to Committee on Organization. "Pavers and Rammermen—Blue Stone Cutters, Granite Cutters," to Committee on Adjustment. "Brass Molders," to Committee on Adjustment. "Hod Carriers and Building Laborers," to Building Trades Committee. "Actors—White Rats of America," to Committee on Organization. "Walters' Union of San Francisco," to Committee on President's Report. "Moving Picture Machine Operators," to Committee on Adjustment. "Newspaper Solicitors' Union—San Francisco Call," to Committee on Adjustment. "Chicago Building Trades Situation," to Building Trades Committee. "Assessments Levied—Appeals Endorsed," to Committee on Resolutions. "Status of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers," to Committee on Organization. "Hatters' Case," to Committee on President's Report. "At Peace with Bucks' Stove and Range Company," to Committee on Education. "Injunction and Contempt Cases," to Committee on President's Report. "Legislation," to Committee on President's Report. "Labor Representation Committee's Report," to Committee on President's Report. "Uniform Laws to Protect Human Life," to Committee on Education. "Investigation of Women and Child Labor," to Committee on Education. "Civil Service Employees Bridled," to Committee on Resolutions. "Conservation of Natural Resources," to Committee on Education. "Organized Farmers," to Committee on Organization. "Union Label Law Digest," to Committee on Union Labels. "Affiliation with International Secretariat," to Committee on President's Report. "Injunction and Boycott Pamphlet," to Committee on President's Report. "Wages and Production Ratio," to Committee on Resolutions. "Convention Date," to Committee on Law. "Convention City," to Committee on Resolutions. "Sheet Metal Workers—Stove Mounters," to Committee on Adjustment. "Jewelry Workers' Jurisdiction," to Committee on Adjustment. "Paper Hangers—Painters," to Building Trades Committee. "International Ladies' Garment Workers," to Committee on Organization. "Ohio State Federation of Labor," to Committee on Organization.

President Gompers stated that the portion of the report under the caption "Western Federation of Miners," would not be assigned to a committee until a later date, as a conference between the interested parties might render such reference unnecessary.

President Gompers: In the matter of "Industrial Education," the chair suggests that it be referred to a special committee for the consideration of that subject, and asks authorization of the appointment of such a committee.

Vice-President Duncan: I move that the president be instructed to name such a committee on that subject. (Seconded, and carried.)

President Gompers: These are the assignments thus far. The chair will make assignment of his own report later on those things which may require the attention of committees.

Report of Committee on Credentials.

Delegate Kelly (W. J.), secretary of the committee, read the following report:

November 15, 1910.

Your Committee on Credentials beg to report that the following organizations have liquidated their indebtedness and we recommend that their delegates be seated:

International Brotherhood of Foundry Employees—Chas. Bechtold, 7 votes.

Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers and Brass Workers' International Union—T. M. Daly, Thomas Rumsey, 100 votes.

International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths—J. W. Kline, C. N. Glover, W. J. Dougherty, 100 votes.

United Neckwear Cutters' Union 6939—Michael Greenbaum, 1 vote.

Stenographers, Bookkeepers and Assistants' Union 11,591—Mrs. Mary Burke East, 1 vote.

Oklmulgee, Okla., Central Labor Council—G. L. Hunter, 1 vote.

We have received the following communication:

"November 15, 1910.

"Inasmuch as any neglect on the part of the Carriage and Wagon Workers in paying of assessments is due wholly to a misunderstanding on the part of its officers, and that the funds are deposited locally, draft only being made between the 1st and 15th of each month, it will be impossible to pay such arrearage before the 15th of December, 1910. In lieu thereof I hereby agree to guarantee the payment of such assessments now due on or before December 20, 1910.

"(Signed) Louis F. Mairé,
"President Carriage and Wagon Workers' International Union."

In view of the status of the funds of the Carriage and Wagon Workers, we recommend that extension of time be granted to the date stated for payment and that Louis F. Mairé be seated as delegate from the Carriage and Wagon Workers' International Union, with 11 votes.

We have examined credentials from the following organizations and recommend that their delegates be seated:

Brotherhood of Railway Clerks—John J. Carrigan, James F. Riley, 50 votes
International Protective Association of Lithographic Press Feeders—William A. Coakley, 9 votes.

United Laborers' Union 12,992—O. A. Tveitmoie, 1 vote.

Wage Earners' Suffrage League, California—Miss Maud Younger, to be seated as fraternal delegate, without vote.

We further report that we have received the credential of P. D. Drain as alternate delegate from the Evansville, Ind., Central Labor Union, to serve instead of Shelby Southard, who could not attend, and we recommend that Mr. Drain be seated, with 1 vote.

We also have the credentials for C. W. Fear as alternate delegate from Joplin, Mo., Trades Assembly, instead of Charles A. Patterson, and recommend that he be seated, with 1 vote.

The following protests have been decided by the committee:

Protest of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen against the San Francisco Labor Council: Satisfactory arrangements have been made and the protest withdrawn, and we recommend that Andrew J. Gallagher be seated, with 1 vote.

Protest of F. J. Hayes, delegate of the United Mine Workers and E. J. Brals of the Journeymen Tailors against the seating of delegates of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers: Committee recommends that Delegates Frank J. McNulty, Peter W. Collins, Stephen J. Fay, F. A. Monaghan, be seated, with 160 votes.

MICHAEL J. HALLINAN, Chairman,
A. J. KUGLER,
WM. J. KELLY, Secretary.

Secretary Kelly: The committee has not acted on the protest of the Granite Cutters' Union. The parties have requested us to hold this in abeyance for a day, and they may reach a settlement.

In regard to the protest of Frank J. Hayes and E. J. Brals against the seating of electrical workers, I understand they wish to withdraw the protest.

President Gompers: What is the wish of the delegates who made the protest?

Delegate Hayes (F. J.): I desire to withdraw the protest.

Delegate Brals: I desire to repeat the statement of Delegate Hayes.

On motion the report of the committee was adopted.

In conclusion we desire to say that the books of the general officers are kept in first-class shape, and all books and papers and receipted bills, etc., were furnished the committee and were examined as carefully as possible by the committee in the short time we had to do the work. Secretary Morrison and his staff of employees deserve all credit for the careful manner in which the books are kept.

Respectfully and fraternally submitted,

MICHAEL J. HALLINAN, Chairman,

A. J. KUGLER,

WM. J. KELLY, Secretary.

Auditing Committee.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be received and adopted. (Carried.)

President Gompers: Delegate Lowe informs me that it will be necessary for him to leave the convention and that therefore he will be unable to act on the Committee on Resolutions. The Chair will appoint T. S. Farrell to fill the vacancy.

Report of Fraternal Delegates to British Trades Union Congress.

Delegate T. V. O'Connor read the following report:

To the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor:

Greeting: As your delegates to British Trades Union Congress we were greatly impressed with the similarity of the problems confronting the British workmen to that of our own. Their methods of dealing with the different subjects brought before the congress are different from ours but the ultimate object is the same. Resolutions are first submitted to the Parliamentary Committee by the different affiliated bodies. These resolutions are then submitted to the various unions for consideration and amendment. The resolutions and amendments are compiled and printed as agenda before the congress meets. This method has some advantages and, according to our observation, some disadvantages. It prepares the membership at large for the subjects which are to be considered by the congress and enables them to express their wishes for the guidance of their delegates, thereby expressing the will of the rank and file. It prevents, however, the offering of amendments from the floor which, in our judgment, is a serious defect. It often occurs that the discussion of a question throws new light upon the matter under consideration which would make it not only acceptable but desirable if amended, even though it may be objectionable in its existing form. The right to amend a proposition on the floor of the convention does not exist under their system. Neither do they consider the different resolutions in committee to the same extent or in the same manner as we do, and on these points we consider our method to be superior to theirs.

The most important question considered by the congress at Sheffield was the Osborne decision. Mr. Osborne was the secretary of one of the local unions of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants. By instruction from his local union, he sued out a writ of injunction restraining the National Organization from levying assessments or paying out any of the funds of the organization for parliamentary purposes. The case was carried to the highest court, the House of Lords, where a decision was rendered sustaining the injunction on the ground that trades unions had no statutory right to require its members to pay dues for parliamentary purposes. The decision is a greater blow to the British Trades Union movement than the Taff-Vale decision as it affects the entire legislative program of the Trades Union movement of Great Britain. The decision is very surprising in view of the statutory enactment authorizing trades unions to organize for the purpose of "regulating the relations between employer and employed." Under the highly organized state of modern industry the relations between employer and employed must be to a greater or less degree regulated by law. That fact is made apparent by the laws regulating the sanitation and inspection of factories, shops and mines; employers liability and compensation acts; restriction of the hours of labor and a host of other regulations that can only be secured by legislative enactment. The right to organize for the purpose of "regulating relations between employer and employed" is not susceptible of being construed to mean only a portion of the relations between employer and employed. It must be taken to mean all the relations that exist or may exist between them. Parliament having the power to regulate the relations between employer and employed in certain ways, it seems clear to us that the trades unions have a perfect legal right to assess their members for parliamentary purposes. The highest court of Great Britain has held otherwise and the British Trades Unionists are thoroughly aroused to the danger that threatens them. Members of the House of Commons receive no salary from the Government. When workmen are elected to Parliament, the Trades Unions must find a way of supporting them. They have been doing this since 1874 when Alexander MacDonald and Thomas Burt were elected to the House of Commons. They have not only assessed their members to maintain representatives in Parliament but they have also paid the election expenses of candidates and have conducted a vigorous parliamentary propaganda. They have exercised this right, without question, for thirty-six years and now the courts seek to destroy it. They are stirred up as is evidenced by the following resolution adopted by the Sheffield Congress.

"This Congress desires to register its emphatic protest against the judgment given in the Osborne case, involving, as it does, the prevention of effective Parliamentary representation by organized labor; makes it impossible for trade union branches to join in the work of local trades councils; strikes at freedom of discussion and resolution which has always been enjoyed by the Trades Union Congress in so far as congress has taken action of a political character in the interest of the wage-earner.

This decision denies the right of trade unions to carry out their nominal statutory purpose of 'regulating the relations between employers and employed,' in so far as modern conditions of industry and the highly organized state of capital render Parliamentary action necessary for this purpose.

It deprives trade unions of a freedom which they have enjoyed for nearly fifty years, and which they have exercised only with the approval of their members and to the advantage of the community.

This congress claims: That these rights be restored at once so that trade unionism may be put in a position to fulfill its statutory functions in such a manner as the members of the respective unions according to their rules shall decide.

Therefore, having regard to the injustice of the decision, and of the urgency of the matter, congress calls upon all affiliated organizations, in view of the misrepresentations of the position, which have appeared recently in the press, to bring all possible pressure to bear on the government to provide, at once, facilities for the passing into law of the bill, as presented by the labor party, to reverse the judgment, and determine to make it a test question at all Parliamentary elections."

Seconder: A. Wilkie,

Supporters: W. Brace and J. R. Clynes.

House of Lords.

The abolition of the House of Lords is a question of vital importance to the labor movement of Great Britain. It is looked upon as an irresponsible, obstructive body that stands in the way of progressive legislation. The position of the congress on that subject is clearly stated by President Haslem in his address. He says:

"During the year that has passed a general election has taken place. Labor on the whole has maintained its position. A few of our colleagues in the last Parliament failed to obtain a renewal of confidence from the electors, and our numbers were slightly reduced. The present Parliamentary Session, which has now been adjourned, has been one of the most difficult character. The House of Lords question and the death of his late Majesty have made it well-nigh impossible to proceed with ordinary legislation. The conference between representatives of the government and the official opposition has not yet finished its deliberations. As a labor party and as a trades union movement we are not in their confidences, but we say quite emphatically—and we feel we are expressing the views of this congress—that no settlement of the difficulty between the two houses of Parliament can be satisfactory which does not for all time place the representatives of the people of this country in the position of being able to carry out the will and the wishes of the people."

Labor Exchanges.

At the instance of the Trades Union Congress, the government has placed in operation a National System of Labor Exchanges. Its operations are being watched with considerable interest. Already it has met with considerable criticism on the ground that it is being used as a recruiting establishment for strike breakers. A number of resolutions were introduced demanding that this defect in the regulations be remedied.

Mine Regulations.

The Royal Commission on Accidents in Mines have about completed their labors and will soon make a report to the government of their findings and recommendations. A number of resolutions were introduced and passed by the Congress instructing the Parliamentary Committee to give their attention to the forthcoming Mines Regulation Act for the purpose of regulating the employment of unskilled and foreign workmen in the mines and the securing of an eight-hour work day for colliery enginemens, boilermen and stokers at the mines, the object being to secure greater safety for those engaged in the mining industry.

Workmen's Compensation.

The enactment and operation of the Workmen's Compensation Act has been a great benefit to the workmen of Great Britain. The workman no longer bears alone the accident cost of production. That is now shared by the community, though not to as great a degree as the trades unions believe ought to be the case. While the act itself is giving very general satisfaction, there are some details that require amendment and some conditions arising from it that the workers are seeking to change. With the coming of the Workmen's Compensation Act, the employers have turned to the insurance companies to insure their workmen against accidents. The insurance companies, taking over the risk of the employer, are placing every obstruction that they can conceive of in the way of the operation of the law. In consequence the congress has demanded the establishment of a system of state insurance to be paid for by the employers in the same manner as they are now paying the private insurance companies.

Unemployment.

The great question of how to provide for the unemployed received considerable attention. It does not appear that any definite solution of the problem was arrived at. The two principal ideas put forth in the resolutions and discussions were, first, legislation for the establishment of a scheme of compulsory insurance against unemployment, and second, that the government shall commence work of public utility sufficient to take up the surplus labor.

Over one hundred resolutions and amendments in all were considered by the congress. We have dealt only with those which we considered of most general interest to the delegates here assembled.

We can not refrain from referring to the most dramatic incident of the entire congress. There are a large number of women chain makers in the neighborhood of Birmingham. They make chains by hand on hearths and anvils set up in their own kitchens. They are paid a penny a yard for making chains with inch and a half links made out of three-quarter inch iron. They were on strike for a minimum rate of two pence per hour. They came before the congress to plead for aid. There was a committee of three of them; a little gray-haired motherly woman of about sixty years of age, a middle aged woman and a girl not yet out of her teens. As they stood there on the platform, each with a yard of chain in her hands which she had a penny for making, the tragedy of those overworked lives struck home to every person present and the delegates responded liberally to help them in their struggle.

In conclusion, we desire to express our appreciation of the kindly and hospitable manner in which we were received and cared for during our stay in Sheffield.

Respectfully, submitted,

W. B. WILSON,

T. V. O'CONNOR,

Fraternal Delegates.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be received and made part of the proceedings of the convention. (Carried.)

President Gompers announced that the fraternal delegates from the British Trades Union Congress, Messrs. W. Brace and Ben. Turner and the fraternal delegate from the Canadian Trades Labor Congress, Mr. R. P. Pettipiece, would address the convention Thursday morning. President Gompers introduced the gentlemen in turn to the convention.

President Gompers appointed as a Special Committee on Industrial Education:

Delegates John Mitchell, W. D. Mahon, H. A. Vurpia, William J. Kelly, John McNamara, Robert Hesketh, W. V. Price, T. J. Butler, William Schwab, John Sheret, E. L. Smyth, R. H. McDevitt, F. J. Roth, E. R. Murphy, M. Mitchell.

Miss Maud Younger made a brief address to the convention.

Delegate Owen Miller, for the Local Committee on Arrangements, announced that special cars would be provided, and would be at the hall at 1:30 p. m., Wednesday, to convey the delegates on a trip through the city and on a visit to the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Company's plant.

During the session the following resolutions were presented and referred to the various committees:

Resolution No. 1—By Hair Spinners' Union No. 12353:

Whereas, We consider the strike benefits paid by the American Federation of Labor too small compared with the high cost of living, and we believe we can get better results in case of trouble by keeping the members together, because we find when the money runs low they become dilatory and indifferent to their obligation and duty; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Section 5 of Article XIII of the constitution of the American Federation of Labor be amended by striking out "$4 per week for each member" and inserting "$6 per week for each member.

Referred to Committee on Laws.

Resolution No. 2—By the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America:

Whereas, The stock label of the American Federation of Labor denotes a strictly union made article when appearing on same; and

Whereas, Badgemakers throughout the United States are using the A. F. of

L. stock label on badges that bear non-union made metal parts, thereby deceiving the purchasers of strictly union made products; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at St. Louis, Mo., November, 1910, do hereby order badgemakers using A. F. of L. stock label to purchase union-made steel parts bearing the union label and all parts coming under the jurisdiction of the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America; and be it further

Resolved, That the A. F. of L. stock label be withdrawn from badgemakers not complying with this law.

Referred to Committee on Labels.

Resolution No. 3—By Delegate James Buckley of the Wyoming State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, The state of Wyoming has several fair-sized towns in which there are no labor organizations, and several in which we believe various locals could be organized, and in the past the state has received practically no assistance in organizing from any source; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor consider the question of sending an organizer for a specified time to work in this field.

Referred to Committee on Organization.

Resolution No. 4—By Delegates Brals, Lindala and Lennon of Journeymen Tailors' Union:

Whereas, The General Executive Board of the Journeymen Tailors' Union of America have been impressed by recent events in the world of industry with the very great importance to all wage-workers of making a special and persistent effort to organize into the trade union movement women engaged in industrial life; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we respectfully urge upon the American Federation of Labor both the necessity and importance of placing some women organizers in the field; and be it further be and are hereby directed to submit these resolutions for action by the St. Louis Convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Referred to Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 5—By Delegate Steve McDonald of the Scranton, Pa., Central Labor Union:

Whereas, Some of the employes of the railroads in this country have petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission to permit those who control the means of transportation to boost the present freight rates; and

Whereas, The earnings of the railway corporations are enormous, even upon a capitalization that drips with water, after paying for improvements and equipments out of the earnings, thus proving without doubt that there is no necessity for an increase in the freight rates; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the delegates here assembled, in the interests of the tolling masses, the business men and public in general, that we protest against the contemplated move by those who are working for the selfish interests of the railroads, and also protest against the Interstate Commerce Commission acquiescing in the request of the railroad employes, if such a course is contemplated by the said body, because it would only inflict greater hardships upon the tolling masses, the business men, and the independent operators who have been "shanghaied" by the coal-carrying roads, through the pernicious system of unfair, unjust and infamous discrimination. Be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this protest be sent to the members of the Interstate Commerce Commission, a copy to the convention of the American Federation of Labor, and a request made upon all central bodies in this country and elsewhere in the jurisdiction of the American Federation of Labor that action be taken thereon, with the object in view of baffling the railroad octopus in its attempt to fleece the public and add more wealth to its already over-full and bursting coffers.

Moved and seconded that the resolution be received and adopted and copies forwarded as requested. Motion carried.

Referred to Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 6—By Homer D. Call of Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen:

Whereas, The Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America has for the past six years made a determined and consistent effort to organize the employes in the packing industry; and

Whereas, Their efforts have been vigorously opposed by what is known as the American Meat Trade Association, who have repeatedly declared for the open or non-union plant; and

Whereas, At the present time the wages and conditions of the employes have been systematically reduced until today the average wage of the butcher workmen is less than $7.00 per week; and

Whereas, Owing to the present system of government inspection, we believe the time opportune for organizing the said butcher workmen of North America; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled do hereby request the incoming Executive Council to render such aid and assistance as possible to organize the butcher workmen of this country; and be it further

Resolved, That some one general organizer of the American Federation of Labor be designated to take charge of the work of organizing, with instructions to devote his entire time to that work, at the expense of the A. F. of L.

Referred to Committee on Adjustment.

Resolution No. 7—By International Jewelry Workers' Union of America:

Whereas, The annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at Toronto, Ontario, Canada, November 8 to 20, 1909, referred Resolution No. 20, presented by the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America, to President Samuel Gompers for investigation and a final settlement; and

Whereas, A conference was called at New York City on June 23, 1910, by

Organizer Hugh Frayne, representing the American Federation of Labor, and all interested organizations were notified and attended conference; and

Whereas, Decision rendered through conference and indorsed by the American Federation of Labor Executive Board, granting jurisdiction to the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America over all metal parts of badges, buttons, medallions and novelties, not in conflict with Sheet Metal Workers' Union; and

Whereas, The Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers' Union refuse to withdraw their label from factories employing one to three of their members, while six to one hundred or more were eligible to membership in the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America, thereby hindering the organization of these factories; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers' Union be and is hereby ordered to immediately withdraw their label from factories manufacturing badges, buttons, medallions and novelties; and be it further

Resolved, That this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor assembled at St. Louis, Mo., 1910, do hereby indorse the decision of the General Executive Board of the American Federation of Labor granting jurisdiction to the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America over all metal parts of badges, buttons, medallions and novelties made in all metals other than tin and sheet iron.

Referred to Committee on Adjustment.

Resolution No. 8—By Delegate Oscar F. Nelson of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks, indorsing Senate Bill No. 5900 and House Bill No. 19796, providing for the regulation of the hours of labor of post office clerks:

Whereas, The post office clerks are the only federal civil service employes who have no legalized regulation as to the number of hours that shall constitute a day's work, and for that reason are compelled to work an excessive number of hours without extra compensation; and

Whereas, The duties of a post office clerk are of an arduous nature, both physically and mentally, and as a consequence long hours of labor imperil the health of such workers; and

Whereas, Senator Jones of Washington has introduced Senate Bill No. 5900, which provides "that forty-eight hours shall constitute a week's work for post office clerks," and Congressman Goebel of Ohio has introduced a like bill in the House of Representatives, No. 19796; and

Whereas, The National Federation of Post Office Clerks have indorsed these bills as meeting with their approval, and as we believe our government should be foremost amongst all employers of labor in maintaining a high standard of working conditions and equitable treatment of its employes; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the American Federation of Labor, in annual convention assembled at St. Louis, Mo., do hereby go on record as indorsing Senate Bill No. 5900 and House Bill No. 19796, and do hereby instruct our Legislative Committee to strive to have this measure, as well as such other measures that will improve the working conditions of the post office clerks, enacted into law.

Referred to Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 9—By the delegates of the International Longshoremen's Association:

Whereas, The closer affiliation of all organizations of the workers employed in the industry of transportation, such as longshoremen, seamen, teamsters, railroaders, freight-handlers, street carmen, boatmen, etc., will be of advantage to all concerned; and

Whereas, The development of industry will eventually force the workers to organize and affiliate on industrial lines; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor be asked to inaugurate a movement to establish a Transportation Department within the A. F. of L.

Referred to Committee on Organization.

Resolution No. 10—By the delegates of the International Longshoremen's Association:

Whereas, In view of the recent ruling of the Solicitor-General of Immigration that there was no law at the present in the statutes to prevent Chinese, Japanese, or other Asiatic members of the crew of foreign vessels from landing in this country and working the cargo of their respective vessels, and neither the Geary Exclusion Act or the Allen Contract Labor Law afford any protection to the waterfront workers; and

Whereas, All other crafts are afforded protection under these laws from the coolie invasion in their respective callings, except the longshoremen and seamen; and

Whereas, The above ruling of the Solicitor-General of Immigration is past distinction, as it protects only certain crafts and not all citizens of the United States; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, do hereby empower their Executive Council to prepare a memorial to Congress, to legislate either by statute, law or treaty, to the end that all Asiatics (laborers) be excluded from the United States and from the merchant marine of our nation, as seamen, and to rigidly investigate the rulings of the immigration officials of the Pacific Coast making it possible, as is at present, the custom of admitting hordes of the lowest type of Hindoo coolies to the Pacific ports of the United States; and be it further

Resolved, That every delegate to this convention consider himself a committee of one to agitate this vital question in his home locality, for upon the completion of the Panama Canal this problem must be solved in the Gulf and Atlantic ports, as well as by their brothers on the Pacific Coast.

The Legislation Committee to whom this resolution was referred recommended the adoption of same, with a further recommendation that the delegates to the next convention of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to have them adopted by that body.

Referred to Committee on President's Report.

Resolution No. 11—By the Delegates of the International Longshoremen's Association:

Whereas, In the work of loading and unloading of vessels of all classes there is absolutely no government rules to protect and safeguard the lives and health of the men engaged in such work and no government inspection of same, such as is provided for construction, factory and mining industries; and

Whereas, The lives and health of the members of this association are daily jeopardized and sacrificed to the most reckless speeding up of work for the sake of more profits for the employers; and

Whereas, We consider the lives and health of our members and of workmen in general more precious than profits; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor be and is herewith instructed to have such strict rules and regulations governing the work of loading and unloading of vessels in all its branches, tending to safeguard the lives and health of the men employed in such work, installed and enforced, preferably uniform in all states throughout the United States, and have a government inspection established for the purpose of properly enforcing such rules and regulations.

Referred to Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 12—By Delegate James Buckley of the Wyoming State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, At the Second Annual Convention of the Wyoming State Federation of Labor the following resolution was unanimously adopted: That the convention place itself on record as favoring the interchange of transfer cards between the various labor unions, and that the American Federation of Labor at its next convention try and have this matter submitted to a referendum vote of all affiliated unions. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention take the necessary steps to submit this proposition to a referendum vote of the affiliated unions.

Referred to Committee on Local and Federated Bodies.

Resolution No. 13—By the Delegates of the Theatrical Stage Employees' International Alliance:

To the delegates assembled at the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor:

Whereas, The Seventeenth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at Nashville, Tenn., 1897, pronounced in no uncertain phrases that all work done back of the curtain is to be done under and by the sole jurisdiction of the then National Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees—this, however, not to include either engineer and fireman; and

Whereas, Through the growth of outside unions to the work of the theatrical stage employees these outside foreign trade unions seek to arrogate to themselves the jurisdiction granted to the above National Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees; therefore, be it

Resolved, By this the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, assembled in session in the city of St. Louis, Mo., that they do reconfirm the decision rendered by the Seventeenth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, to-wit: "That all work done behind the curtain line or proscenium arch of all theaters and places of amusement shall be done by the members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees—this to not include engineers and firemen."

Referred to Committee on Adjustment.

Resolution No. 14—By Delegate J. J. McAndrews of the Elevator Conductors and Starters' Union No. 11959:

Whereas, The Chicago Elevator Conductors and Starters' Union No. 11959 has been duly organized and chartered by the American Federation of Labor; and

Whereas, The jurisdiction of the Elevator Conductors and Starters' Union has not been defined and no mention of said organization is made in the A. F. of L.'s instructions to organizers; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the jurisdiction of the Chicago Elevator Conductors and Starters' Union No. 11959 be and is hereby defined as follows: "That the Chicago Elevator Conductors and Starters' Union No. 11959 shall have the right to operate all passenger and freight elevators installed in buildings, and to operate all elevators that carry passengers, furniture, freight and merchandise in buildings in the course of construction, when such buildings are tenanted." And be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor instruct its organizers to organize into unions all persons engaged in the operation of elevators as above described in all cities where such unions are not already organized.

Resolution No. 15—By Delegates W. D. Huber, Frank Duffy, Wm. B. MacFarlane, Thomas Flynn, W. J. Kelly, Carl Young, A. M. Swartz, of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America:

The Sixteenth Biennial Convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, held in Des Moines, Iowa, in September, 1910, instructed its delegates to the A. F. of L. Convention to present the following report of a special committee appointed to consider the question of the payment of insurance or benefits by labor organizations, to the end that some definite action may be taken to protect labor organizations in the payment of said benefits:

To the Officers and Delegates of the Sixteenth Biennial Convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, in Convention Assembled:

Brothers—We, your Committee on Insurance, desire to respectfully submit the following for your consideration:

Having carefully considered the various communications submitted by the general secretary in reference to the demands made by the legal representatives of claimants who have insisted that payment of benefit should be made, and when informed that such payment would be in violation of benefit laws of the United Brotherhood, have invoked the aid of the insurance laws of the several states in which they reside, by inducing the Insurance Commissioners of said states to bring action against the United Brotherhood and its members, in order to secure, if possible, said benefits. Said Insurance Commissioners having stated that the benefit system or laws as set forth in the constitution of the United Brotherhood at this time, was in violation of the insurance laws of said states, and, after having considered sections of said laws with reference to the benefit laws of the United Brotherhood governing the payment of death, disability and other benefits, we are of the opinion that there is a very great necessity for a change in said laws, if we are to avoid the continued threats, demands and litigation that may arise in the future upon the refusal of the general secretary to pay such claims as are in violation of the laws of the United Brotherhood.

Your committee would therefore recommend that all sections of the constitution pertaining to death, disability, and other benefits or claims be so changed that they can not be legally construed as being in violation of the insurance laws of any state, and that the words "beneficial members" be stricken out of our constitution and the words "members in good standing" be inserted; that the word "benefit" be changed to read "donation," and that all sections where reference is made to the payment of death, disability and other benefits shall be so arranged that they shall clearly define and show that the intent under our constitution shall be to make donations to members in all cases of death, disability and other benefits, and in similar amounts as at present stated in the constitution of the United Brotherhood.

We would further recommend that this matter of insurance be referred to the Committee on Constitution for their consideration as recommended, and that such recommendations as shall be made by said committee, if approved by convention, shall be referred to the members of the United Brotherhood for their approval or rejection at the time that other amendments to the constitution are sent them.

We would also recommend that the general secretary and the General Executive Board continue their effort to maintain our laws and protect our organization and its members from all unjust demands or claims, where same has been made by the Insurance Commissioners of any state operating under such laws.

We would also recommend that the question of the payment of benefits, as the same may apply to other trade organizations, shall be referred to the American Federation of Labor at its coming convention, for the purpose of securing the co-operation of all trades represented, to the end that uniform insurance laws may be enacted in the several states, such as will protect all trade organizations and exempt them from the operation of the insurance laws of all states, and that will permit of their continuing the payment of benefits to their members without interference or litigation.

Respectfully submitted,

A. M. SWARTZ, Secretary,
A. D. SLYE,
LEONARD DIEDENRICHS,
J. A. ROBINSON,
M. C. TEBO,

Committee.

Resolution No. 16—By Delegates W. D. Huber, Frank Duffy, W. B. MacFarlane, Thomas Flynn, W. J. Kelly, Carl Young and A. M. Swartz of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners:

Whereas, The states of Washington, Idaho and Montana are at present suffering from a scourge of forest fires, which are devastating vast areas of valuable land and destroying hundreds of lives and millions of dollars in valuable property, rendering homeless and helpless thousands of people; and

Whereas, The nature of the calamity is of a character that should not be permitted to impose its heavy burden solely upon the helpless survivors, who, in many cases, are now widows, orphans and maimed and crippled men whose every dollar has been lost to them, and in many instances their capability of earning a livelihood destroyed by the terrible ordeal through which they have passed, and what was formerly a thriving district dotted with newly built homes of these pioneer settlers, is now a blackened ruin, making the task of rebuilding and reclaiming the same far more formidable than the one they originally faced when in good health, spirit, and possessed of some means; and

Whereas, These suffering people should not be called upon to face alone and unassisted in their present helpless condition the problem of rebuilding and reclaiming their homes, when the citizens of these United States have demonstrated in the past their great store of generosity and sympathy for people visited by such terrible calamities, and the assistance heretofore furnished has not been confined to our own people, nor limited by race or nationality, proximity or distance from our shores, and there has been expended in the aid of affliction in some instances millions of dollars; and

Whereas, The survivors of the calamity which has visited this section of our country are worthy citizens of these United States, engaged in the noble work of pioneering in a country where hardship is their daily lot, a recital of the terrible sufferings they have passed through is not deemed necessary for the purpose of appealing to the generosity of their country; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled, that the general government of these United States should at this time come to the aid of these people who have suffered by these devastating forest fires, not only for the purpose of relieving their present necessities, but in order that the whole burden of their loss should not be placed upon their stricken shoulders; that the general government should take such steps as may be necessary to aid in rebuilding and reclaiming the former homes of these people, and that help and succor be furnished to them, so that as near as may be possible their former homes be rehabilitated and they given a fair start for a bright future; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States.

Referred to Committee on President's Report.

Resolution No. 17—By Delegates W. D. Huber, Frank Duffy, W. B. MacFarlane, Thomas Flynn, W. J. Kelly, Carl Young and A. M. Swartz of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America:

Whereas, For some time past there has been considerable conflict between the organization of the U. B. and the Wood-wire and Metallic Lathers as to jurisdiction over the putting on of metal corner-beads and picture moulding; and

Whereas, At a former meeting of the D. C. of St. Louis action was taken whereby said D. C. emphatically declared that all such work rightfully belonged to the carpenters, and for the purpose of establishing their claim by proof of the work being done throughout the country by carpenters, caused to be sent to the various district councils and local unions of the brotherhood, a circular asking information and facts regarding the placing of said work; in the great majority of replies received it was stated that carpenters claimed and did the work; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the D. C. of St. Louis, that we again reiterate our claim to the said work; and

Whereas, By the changes in the methods of building construction and the introduction of metal trim taking the place of what was formerly made of wood and put in place by carpenters, the same having brought about a conflict as to jurisdiction, it is therefore

Resolved, That in all such cases where such trim is used that the carpenters claim the right to put it up and will oppose all claims made by any and all of the trades now claiming jurisdiction over the same. We also claim jurisdiction over trim made of wood pulp, straw board, asbestos, etc.; also the setting of all concrete forms, regardless of material used. Be it

Resolved, That the delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to present our claims to said convention, and work for their adoption before that body.

Resolution No. 18—By Delegates W. D. Huber, Frank Duffy, W. B. MacFarlane, Thomas Flynn, W. J. Kelly, Carl Young and A. M. Swartz of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America:

Whereas, The erection of the material known as hollow metal trim, sash and doors, metallic trim, sash and doors, and metal trim was awarded to the carpenters by the Hon. Wm. J. Gaynor, who had been selected as umpire in accordance to all the laws and requirements laid down by the Arbitration Plan, in the matter of arbitration between the sheet metal workers on one side and the Joint District Council of Carpenters on the other; and

Whereas, Our General Executive Board has ruled on several occasions that the U. B. of C. & J. of A. claims jurisdiction over the erecting and placing of all hollow metal sash, frames, doors and trim; and

Whereas, The carpenters have been erecting this material since it first appeared on the market, and are still erecting it in New York City, as well as in a number of other cities, for the reason that it is a strictly carpenter's proposition and requires the methods and skill of the carpenters to prepare the grounds in order to apply and properly execute the work; and

Whereas, Every effort is being made by the sheet metal workers and the Kalamene Association to deprive the carpenters of the erection of this material; therefore be it

Resolved, That we declare emphatically and unequivocally as a whole to retain the erection of steel and hollow metal trim, sash, and doors, in accordance with the rulings of our General Executive Board; and be it further

Resolved, That the officers of the American Federation of Labor and the officers of the Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L. be notified of our action, and that our delegates to the conventions of the A. F. of L. and the Building Trades Department are hereby instructed to carry out these resolutions.

Resolution No. 19—By Delegates W. D. Huber, Frank Duffy, W. B. MacFarlane, Thomas Flynn, W. J. Kelly, Carl Young and A. M. Swartz of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America:

Whereas, The Homestake Mining Company, which company owns and operates one of the most valuable gold producing properties in the United States or in the world, and employs several thousand working men of different craft in the operation of its mines and mills, on November 24, 1909, declared a lockout against employes on account of their affiliation with various labor unions, as will be shown and fully explained by the following card:

Lead, South Dakota, November 24, 1909. I am not a member of any labor union and in consideration of my being employed by the Homestake Mining Company agree that I will not become such while in its service. (Signed by employe.)

Whereas, The members of Local Union No. 1440 of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, together with the members of all other labor organizations, have been discriminated against by the Homestake Mining Company since its declaration of this lockout, which became effective on November 24, 1909; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the delegates of the Sixteenth Biennial Convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, in convention assembled, declare the Homestake Mining Company, whose works are located in South Dakota, to be a non-union concern and that we pledge our moral and financial support and assistance to all union men who may be involved in or affected by the lockout of the Homestake Mining Company; and be it further

Resolved, That our delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to present the cause of the lockout men in South

Dakota before said convention and to solicit the aid and assistance of the American Federation of Labor in the cause of our brothers who are maintaining this struggle against oppression and greed, to the end that organized labor may not be defeated, and that our brothers shall not be forced nor compelled to forfeit any rights of citizenship or to violate their honor as men.

Resolution No. 20—By Delegate J. T. Carey of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers:

Whereas, A great bulk of news paper, book paper and writing papers are generally purchased in large quantities, over which the individual purchaser has no control; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor shall, immediately after the adjournment of the convention, communicate with the officers of the Newspaper Publishers' Association, in an endeavor to have all paper used by publishers who are members of said association bear the label of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers; and be it further

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, either by circular letter or otherwise, request that committees from all local unions, central bodies and state federations use their best endeavors, by the adoption of resolutions, communications or by conferences with all publishers in their respective localities to secure paper bearing the label of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers; and be it further

Resolved, That all national and international unions, local unions, central bodies, state federations and consumers of paper use their best endeavors to procure paper bearing the label of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers in all trade union publications and stationery used by them, and use their best endeavors to advance the use of paper bearing the label of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers.

Resolution No. 21—By Delegate P. J. Brice, Stone Derrick Men's Union No. 12878:

Whereas, We, the Stone Derrick Men's Union No. 12878 of St. Louis, have tried to form an international union of our craft, consisting of men over 21 years of age, employed at the following work:

The handling of all cut stone and granite cut by stone and granite cutters, in yards and on buildings, and the helping to set of all stone and granite.

The handling of all saws (except granite saws), travelers and derricks in yards, when used to handle cut stone or granite.

The drilling of stone or granite, whether by hand, steam, air or any other method.

Where specified granite drilling, said drilling is controlled by granite cutters.

Where specified hand drilling, this does not apply to mash hammer drilling when done by a stonecutter.

The handling and rigging of all derricks when used for the purpose of handling cut stone or granite, whether on construction, reconstruction and alterations of buildings, where cut stone or granite is handled.

All rubbing of stone (except granite polishing), all cleaning down of new stonework on buildings.

The handling and helping to set all artificial cut stone made in molds, blocks or slabs. By the term "artificial cut stone" is meant where molds, blocks or slabs are to take the place of cut stone. We do not claim the manufacture.

The handling and helping to set exterior marble, when said marble work is being done by stonecutters or stonemasons.

Having also solicited the aid of the American Federation of Labor in forming said international union, and having been informed by Mr. F. Morrison, your secretary, that the American Federation of Labor would do all in its power to help us form said union, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this, the thirtieth convention of the American Federation of Labor, give us their support to further the work of organizing the locals engaged in our class of work, and be it further

Resolved, That the thirtieth convention of the American Federation of Labor instruct its organizers to work to that end, namely, that said international union may be formed.

We find in different cities that men of our craft are at this time unorganized, and we feel that locals could be organized, thereby getting together enough to warrant the forming of the proposed international union, and we, the Stone Derrick Men's Union No. 12878, pledge our financial support to further this movement.

In connection with the above resolution will say we have an eight-hour day schedule at the rate of 37 1-2c per hour; a schedule of four hours on Saturday, with time and a half for overtime; double time for Sundays and holidays, which are New Year's Day, Fourth of July, Thanksgiving and Christmas. No work on Labor Day.

Resolution No. 22—By Delegate L. F. Maire, of the Carriage and Wagon Workers' International Union:

Whereas, It is universally conceded, that the organizations of labor are all striving to the one end, viz.: Bettered conditions and uplift of the toilers, and

Whereas, It is further conceded that no organization can sustain a healthy growth with any member of its concrete body rent asunder, and

Whereas, It is still further conceded that what is tonic for some is poison for others; therefore be it

Resolved, that inasmuch as the carriage and wagon workers have evolved into the twentieth century automobile workers and are still evolving into aeroplane workers, that the word automobile be incorporated as per adoption at Buffalo convention; also that the word aeroplane be also incorporated and that the carriage and wagon workers as now constituted, be henceforth known as Carriage, Wagon, Automobile and Aeroplane Workers' International Union of North America; and be it further

Resolved, That its jurisdiction shall extend only to such crafts as are rightfully theirs, viz.:

Carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane body makers and woodworkers; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane painters; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane trimmers; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane blacksmiths; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane wheel makers; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane spoke and hub makers; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane flat spring makers; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane bent stuff makers, such as shafts and felloes and all component parts of carriages, wagons, automobiles and aeroplanes in the rough.

In submitting this resolution, the movers recognize the various complex questions governing such jurisdictional awards and respectfully submit that they in no wise wish to encroach on the domain of sister international unions. They also wish to present for your earnest consideration the fact that, as an organization, the carriage and wagon workers can not exist and do your honorable body justice under its present status, and we earnestly appeal to you to right our wrongs. We ask only simple justice. Can you give less?

Resolution No. 23—By Delegate T. J. Carolan, of International Brotherhood of Tip Printers:

Whereas, The value and utility of the union label as an organizing factor is firmly established among trades unionists, and

Whereas, The International Brotherhood of Tip Printers, who do gold, silver and metal printing and embossing in hats, caps, badges and novelties, has the greatest difficulty in organizing the tip printers in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and other cities, because of the fact that the master tip printers have seen fit to lock them out for a number of years, and openly declared that no union man shall ever work in their shops again, a threat which they have lived up to a man, and all because the tip printers had courage to ask a little more wages so as to keep themselves and families from want, and

Whereas, Some of the master tip printers have gone so far as to degrade their men by putting up a prize of $10 every six months, and the man working the most flesh from his hands, and the largest amount of blood out of his veins is the winner of this miserable and degrading prize, and

Whereas, A very large amount of the printing done in the non-union shops is placed in union hats and caps, and this work comes from union hat and cap manufacturers, who send the printing to non-union shops to have it printed and then place it in their union goods, and

Whereas, We believe that we have a just right to demand from organized labor that it should see that all printing in union hats, caps, badges, etc., is strictly union and done by union men, bearing the label of the International Brotherhood of Tip Printers; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, in its thirtieth convention assembled, hereby recommend that all international, state, central, local and federal unions, together with all officers of the departments of the federation itself, encourage to the extent of their ability the use of the Tip Printers' Label on hats, caps, badges and novelties printed in gold, silver and metal, and do further recommend that all labor journals do aid and encourage through their columns the use of the same, so as to create a demand for the Tip Printers' label on all hats and badges purchased in the United States and Canada, and be it further

Resolved, That all organizations, national or federal, having in their organization members working on tip printing presses and doing work which rightfully belongs and comes under the jurisdiction of the International Brotherhood of Tip Printers, be instructed by this convention to surrender all such members who are doing tip printers' work and working on tip printing presses, to the International Brotherhood of Tip Printers.

Resolution No. 24—By Steve McDonald, representing Scranton Central Labor Union:

Whereas, A number of railroad employes have lent their aid to the railroad manipulators for the purpose of petitioning the Interstate Commerce Commission to persuade that body to grant permission to increase the present freight rates; and

Whereas, Fabulous dividends are paid now as a result of the present freight rates charged on all commodities; therefore be it

Resolved, That the president of the A. F. of L. appoint a committee of five trade unionists, whose duty it shall be to make an investigation to ascertain the earnings and dividends of the railroads in this country, so that the American people may be placed in a position to determine whether the request for the privilege of increasing the freight rates is justifiable; be it further

Resolved, That all labor organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor be requested to withhold any assistance from the railroads in the manner of indorsing the request of the owners and manipulators of said railroads, for an increase in freight rates until such time as the true condition of affairs is ascertained.

Resolution 25—By Delegate John B. Lennon of the Tailors' Union:

Amend Section 1 of Article III, to read:

Section 1. The convention of the Federation shall meet annually at 10 a. m., on the second Monday in August, at such place as the delegates have selected at the preceding convention.

Resolution No. 26—By Harry De Veaux, representing the Actors' International Union:

Whereas, At the Toronto (Canada) convention of the American Federation of Labor two resolutions were introduced by the Actors' International Union, one of which requested the assistance of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to aid the Actors' International Union in forming an international association of actors in all parts of the world; and the other resolution requested the assistance of the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. to induce an organization known as The White Rats of America, a theatrical association of vaudeville actors, to become a component part of the American Federation of Labor, and

Whereas, Through the personal efforts of President Samuel Gompers several conferences were held between the Actors' International Union and The White Rats of America, which resulted in the amalgamation of the two organizations on the 7th day of November, 1910, at the Victoria Hotel, in New York City, at which conference representatives of the Actors' International Union, The White Rats of America and President Gompers were present, thereby forming in fact an international association of actors allied with the English, German, French and Australian federations of organized actors, under the title of The White Rats Actors' Union of America; therefore be it

Resolved, That all organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor render their moral support and influence to The White Rats Actors' Union of America in their efforts to have all places of amusement in the United States and Canada employ members of the only recognized body of theatrical performers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor; and be it further

Resolved, That due notice of the amalgamation of the Actors' International Union and The White Rats of America be submitted officially by the American Federation of Labor, through its Executive Council, to all national and international unions, state federations and local city central bodies.

Referred to Committee on Organization.

Resolution No. 27—By Delegate Harry De Veaux of the Actors' International Union:

Whereas, Through the efforts made by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, the association of actors, formerly known under the title of The White Rats of America, have been amalgamated with the Actors' International Union, thereby forming a well-organized branch of the amusement profession under the new title of The White Rats Actors' Union of America, and

Whereas, It is to the best interests of those that are employed in the various places of amusement in this country and Canada, that the various crafts so employed, should assist in the practical organization of all engaged in these various branches; therefore be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Musicians and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees shall use their best efforts to assist The White Rats Actors' Union of America in their campaign of organization, and that every assistance will be given by the various locals of the two organizations named in regulating any local differences that may occur between the employer and the employees in so far as the constitutions of the international organizations above named will permit.

Resolution No. 28—By delegation of the International Association of Machinists:

Whereas, The controversy existing between the International Association of Machinists and the International Union of Elevator Constructors is yet unadjusted, and

Whereas, The Committee on Adjustment at the Toronto convention of the A. F. of L. favorably recommended a plan of amalgamation, which report of the committee was approved by the convention, and

Whereas, The International Union of Elevator Constructors refused to present the plan of amalgamation to its members, thereby preventing the carrying out of the wishes of the Toronto convention, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. is authorized and hereby instructed to carry into effect the plan of amalgamation as recommended by the Adjustment Committee of the Toronto Convention and approved by the Toronto Convention on or before April 1, 1911, and on the latter date the charter of affiliation held by the International Union of Elevator Constructors be canceled.

The report of the Adjustment Committee of the Toronto Convention was as follows:

"Committee has carefully reviewed the report of the Executive Council of the A. F. of L., the proposition of the International Association of Machinists for amalgamation and the evidence submitted. The proposition of the International Association of Machinists containing the terms of amalgamation is as follows:

1. The I. U. of E. C. to be known in the I. A. of M. as Elevator Constructors' District No. 67. Said district to have jurisdiction over all men engaged in elevator construction work on buildings or wherever elevators may be erected.

2. The present international officers of the I. U. of E. C. shall be the district officers and conduct the affairs of the district in accordance with the laws of the I. A. of M. The salary of the officers to be the same as now paid.

3. The I. A. of M. will grant charters and supplies free of cost to all unions in good standing in the I. U. of E. C., and assign them numbers in accordance with the list of lodges of the I. A. of M.

4. All money in the treasury or hands of other officers or in any way held as the money of the I. U. of E. C. shall become the treasury and money of Elevator Constructors, District No. 67, and be held for the purpose of conducting the financial affairs of that district.

5. All members engaged in the construction of elevators in buildings, or elsewhere, where same is to be used, shall carry their membership in a lodge connected with Elevator Constructors, District No. 67. Members of the I. A. of M. who may be employed now or in the future in the erection or construction of elevators, holding membership in another lodge, shall transfer to the lodge having jurisdiction over this work in the locality where the member or members may be employed in Elevator Constructors, District No. 67.

6. The I. A. of M. agrees to pay 50 per cent of the legitimate salary and expenses of all business agents now paid by and under salary of the I. U. of

E. C., in accordance with the constitution of the I. A. of M.; said business agents who have their offices in the same office as the business agents of the I. A. of M. are located in order that the unnecessary expense of conducting two offices may be avoided.

7. Whereas, The constitution of the I. A. of M. requires that members, to be entitled to strike or victimized benefits of $6.00 per week to single men and $8.00 per week, married men, shall be in three months' good standing to be entitled to same; it is hereby agreed that upon the amalgamation of the two organizations all members of the I. U. of E. C. transferring to the I. A. of M. shall be immediately placed in good standing and entitled to strike and victimized benefits as provided for in the constitution of the I. A. of M.

8. All per capita tax of the A. F. of L. Building Trades Department, and such other departments or organizations as the consolidated organization may become attached to, shall be paid out of the general fund of the I. A. of M.

9. The Elevator Constructors, District No. 67, of the I. A. of M., can hold conventions, adopt laws to govern the district, and carry on the affairs of said district practically on the same lines as now being done by the I. U. of E. C., with the exception that all rules, regulations and laws adopted by Elevator Constructors, District No. 67, shall be in conformity with the general constitution of the I. A. of M.

10. All members of the I. U. of E. C., affiliated with the I. A. of M. shall pay to their local union at least $1.00 per month dues, and each local lodge shall pay to the grand lodge the standard rate of per capita tax prescribed by our constitution, as follows: Journeymen initiation stamp, $1.50; apprentice initiation stamp, 75c; reinstatement stamp, $1.50; monthly due stamp, 55c; apprentice monthly due stamp, 25c; unemployed stamp, 20c. It being understood that the above per capita tax covers the subscription to the monthly journal, the same to be supplied to each lodge in proportion to the number of members in good standing. Each lodge affiliated to conduct its financial business in accordance with the constitution of the I. A. of M.

11. As the I. A. of M. levied a one day's assessment of $2.50 upon each member for three years, covering the years 1908, 1909 and 1910, it is agreed that members of the I. U. of E. C. coming into the I. A. of M. during the year 1909 shall be exempt from payment of the 1908 and 1909 assessments.

12. The I. A. of M. agrees to give all members of the I. U. of E. C. in good standing at the time of amalgamation a credit of six months' good standing membership, so that they will be entitled to the death benefits of the I. A. of M. as soon as the amalgamation takes place.

13. All lodges of the I. U. of E. C. becoming part of the I. A. of M. shall be entitled to send delegates to the convention of the I. A. of M. on the same basis as all other lodges of the I. A. of M. are entitled to.

14. It is hereby agreed that all members of the I. U. of E. C. transferring to and becoming a part of the I. A. of M. shall be entitled to all benefits, privileges and assistance of the association, and the general officers of the I. A. of M. as is given all members and lodges of the I. A. of M.

In the judgment of your Committee on Adjustment, the interests of the machinists and elevator constructors can best be protected by an amalgamation of the two international unions.

We, therefore, recommend that the terms proposed by the International Association of Machinists be accepted and adopted by the Elevator Constructors' International Union as a basis of settlement of the differences between those organizations; that the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. be instructed to use its good offices without delay to consummate the amalgamation of the machinists and Elevator Constructors' International Union; and that the Executive Council for the American Federation of Labor become a party to the plan of amalgamation and settlement, as a guarantee to the absolute fulfillment of its terms.

We, your committee, further recommend that the Executive Council of the

A. F. of L. be authorized and instructed to take such action in the premises as may be deemed necessary to accomplish the desired result."

Resolution No. 29—By John S. Whalen, delegate New York State Federation of Labor.

Whereas, This organization has been organized for a number of years and is continually looking after the interest of organized labor in this state and for their benefit; and

Whereas, There are a large number of locals in the state that are not affiliated with this State Federation; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Federation petition the American Federation of Labor to have its general, district and deputy organizers to do all in their power to have those locals affiliate with this State Federation; and be it further

Resolved, That the delegate to the American Federation of Labor Convention present an amendment to the American Federation of Labor Constitution to compel all city and local central bodies, local unions and federal unions to become affiliated at once with their respective state federations.

Resolution No. 30—By John S. Whalen, delegate, New York State Federation of Labor.

Whereas, New York State has a model law regulating state prison labor,

Whereas, There does exist in many states of the Union convict labor;

Whereas, This convict labor is a menace to free labor of this and other states; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention recommend to the American Federation of Labor Convention to use its best efforts for the passage of a federal law abolishing prison labor; and be it further

Resolved, That the Legislative Committee be instructed to secure the passage of a bill to the end that each individual article made in a penitentiary, reformatory or state prison shall be stamped.

Resolution No. 34—By E. Wm. Carr of the International Printing Pressmen's Union:

Owing to the centralization system of industry affording the people a lesser opportunity of launching successfully into business individually for themselves as formerly, and in view of the fact that almost all manufactories, mercantile and transportation, being owned and controlled by a comparative few, there is now but little opportunity for those among the masses to distinguish themselves through intellect, energy and capability, except as salaried individuals in the capacity of managers, clerical positions, skilled artisans, mechanics and laborers; and in further view of the fact that no matter how talented the individual rarely is the salary allowed to be but little, if any, more than enough to keep them beyond the day whereof they toll; thus those who produce the wealth and splendor of the earth of a right, it is not just that when nearing the end of their journey they should be mortified and dependent on charity or turned away to the poor-house and finally to the potter's field; therefore it is

Resolved, That this body, The American Federation of Labor, herein instructs its Legislative Committee to engage legal talent and have formulated a proposed law, the same to be introduced in congress, substantially as hereinafter included, to-wit:

"Any person having been legally married and having previously been regularly engaged in an honorable business, or having previously been employed regularly at an honorable vocation, but being no longer in business or employed and having an income of less than six hundred dollars, or an equivalent thereto, per annum, and who shall be and shall have been a resident in and a citizen of the United States of America for at least twenty-one years, and who shall arrive at the age of sixty (60) years, shall be entitled to a pension of thirty dollars ($30) per month from the government."

Resolution No. 36—By Delegate John S. Whalen, New York State Federation of Labor.

Whereas, There has been successfully carried out for a number of years by the Brooklyn Central Labor Union, what is known as the Union Label Fair, which has effectively promoted the sale of union-made goods. Realizing that the plan would be more effective if such fairs were held in different parts of the country and promoted by the American Federation of Labor, and through them the manufacturers of union-made articles throughout the country would be induced to exhibit; be it

Resolved, That we endorse the plan conducted by the Brooklyn Central Labor Union and recommend the same to the American Federation of Labor Convention, to be held in St. Louis, and that the delegate of this body be instructed to present the same to the convention for action.

Resolution No. 38—By Delegate John S. Whalen, New York State Federation of Labor.

Whereas, Several attempts have been made during the past few years to have legislation enacted, both state and national, which would destroy the efficient and practical pilot system in New York; and

Whereas, The present laws have proven beneficial to life and property, as the records will demonstrate; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this workingmen's federation condemn any attempt to amend the present law, which would not alone destroy the efficiency of the pilot system, but would also destroy the union whose members have been following this calling for a livelihood for many years; be it further

Resolved, That this be referred to the chairman of the Legislative Committee of this body, and also to the American Federation of Labor.

Resolution No. 40—By Delegates A. McAndrew and E. Lewis Evans, Tobacco Workers' International Union.

Whereas, The promotion of the union label of each respective trade or craft in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor is one of the chief essentials of success,

Whereas, The Tobacco Workers' International Union has adopted a union label to distinguish the union from the non-union products on tobaccos, cigarettes and snuff, and

Whereas, The Tobacco Workers' International Union have been for the past fifteen years and at the present time are consistently engaged in a continual educational and agitation campaign to create a greater demand for tobaccos, cigarettes and snuff that bears the label of the Tobacco Workers' International Union; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the delegates to the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled in St. Louis, November, 1910, realize it our duty to aid and assist with our moral support in creating a greater demand for union labeled tobaccos, cigarettes and snuff; and be it further

Resolved, That at the present time there are some two or three thousand brands of tobaccos, cigarettes and snuff on the market bearing the label of the Tobacco Workers' International Union, superior in quality and cleanliness to non-union brands; that we therefore assert that there can be no valid excuse for members of organized labor for purchasing non-union products with money earned under union conditions.

Resolution No. 41—By Delegate Victor R. Midgley, Vancouver Trades and Labor Council.

Whereas, In almost every locality where there is a local Building Trades Council there are some trades which refuse to join the local council; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Section 38, of the Building Trades Department By-Laws, which states that all local unions shall be compelled to join the Local Building Trades Council, be strictly enforced; and be it further

Resolved, That any International organization that fails to compel their locals to join the local councils when notified by the secretary-treasurer or Executive Board of the Building Trades Department, shall be suspended until they obey the instructions of the Department.

Resolution No. 42—By Harry T. Brady, Jefferson County Trades and Labor Assembly, Steubenville, Ohio.

Whereas, The Jefferson County Trades and Labor Assembly of Steubenville, Ohio, recognizes the fact that organized labor should grow much stronger and become an educator to all; and

Whereas, We believe a great benefit could be derived in both the central bodies and all local unions affiliated if Section 2, Article X, of Resolution No. 35, passed at the Twenty-eighth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at Denver, Colorado, was placed in force; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, that Section 2, Article X, of the constitution, be placed in force and to continue so; and be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor notify all national and international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, that Section 2, Article X, will be enforced within thirty days after adjournment of this convention.

Referred to Committee on Local and Federated Bodies.

At 4 o'clock the convention was adjourned under the rules, to reconvene at 10 a. m., Wednesday, November 16.

Report of Fraternal Delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress.

Secretary Morrison read the following report:

Mr. President and Delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, Greeting:

The Twenty-sixth Convention of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, held in the cities of Fort William and Port Arthur, Ontario, was called to order at 10:00 a. m., Monday, September 12, in the city hall, at Fort William, by President William Glockling, and in response to his invitation, addresses of welcome were made by Presidents Lionel Coursolle and James Booker, of the Fort William and Port Arthur Labor Councils respectively, Mayor Pelletier of Fort Williams, Past President Alphonse Verville; Member of the Dominion Parliament, Allan Studholme, M. P. P. Hamilton, A. W. Puttee, ex-M. P., Winnipeg; Donald McNab, ex-M. P., Alberta, and George Hastings, Mayor of Guelph, Ontario, which were responded to by President Glockling, after which he declared the convention to be ready for the transaction of business.

The report of the Committee on Credentials was then read and adopted, seating thirty-eight delegates from twenty-two Trades and Labor Councils, eleven delegates from five international unions directly affiliated with the congress, and 108 delegates from local and federal labor unions, a total of 157 delegates, one of the largest conventions ever held by the congress.

There were seventy resolutions introduced and acted upon, bearing on questions of vital import to the workers, principal among which were amending the factory laws, increasing the age limit at which children may be employed to 16 years, eight-hour laws, amending the immigration laws, liability and compensation laws, bi-monthly payment of wages by public service corporations, international peace, tuberculosis and the abuse of the writ of injunction.

The reports of the Executive Council and the solicitor for the congress on legislative matters and other topics were highly interesting.

Each of these reports treated especially that of the solicitor, of the legislation that had been introduced and enacted, and the present status of legislation that failed of enactment, among the latter being the eight-hour bill, introduced early in the session by Mr. Verville, which is at present being considered by a special committee during the recess of parliament.

The Lemieux Act was amended in two particulars, as follows: The procedure for references of disputes has been amended so that it is not necessary now in certain cases for officers to take a vote of the members to secure authority to say that a strike will likely be declared, and that authority to declare such a strike has been obtained. This amendment affects principally railway employees where a dispute will involve employees in more than one province, and such employees are members of a trade union having a general committee authorized to carry on any negotiations in a dispute. Another amendment provides that thirty days' notice must be given of any intended change in conditions of employment with respect to hours or wages. If a dispute should result from the notice no change can be made until the board has passed upon the matter. As the act now stands, if any employer should propose to change conditions, he would have to call in a board himself, otherwise the men would simply refuse to accept the change and rest on their oars until the board was called in. The employer would thus either have to call for a board or refrain from making any change.

An act known as the Combines Investigation Act, somewhat similar in scope to our anti-trust law, was introduced at the last session of Parliament, which provided for the investigation of monopolies, combines, trusts, mergers, etc., which may enhance prices or restrict competition to the detriment of consumers. Representations were made to the introducer of this bill, Hon. Mr. King, that as the bill read it might possibly be made to refer to trade unions, and a request was made that a protecting clause be inserted, which was done as follows: Section 48. "This Act shall not be construed to repeal or amend or in any way affect the Trades Union Act, Chapter 125, of the Revised Statutes of 1906."

The successful effort of the congress in thus safeguarding the interests of the workers, especially trades unionists, is worthy of the highest praise and commendation, as it guarantees to the Canadian trades unionists that their future holds nothing in store for them similar to our experience with the Sherman anti-trust law.

Another noteworthy accomplishment of the congress was their success in having the immigration act amended to prevent the importation of strike-breakers in times of industrial strife, by the enactment of the following amendment: "The Governor in Council may, by proclamation or order, whenever he deems it necessary or expedient * * * (c) Prohibit for a stated period or permanently the landing in Canada or the landing at any specified port of entry in Canada, immigrants belonging to any race deemed unsuited to the climate or requirements of Canada, or of immigrants of any specified class, occupation or character."

The explanatory note of the Hon. Mr. Oliver in the draft of the bill submitted to the House, read: "There should be power given to the government to check, in extreme cases, any sudden influx of immigrants whose habits of life or physical or moral characteristics are repugnant to Canadian ideals, or whose entry in unexpected large numbers would tend to lower the Canadian standard of living or would have an unsettling effect upon local labor markets."

In commenting on the passage of this amendment to the immigration act, the Executive Council said: "The importation of strike-breakers admittedly social and moral degenerates, must surely be 'repugnant to Canadian ideals,' and the workers are urged to take every advantage of this provision under the act to prevent the influx of this undesirable class during the time of industrial disputes."

In the report of the Executive Council decided objection was taken to any classification of the congress as a state federation, the position taken by the council and indorsed by the convention being that: "The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada is as supreme in legislative and economic matters in Canada as the American Federation of Labor in the United States, or the British Trades Union Congress in Great Britain, or similar bodies in France, Germany or elsewhere. The American Federation of Labor might just as well class these other bodies as state federations as place the congress in that category. The American Federation of Labor as an organization has done nothing to justify our stating that it believes otherwise, but the correspondence of Secretary Morrison, of that body, shows that his views are that the congress is simply a state federation. We deny it, and no amount of argument will convince us to the contrary. So long as Canada is one country and the United States another, just so long will this congress speak as the supreme mouthpiece of the workers of this country, and it will make for a better understanding if all parties concerned will at once accept this intimation. This congress and every member and body affiliated, stands for international trades unionism, once and for all, but loyalty to that principle does not involve the admission that in other respects our congress is not supreme in Canada. We further believe that where trades councils are chartered by the congress that they should not be requested nor required to take out another charter from the American Federation of Labor. This congress requires every affiliated body to belong to the international union of its trade. An effort has been and is being made to have trades councils already chartered by the congress take out a charter from the American Federation of Labor. We do not believe such efforts are in harmony with that spirit of mutual respect that has been manifested heretofore at all times between the congress and the American Federation of Labor, and we strongly recommend that your executive be authorized to draw the attention of the proper officers of the American Federation of Labor to the matter, with a request that such efforts be discontinued."

A favorable report on the above recommendation was made by the Committee on Officers' Reports, and the Executive Council was instructed to confer with the proper officers of the American Federation of Labor with a view of bringing about a better understanding between the two organizations in the matter of the issuance of charters in Canada.

The report of the secretary-treasurer indicated that the congress was in a very healthy condition, numerically and financially, as he reported a membership of 51,000, receipts of $9,482.34, expenditures of $7,783.56, with a balance of $2,378.78 in the treasury, the largest membership and receipts in the history of the congress.

Of the loyalty of our brothers and sisters in Canada to the international trades union movement there can be no question, as on every hand and on all occasions, this principle appeared as the keystone of the labor movement in Canada. They are grappling with practically the same questions and problems that we are, and in some of the most vital of them they are far in advance of us, most notable of which is their success in having trades unions exempted from the Combines Act. In Port Arthur and Fort William, the cities in which the convention was held, each city owns its own water and lighting plant, and they own jointly, the street railway connecting both cities, all of these plants paying a handsome return on the investment.

The sessions of the congress were impressive and instructive in the highest degree, and it seemed to me as though each delegate had made a careful study of the many perplexing questions discussed, and the intelligence and wisdom displayed in their discussion was conclusive evidence that the delegates realized fully the importance of the work in which they were engaged, and that no stone would be left unturned that would bring about better conditions to work and live under for our brothers and sisters in the Dominion of Canada.

The election of officers resulted in the choice of William Glockling, president; Gustave Granq, vice-president, and P. M. Draper, secretary,—all of whom were re-elected. Calgary, Alberta, was chosen as the convention city in 1911, and R. P. Pettipiece, of Vancouver, a member of the Typographical Union, was selected as the fraternal delegate to the convention of the American Federation of Labor.

No mere words can express the appreciation of your representative for the unlimited entertainment and hospitality that was extended him by the delegates to the convention, and I bespeak for their representative at this convention the same cordial greeting and general good time that has been extended to former representatives from the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress.

Again thanking you for the high honor conferred upon me in making me your fraternal delegate to the Canadian Trades Congress, I am, with the earnest wish for a successful and harmonious convention, Fraternalty yours,

JOHN J. MANNING.

Secretary Morrison: I move that this report, with the report from the Fraternal Delegates to the British Trades Union Congress be referred to a special committee on Fraternal Delegates' Reports. (Seconded.)

In response to a question from Delegate Mahon, as to the object of desiring its report referred to a special committee, Secretary Morrison said: There is a statement in that report that the secretary has stated that the Canadian Congress has the same relation to the American Federation of Labor as a state body. The secretary is not aware of ever having made such a statement. He did, in a letter to the miners eight or ten years ago, state that in the payment of per capita tax their relation to the local unions was the same as the state bodies and central bodies in this country. They have chartered central bodies. The American Federation of Labor today is carrying out the agreement that was entered into with the officers of the Canadian Congress in Toronto and also carrying out the action of a Special Committee I think at New Orleans, in which it was agreed that the American Federation of Labor should charter all central bodies in Canada, the one requirement being that before the Federation would issue a charter to a central body in Canada it would be required to first affiliate with the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress. The Federation has kept faith. I feel that while there is no intention on the part of the Executive Council of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress to place my position in a false light, yet in reading the report it appears to me such is the case. For that reason I believe it should go to a committee to clear up these two points.

Delegate Draper spoke in favor of the motion offered by Secretary Morrison.

Delegate Mahon: I move that the matter be referred to a special committee to define the position of the labor bodies in Canada, and report back to this convention what they think the proper relations of labor organizations in Canada and the United States should be. (Seconded.)

Delegate Furuseth: I move that the report of the delegates be referred to the Committee on President's Report. (Seconded, but not carried.)

President Gompers: The chair would suggest that we first dispose of the report of the committee.

On motion the report of the Fraternal Delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor Council was accepted.

Delegate Mahon: I move that the subject matter of the relations between organized labor of Canada and the United States be referred to a special committee. (Seconded and carried.)

Delegate Duffy (Frank): In looking over the minutes of yesterday, in the report of the Executive Council, I find an omission in that portion under the head of United Brotherhood of Carpenters—Amalgamated Wood-workers.

Secretary Morrison: On page 20, of the proceedings four or five lines were either omitted or distributed in some other part of the report in the make-up. The lines are as follows: "has accepted the Toronto agreement of the Amalgamated Wood-workers' International Union and rejected it. We recommend that unless the latter organization complies with the decision of the Toronto Convention of the American Federation of Labor and becomes amalgamated with the United Brotherhood of Carpenters on or before April 1, 1911, the action and decision of the Toronto Convention shall become effective on that date."

Report of Committee on Credentials.

Delegate Kelly (W. J.), for the Committee, reported as follows:

November 16, 1910.

Your Committee on Credentials beg to report that we have examined credentials from the following organizations, and recommend that their delegates be seated:

Mineral Water Workers' Union 12674—Samuel Leibowitz, 1 vote.
Bellingham, Washington, Central Labor Council—Fred Hudson, 1 vote.
Tuck Pointers' Union 10384—Wm. Lorenzen, 1 vote.
Louisville, Ky., United Trades and Labor Assembly—V. B. Smith, 1 vote.

We further report that the following organizations have liquidated their indebtedness and we recommend that their delegates be seated.

International Brotherhood of Tip Printers—T. J. Carolan, 7 votes.
International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers—John H. Malin, 7 votes.

We have received a communication from Delegate Lowe of the International Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, stating that he is leaving the city, and requesting that Secretary S. J. Pegg, of their organization be seated in his place. We recommend that the request be complied with and

Mr. Pegg be seated as the delegate from the Maintenance of Way Employees in Mr. Lowe's place.

We have received credential from Federal Labor Union 12735, for Osborne More as delegate. The organization, however, is indebted for eleven months' per capita tax and the Hatters' Assessment and is suspended from the Federation and is therefore not entitled to representation.

Federation Labor Union 12363—Guy T. White, 1 vote.

The following protests have been decided by the committee:

Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, protested by the International Association of Car Workers; protest has been withdrawn and we recommend the seating of Martin F. Ryan, Frank Paquin, William J. Adams and John J. Gallagher be seated with 228 votes.

Protest of the Granite Cutters' International Association of America, against the International Union of Pavers, Rammermen, Flag Layers, Bridge and Stone Curb Setters; the protest is withdrawn owing to the fact of an agreement being reached in New York, which is as follows:

New York, November 11, 1910.

Meeting of joint committees representing the Granite Cutters' Local Branch and the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters, Flaggers, Bridge and Curb Stone Setters, and General Organizer Hugh Frayne, acting as mediator, as per resolution adopted by the Building Trades Council on the report of the grievance committee in connection with the grievance of the Granite Cutters against the Blue Stone Cutters. Those present at the meeting were as follows:

From the Granite Cutters—Wm. J. O'Brien, Jas. Sweeney, Lawrence Foley, W. Webster and S. Squibb.

General Organizer Hugh Frayne acting as chairman. Samuel Squibb, Secretary.

A general discussion of the grievances existing between both organizations was entered into in which all those present expressed their views. Two documents were read by Mr. Broderick, relative to the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters getting a national charter from the American Federation of Labor. The other in reference to the protest against granting an extension of charter rights by the American Federation of Labor to the Pavers and Rammermen which conflicted with the jurisdiction of the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters. Jurisdictions claimed by both organizations were freely discussed, after which both sides were made thoroughly acquainted with the general proposition. General Organizer Frayne then suggested the following:

We, the joint committee representing Local Branch of the Granite Cutters' International Association of America, and the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters, Flaggers, Bridge and Curb Stone Setters of America agree to recommend to our respective unions the following:

That the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters, Flaggers, Bridge and Curb Stone Setters of America, make application for a charter to the International Association of Granite Cutters of America, and that the same be granted under the following conditions:

That they be given full authority and jurisdiction over all the work which they now control, all contracts and agreements with employers governing their working condition, hours of labor and wages to remain in effect.

Motion by Brother Broderick of the Blue Stone Cutters and seconded by Brother Sweeney of the Granite Cutters that the recommendation of the joint committee be adopted and that same be recommended to our respective unions for their endorsement and ratification.

Motion unanimously carried.

A motion then was made that all hostilities cease between the Granite Cutters and the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters and that both unions work in harmony pending the granting of the charter to the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters, Flaggers, Bridge and Curb Stone Setters of America.

Motion unanimously carried.

(Signed) for Granite Cutters.

Wm. J. O'Brien,
Jas. J. Sweeney,
Lawrence Foley,
Wm. C. Webster,
Samuel Squibb,

Secretary of Committee.

(Signed) for Blue Stone Cutters.

Edward Broderick,
Daniel F. Murphy,
Jas. H. Urell.

Hugh Frayne, General Organizer of the American Federation of Labor, representing the Building Trades Department.

We recommend the seating of Edward I. Hannah, with 15 votes.

Protest of the Granite Cutters' International Association of America against the Central Federated Union of Greater New York and vicinity; the protest is withdrawn for the same reasons as the International Union of Pavers, Rammermen, Flag Layers, Bridge and Curb Stone Setters. Recommend the seating of Albert Abrahams, with one vote.

Protest of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers against the Keokuk Trades and Labor Assembly for refusing to unseat a seceding organization of Electrical Workers. Committee recommend that Delegate Curtis C. Koepf representing that body be not seated for violation of the constitution of the American Federation of Labor in retaining in its body a seceding organization of Electrical Workers.

Protest of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America against the Amalgamated Wood Workers' International Union of America. Your committee have heard both sides in this protest, but inasmuch as the Executive Council in their report to this convention have reported that if the Amalgamated Wood Workers' International Union of America do not comply with the Toronto decision and amalgamate with the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America by April 1, 1911, that their charter will be revoked. We recommend that the delegate representing the Amalgamated Wood Workers' International Union, D. D. Mulcahy, be seated in this convention with 32 votes, with the distinct understanding that the report of the Executive Council be positively carried out.

Respectfully submitted,

MICHAEL J. HALLINAN, Chairman.
A. J. KUGLER,
WM. J. KELLY, Secretary.

Delegate Kelly, Secretary of the Committee: I move the seating of the delegates whose seating is recommended in the report of the committee. (Seconded.)

Delegate Mulcahy (D. D.): The report of the committee just read recommends my seating with the express understanding that the report and recommendation of the Executive Council be carried out. Would the adoption of the report of the committee preclude the delegate from the woodworkers making a contest on the question of the revocation of the charter?

President Gompers: The chair will say that a statement contained in the report of the Committee on Credentials, that a delegate be admitted to a seat upon a condition such as is included in the statement of the Committee on Credentials, has no binding effect until the matter itself is determined by this convention.

Delegate Furuseth: I move that the condition be stricken out.

President Gompers: If there is no objection it will be stricken out.

Delegate Duffy (Frank): There is objection on my part to striking it out. The carpenters have no objection to Delegate Mulcahy of the woodworkers being seated. Toward Delegate Mulcahy we have no personal animosity whatever. We hope in the future in attending a convention of the American Federation of Labor that Delegate Mulcahy will be a delegate representing the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

Delegate Gallagher opposed the report of the committee in regard to the central body of Keokuk, Iowa.

The motion offered by Delegate Kelly, to seat the delegates recommended in the report of the committee, was carried.

Delegate Kelly: The committee recommends that the delegate of the Keokuk Trades and Labor Assembly be not seated, and moves the adoption of the report. (Seconded.)

Delegate Gallagher spoke in opposition to the report of the committee. Delegate Kelly spoke in favor of the report of the committee.

Delegate Furuseth: I move as a substitute that the delegate be seated. (Seconded.)

Vice-President Duncan arose to a point of order, and stated that the motion offered by Delegate Furuseth was a negative motion. The point of order was declared well taken.

Delegate Robinson (D. W.): Delegate Bell, Delegate Gallagher and Delegate Midgley opposed the report of the committee. Delegate Collins, Delegate Kugler and Delegate Hallinan spoke in favor of the report of the committee.

Delegate Curtis C. Koepf of the Keokuk central body made a statement in behalf of his organization.

The motion to adopt the report of the committee, to not seat the delegate from the Keokuk Trades and Labor Assembly, was carried by a vote of 124 in the affirmative to 82 in the negative.

Secretary Morrison read the following telegrams:

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 15, 1910.
Mr. Frank Morrison, Secretary A. F. of L., St. Louis.

To the Officers and Delegates of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the A. F. of L., Greetings:

By unanimous action of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Los Angeles I was instructed to urge upon the delegates assembled the urgent necessity of your co-operation in assisting the unions of Los Angeles to combat the powerful anti-union organizations who are now trying to disrupt all of the union organizations of the city. Trusting this appeal will receive due consideration, I remain,

Fraternally yours,

Geo. A. Peterson,
Secretary Los Angeles Allied Printing Trades Council.

Greater New York, Nov. 15, 1910.

Brother President, Vice-President and Fellow Delegates, Greetings—Ladies' Waist and Dressmakers' Union, New York Local 25 I. L. G. W. Union sends its heartiest congratulations and best wishes to the Thirtieth Convention of our great body, and trusts that this convention will take best ways and means to organize the workers of this country to be successful in our daily struggle against our exploiters.

Ladies Waist and Garment Workers' Union, Local 25.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 15, 1910.

Frank Morrison, A. F. of L. Convention Hall, St. Louis, Mo.

To the Thirtieth Annual Convention A. F. of L.—Do not let the papers deceive you about Los Angeles. The hounds are in the flesh pots, but the spirit of organization was never better than now. Labor stands firm in its position here. Our hope is that your action will bring help.

Frank Morrison, Secretary A. F. of L., Planters Hotel, St. Louis, Mo.

Members of organized labor in the state of Georgia send greetings to the officers and delegates of the Thirtieth Convention of the American Federation of Labor. Our sincere wish is that plans will be matured to push the work already started to a successful finish, and that new problems will be successfully met. With best wishes for a successful and harmonious convention, we are,

Fraternally,

C. T. Williamson, President,
Robt. Fechner, Secretary,
Georgia State Federation of Labor.

Secretary Morrison read a communication from St. Louis Aerie No. 41, F. O. E., in which was contained an invitation to the delegates to visit the club hall of the organization, 2729 Pine street.

Secretary Morrison also read a communication from Waitresses' Union Local 249, in which an invitation was extended to the delegates to attend a ball to be given by the union Saturday evening, November 19, at 3535 Pine street.

Secretary Morrison read a communication from a local photographer who desired the privilege of making a group photograph of the convention.

Delegate Owen Miller of the Local Committee stated that arrangements had already been made with a photographer, and on motion the time for taking the photograph was fixed at 1 o'clock Thursday.

Delegate Mahon asked if arrangements had been made to consider the Los Angeles situation. Delegate Gallagher stated that a resolution on that subject had been introduced, and when the committee to which it had been referred reported on the resolution the matter would come up.

Delegate Owen Miller stated that as president of the Missouri Federation of Labor he desired to call a meeting of all the delegates representing central and state bodies at the Planters Hotel, at 7:30 p. m., Wednesday.

Delegate Lewis (T. L.): I desire to say that I will not be able to serve on the Committee on Adjustment this year and wish to be excused. I sent a telegram to the president to that effect. That telegram stands. I have served on that committee, I believe, for seven years, and have been deprived of attending the sessions of this convention because of the amount of work the secretary of that committee has had to perform. My other duties require my attention, and I am not sure I will be here during all the sessions of this convention.

President Gompers: The chair desires to say to Delegate Lewis that the telegram was received after the committee had been made up. When the committees were announced mention was made of the fact that the telegram had been received. Delegate O'Connell expressed a great desire for your assistance on that committee, Delegate Lewis, and inasmuch as you said in the telegram that you would be in the convention in a day or two I deferred the matter until your arrival. If you decline to serve, I suppose there is nothing for the convention to do but to accept your declination to serve this year, and the chair will substitute Emmet Adams as a member of that committee.

Secretary Morrison read an announcement that the International Labor Press Association would hold a meeting at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon in the upper room of the convention hall. The communication was signed by Charles W. Fear, president, and Will M. Maupin, secretary.

Secretary Morrison announced that the chairman had appointed the following special committee:

Special Committee on Relations of Labor in Canada to Labor in the United States—F. W. McCullough, Robert Glockling, Frank M. Ryan, W. D. Mahon, Alex. Kelso, J. F. Dunachie, John Tobin, Samuel Kelley, E. L. Smyth, Joe Evans, Ben Teagarden, Norval White, Charles H. Joyner, Frank Paquin.

Delegate Frey: The committee appointed at the Toronto Convention on the Electrical Workers' case has a report prepared, and is ready to submit it.

Delegate Duffy (Frank): As one of that committee I, too, have a report to submit to the convention, if necessary, but it is not here. I would ask that the matter be postponed until I have a chance to have my report here.

The request of Delegate Duffy was complied with, and later the following reports were submitted:

Report of Special Committee Appointed by Toronto Convention on Dispute of Electrical Workers.

Delegate Frey, for the committee, reported as follows:

Mr. Chairman—In making this report the committee desires to say that it is as brief as we felt it was possible to make it. Only those points of special interest, in so far as what the committee actually did in the way of rendering decisions, are covered in the report itself. There are a large number of documents connected with the work which the committee undertook after the adjournment of the Toronto Convention. Those documents are here, but have not all been incorporated in the report. Mention only is made of them. If all the documents were incorporated it would probably take an entire day to read the matter that came to the attention of the committee. The following is the report of the committee:

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 14, 1910.

Brothers—Your special committee appointed by the Toronto Convention of the American Federation of Labor, 1909, in connection with the dispute existing between the two factions of the electrical workers, submits to you the following report:

The committee met in Springfield, Ill., on December 9, 1909, and organized by selecting John P. Frey as chairman.

Both factions of the electrical workers being present, a statement was made of the duties which had been placed upon the committee by the Toronto Convention, and the object which the committee would endeavor to accomplish. For your information, and as an evidence of the committee's conception of its duties, the following excerpts of statements made by the chairman of the committee and Mr. Frank Duffy, at the opening of the committee's first session, are herewith reproduced from the stenographic report.

The chairman said, in part: As we understand the position of the Toronto Convention, it decided that an amalgamation of the two organizations must take place. The Committee of Arbitration that was appointed has been made responsible for bringing about that amalgamation, so that the principal subject for this committee to consider is the most practical and the most satisfactory basis for amalgamation that can be reached, as a result of your advising the committee and assisting it as far as you can; but it seems to me it is well during all the time we are going to spend together to hold this one fact clearly in view, that the object of our efforts is to assist in bringing about amalgamation.

The action of the Toronto Convention was then read, after which Mr. Frank Duffy made the following statement:

The whole drift of the agreement of Denver is leading to amalgamation, and the whole drift of the Toronto Convention is leading to amalgamation, and that agreement at Denver was signed by representatives of both organizations, which neither deny; afterwards both organizations on the floor of the Toronto Convention agreed to abide by the report brought in then, which included the Denver agreement, and afterwards, before the final adjournment, Mr. Frey asked the question of President Gompers which he just read and President Gompers replied to same. We want you to understand it. I take it that the committee had in mind that the general executive officers of both sides and the president of the American Federation of Labor would appoint capable, careful men, who would be impartial in their efforts to see that amalgamation is accomplished.

The convention took no exception to the answer of President Gompers, with the exception of myself. I said: "I am not quite satisfied with that answer. I am appointed on a special committee to work to accomplish something if possible, but if it is only in an advisory capacity, you might as well take me off right now. The organization I represent is involved; we have been suffering from it, and other building trades have been suffering. I want to know if the decision of the committee appointed by both factions of the electrical workers and by the president is to be final and binding, and settle forever this question."

President Gompers answered. "The chair is under the impression that he firmly and emphatically so declared."

What I want to make clear was that all the agreements, Denver and Toronto, and the questions and answers given before the conventions, all tell us clearly, satisfactorily and definitely, that this committee must bring about amalgamation of the two organizations.

Your committee found that one of the situations which must be overcome before the preliminary steps for amalgamation could be set in motion, was the full release of all funds belonging to the two factions of the electrical workers, which were tied up in banks either through official protests which had been filed by officers of one or both of the factions, or through a court's restraining order.

Formal notification to the State National Bank and the Sangamon Loan and Trust Company, both of Springfield, Ill., notifying them that the protests which had been entered, were hereby withdrawn, were signed by the officers of the two factions and given to the committee, with the understanding that these sums of money would remain in the banks until the committee was prepared to assume charge as trustee of the funds which would be turned over to the duly elected officers of the amalgamated organization.

To prevent any action which would tend to increase the sentiments of hostility which might exist between members of the two factions, the committee by a unanimous vote decided that where either faction had a local union in existence that the other faction would not be recognized as having the right to organize a union of its faction in that city.

Your committee was unanimously of the opinion that the standing of all local unions of either faction at the time the Toronto Convention adjourned should remain in statu quo until the committee had succeeded in bringing about an amalgamation of both factions, and it was decided to present this opinion to the first meeting of the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. and strongly urge that the American Federation of Labor should maintain a neutral attitude toward all questions arising through the presence of local unions of the Reid faction which might be seated in bodies affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

On January 12, 1910, two members of the committee appeared before the Executive Council, the third member, Mr. Frank Duffy, being unable, because of other duties, to be present. The desire of the committee was presented and a report made of the results of the committee's first session.

On February 10, the full committee had its second session, this being again held in Springfield, Ill. After going into executive session, the committee believing that a positive statement as to its purpose had become necessary, a statement was unanimously adopted and then presented in open session to the representatives of both factions, as follows:

The committee has come to the conclusion that a convention must be held before a satisfactory amalgamation of both factions of the electrical workers can take place, and that this convention should be held at the earliest possible date.

The committee will issue a call for this convention in conjunction with the officers of both bodies of the electrical workers, this action on the part of the committee being contingent upon the assurance of the attorneys of both factions that the injunctions which are at present tying up brotherhood funds in the Cleveland banks, and all suits at law tying up brotherhood funds in any other banks in any other city, have been dissolved.

Furthermore, that these funds after being so released shall be placed under the charge and control of this committee, to be placed in a trust fund to the credit of the United Brotherhood in such manner that they can be legally transferred to the duly authorized officers of the amalgamated organization.

The officers of the Reid faction were informed by your committee that they must immediately institute steps to have the injunction tying up electrical workers' funds in the banks of Cleveland, Ohio, dissolved, and also furnish evidence that steps to this end were being taken.

In connection with this injunction and all matters of law suits by either faction, the committee, by an unanimous vote, notified both factions that no suits at law between the two factions could be entered; that no suits on file should be called for a hearing, except such legal steps as were necessary on the part of the Reid faction to secure the dissolving of the injunction tying up brotherhood funds in Cleveland banks.

The committee was given an opportunity of consulting with President Kirby of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, relative to situations which had arisen because of the affiliation of Reid faction locals with building trades councils, and being desirous of having neutrality maintained, the committee, by unanimous action drafted the following letter, to which the reply is herewith appended:

Springfield, Ill., February 13, 1910.

Dear Sir and Brother: The special committee appointed by the American Federation of Labor for the purpose of taking up the dispute between the two factions of the electrical workers desire to make a request, in view of the situation which has developed since the recent Toronto Convention of the A. F. of L.

We have learned that there are at present several local unions affiliated with the so-called Reid faction of the electrical workers which are seated in local councils of the Building Trades Department, this being in contravention to the laws of the A. F. of L.

In view of the tense feeling existing between the two factions of the electrical workers and the many difficulties which must be overcome before amalgamation can be effected, our committee believes that no good purpose could be accomplished at this time by the unseating of these Reid locals.

We therefore take the liberty of requesting that you lend our committee such assistance as you can by not taking any action at this time which would bring about the unseating of the local unions referred to, as such action, in our opinion, would tend to make our labors difficult.

Trusting that you will find it possible to comply with our request and to assist in the work that this committee has undertaken, we remain, fraternally yours, (Signed) Committee.

February 16, 1910.

Mr. John P. Frey, Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio:

Dear Sir and Brother—I beg leave to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 13th instant, in which you request that the Building Trades Department lend its assistance to your committee by not taking any action for the time being that will lead to the unseating of local unions of the Reid faction of the electrical workers. I beg to say that such a course will be repugnant to the Building Trades Department, but if by its observance it is possible to bring about a solidification of the electrical workers in one organization under the banner of the American Federation of Labor, we shall cheerfully respect your wish.

With kindest regards and best wishes, I am,

Fraternally yours,

(Signed) JAMES KIRBY.

President Building Trades Department.

On the afternoon of the second day of this session a statement was made that the Reid faction had violated the provisions of the Toronto agreement by instituting additional joinders to the injunction on February 7.

This charge was later on discovered to be an error due to a stenographer employed by an attorney of one of the factions. The facts being that on November 16, 1909, three joinders to the injunction suit had been sent to the Reid attorneys and filed in court on December 7 of the same year. Before this information had been secured the committee believed it inadvisable to continue its sessions further in Springfield, deciding to hold its next session in Cleveland, Ohio, where it would be possible to have the attorneys for both factions appear before the committee. This session was set for February 23.

But little was accomplished at this meeting, for at the noon hour of the first day and before an open session of the committee had been held, Mr. Starr, leading counsel for the Reid faction, died suddenly, from heart failure.

But one point of importance was decided upon at this session.

A Pittsburg contractor, employing members of the McNulty faction, had secured the contract for the electrical work in the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' building in Cleveland. As the Reid faction had an organization in Cleveland, objections had been entered against working with a member of the other faction, and a serious situation was arising in the building trades over the question which had arisen. To meet this situation the committee, by unanimous action, laid down the following decision: That where a member of one faction in good standing secured a position under the jurisdiction of the other faction, that he should not be discriminated against.

On March 10 your committee again met in Cleveland, Ohio, representatives and the attorneys of both factions being present. The attorneys were advised as to the desire of the committee in having the funds tied up by injunction released, through the dissolving of the restraining order, and then placed in the committee's control as trustees in such manner that they could be legally turned over to the duly elected officers of an amalgamated organization. Lengthy verbal statements were made by the attorneys of both sides, supplemented by as lengthy written ones, and in addition a proposition was submitted by the Reid attorneys which they thought would untangle the legal phases of the controversy. This proposition, which was tentative in character and too lengthy to incorporate in this report, was unanimously rejected by the committee as impractical and unsatisfactory, and the attorneys were informed of the conditions which the committee would insist upon being complied with.

At the forenoon session of the following day, a verbal statement was submitted by the Reid attorneys and later submitted in writing, which reads as follows:

Law Offices, Weed, Miller & Rothenberg.
Cleveland, Ohio, March 11, 1910.

Messrs. John P. Frey, Frank Duffy, A. L. Urlick, Arbitration Committee of the American Federation of Labor, appointed to adjust the differences of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers:

Gentlemen: In pursuance with your permission and for the purpose of putting in black and white the proposition we submitted to you this morning by parole, we wish to say on behalf of our clients, whom we have referred to as the Reid Organization of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, that we offer for the purpose of harmony and unifying the brotherhood to do the following things:

1. To have the consent order of court made dissolving the injunction heretofore granted in the suit pending in the Court of Common Pleas here.

2. To immediately dismiss said suit as far as the same stands in the name of the plaintiff and all other parties to the action whom we represent, provided the attorneys for the other organization of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, whom we have referred to as the McNulty Organization, will dismiss their cross petition in said action.

3. That the proper officers of the Reid Organization will join with the proper officers of the McNulty Organization in an assignment, by which they each and all assign and transfer to your committee all and every one of their respective rights, title and interest in and to the moneys in the banks here in Cleveland and the respective rights, title and interest of their respective organizations in the same in trust, to receive and hold the same; to be by such trustees turned over to the proper officers of International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers that shall be elected at a convention of that brotherhood, as heretofore directed by you to be held at Springfield, Illinois, the time for holding the same to be fixed by you.

As it is evident and conceded that the banks here would not pay over these moneys to such trustees unless ordered by the court to do so, we further offer to join with the attorneys and representatives of the McNulty Organization in bringing such suitable proceedings in the Court of Common Pleas here as may be proper and necessary for the purpose of getting such order of the court, and believe and feel confident that if said attorneys and representatives of the McNulty Organization join with us in such proceedings, we can secure such order, so that the moneys will be on hand and in the possession of said trustees in ample time before the meeting of said convention, so that the same can be immediately turned over to the officers of said brotherhood elected by said convention, upon their election having been consummated.

The foregoing we believe is in substance the same as the proposition we made to you by parole this morning, and we herewith again submit the same proposition to you, desiring, however, that a complete agreement shall be had by which the things that shall be done shall be definitely and positively established and determined, so that there will be no possibility of any dispute in the future.

We have submitted to you a written outline of the method of procedure which we believe would be wise to make and follow for the purpose intended, which written method we submit to you for your approval, but will be satisfied to make such modifications, amendments or additions thereto as in your judgment is necessary in order to accomplish the unification and amalgamation of the entire brotherhood.

Personally, as attorneys for the organization known as the Reid Organization, we have submitted the several propositions and the foregoing as the conclusion of them all, to you in good faith and we hereby pledge to you our professional and personal promise that we will do all in our power to see that said propositions are carried out in accordance with their letter and spirit. We recognize the situation as it now is, and believe that what we have offered is the only method by which the present situation can be handled, so as to secure the results desired, to-wit, the unification of the Brotherhood and the placing of the assets of the Brotherhood in the hands of whom they belong. We can not do impossibilities. We have got to take the situation as it is now, and will seek to co-operate with your committee in every possible and reasonable effort to secure such unification.

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) WILLIAM T. CLARK,
ALBERT H. WEED.

Brotherhood of Electrical Workers
(Reid Organization.)

This written statement of the verbal proposal of the Reid factions attorneys was read by the full committee, who agreed that it was, in substance and effect, the same as the verbal statement. Before this statement was transferred to writing the committee went into executive session, when the following ultimatum was presented by Mr. Frank Duffy:

Cleveland, Ohio, March 11, 1910.

Messrs. Frey and Urlick, Members Special Committee appointed by Toronto Convention of the A. F. of L., in the Electrical Workers' Dispute:

Gentlemen—I herewith notify you that I will not serve further on the Special Committee of the A. F. of L. in the electrical workers' dispute, nor will I attend any more sessions of said committee, either here or elsewhere, until I am officially notified by the American Federation of Labor that the lawsuits now pending in Cleveland, Ohio, have been withdrawn by Messrs. Gelb, Reid, Sullivan, Murphy and others who entered same and are parties thereto, and until such time as the moneys now tied up by the injunction process and otherwise have been liberated and placed in such a manner that they can be at the disposal of the convention when such is called.

I am sorry to be compelled to take this course, but as Reid, Sullivan, Murphy and others have done nothing up to the present time to comply with the orders of the Denver and Toronto Conventions of the A. F. of L. I have no other alternative.

Fraternally yours,

(Signed) FRANK DUFFY.

Member of Special Committee.

Upon receipt of this ultimatum, the representatives of the two factions and their attorneys were called before the committee and informed of the position which had been assumed by Mr. Duffy. At this time Mr. Frank J. McNulty informed the committee that he would withdraw his side from the arbitration, and with his representatives and attorneys he left the room. He was asked to place his action in writing, which he did. It reads as follows:

Springfield, Ill., March 11, 1910.

Dear Sirs—Confirming my verbal statement made to you this morning respecting our inability to further continue the arbitration matter pending before you, and our withdrawal from it, I desire to call your attention briefly to the present situation.

We wrote you in a letter dated March 8th and delivered it to you on March 10th, in which we called to your attention a few of the failures and refusals of the Reid faction to abide by the Denver and Toronto agreements. We refer you to that letter.

It has always been our desire to have a united brotherhood, and to that end we willingly entered into the Denver agreement in November of 1908, which provided that all lawsuits should be immediately withdrawn and all moneys turned into a trust fund, to be held at Springfield, Illinois, and that all disputes should be immediately settled by arbitration.

We have at all times, both under the Denver and the Toronto agreements, been willing, and have aided you, and attended every meeting you have held to assist in effecting a settlement of the Electrical Workers' disputes.

From the very day of the Denver agreement the Reid faction has done nothing either to help a settlement, dismiss the suits, establish the trust fund, or in any manner to harmonize the Electrical Workers. On the contrary, they have filed new cross petitions in the suit at Cleveland and have instituted new suits at Springfield. Even after the Toronto agreement was made they continued to file cross petitions in the Cleveland suit, all of which shows that they do not intend that you shall make any final and decisive holding in this matter. Instead of complying with the Denver and Toronto agreements, and going forward in good faith with this arbitration, the other side now comes forward with new plans, which are wholly contrary to the letter and spirit of the Denver and Toronto agreements.

Manifestly these plans are intended to accomplish nothing but procrastination and delay, and thereby enable them to use your committee and its meetings from time to time as a further aid in accomplishing their purpose to disrupt our organization.

In the meantime we learn that the Reid faction have been circulating at large the statement that the lawsuits have not been tried and disposed of because we are afraid to meet them in the courts. Such is not the fact. Our only reason for permitting delay in the trial of the existing lawsuits was because of our express contract with the other side, found in the Denver and Toronto agreements, by which we were to settle all matters of dispute by arbitration and not by law.

As matters now stand, by reason of the bad faith and flagrant violation of contract by the other side, we are released from our agreement to arbitrate, and it becomes our duty in protection of the rights and standing of our brotherhood to immediately press forward the trial of the lawsuit to the end that an early decision be reached, which shall forever set at rest the wrongful claims being made against us, and which will establish the rights of our brotherhood.

For these reasons we respectfully withdraw from this arbitration, and say that if the Reid faction will consent to the trial of their lawsuit immediately, we will be ready at once to meet them in court; and if they do not consent, we have instructed our lawyers to press the suit for trial at the very earliest possible date that the court can compel the other side to come to trial.

Fraternally yours,

(Signed) F. J. McNULTY.

International President.

JAS. P. NOONAN.

International Vice-President.

At a brief session of the committee which followed, Mr. Duffy presented his resignation as a member of the committee to the committee, which read as follows:

Cleveland, Ohio, March 11, 1910.

Messrs. Frey and Urick, Members Special Committee of the A. F. of L., appointed at the Convention of said Body held in Toronto, November, 1909:

Gentlemen—After listening to the lawyers this forenoon when my communication of even date was read and my rights as a member of the committee questioned, my motives and intentions ridiculed by the lawyers representing the Reid faction, and owing to the fact that Messrs. Gelb, Reid, Sullivan, Murphy and others have absolutely done nothing to comply with the agreements entered into at the Denver and Toronto Conventions of the A. F. of L., although repeatedly requested to do so by the committee at every meeting of the committee, I herewith notify you that I resign from the committee, same to take effect this date.

I will notify the A. F. of L. of my action in this respect.

Fraternally yours,

(Signed) FRANK DUFFY,
Member of Special Committee.

Mr. Duffy was informed that the committee had no power or authority to accept his resignation, but that it should be tendered to the American Federation of Labor, and your committee has been informed that this was done. Since the action taken by Mr. Duffy and Mr. McNulty, your committee has held itself in readiness to proceed with its duties, but no further sessions have been held, as Mr. McNulty has not indicated any desire to recede from his action in withdrawing his side from arbitration.

Your committee is of the opinion that the amalgamation of the two factions of the Electrical Workers can only be affected through a convention at which the representatives of the local unions of both factions are present as delegates. It does not believe that a decision of a court of law could affect an amalgamation of the two factions of the Electrical Workers. Furthermore, it does not believe that the best interest of the trade union movement are to be conserved by having contending factions agree to arbitration for the purpose of adjusting their differences, before the highest court of organized labor, the American Federation of Labor, and afterwards withdrawing from arbitration, and endeavoring to accomplish their object by securing a decision from a court of law which may give to them the authority and jurisdiction they were contending for.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN P. FREY,

A. L. URICK.

Delegate Duffy (Frank)—Just before reading my report I wish to inform you that I looked upon myself all the time as a representative of the American Federation of Labor, not as representing the McNulty faction, and so expressed myself on the committee on more than one occasion. The convention in Toronto could have appointed a committee, but in order to give satisfaction to all the parties interested Mr. McNulty was allowed to appoint one member of that committee, Mr. Reid another, and the American Federation of Labor a third. I always looked upon all the members of that committee as representing the American Federation of Labor, and not any particular party.

Delegate Duffy read the following report:

ELECTRICAL WORKERS.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 15, 1910.

Mr. Samuel Gompers, President American Federation of Labor, Washington, D. C.:

Dear Sir and Brother:—When I was selected by President McNulty, of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers at the Toronto Convention of the American Federation of Labor, to represent his organization on the special committee appointed by order of said convention to bring about an amalgamation of the divided forces of the Electrical Workers into one united organization, it was unwillingly I consented to act, as I did not want to become involved in a dispute to which I was not a party, and of which I knew practically nothing; besides that, I could not afford to spend much time in others' troubles, as my time was completely taken up with the affairs of my own organization. However, as the Building Trades were involved in this dispute for some time past, yes, from its very inception, and as the carpenters were also involved in it to the extent of walking the streets, out of work, I at last consented to act, and to do my best to bring about a satisfactory amalgamation of the divided forces of the Electrical Workers into one organization in accordance with the provisions, terms and conditions of the agreements entered into at Denver and Toronto by both parties, and concurred in and endorsed by the American Federation of Labor. I was not prejudiced in any way to either party when I accepted to act, nor am I now. I believed something could be done to solidify and unite the scattered forces of the Electrical Workers, and to that end and for that purpose I willingly gave my services. Although four months have elapsed since the adjournment of the Toronto Convention, and although four meetings of the committee were held, two in Springfield, Ill., and two in Cleveland, Ohio, nothing has been accomplished. It is not the fault of the committee, however. I can assure you the committee did its best to proceed with the work referred to it, but it was hampered and blocked in every way possible by the opposing forces.

At the meeting held in Cleveland, Ohio, February 23d and 24th, the committee found fault because no progress was made. I drew President McNulty's attention to this complaint, and he and his colleagues took it up with their lawyers, with the object in view of trying to get the Reid faction, through their lawyers, to withdraw the suits and liberate the funds tied up.

Under date of March 7, 1910, Mr. Stewart & Co., lawyers for the McNulty faction, notified Mr. McNulty that the Reid faction had not withdrawn their suits, and, further, that they did not intend to withdraw them, as their lawyers had advised them not to withdraw or dismiss said suits. (See copy of Mr. Stewart's letter herewith attached, marked "Exhibit A.")

On March 10th, the special committee received a letter from President McNulty, dated March 8, 1910, informing said committee that he and his organization had complied in every particular with the terms of the Denver agreement. Had dismissed the one suit they had on the docket, and stood ready and willing to comply with any further orders of the committee, in accordance with the terms of the Denver and Toronto agreements. (See copy of letter herewith attached, marked "Exhibit B.")

On the same date, March 10, 1910, the lawyers told the committee in session at the Euclid Hotel, Cleveland, Ohio:

1. That the lawsuits could not be withdrawn.

2. That the moneys tied up could not be liberated only by action of courts.

I, in reply informed the lawyers representing both sides that the lawsuits could be withdrawn, dismissed or dissolved and that the moneys could be released. The Reid lawyers then submitted to the committee a plan to bring about amalgamation, which, in sum and substance amounted to this; that the lawsuits be continued; that the funds remain tied up as they are and that on the election of officers at the proposed special convention when amalgamation takes place the whole matter be there and then settled. This I would not agree to nor would the other members of the committee. On March 11th, the Reid lawyers proposed verbally:

1. To withdraw, dismiss and dissolve the lawsuits.

2. To try and liberate part of the funds, say one-half so as to be able to pay the expenses of the convention. But when pinned down to facts they acknowledged they could only begin to dissolve the suits; that while they could get Gelb, Reid, Murphy and others present in Cleveland to consent yet they would have to get the consent of all parties to the suits to withdraw or dismiss them. This included three hundred and fifty local unions and district councils of the Reid faction who had become parties to the suits since the Denver Convention of the American Federation of Labor, any one of which could object and the suits would have to still stand. This to my mind was only a play for time. What Reid and his followers and lawyers wanted was delay; besides that, they could not guarantee that even part of the funds would be liberated. They would try and liberate some but they could not promise anything definite. That left us in this position.

1. The suits at law would not be withdrawn.
2. The funds would not be liberated.
3. A convention would be called and at its adjournment no funds would be on hand to pay the delegates.
4. The courts would have to decide to whom the funds must be paid before the banks would pay same.

I informed the members of the committee and the lawyers representing both sides that we were at the parting of the ways; that I would not consent to any such proposition; that I would never be a party to calling a convention under such conditions; that I would not attend such a convention if called, and that I would only stand for a convention being called at all when the terms of the Denver and Toronto agreements had been complied with. In order to bring the Reid faction to a sense of their duty I served the following notice on the other two members of the committee:

"Cleveland, Ohio, March 11, 1910.

Messrs. Frey and Urlick, members Special Committee appointed by Toronto Convention of the American Federation of Labor, in the Electrical Workers' Dispute.

Gentlemen—I herewith notify you that I will not serve further on the Special Committee of the American Federation of Labor, in the Electrical Workers' dispute, nor will I attend any more sessions of said committee, either here or elsewhere until I am officially notified by the American Federation of Labor that the lawsuits now pending in Cleveland, Ohio, have been withdrawn by Messrs. Gelb, Reid, Sullivan, Murphy and others who entered same and are parties thereto and until such time as the moneys now tied up by injunction process and otherwise have been liberated and placed in such a manner that they can be at the disposal of the convention when such is called.

I am sorry to be compelled to take this course, but as Reid, Sullivan, Murphy and others have done nothing up to the present time to comply with the orders of the Toronto and Denver Conventions of the American Federation of Labor, I have no other alternative.

Respectfully and fraternally yours,

FRANK DUFFY,
Member of Special Committee."

When the committee called in the lawyers and the representatives of both factions, and read the aforesaid communication I was accused by the Reid lawyers of:

1. Blocking the way.
2. Of resigning from the committee.
3. Of being unfair.
4. Of taking uncalled and unnecessary measures in the premises. Besides that, my rights as a member of the committee were questioned. It was pointed out I was only the minority part of the committee; that the majority could go ahead, hold sessions, and make a final award. My motives and intentions were ridiculed. It was then plain to me that the lawyers representing the Reid faction, and that Messrs. Reid, Murphy and others of the Reid faction, did not intend to live up to or abide by the Denver and Toronto agreements. I forthwith resigned from the committee by serving the following notice on that body:

"Cleveland, Ohio, March 11, 1910.

Messrs. Frey and Urlick, members Special Committee of the American Federation of Labor, appointed by the Convention of said body held in Toronto, November, 1909.

Gentlemen—After listening to the lawyers this forenoon when my communication of even date was read and my rights as a member of the committee questioned, my motives and intentions ridiculed by the lawyers representing the Reid faction, and owing to the fact that Messrs. Gelb, Reid, Sullivan, Murphy and others have absolutely done nothing to comply with the agreements entered into at the Denver and Toronto Conventions of the American Federation of Labor, although repeatedly requested to do so by the committee at every meeting of the committee, I herewith notify you that I resign from the committee, same to take effect this date. I will notify the American Federation of Labor of my action in this respect.

Respectfully and fraternally yours,

FRANK DUFFY,
Member of Special Committee."

President McNulty, seeing the trend affairs had taken, was compelled, there and then to withdraw from the arbitration plan of amalgamation as it would not be fair, right or just to his organization, to allow the committee to proceed with its work when his representative had resigned. He so notified the committee in writing. That action on his part, along with my resignation, put the committee out of business.

I wish here to inform you, plainly, clearly and distinctly, without fear of contradiction from any one, that Reid and his organization have not abided by, observed or lived up to the Denver and Toronto agreements in any semblance. After the Denver Convention, Reid, Murphy and others advised all their local unions and district councils to become parties to the Cleveland injunction suit, tying up the funds, resulting in, as Mr. Clark, their attorney, says, of over three hundred and fifty local unions and district councils becoming parties thereto. In doing this they built up a colossal barrier, they thought would be insurmountable, and would defy the A. F. of L. to overcome. This was in violation of the Denver agreement. Secretary Murphy, of the Reid faction, had power of attorney to act for these unions in making them parties to the Cleveland suits. (See statements from their journal, marked "Exhibit C.") He also had power of attorney for said unions when dismissing the suits, but the lawyers carefully kept this matter quiet, making the committee believe all parties to the suits must be considered, and their consent obtained before dismissal took place.

On December 7, 1909, two days before the special committee held its first session in Springfield, three local unions of the Reid faction became parties to the Cleveland suits; another violation of the Denver agreement as well as the Toronto agreement. The Reid faction cared nothing for the Denver and Toronto agreements. All they wanted was to put the committee on record, in black and white, making decisions favorable to them, and if not favorable, twisting and contorting the English language in such a manner as to lead others to believe everything was in their favor. They wanted local matters in Far Rockaway, New York City, Cleveland, Pittsburg, and elsewhere adjusted in their favor. The main issue was dodged by them from first to last. As a member of the committee I performed my duty, as I saw it, without fear or favor, open and above board. I have no apologies to make for my actions in this controversy so far. On the other hand, to show you how much I am interested in this whole affair I wish to inform you that in my spare moments since the adjournment of the Toronto Convention of the A. F. of L., I have been working on a plan of amalgamation whereby unity, harmony, peace, good will and fraternity might be brought about between the warring factions of this organization. I am ready to make my recommendations in this dispute just as soon as you call upon me to do so.

Respectfully submitted,

FRANK DUFFY,

Member of Special Committee.

Joinders: The few remaining locals that have not joined in the Geib suit, should investigate and determine if their officers are acting for the best interest of all concerned.

These joinders should be addressed to the general secretary without delay in order to place all in this suit.

Delegate Hayes (F. J.): I move that the majority report of the committee submitted by Brothers Urick and Frey, be accepted, and the recommendations contained therein be concurred in by this convention. (Seconded.)

President Gompers: That the recommendation in both be adopted?

Delegate Hayes: The recommendation in the report submitted by Messrs. Frey and Urick.

President Gompers: The chair is desirous to call attention to the fact that in the report of the Executive Council is contained some important references to this subject, which have been referred to the Committee on Adjustment.

Vice-President Duncan: The majority of this committee of three ended their report with a recommendation. Delegate Duffy read his report, and near its close stated that he had recommendations to make which he would do when called upon by this convention. I move that he be invited now to give his recommendations, so that both reports and the recommendations contained therein may be made a matter of record, and we may all be able to know what they are. (Seconded.)

President Gompers: Is unanimous consent given the motion of Delegate Hayes? Objection is offered, the motion can not be entertained.

Delegate Hayes: I understand a special committee reported on this matter.

President Gompers: Even the reports of the officers and the Executive Council and their recommendations are referred to committees for consideration.

Delegate Woll: I move you that we hear the recommendations of Brother Duffy, and that both reports and recommendations be referred to the Committee on Adjustment, together with the matter contained in the reports of the President and the Executive Council. (Seconded.)

President Gompers: That is the motion before the house.

Delegate Lewis (T. L.) discussed the matter at some length, and in closing, said: The question I want to ask, Mr. Chairman, is on the motion now before the house requesting Brother Duffy to submit his recommendation. Will he submit his recommendation as a member of a committee from which he has withdrawn, or as a delegate on the floor of this convention?

President Gompers: Do you desire to answer the question, Delegate Duffy?

Delegate Duffy: If I am so requested by the Executive Council or by this convention I will submit my recommendation either way. I am a delegate here on the floor.

The question was further discussed by Delegate Lewis, Delegate Keegan and Delegate Downing.

President Gompers: There are two distinct subjects in the motion before the house, a request for Mr. Duffy to make his recommendation, and the other is to refer the entire subject matter to the Committee on Adjustment. It must be decided upon by two separate votes. The sense of the subject requires it.

Delegate Keegan: Has the majority report of the committee made a recommendation?

President Gompers: That question is not before the house.

Delegate Keegan: The motion is to refer the recommendations.

President Gompers: The motion is that the report made by Messrs. Frey and Urlick and the report made by Mr. Duffy be referred to the Committee on Adjustment, to which the report of the Executive Council on that subject was also referred. The motion is that Mr. Duffy be requested to state to the convention the recommendation he had in mind to make, and that the report made by him, as well as the report made by Messrs. Frey and Urlick be referred to the Committee on Adjustment.

Delegate Lewis (T. L.): I rise to a point of order. There are three subjects in the motion the way it is stated and consequently it is not in order. It is not in order to instruct Brother Duffy to make his recommendation to the convention, then to refer whatever he may recommend to the proper committee, when no motion is made to refer the majority report of the committee.

President Gompers: The point of order is not well taken. The motion before the house provides that the report of Messrs. Frey and Urlick shall also be referred to the Committee on Adjustment.

Delegate Woll, as the mover of the motion, stated that he had no objection to its being separated.

Delegate Walker (J. H.): I would like to ask if the reference to the Adjustment Committee of that portion of the Executive Council's report dealing with the Electrical Workers' dispute carried with it the reference of the entire controversy?

President Gompers: The chair had in mind that the Adjustment Committee would have the report of the Executive Council before it for consideration and that all matters pertaining to the subject of the controversy between the Electrical Workers should be referred to the same committee for consideration and action.

Delegate Walker spoke at length in opposition to the reference of the report of the Executive Council to the Adjustment Committee, and said in part: If the reference of the report of the Executive Council was right, then the report of this committee has no business before this convention at this time. In other words, no consideration of this controversy should have been had until that committee reported back. Unless this matter is out of order, I believe the convention should have the right to decide what course it will pursue in disposing of this matter without regard to the reference of that portion of the report of the Executive Council to the Adjustment Committee.

The question was further discussed by Delegate Sanderson, who spoke in favor of the pending motion.

On motion of Delegate Furuseth debate was closed.

President Gompers: The first motion is that Mr. Duffy be requested to submit his recommendation for amalgamation of the two factions of the Electrical Workers to this convention.

The motion as stated by President Gompers was carried.

President Gompers: The motion that the entire subject matter be referred to the Committee on Adjustment is before the convention.

Delegate Lewis (T. L.): I rise to a point of order. The first thing in order is to hear from Brother Duffy. I would like to hear Brother Duffy's recommendation before we vote to refer it.

President Gompers stated that the point of order was not well taken; that the previous question had been ordered by the convention.

The motion that the entire subject be referred to the Committee of Adjustment was carried.

President Gompers requested Delegate Duffy to present his recommendations.

Delegate Duffy stated that he did not have his recommendations in written form in the convention, but was willing to make a verbal statement. No objection being offered, Delegate Duffy made the following recommendation:

"That on account of the Reid faction of the Electrical Workers having done absolutely nothing and four months having been spent in trying to bring about an understanding, at quite an expense to the American Federation of Labor, the Reid organization, or that known as the Reid organization of the Electrical Workers, be not recognized as an International organization of Electrical Workers by the American Federation of Labor; that local unions of the organization known as the Reid organization apply to the International Brotherhood for charters as local unions of the craft; that same be granted free of cost, and that said members be placed in good standing in the International Brotherhood immediately."

During the session the following resolutions were introduced, and referred by the chairman to the various committees:

Resolution No. 43—By the Seamen's Delegation:

Whereas, Congress again has under consideration the proposition to give a general subsidy to the merchant marines of the United States, and

Whereas, Great and systematic agitation, in fact, a regular educational campaign—has been and is carried on to mislead the people of this country on the subject of ships and seamen, by distributing "facts that are not so" with reference to these matters, especially maintaining that the cost of operation is greater under the American than any other flag; and

Whereas, This in the main is untrue and in the few instances where it is true can be amended or changed by this country ceasing to hunt up, arrest and deliver back to their owners the sea slaves of other nations; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we enter our emphatic protest against any such legislation; and further

Resolved, That full information on the real facts will disclose that any such subsidy under existing railroad domination of transportation by water as well as by land will be a subsidy to the railroads and of no value whatever to the shipping of the country.

Resolution No. 44—By the Seamen's Delegation:

Whereas, There are a large number of men who, by their occupation, (that of general laborers) are under great difficulty in trying to organize, and yet who, more than any other class of men, are in serious need of organization; and

Whereas, These men (more than three million) travel from place to place to obtain work of different kinds; and

Whereas, These men are ill-paid, ill-fed, ill-housed and treated in a way that denies their common humanity, that prevents them from obtaining promptly even the pitiful small pay which they are promised; and

Whereas, These men are gradually getting to believe that not only the world generally, but even the trade unionists are their enemies and are therefore learning to hate unionism; and

Whereas, We seem thus to be travelling in nearly the same way as did the guilds to a condition which will divide them from the rest of the workers; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council be instructed to devise a form of organization that shall be suitable to the needs of these migratory laborers; and be it further

Resolved, That such part of the funds of the federation as can possibly be spared be devoted to the organization of what may be called the migratory laborer of such states where such work may give the best promise of results.

Referred to Committee on Organization.

Resolution No. 45—By Delegate John P. Frey of the International Molders' Union of North America:

Whereas, The thorough education of all workmen and the public in the principles and policies of trade unionism is one of the prominent purposes of the American Federation of Labor; and

Whereas, There are many publications indorsed by the American Federation of Labor, its affiliated bodies and sub-divisions, which, nationally and locally, are constantly engaged in an effort to spread the gospel of trade unionism and keep their readers informed on all questions of interest affecting the welfare of labor; be it

Resolved, That a bureau of information be created and placed in charge of a secretary to be selected by the President and Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of the bureau of information shall furnish a weekly letter, without cost, to all publications officially indorsed by the American Federation of Labor, its affiliated bodies and sub-divisions, which shall contain a summary of all important matters affecting labor occurring in the industrial, legislative and judicial fields, and all such other matters which will tend to further the development and progress of the trade union movement.

Resolution No. 46—By the Seamen's Delegation:

Whereas, The seamen themselves describe their status, their needs and the injustice under which they live in the following petition:

To those who govern nations, to those who make laws, to humanitarians, democrats, Christians and friends of human freedom everywhere: Do we, the seamen, the yet remaining bondmen, humbly yet earnestly submit this our petition that we may be made free men and that the blighting disgrace of bondage be removed from our labor, which once was considered honorable, which is yet needed in the world of commerce, and which has been held to be of great importance to nations with sea coasts to defend.

Existing maritime law, except in the domestic trade of these United States, makes of us the property of the vessel on which we sail. We can not work as seamen without signing a contract which brings us under this law. The contract is fixed by law or authorized by governments. We have nothing to do with its terms. We either sign it and sail or we sign it not and remain landmen.

When signing this contract we surrender our working power to the will of another man at all times while the contract runs. We may not leave the vessel, though she is in perfect safety. We may not without our master's permission go to a mother's sick-bed or funeral or attend to any other duties of a son, a brother, a Christian or a citizen.

If our owner thinks he has reason to fear that we desire to escape, he may, without judicial investigation, cause us to be imprisoned for safekeeping until he shall think it proper to take us out. If we have escaped, he may publish our personal appearance along with a reward for our apprehension and return. He may through contracts between nations cause the peace officers and police to aid him in recovering his property. The captain may change, the owner may change—we are sold with the vessel, and so long as the flag does not change there is nothing except serious illness or our master's pleasure that will release us from the vessel.

The master, acting for the vessel, may release himself and the vessel by paying a few dollars, with no alternative.

He that owns another man's labor-power owns his body, since the two can not be separated.

We stand in the same relation to the vessel as the serf did to the estate, as the slave to his master. When serfdom was abolished in Western Europe we were forgotten by the liberators and our status remained. When the slaves of the United States and Brazil were emancipated our status continued. When serfdom was abolished in Russia no change came to us.

We now raise our manacled hands in humble supplication to restore to us our rights as brother men, to our labor that honor which belonged to it until your power, expressing itself through your law, set upon it the brand of bondage in the interest of cheap transportation by water.

We respectfully submit that this serfdom of the men in our calling is of comparatively modern origin. Earlier maritime law bound while in strange countries and climates the seaman to his shipmates and his ship, and the ship to him, on the principle of common hazard. In his own country he was free—the freest of men. We further humbly submit that, as the consciousness of the seamen's status penetrates through the population, it will be impossible to get free men to send their sons into bondage or to induce free men's sons to accept it, and we, in all candor, remind you that you, when you travel by water, expect us—the serfs—to exhibit in danger the highest qualities of free men, by giving our lives for your safety.

At sea the law of common hazard remains; there must be discipline and self-sacrifice, but in any harbor where the vessel and you are safe, we beseech you, give to us that freedom which you claim for yourself and which you bestow on others, to the end that we may be relieved of that bitterness of soul that is the heavy burden of him who knows and feels that his body is not his own; and

Whereas, We are satisfied that the seaman's status is correctly described in this petition, and that the great loss of property and of life at sea is caused by the condition here described, that the seaman's helplessness has its origin therein and that a fundamental change is absolutely necessary; and

Whereas, House Bill 11193, introduced by Mr. Spight of Mississippi, and Senate Bill

6155, introduced by Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin, are designed to and when enacted will abolish the existing status of the seaman, make of him a free man, give him possibilities of self-help and improve the safety of travel at sea; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we urge upon Congress the immediate consideration and enactment of this bill into law.

Resolution No. 47—By Delegates A. Miller and M. Greenbaum of Neckwear Cutters' Union 6939 and Neckwear Makers' Union 1106:

Whereas, In the city of New York the neckwear cutters and the neckwear makers are well organized and are enjoying higher wages and shorter hours than any other part of the country; and

Whereas, There are several large cities throughout the country that are yet practically unorganized, namely, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Baltimore, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Louisville, Buffalo and Rochester; therefore, be it Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the A. F. of L. that the president be and is hereby instructed to have all organizers of the A. F. of L. pay special attention to the above-named cities, for the purpose of thoroughly organizing them, with the object in view of forming a national organization.

Resolution No. 48—By James M. Lynch, International Typographical Union; George L. Berry, International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union; Robert Glockling, International Brotherhood of Bookbinders; Mathew Woll, International Photo Engravers' Union; James J. Freel, International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union:

Whereas, Arrangements have been made to print the eleventh edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica in a non-union printing office in Chicago, Ill.; and

Whereas, Many trades unionists and sympathizers were purchasers of former editions of the Encyclopedia Britannica; therefore, be it

Resolved, That all friends and sympathizers with organized labor and members of trade unions who contemplate purchasing the eleventh edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica immediately write the promoters thereof requesting that the mechanical work thereon shall be performed in a strictly union printing office, and in event of refusal to accede to such request that the promoters and publishers be informed that members of organized labor can not consistently patronize a non-union publication.

Referred to Committee on Boycotts.

Resolution No. 49—By Delegate C. F. Russi, Jr., of San Antonio Trades Council:

Whereas, The affairs of the International Union of Flour and Cereal Mill Employes are in such bad condition that they need to be investigated, the international union having decreased in membership in the last six years from 21 votes to 3 votes in the convention of the A. F. of L., as the report of the secretary of the A. F. of L. will show; and

Whereas, The financial condition of the international union is so bad that notice has been sent to our local union that in case of trouble it can not pay strike or lockout benefits. (There is no international president, as the last one was expelled for non-payment of dues. There has not been a financial statement issued from headquarters for more than a year. Our local union has not received a communication nor answers to its letters from headquarters except receipts for money sent in payment of per capita tax); and

Whereas, The condition of the International Union of Flour and Cereal Mill Employes is so bad as to discourage the few remaining locals and cause them to disband, which could be avoided if attended to at once; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. be instructed to investigate the affairs of the International Union of Flour and Cereal Mill Employes; and be it further

Resolved, That if conditions are found to be in bad shape, have the secretary of the A. F. of L. revoke the charter of the international, and have the charters of the remaining few local unions transferred back to the A. F. of L. and issue new charters as Federal Labor Unions; and be it further

Resolved, That the label of the A. F. of L. be placed upon the product of the mills that have contracts signed with the international union in the place of the label now in use.

Referred to Committee on Local and Federated Bodies.

Resolution No. 50—By Delegate D. W. Robinson of Central Council, Portland, Ore.:

Whereas, The present method of labels, emblems, etc., existing in the affiliated organizations of the American Federation of Labor is very confusing; and

Whereas, It should be our desire as union men to cement the interests of all workers into as close and compact a relationship as possible; and

Whereas, We believe that the establishment of one universal label will result in much good to the entire labor movement; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention that the Executive Council is hereby authorized and instructed to make a thorough investigation of the matter and report to the next annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Resolution No. 51—By Delegate Geo. W. Bell of Gas Workers' Union 9841:

Whereas, The large army of wage-workers now employed in the manufacturing and distributing of artificial and natural gas in the United States and Canada are unorganized except in the state of California; and

Whereas, If these men were organized it would be the means of bringing into the fold of the American Federation of Labor many thousands of wage-workers; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council be and is hereby instructed to make every effort to organize the gas workers in the large cities of the East and Middle West.

Referred to Committee on Organization.

Resolution No. 52—By Delegate C. D. Wheeler of the Chicago Federation of Labor:

Protesting against executive orders that deprive federal civil service employes of their constitutional right as citizens to petition Congress for a redress of grievances and the right of free speech:

Whereas, Executive orders now in effect and part of the rules and regulations of the federal civil service forbids and prohibits all federal civil service employes (250,000 in number) from in any way attempting to influence legislation, directly or indirectly, in behalf of better working conditions, and which orders prohibit even the right to petition Congress in behalf of such legislation and restricts freedom of speech in that a civil service employe is forbidden to respond to requests for information desired by a member of either house of Congress or a committee of Congress, unless first granted permission to do so by departmental heads; and

Whereas, Such orders are not consistent with the constitution of the United States, which reads "Congress shall make no laws abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people to peaceably assemble, and to petition Congress for a redress of grievances;" and

Whereas, The officials of the Post Office Department have removed employes because of alleged violation of such orders, and in one particular instance did summarily dismiss from the service Brother Oscar F. Nelson, president of the Chicago Post Office Clerks' Union, on the charge that he attempted to influence legislation in the interest of better working conditions indirectly through the Legislative Committee of this American Federation of Labor, and because of his action in introducing a resolution in the Chicago Federation of Labor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the American Federation of Labor, in annual convention assembled, at St. Louis, Mo., denounce as un-American and despotic executive orders and rules that prohibit or restrict federal employes from exercising to the fullest extent the inalienable right of free speech and free press and the right to petition Congress; and be it further

Resolved, That a committee of three, consisting of the president and secretary of this A. F. of L. and the chairman of its Legislative Committee be and are hereby instructed to present a copy of this resolution to President Taft in person and request the revocation of executive orders protested against and the reinstatement of Oscar F. Nelson to the service.

Resolution No. 53—By Delegate Charles Lavin of Pennsylvania State Federation:

Whereas, The state of Pennsylvania employs over 50,000 people in the textile industry; and

Whereas, The larger portion of these are women and girls, working long hours and for meager wages, as a result of their lack of organization; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, do strongly urge upon the Executive Council the advisability of placing one organizer in that territory for at least six months of the coming year, with a view of assisting to bring about a more thorough organization among these textile workers; and be it further

Resolved, That the organizer so assigned shall be one who has at least some knowledge of the textile industry.

Resolution No. 54—By Wm. E. Eck-enrod, Tennessee Federation of Labor, Chas. P. Fahey, Nashville Trades and Labor Council, and S. H. Lowe, Jackson Trades and Labor Council:

Whereas, The State Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union in Tennessee has passed the following resolutions at their annual convention, held September 13, 14, 1910, at Dickson, Tenn.

Whereas, The organized workmen of Tennessee are striving to improve the condition of themselves and their families; and

Whereas, It is the desire of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of Tennessee to assist them in every practical way possible; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the State Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union, that we request the Tennessee Federation of Labor to prevail upon the International Labor Organization to send representatives to our country meetings to explain to our members the importance of purchasing the product of union labor that bears the union label; and be it further

Resolved, That our state secretary be instructed to furnish the secretary of the State Federation of Labor, on his request, the dates and places of the meetings of our county unions for that purpose. Be it

Resolved, That our legislative committee is hereby instructed to meet and co-operate with the legislative committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor on all measures pertaining to the common interest of labor and that all legislation agreed upon by both organizations shall be submitted to all candidates for legislative honors.

Resolved, That the President of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of Tennessee be empowered to appoint a committee of three from this body to co-operate with the authorities of the Tennessee Federation of Labor to arrange a joint convention of the two orders above named at a convenient point in the state during the year 1911; and

Whereas, The Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union in Tennessee has by the passage of the above resolutions indicated their desire to co-operate with and assist the Trade Unionists in Tennessee in a practical way to improve their condition; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that we most heartily endorse the proposed working agreement between the organized Farmers and the Trade Unionists of Tennessee; and, be it further

Resolved, That we instruct the incoming Executive Council to comply with the request contained in the resolutions and send some person to attend the meetings of the county unions of the farmers to explain and instruct them of the importance of purchasing the goods that bear the union label.

Referred to Committee on Organization.

Resolution No. 55—By Delegate James Murray, of the Texas State Federation of Labor:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that the National Congress should cease to make further appropriations and expenditure of public money for the improvement of harbors, rivers or other internal waterways to aid navigation or to promote traffic thereon, unless that the state wherein such expenditure and improvements are made and which are to be benefited by the same, shall have previously made ample provision for the public use of all wharves and landings bordering on such navigable channels within their boundaries or under their legal jurisdiction free from discrimination; and be it further

Resolved, That where such discriminations are practiced against one shipper or carrier, as against another in the use of such wharves or landings or railroad terminals connected therewith and intended for the purpose of completing the service of the same, or by one locality or community as against another for the purpose of lessening or destroying the industries or commerce of the one in order that the other may benefit thereby, that such discriminations should be penalized by imprisonment and fine, and the revocation of charters or franchises to operate such utilities.

Resolution No. 56—By Delegate Samuel Letovitz 12674, Mineral Water Workers:

Whereas, The label of the American Federation of Labor is being counterfeited by several manufacturers in the city of New York; and

Whereas, The counterfeiting of said label of the American Federation of Labor, is very detrimental to the progress and welfare of the different federal local unions of the American Federation of Labor in the City of New York; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that the President and Executive Council be and are hereby instructed to take this matter up at once, and prosecute the offending manufacturers, and stop the counterfeiting of the label of the American Federation of Labor.

Referred to the Committee on Labels.

Resolution No. 57—Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union:

Whereas, Unscrupulous employers of the baking industry, employing thousands of craftsmen of the baking trade have in the past year reduced wages and forced men to inhuman conditions, and while we are doing all within our power to uphold and defend our constitution against the wanton attack of corporate power, which seeks to take advantage and fasten upon its employees a slavish condition of servitude; and

Whereas, The members of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union have been engaged in bitter strikes the country over, we feel that the conditions of the bakery industry must be sharply looked after; and

Whereas, As the situation presents itself to us, we picture it with serious alarm and apprehension, for we recognize in it an insidious attack on organized labor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor be authorized by this convention to give to our organization assistance in the way of organizing by instructing organizers in all localities to give particular attention to the organizing of bakers.

Respectfully submitted,
CHRIST KERKER,
HENRY KOCH.

Referred to Committee on Organization.

Resolution No. 58—By Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union:

Whereas, The label of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America represents bread and other bakery and confectionery goods made under fair and sanitary conditions, honest wages, living hours, and by union men, and

Whereas, The label of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America is the only proof of same, as it distinguishes union from nonunion; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the America Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, re-endorse the label of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America; and be it further

Resolved, That every member of each affiliated union be and is hereby requested to ask for the union label on all products he or she may purchase, thereby showing or proving his or her loyalty to the cause of unionism in a substantial manner.

Respectfully submitted,

HENRY KOCH,

CHRIST KERKER,

Resolution No. 59—By Delegate Norval White, Jefferson City Trades and Labor Assembly:

Whereas, It is a well-known fact that the first Monday in September is set apart by many state governments to be observed as Labor Day; and

Whereas, The men of labor are losing sight of the importance of observing the day as it should be; therefore, be it

Resolved, By this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, assembled at St. Louis, Mo., That all of the national and international unions so amend their constitutions so as to compel its local unions to take part in the Labor Day celebrations in the localities where they are held, so as to bring credit and not discredit to the labor movement; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to send each national and international union a circular letter within ninety days after this convention adjourns to carry out the request of this resolution.

Referred to Committee on President's Report.

Resolution No. 60—By Delegate Archie Grant, United Trades and Labor Council, Erie County:

Whereas, The Larkin Soap Company, of the city of Buffalo, N. Y., is having practically all its printing done without the union label, keeping one of the largest printing offices in that city in operation under nonunion conditions; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled, instruct its Executive Council to take this matter up with the Larkin Company, and use its good offices in assisting the Printings Trades Council of the city of Buffalo in having the Larkin Soap Company's printing done under union conditions.

Referred to the Committee on Boycott.

Resolution No. 61—By Delegate Riley, Brotherhood of Railway Clerks:

Whereas, There are approximately one-fourth million clerical employees of the various railroad companies in the United States at the present time who are unorganized, and

Whereas, This vast number of wage-earners is by far the largest contingent of unorganized labor embraced in a single class now in existence, and

Whereas, The Brotherhood of Railway Clerks has organized a certain percentage of this class and upon a number of railroad lines this class has materially increased its wages, reduced its hours of service and secured other improved conditions through such organization, and

Whereas, The organization of this vast body of workmen is of paramount importance to the labor movement at the present time, and

Whereas, The said Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, claiming jurisdiction over this class of wage-earners, is an affiliated body; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled that special effort be made to organize this large contingent of unorganized labor; that each and every organizer of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to at once begin and prosecute a vigorous campaign of education along trade union lines among this class, and be it further

Resolved, That the officers of the American Federation of Labor be, and hereby are, instructed to assign at least one of its organizers to the special and exclusive work of organizing this one-fourth million unorganized wage-earners, such organizer or organizers to work under the assignment and direction of the Grand President of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks.

Resolution No. 62—By Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union:

Whereas, The Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America has been engaged in a severe contest with the American Baking Co., composed of the following branches: Heydt, Condon, St. Louis, Freund, Welle-Boettler, Hauck-Hoerr, and the Home Bakeries of St. Louis, Mo., and

Whereas, Said trust controls a large portion of the baking industry, thus making it difficult for the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America to successfully push a boycott against each branch of the American Bakery Co. and all brands of bakery products made by the trust, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, through its officers and organizers, give special aid and assistance to the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America in pushing a boycott against each individual product or brand of goods made by the American Baking Company, and be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor request by circular letter all affiliated unions, federal unions, central bodies, state federations and national and international unions to give a helping hand to the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America by vigorously pushing a boycott against the unfair products sold in their respective localities, and whereas, the above resolutions were adopted by the twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth conventions and referred to the Executive Council for action, be it further

Resolved, That the above recommendations be carried out by electing a committee at this convention, who, with the representatives, shall try and settle the differences, and report back to this convention as to their action and recommendations.

Referred to the Committee on Boycotts.

Resolution No. 63—By Delegate John Mitchell, United Mine Workers of America:

Whereas, The American Federation of Labor has in every possible way aided the movement for the study and prevention of tuberculosis throughout the United States and Canada, and

Whereas, The American National Red Cross has been in the past and is now making an especial effort, through the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals, to secure funds to carry on the war against tuberculosis, and by means of the funds raised in this manner has been able to do much effective work in this direction, therefore be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor give its endorsement to the movement of the American National Red Cross and encourage its members to further in every reasonable way the sale of these seals in their respective communities.

Referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 64—By Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union:

Whereas, The fight against the McKinney Bread Co., of St. Louis, Mo., as endorsed and re-endorsed by annual conventions of the American Federation of Labor, and

Whereas, The McKinney Bread Co. still refuses to make a settlement with the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America, and

Whereas, The twenty-eighth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor made an effort to bring about an adjustment of the long-standing controversy, and if not successful that a vigorous campaign be started to make their declaration of unfairness effective, therefore be it

Resolved, That the twenty-ninth convention of the American Federation of Labor reaffirm and place upon the unfair list the McKinney firm of St. Louis, Mo., and if not successful in bringing about successful endeavors satisfactory to the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America, and whereas, the above resolutions were adopted by the twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth conventions and referred to the Executive Council for action, be it further

Resolved, That the above recommendations be carried out by electing a committee at this convention, who, with the representatives, shall try and settle the differences, and report back to this convention as to their action and recommendations.

Referred to the Committee on Boycotts.

Resolution No. 65—By Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union:

Whereas, The Drexler Baking Co., of Springfield, Mass., and the Schultz Baking Co., of New York and Hudson county, and the Fleishman Baking Co., of New York, have declared open war upon our members of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union, who are doing all within their power to uphold and defend their constitution, and

Whereas, Mr. Drexler, of Springfield, Mass., is vice president of the Massachusetts Master Bakers' Association and Mr. Schultz of the pool of the Master Bakers' Boss Association, of New York and New Jersey, which in the name of master means nothing but bringing about a slavish condition, therefore be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, through its president, officers and organizers, give special aid and assistance to the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America in bringing about a suitable settlement, and be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor request, by circular letter, all affiliated unions, federal unions, central unions, state federation, national or international unions to give a helping hand to the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union in trying to bring about a settlement, and if not successful, that a vigorous campaign be inaugurated against the products, which are everything but fair.

Resolution No. 66 — By Delegate Homer D. Call, of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America:

Whereas, The Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, whose charter of affiliation was granted in the year 1897, has jurisdiction over all persons employed in the meat industry, and

Whereas, There is at the present time small dual organizations posing as butcher workmen, to the detriment of the labor movement as a whole, in violation of the recognized and admitted jurisdiction of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, and which is injurious to the welfare and progress of the men engaged in the meat industry, therefore be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that the International Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America is the only organization having jurisdiction over the Butcher Workmen, and recommend to all men engaged in the trade to affiliate themselves with their fellow-workmen by becoming members of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor notify all general and special organizers of the federation to organize the men in the meat trade into the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America.

Referred to the Committee on Adjustment.

Resolution No. 67—By Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union:

Resolution No. 68—By Delegate Albert Abrahams, for the Central Federated Union of Greater New York and Vicinity:

Resolved, That the delegate of the Central Federated Union of Greater New York and Vicinity to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor be and hereby is instructed to introduce and advocate to the best of his ability the adoption of the following resolutions, to-wit:

Whereas, The American Federation of Labor, as set forth in the preamble of its constitution, has recognized that a struggle is going on in all the nations of the civilized world between the oppressors and the oppressed of all countries, a struggle between the capitalist and the laborer, which grows in intensity from year to year, and will work disastrous results to the tolling millions if they are not combined for mutual protection and benefit, and it, therefore, behooves the representatives of the trade and labor unions of America, in convention assembled, to adopt such measures and disseminate such principles among the mechanics and laborers of our country as will permanently unite them to secure the recognition of rights to which they are justly entitled.

Whereas, The decisions of the United States Supreme Court and of the state courts in labor and injunction cases, based upon the United States Constitution, have conclusively shown that the Constitution of the United States is a wall for the protection of the capitalist interests as against the interests of the tolling millions.

Whereas, Article V of the Constitution of the United States provides that amendments to the Constitution may be made.

Whereas, The American Federation of Labor and its affiliated state federations have devoted their energies to the enactment of national, state and territorial labor legislation, and to the embodying of provisions for the protection of labor in several state constitutions, and

Whereas, Logically and inevitably the next great step in the struggle of the oppressed to secure the recognition of rights to which the tolling millions of our country are justly entitled, is the demand and propagandism for a labor amendment to the United States Constitution, ordaining that "neither wage slavery nor voluntary servitude shall exist within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction," and embodying all legislative demands of the American Federation of Labor, which shall bring about the industrial emancipation of all toilers, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor in the Thirtieth Annual Convention assembled, that the time has arrived to crown the thirty years' work for labor legislation in our generation, as achieved by the American Federation of Labor with the demand and propagandism for a labor amendment to the Constitution of the United States, to secure the industrial emancipation of all toilers.

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor be and hereby is instructed to frame a labor amendment to the United States Constitution and to inaugurate and encourage a movement leading to its adoption by the people of our country, and

Resolved, That for the purpose of defraying the expenditures to be incurred by the Executive Council in carrying out these instructions a one cent assessment be contributed by the membership of the American Federation of Labor to what shall be known as the Labor Amendment Fund.

Referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 69—By Delegate Geo. W. Bell, Gas Worker's Union, 9840:

Whereas, The Sugar Workers' Union 10,519 is the one and only union of its kind in America, and therefore not in a position to organize the sugar workers throughout the country, and

Whereas, The sugar workers of America, if organized, would form one of the largest organizations in the country, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Incoming Executive Board of the American Federation of Labor be, and hereby is, instructed to use its best efforts to organize the sugar workers in the eastern states.

Referred to the Committee on Organization.

Resolution No. 70—By Delegate A. Abrahams, Central Federated Union of Greater New York and Vicinity:

Whereas, The great purpose of organized labor is to accomplish by its organized strength the improvement of the material conditions of the workers, and

Whereas, It is becoming more and more evident, day by day, that we must meet the employing class with a more compact system of attack, and

Whereas, The American labor movement is considerably hindered by the powerlessness of the American Federation of Labor to demand of international unions that they materially assist a sister organization in its struggles, and

Whereas, In central bodies, requests are constantly made for the assistance of the other organization, which the central body is powerless to give, we have reached a stage in the development of the American labor movement where power should be vested in the supreme body and in central bodies, to command organizations to call out their men in sympathy, if necessary, to assist their brother union men in the struggles for a betterment of their condition, now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention appoint a committee of three, who shall bring in recommendations to so amend the Constitution of the American Federation of Labor as to bring about this state of organization.

Referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 71—By Delegate Owen Miller, American Federation of Musicians, by request:

Whereas, Oleomargarine is conceded by chemists and food experts to be a wholesome food product, and

Whereas, Existing laws discriminate against this wholesome food product through a tax of 10 cents a pound when artificially colored, the only purpose of which is to make it appear palatable, and

Whereas, Artificial coloring matter is permitted in butter and other dairy products, which clearly establishes a discrimination, and

Whereas, The discriminatory tax placed upon oleomargarine must be paid in the main by the poorer classes of people, and has a tendency to increase the price of butter, and

Whereas, The placing of a tax of 10 cents per pound on colored oleomargarine has rather increased than decreased violations of the law, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, that Congress be petitioned to so amend the oleomargarine law that a tax not exceeding 2 cents per pound be placed upon the product, whether colored or uncolored, and that a license fee not exceeding six dollars ($6.00) per year be placed upon the retailer for the privilege of vending oleomargarine, and that the product be packed in one-half, one, two and three pound packages only, and that the product be sold only in original tax-paid packages.

Referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 72—By Delegate A. Abrahams, Central Federated Union of Greater New York and Vicinity:

Whereas, At the present time it is not compulsory for unions having shop cards, buttons or labels to join the Union Label Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, therefore be it

Resolved, That the delegate from this body to the next convention of the American Federation of Labor, at St. Louis, be instructed to introduce an amendment to the present laws governing the Union Label Trades Department to compel the affiliation of all national or international unions having labels, shop cards or buttons to their union product, and be it further

Resolved, That the delegate be instructed to introduce a law making it compulsory for local unions to affiliate with the local label department of the central bodies.

Referred to the Committee on Labels.

Resolution No. 73—By Delegate Sim A. Bramlette, Central Labor Union, Kansas City, Kan.:

Whereas, The Central Labor Union, of Kansas City, Kan., has been carrying on a campaign of organization among the unorganized workers of that city with the hope of being able to ultimately organize the several thousand unorganized workers, and in such effort have exhausted practically every means available, and

Whereas, Such effort on the part of the Central Labor Union has been supplemented by the State Federation of Labor as far as that organization was able to contribute to the work, with the result that favorable conditions have been established to form several local organizations, provided the work is continued, therefore be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor place a general organizer in said city or appoint some competent local worker as a special organizer to take up the work of organization in Kansas City, Kan., and that such organizer maintain headquarters in said city while engaged in such work.

Referred to the Committee on Organization.

Resolution No. 74—Communicated by the New York Building Trades Council:

Whereas, In almost every locality where there is a local building trades council, there are some trades who refuse to join the local council, therefore be it

Resolved, That Section 38 of the Building Trades Department by-laws, which states that all local unions shall be compelled to join the local building trades council be strictly enforced, and be it further

Resolved, That any international organization that fails to compel their locals to join the local councils when notified by the Secretary-Treasurer or Executive Board of the Building Trades Department, shall be suspended until they obey the instructions of the Building Trades Department.

Referred to the Building Trades Committee.

Resolution No. 75—By Delegate John F. O'Flaherty, Central Trades and Labor Union, East St. Louis, Ill.:

Whereas, In the city of East St. Louis, Ill., the local unions of carpenters, lathers, plasterers and painters, have withdrawn from the Building Trades Council to work with and are at the present time doing so, with non-union plumbers, steamfitters, gasfitters, electricians and cement workers, contrary to Section 38 of the laws of the Building Trades Department,

Resolved, That any international union which does not compel its local organizations to affiliate with the Building Trades Council and Central Trades and Labor Union, be instructed by the A. F. of L. to revoke that local's charter, and on their failure, the international charter be revoked, until such time as they comply with said constitution. The said resolution to apply to all organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Referred to the Committee on Adjustment.

At 2:30 p. m. the rules were suspended, and the convention adjourned, to reconvene at 10 o'clock a. m., Thursday, November 17th.

Fourth Day's Proceedings—Thursday, November 17, 1910.

The convention was called to order at 10 a. m., Thursday, November 17, President Gompers in the chair.

Secretary Morrison read the following communications:

Samuel Gompers, care American Federation of Labor, St. Louis, Mo.:

Seventy thousand organized victorious cloak and skirt makers send their greeting to the delegates of the Thirtieth Annual Convention, and hope that their deliberation will result in permanent benefit to the working classes of this country. Our people will never forget the moral support they have received from your Treasurer Lennon and Organizer Grant Hamilton. Long live the American Federation of Labor.

HARRY KLEINMAN,
Secretary Joint Executive Board of Cloak and Skirt Makers' Union.

Berlin, Germany, November, 1910.

Mr. Samuel Gompers, President American Federation of Labor, President 1910 Convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.:

Dear Sir and Comrade—The friendly and fraternal relations that have always existed between the trade unions of the American and European continent have been brought into a definitive form by the recent affiliation of the American Federation of Labor to the International Secretariat of the National Trade Union Centres. For these reasons I desire, on behalf of the International Secretariat and of the General Kommission or Federation of the German trade unions, to convey our best wishes and fraternal greetings to your convention. The preceding conventions of the American Federation of Labor have at all times been closely watched and earnestly studied by the German trade unionists, and they have been especially pleased to learn from the work of your international gatherings that the necessity of the workers taking their lot into their own hands is more and more recognized also on your side of the world. The German workers have for many years already lived up to this fact, creating well-united industrial and political organizations for this purpose. The German workers therefore viewed with the utmost satisfaction that the American movement is happily and steadily growing in a similar direction. Recognizing the necessity of labor's unity on the industrial and political field, in order to successfully defend the rights of the working classes, we wish your convention all success, and we are convinced that the St. Louis Convention of the American Federation of Labor will anew demonstrate and foster the unity of international labor.

With best wishes and fraternal greetings to the delegates, I beg to remain,
Yours fraternally,

C. LEGIEN,
Secretary International Secretariat of the National Trade Union Centres;
President of the General Kommission of the German Trade Unions.

New York, November 17, 1910.

To the Convention of the American Federation of Labor, St. Louis, Mo.:

The United Hebrew Trades of New York, a central body of eighty Jewish-speaking unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, are sending their hearty congratulations on your Thirtieth Annual Convention. We wish you success. As for our organization, we can report great success. In one year and a half we increased our membership from 8,000 to 150,000. We wish the trade unions of other cities the same progress. Long live organized labor. Long live the American Federation of Labor.

WEINSTEIN,
Secretary.

Secretary Morrison read an invitation from the Knights of Columbus to the members of that order and their friends in the convention, to attend a reception on Sunday evening, November 20, at 3545 Olive street. The invitation was accepted by the convention.

Another communication from the Knights of Columbus was read, in which was extended the hospitality of their club-house, 3545 Olive street, to miles away from that vast river, and visiting Knights and their friends. on one of the biggest rivers in the world.

Vice-President O'Connell: Yesterday when the question of the electrical workers' dispute was under consideration I tried to get the floor to make a motion, but was unable to do so. The Committee on Adjustment has a great deal of work to do. We feel it would be imposing upon the committee to sit long enough to do anything like justice to the electrical workers' matter. I move you that the electrical workers' matter be referred to a special committee. (Seconded and carried.)

President Gompers: The hour for the special order has arrived. I have to present to you the fraternal delegates from the British Trades Union Congress and the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, who will address the convention, and through the convention the men and women of organized labor, the men and women of toil, the great thinking, earnest mass of men and women who are striving to do something in their way for the better day to come.

The men who will speak to you today are not graduates of colleges or universities; they are graduates of the industrial struggle of the workers; and, better than all, they have not risen from the masses, but are remaining with them, shoulder to shoulder. I shall not longer deprive you of the pleasure of hearing from these gentlemen direct. I take pleasure in presenting to you Brother Ben Turner, one of the delegates from the British Trades Union Congress.

Fraternal Delegate Turner said: Mr. President and Comrades in the Trade Union Movement—My friend Mr. Brace and myself are charged from the Trades Union Congress of Great Britain—I think the mother country of trades unionism—to bring to you their fraternal greetings and good wishes from the old country to the new country, from the same class of organized workmen and the same section of laboring men that are to be found the wide world over. I never dreamed in my early days of being able to visit the great continent of America. I have sung many times one of your songs—

To the West, to the West, the land of the free,
Where the mighty Missouri runs down to the sea, but I never dreamed when I sang that song of being able to be here, fifteen

Time brings its changes and movements develop. Twenty-five years ago when our trades union movement in Great Britain was only about a million strong and the fraternal relations between America and Great Britain had not been established, one could not dream of being able to visit the American Federation of Labor as one of the delegates from Great Britain and Ireland. I find somewhat of a difference between Great Britain and America from a trade union standpoint. We are only a small island in the sea, about as big as the State of Missouri itself, while you are a continent many thousands of miles long and a thousand or two miles broad. While we are very insular you are bound to be, and are, very cosmopolitan. You have all the languages, all nationalities and all creeds represented here, and for that reason the movement is bound to be more tremendous and vast than the movement of the country we come from. But when all is reckoned up, the movement itself, the trades union and wage movement itself is absolutely alike, whether it be in the East, in Japan, the West, in America or in our country of Great Britain. The wage-workers all over the earth have the same difficulties to face, the same trials to tackle and the same obstacles to overcome. It is bound to be so because of one fact. Labor is bought when labor is profitable. It is never bought when it will not return a dividend to those who employ it. From that particular standpoint, whether it be in the Far East or the Far West, the same principle applies. Human labor is bought because it will bring a return in dividends to those who purchase it. We on our side have our labor to sell. If we do not sell it we cannot live except by the aid and assistance of other people. As long as we have our labor to sell as our means for life we want the protection, and must have it, of our trades union force. We want the trades union movement to protect and promote our interests in general.

We have in Great Britain just now, in place of 1,500,000, as we had fifteen years ago, 2,800,000 paying trades union members. That is a great number for a small country like ours, but it is not enough. When you find that only one in about each nine or ten persons is a member of a trades union, then you must know quite well that there are nine drags, nine stoppers of progress that the one in the ten has to carry forward. That is true of our country. What it may be in yours, I cannot tell. We have broadened our trades union movement out. We have found it needful to have our Trades Union Congress, which comprises nearly all the trades union movement of Great Britain and Ireland, and then we have the General Federation of Trades Unions. That federation exists solely for the purpose of financial in-insurance in times of trades disputes. We have found at times that when disputes have occurred and the funds of one union have been used up, there must be some protection elsewhere for those on strike or lockout. The result is that nearly 700,000 of our trades union force are paying insurance money to their own Federation of Trades Unions, and when a lockout, great or small, takes place or a trades disturbance arises they can use their power and influence for promoting a satisfactory settlement, and from the insurance fund they can help them carry on the strike or lockout to a successful issue. On those two lines the movement is now developing.

Some ten years back, because we were driven there, the trades union movement started in Great Britain what is termed its political side, and the labor representation committee was formed as a second or third wing of the Trades Union Congress. In this direction my friend Mr. Brace will speak, because he happens to be the odd man in Parliament and I am the odd man out of Parliament of the two present. With all these three bodies we have some troubles similar to yours. A day or two is usually spent on questions of demarcation or jurisdiction. It is a great misfortune, but it is there, and is part of a growing trades union movement. It can hardly be avoided. When you find a dozen men, each one thinking his union is the best—and they usually think that—you are bound to have some trouble about jurisdiction or demarcation.

In our country we are finding today a new suggestion, or an old suggestion in new clothes, in what is termed industrial unionism. I want to say, Mr. Chairman, that the ideal may be absolutely and perfectly right when it can be arrived at, but I do not believe it is wise at the present time. We can not jump to the ideal of one trades union all at once. We have got to develop into it on safe lines. We are finding that a number of our industrial unionist friends who want one trade combination for all workers are retarding progress from the trade industrial standpoint. In our country these pin-pricks are, after all, a little bit of a nuisance and sometimes stop progress in the right direction. It shows that among the large number of our men who are young like myself, and some younger, there is a fair amount of education to do even among the organized and the thinking portion of our trades union and working class element. And we are finding the ideal growing towards their ideal of less unions and more trades unionists. It is a right ideal, but it is bound to come by slow stages. Our Trades Union Congress in Sheffield this last September adopted several resolutions suggesting amalgamating unions of one trade or industry. We must have a federation of all the industries, and then the time may peaceably come in orderly and sensible fashion when the whole laboring section and the whole laboring movement may be governed from one head and controlled from the top to the bottom.

However, we are being driven to changes as the time goes on. We have the same evils in England that you have in America, the evils of capitalism and trusts. When you find trusts and combinations—and we are having them more and more in our country, and mostly copied from America—then we have a form of employment, a form of wage control that is monstrous, conscienceless, and tyrannical. It, therefore, needs a stronger organization of the working class to meet this body, that is impersonal in itself, and that therefore has no thought or idea of justice towards those who toil.

Then we have the same evil to fight against that you have here—the great rage for gold. It is the question of Dimes and dollars, dollars and dimes. An empty pocket's the worst of crimes.

It may not apply in America, but it does in Great Britain and Ireland. If a man is poor it is "God help him!" there, whatever it may be in this country of yours. We have, therefore, to create a new religion, or revive an old religion, and I think it is on the lines of one of your American writers who, about 1779, said: "The world is my country; mankind are my brethren; to do good is my religion." A new public conscience is being aroused in our country, and I think also in yours, because I have noticed in the past few weeks how the laboring men have seemed to awake from a state of torpor to intelligent consideration of the political and labor side. I gather this from what I read in the papers day by day. Of course there are even among our working people in Great Britain those who believe capital is king, that it is the creator of commercial progress. They forget that it was said years ago by Abe Lincoln, in days gone by that labor was prior to and independent of capital. There was no capital in the old days Fennimore Cooper speaks of, when the pioneers from all parts of England, Ireland, Scotland and the continent went man by man long distances into the wilds of your American continent and delved their way on the farm lands of Minnesota and other States. There was no capital then; labor created the wealth. Capital had no power then. Labor is the creative genius of all wealth in this or any other country.

I would like to say that we have today in our country, and I think you have it in your country also, that hard, callous evil, aye, nearly devilish, result of our present day commercialism—the nightmare of unemployment. In our country in times of even good trade there are a number of men who want work and can not find it. One of the great kings of commerce or captains of industry, writing a short time ago in one of our magazines, said—and it is quite true that they mean it—that industry must have a surplus amount of labor; that they must always have, or they want to have, a greater number of men in the labor market seeking work than there is work for them. They said they wanted that surplus of labor because in times of emergency they desired to have that market to call upon.

I do not want to deny the fact that it may be serviceable to them to have a surplus amount of labor, but if they desire this surplus they ought to maintain it when the time comes that they can not employ all the workers. When God created men, women and children they were created with the sole object of being useful citizens in a great and mighty world. They were not born to be clothed in rags, to be housed in hovels and to die in hunger. They were born to be intelligent, able, upright persons in a great and mighty and glorious world; and yet man has so changed God's mission, man has so reconstructed God's ideals that today machinery, dollars, stocks and shares more concern the nations and the governments than do human beings. We have, therefore, got to see that the public conscience of our country, and maybe of yours, shall be aroused until there shall be no honest man or woman or child—and all children are honest, bear that in mind, and all children are good, and worthy therefore—who is not given the right to live in fairness and fullness his time through.

We are going to have therefore in our country what is termed an insurance bill to apply to the building trades and to one or two more sections where unemployment is more common in winter time. The idea is that during the time a person is unemployed he shall not be reduced to want. You know if a man is pleading for work and can not get it he becomes partly demoralized, partly degraded, or partly despairing as the time goes along. The idea is to save a man before he becomes a physical wreck and insure him a certain sum of money during times of unemployment. That is an experiment. I think it is a right one, and I hope Great Britain will go on making such experiments until all men who deserve, and all women who deserve, and all children anyhow, have a right to a full life whether trade is good or bad, profits high or low.

This deals with results only. We have some time got to tackle causes. The causes of unemployment are being driven into our minds for consideration more every day as we go along. With more machinery, with the genius of man employed to produce labor-saving machinery we are making more and more a surplus of unemployment. We have therefore to go down to the causes of these effects. I believe, myself, and speaking for myself, we are bound to have an unemployment problem in Great Britain, and probably in all countries, as long as there is private profit in labor. Until the time comes when we can change the public well being to private well being we have got to make slow progress.

I try my best in my own country to deny the idea of some of my socialist friends that the trades union movement is played out. The trades union movement is only on the threshold of the household. It is just starting in its power and strength. It has got to grow into a giant before it is played out. I understand your population in America is seventy or eighty millions in all. Of that number there are certainly one-third or one-fourth who are wage workers, and until you have got seven-tenths of those wage workers members of your trades unions, and the same with ourselves, the trades union movement will not be placed in its proper position. I wish that we who are sometimes termed "young men in a hurry" would realize that all progress must be slow. Mazzini, the Italian patriot, said, "Ye were once slaves, then serfs, then hirelings. You have but to become brothers and free producers through association." Through association, through combination, through co-operation you can become free. In the days gone by we had slavery, in the early part of the Christian era, then serfdom, then feudalism, then the wage time, and we are going on step by step until the time is bound to come when we have public ownership of the general means of life. It is a long time off, and we must use our present day forces toward the ideal.

May I say that is one of the reasons why we have been driven into politics in Great Britain and Ireland. I think we have been fairly successful for the past five or six years. I can remember as a member of the Socialist party, twenty-five years ago being ridiculed for it. I can remember twenty-five years back being condemned because I was a member of a trades union. If you will read history you will find that all the early reformers were ridiculed. I will guarantee that your old General here has been condemned times without number because he has been, like John the Baptist, going ahead of his fellows, holding the light forward.

Our friend Mr. O'Conner yesterday mentioned that at Sheffield we had an exhibition of chain-making where three women came to our platform and said they made chains for a penny a yard. Our trades union movement has so far controlled or created public opinion that it now says that in the box-making trade, the clothing trade and in some branches of tin work there will be no more sweated wages paid to the women and children who work at those jobs. It is something to have aroused public opinion to say that these remorseless systems of commerce shall not be so uncontrolled that they can pay any price they care to the labor they employ. The wages now are 120 per cent more than they were before the Wages Board came into operation. When they come under trades unionism the wages will increase 500 per cent to those women.

We are just now having proposed an amendment to our Factories Law. It is needed. We have in certain parts of Great Britain what is termed child labor. I remember as a lad of nine going two miles and a half to my work at half-past five in the morning, with my breakfast in my hand, and start work in the mill at six. That thing has been changed and amended. Now children can not work until they are twelve years of age, and I would have it fourteen years, and I think next year or the year after our law will be so changed that no child can be employed under fourteen years of age. I would not stop even at that. I would have children go to school until they are at least sixteen years of age, so that they may be trained mentally and physically to fight the battle of life better than they can at the present time.

We have also had our old religion revised. In the old Book it says: "Suffer little children to come unto Me." It also says: "Feed my lambs." Twenty years back, when the old Socialist member talked of feeding school children he was laughed at. I have spoken in the market place, with a chair for a platform and have advocated those things and was laughed at by working people. Today the law says that every child going to school unfed must have a meal provided at the expense of the public. It has been found out that there is a wicked waste of time and money and of human effort in trying to give a mental education to an underfed or starving child. In twenty-five years' time, after a small bit of talk here and there among those who were termed wild men in those days, our labor party came into being in 1906, and in 1907 and 1908 they made a law in Great Britain and Ireland to save these children from mental destruction.

We have in the past year adopted a Housing Bill. The Trades Union Congress, the labor party and every trades council for years have been trying for it. We will have no hovels in the near future, no houses built that may become hovels in the days to come, and no tenements that will be unhealthy and improper from a sanitary point of view. The trades unions have said we are bound to have politics in our movement, and they have done these things that make for comfort for themselves and their families.

We have difficulties. The land question is one in Great Britain. Every Trades Congress says we ought to have nationalism of land. We remember Pope Leo's words in one of his encyclicals many years ago, "That earth, air and sunshine should not be privately owned." Our labor party believes this, and fights for public ownership of land.

We have 1,600,000 trades union members in our labor party. Of these 550,000 are miners of Great Britain and Ireland. We only have officially 35,000 members of the Socialist party, and when you hear tell in the papers about the Socialist section ruling the trades union force of Great Britain you need not believe it, it cannot be done. There are 1,600,000 trades union members and only 35,000 official parties of the Socialist party who are members of the labor party. The newspapers usually omit the things you ought to know.

We have besides our national party a large number of local labor parties. On November 1, I was glad to find in the papers that in nearly every town and city in Great Britain the labor party gained in numbers in the municipal elections. What does that mean? That there is not a town or village now in the North of England or in most portions of Wales and Scotland where on school boards and town and county councils we have not men and women from our own body, men from the mills and mines and forges, the actual daily toilers, who are members of these public bodies. I am also pleased to find that in your country, as in ours, there is an improvement in the attitude towards the women's movement. In days gone by men have been calloused towards the women's movement; they have been careless with regard to women in the trades unions. Now there is a growing movement in England toward economic, political and industrial freedom for our women. The men have got to help them and stand by them. They are now wage competitors in the same market as ourselves, and we must help to organize them, even to save ourselves from destruction.

There is another movement that may be new here. It is a temperance fellowship movement in our trades union movement. Every September at the Trades Union Congress there is a gathering of about 200 trades union delegates who go together to talk temperance and labor measures only. The idea is to remove our trades union locals or branches from the various saloons or public houses into our own halls or homes. That is growing there, and it may grow here. I wish the movement Godspeed.

We have, what I think you do not have here, the co-operative movement. We have 2,500,000 members in the movement, and most of them are members of our trades unions. That movement, the friendly orders, the temperance movement and the Socialist movement go hand in hand with our trades union organization towards material progress. Why should there not be a revival of the old Owenite ideals? When Owen came to America talking co-operation he said that the first object should be to try to abolish poverty. That is all right—it needs abolishing. We have had it too long and we don't like it. The second object was to try to secure a greater share of the comforts of life. Isn't that right? You make all these things, why should you not have them?

The third ideal was to try to get these things by means of a common capital.

Our movement nationally takes in hand other issues of vital importance to our working class movement. One is to abolish war or murder by law in military or naval battles. Today our country is spending double what it was twenty-five years ago when I signed a petition against the excessive expenditure of money for the army and navy. The money comes from the toilers and the fighting men come from the working class forces. The men who control the army and navy, the men who give the orders, are drawn from the middle and upper classes, but the working classes are those who fight and pay and die. I find there is a new spirit in our country to the effect that if our rulers create wars they should go to the front and fight themselves. A new idea is growing that if Germany and France and Great Britain and your country are called upon to fight that those who find the coal and those who run the railway service and man the ships and make the goods that soldiers and sailors need, should chuck down their tools and say, "We are brothers and we are not going to fight against each other."

I am glad to be here in your vast country. In New York, Washington, Philadelphia and St. Louis, for when one finds a trades union man or woman he feels at home. Those are the people who are doing a share of the world mending. We might therefore sing and plead together with Elliot, the common law poet:

God save the people, Thine they are,
Thy children and Thy angels fair,
Save them from bondage and despair—
God save the people.

President Gompers introduced to the convention Mr. W. Brace, Fraternal Delegate from the British Trades Union Congress.

Mr. Chairman and Fellow Trades Unionists: I think my first words at this convention should be words of sincere thanks to the American Federation of Labor for the more than cordial welcome given Mr. Turner and myself and our wives since we arrived at New York. I could never forgive myself if I did not publicly bear testimony to the joy we felt when Mr. Hugh Frayne and Mr. Larger came on board our boat to be our guides, philosophers, and friends until we met your distinguished President and his colleagues later.

Attending this convention or attending the British Trades Union Congress as a delegate is the legitimate ambition of every trades union leader. I, therefore, come to America with as great joy as I have ever had in any undertaking of my life, and I look upon it as a red letter day in my trades union existence when the honor is conferred upon me of expressing the fraternal greetings of our own trades unionists in Britain to our brethren in America.

Since I have come here I have given some little attention to the movement as I see it in your America. I hope I am a man of what you term in America too much "horse sense" to attempt to express an opinion upon your institutions without having time to give them proper study; but I have been here long enough to appreciate the magnitude of the task before you in this great American continent, thousands of miles in extent and with a multiplicity of languages. And the problem of organizing is such that unless the movement were led by men of the stoutest and most courageous hearts, they would faint by the way because of the enormity of the task and the responsibilities before them. I therefore may be permitted to say to you leaders of labor in America that I honor you for the way you are tackling your responsibilities, and I shall go back home and testify that only by the efforts of men of the mightiest courage is it possible to build up a great and powerful trades union movement on this great continent.

The task in Britain is a comparatively small one as compared to yours, but we are members of the same people. Through cable and steamship and Marconigram we are near neighbors, and therefore we are heirs to a great inheritance and a greater destiny, and I am anxious that this great continent, with Great Britain, as the English speaking people, shall be loyal to their destiny and shall establish the claims of humanity as the greatest possible undertaking that valiant men and noble women can accomplish in their day.

One of the passages of Lord Morley in the life of Gladstone has a most pregnant sentence I should like to repeat: "Be inspired with the belief that life is a great and noble calling, not a mean and grovelling thing to be hustled through as we can, but a great and lofty destiny." It is because trades unionists realize that life ought to be a lofty destiny that we decline to be hewers of wood and drawers of water for the privileged classes of any nation. It is because of my profound faith in the movement that I rejoice in coming before you as a trades unionist and a strong supporter of the trades union movement, which is the bedrock upon which all these great movements have been established.

I was glad to hear Mr. Turner say it does not well become us to talk down our movement which has done so much for the amelioration of the conditions of the working classes in every country where it has been tried. I am a member of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain and I have for nearly twenty years been attending the International Congresses. I meet my brethren in Germany, in Austria, in France, and in Belgium. What do we find? That capital is impersonal. We have found that, irrespective of country or nationalities, trades unions are essential and vital necessities if the laborer is to secure a return for service, fair conditions of employment, and wages of a character that will allow him to raise and maintain his family in some kind of comfort and some kind of respectability. I have no patience with men who talk down the trades union movement. They are attacking a movement that has been built upon blood and suffering, whether in America, the United Kingdom, or the continent of Europe.

You have heard of the Barbarini vase. History says that it is one of two pieces of wonderful pottery created by a genius to hold the ashes of a great emperor. This vase became the property of the Duchess of Portland and was placed in the British Museum. If you go there you will see this little piece of pottery ten inches high and a few inches in circumference; looking at it you will think it entirely whole and complete; looking carefully you will find that it is lined and seamed, the cause being that one day a drunken man went into the British Museum and with a stone smashed this precious piece of pottery into a hundred fragments. What it took a genius to create a mad man destroyed. I say to you, to the American people who do not know the history of this great trades union movement, whether in Great Britain or in America, that it is a splendid jewel to be jealously guarded, and no man can be a friend to the oppressed and the poor who would, for any reason whatever, attempt to reduce the power of this mighty institution that stands between capital and often too helpless labor.

In Great Britain we work largely by conciliation and arbitration. In our Society and in many other Societies we have our conciliation boards selected for five years or for three years, as the case may be. An equal number of employers' and workmen's representatives meet. When we fail to agree there is an independent or neutral chairman called in. He has not full power to please himself but to give a casting vote for or against the proposition before the board. The miners, one of the most powerful organized trades in Great Britain or in the world, have their own conciliation board and their own minimum. Wages now are 50 per cent above the standard of 1879. We take a certain period and the rates and conditions of that period will be taken as a standard. The years 1879 and 1885 are the two periods taken in Wales, England and Scotland. Upon that period we have 50 per cent; but there is a distinct proviso that no matter what the condition of trade may be, no matter what the selling price of the commodity may be, no matter what the cost of production may be, no instrument or power or institution or award shall bring wages below a 35 per cent minimum upon the standard of 1879 and 1885.

That, in a sentence, demonstrates the kind of work we do in the trades union movement.

In the industrial field we must have the trades union. The union must be powerful to look after the interests of the individual man, to look after the interests of the collective body in factory, mine or workshop, to deal with matters generally such as this American Federation of Labor deals with. But side by side with its industrial effort, the trades union movement must be political as well. It is bound to be such in character. The day has gone by, in my judgment, when trades unionists can afford to ignore their position in the political life of the nation. Capital is represented in the British House of Commons and powerfully entrenched in the House of Lords. Labor, therefore, must not be content to stand in the outer lobby of Parliament asking other people to do for it what it should do for itself. Labor must go on the floor of Parliament and demand in the name of the organized workers that its desires be carried into effect.

I listened with great interest to the more than admirable and eloquent speech of the Governor of Missouri from this platform, dealing with compensation. May I say to you trades unionists in America that I do not think we could have had a compensation law—at least I am certain we could not have had such a compensation law as we have in Great Britain, today—were it not that members of the working people were in their places upon the floor of the Chamber and in the committee rooms doing their part and taking their share in molding the law.

I am not to be classed among those who do not recognize that there are men outside of the ranks of the workers who have great sympathy with them. I am always glad to receive the help of any section of the community that is willing to help us make the conditions of our people better than they are, but no parliament can translate into law the real desires and necessities of the people unless men are there who are of the people, bone of their bone and flesh of their flesh, and who in their own lives and experience can tell the legislative authorities exactly the views and aspirations of those who are doing the work for the nation.

Our compensation law provides that men and women shall get half their wages if they have been injured. The servant girls are protected; the woman who goes out to work in the villa of the rich or the cottage of the humble is protected. The laundry girls and the factory girls are protected. In case of an accident, half of their wages shall be paid; and let me say that it does not follow if their rules have been violated that they do not get compensation. As a matter of fact, our courts have held that the idea of wilful misconduct, the idea that a man or a woman would get hurt to secure compensation, is without the bounds of human reason. Although a man or a woman may violate the mining laws or the factory laws and as a consequence is hurt, the courts have held that it is not wilful and serious misconduct, but that it is an error of judgment, and you may fine a person under the law he has violated, but you have to pay the compensation.

The compensation law does not abolish our right under the common law or under the employers' liability act. Say an employer has been guilty of not taking all the reasonable precautions to protect the life and limb of his people and an accident occurs; we take that employer into court—not under the compensation law but under the employers' liability law or under the common law—and publicly expose him as a man who is guilty of not treating human life in all its sacredness. We are not limited as to the amount we can claim. Whereas our limit under the compensation law in case of death would be three hundred pounds, time and again we have gone into court and secured four or five hundred pounds as the amount of compensation the court held the employer should pay under the liability law because he had not taken all reasonable precautions to safeguard the people in his employ. We were able to secure this largely through our political activity.

We have our eight hours act for the mines. No man, other than under a special order or for special reasons which have to be entered in a book, is allowed to work in the mines of the United Kingdom for a period longer than eight hours in twenty-four. Let me say as a kind of demonstration of the power of the trades union that while we were able to win this measure of reform through legislative enactment, the power of our organization enabled us to retain our wages intact when the hours were reduced.

The last speech I made in the House of Commons before adjournment in August was a speech calling upon the government to deal seriously with the awful waste of human life that had been going on in the mines of the United Kingdom. As I came across the water I secured one of the little bulletins issued on the vessel and was amazed to find that, heavy and appalling as the death rate is among the miners of Great Britain, the death rate in America is substantially 100 per cent more than that. Oh, men of America, it is time that great owners of capital and great powerful statesmen are taught by organized labor that the great wealth of a nation is not property or silver or gold, but that the real wealth of a nation is its human lives!

I am glad to testify that the home secretary, Mr. Churchill, recognizing there was a cause to be answered, here, has undertaken to have in the next session of Parliament a new mines bill which will embrace some of the things organized labor for years has been demanding in behalf of the men who go down, with an enormous loss of life, to bring one great source of wealth to the nation. We are promised that we shall have a certain number of men appointed as mines inspectors; they will be drawn from the working class themselves; so that we shall have an extensive investigation before accidents happen, and thereby prevent the awful loss of life.

The tragedy of the labor movement is that our opponents are not always outside our ranks; the tragedy of the labor movement is when men of their own class turn against their fellows. A number of our trades unionists have become plaintiffs in an action, and as a consequence the trades unions of Great Britain are under injunction to prevent them from using their money for political purposes. There is likely to be another general election within a few weeks. You can not fight an election in Great Britain or in America without money. Payment of members of Parliament presupposes success at the polls. I am glad to see my friend W. B. Wilson in this convention, and if I may be permitted, I take this occasion to congratulate him upon his election to Congress. He knows there is an amount not only of labor but of expenditure to be undertaken before a man can succeed at the polls. In my own Parliamentary election money was poured out like water to prevent us from succeeding. It cost my Society twenty-four hundred pounds to win the seat I hold. What is the use of saying to men such as we are that they will pay members of Parliament and that they ought to accept that as meeting their views, when, unless they spend money in large amounts, it is impossible for labor to stand any chance against the representatives of capital in the contest for membership in the House of Parliament? We will accept payment of members of Parliament as a civic right, not as meeting our case but as the right of every man who serves the State to be paid for the service he renders to the State. We demand that the trades unions shall be free to spend their own money in their own way and for their own interests. What are we asking for? Simply the right to govern ourselves upon the democratic principle of government by majority. We are not asking for the right to spend the employers' money; not asking for the right to spend other people's money; we are simply demanding the right to spend our own money in our own way according to the wish of the majority of our members. We are up against a great fundamental rule from which we can not be driven back. The right of the majority to rule and govern themselves is a right which every body of people in every democratic state is bound to demand and maintain. There are two parties at least in America, the Republican and the Democratic. Whichever party gets in power, the laws are made against the wishes of a substantial minority; suppose the minority says "We do not like these laws and we are not willing to pay taxes or to conform to the laws." All the resources of this mighty nation would be brought to bear to make them obey the law, made not by unanimous vote but by the vote of the majority.

I was very much interested to see, speaking as a Welshman, that upon your records of last year you carried a resolution of compliment and congratulation to my distinguished countryman, Lloyd-George, because of his desire to deal more strictly with the owners of land in the United Kingdom. The landlords were unwilling to pay the increased taxes. They said, "We are not going to sign form four to give you the information you desire," and they said, "We are not going to sign form seven," which would cause them to be taxed more than they were being taxed. The government said, "You may object as much as you like, but you have got to pay." If it is right for the landlords by majority rule to be made to pay all the demands under the budget, can it be wrong for the majority of the trades unionists to say that within their own trades unions the minority must obey the law of the majority and that we have the right to spend our money for political or other purposes as the majority think wise?

Not only must we have the right to spend our money to keep members in parliament, but we must have our right to local administrative bodies. What is the use of having a powerful parliamentary party and the means to win reforms through political machinery, unless we have on local administrative bodies of the country men who will give sympathetic consideration to the causes of reform that have been won through the imperial legislature? We call upon the government to concede to the cause of labor the same principle of government by democracy that is recognized by the wisest minds of every democratic state, no matter in what part of the country it may be found. You can not claim for America or for Britain or for any other country that law by the majority is the soundest and best law and refuse to give that same principle of government to labor whether in the United Kingdom or in America. That is what we stand for.

I have a profound faith in the power of organized labor when powerfully organized and intelligently directed. The time has more than come when we must rouse ourselves up to the fact that we must emphasize before the public our points of agreement, not our points of disagreement. Do not let us weaken the great movement for which we stand by allowing the public to think that because we differ in policies or in opinions, there is no room within our great democratic trades unions for such differences. We want to stand four square to push back the attack of capital. The attack is becoming acute that capital is making day by day upon the working people. It is because of my profound faith in the movement that I say we want to strike a new note, national, international, local, and individual. Too long has it been thought that in the great contest of nations the determining factor as to whether we live or die as a great people will be settled by a few privileged families or a few millionaires. Nations must not forget that for every millionaire in every land, there must be millions of people who do not know where to turn for their next meal. In the great testing day of nations, when great America and imperial Britain shall stand face to face with the great crisis, the determining factor of whether we shall be reduced in power or strengthened will not be the wealth of the millionaires or the aristocratic families. It will be the measure of comfort to be found in the homes of the people.

I am satisfied that this movement of ours, with all its imperfections, is the one instrument that will bring pressure to bear upon nations to do some measure of justice to the wage-earners. Think of Rome, imperial Rome! that stood out mighty in engineering skill and mighty in military power! I have fished sometimes in the forest of Dean by the side of a road built by the Romans, and it is as perfect today as when it was made. But what of Rome? Rome has been broken; swept into oblivion as a world power, not because she lacked skill or power, but because she failed to do her duty in her day to the mass of the people. In these days when nations are working for great mercantile marines it might be pointed out that Carthage was a mighty mercantile power in the days that are gone. Carthage did not lack capacity or commercial skill, but Carthage was wiped out, not because she lacked power but because she failed to recognize the great human problems. In my own beloved Wales, where we have a passion for education of the people, where fathers and mothers make enormous sacrifices that their boys and girls may have a straight course from the elementary schools to the universities, I point out as I do here: "What of Greece? Greece gathered to herself all the culture of the world, but Greece is broken and swept away. She failed to realize her obligation to the people." The same great fundamental laws that broke Rome and Carthage and Greece will break America and will break Britain, if the claims of the poor are not dealt with.

The responsibility is upon organized labor here and upon organized labor in Britain, to tell this new note to the nations: that capital has its responsibilities as well as its privileges; that the call for the newer and the higher humanity is a call the nations can not afford to ignore with impunity. And with a view of making this note strong and powerful enough to give us reform, I say to the working classes:

Give us men—

Men of every rank,
Fresh and free and frank;
Men of thought and reading,
Men of light and leading,
Men of faith and not of faction,
Men of lofty aim and action—
Give us men, I plead again,
Give us men!

President Gompers introduced to the convention Mr. R. P. Pettipiece, Fraternal Delegate from the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress.

Fraternal Delegate Pettipiece: Mr. Chairman and fellow workers: It is my duty, my pleasure and my privilege this morning to convey to you from the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada the greetings of its affiliated membership and the wage-workers generally throughout the Dominion. I have always been proud to be a member of the international labor movement; but after my experience here this morning, after listening to my fellow fraternal delegates, I am more than ever convinced that the future statesmen of this Continent will be found largely within the confines of our international labor movement.

I believe one of the greatest problems that confronts the workers of this Continent is, not so much to push on to accepting responsibility, as to prepare ourselves for the responsibilities that are fast being forced upon us. As compared with my esteemed friend, Brother Turner, I have been only a short time in the international labor movement; but in that short time I have been made to feel that the trades union movement, allied with the political movement, is nothing more, possibly, than a training school for the future statesmen and law-makers of this Continent.

It is sometimes a habit among members of the organized labor movement to find a little fault in connection with the huge expense of holding such conventions as this; but I ask any delegate here this morning, after the experience we have already had in this convention, after the things we have been able to learn, if the value of the personal acquaintanceship and the value of the hand-clasp of those we have been working with and reading about can be measured by the monetary cost? Who is going to estimate it in dollars and cents? Who is going to put a price upon the bearing it will have upon the future labor movement of this Continent.

The modern school of thought in the international labor movement owes much to the old school of trades unionists, to the men who have made possible the purpose and trend of the wage-workers' movement of today.

The speakers who preceded me have referred to the problems that confront the wage-workers, not only on the American Continent and the United Kingdom, but throughout the entire world; and just in proportion as members of the wage-working class learn to understand this international character of the labor movement, just so much will we make for its future triumph. Speaking from a continental standpoint, we have such issues as the rapid capitalist development, increased cost of living and the same old nightmare my brother fraternal delegates referred to, that of unemployment, due to the introduction of machinery and the displacement of labor. We have all these and many other problems to face. I will not go into them in detail, but I am of the opinion that all these problems we are grappling with at this time have their tape-root in and spring from the fundamental evil of corporate ownership of the means of life.

As a representative of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress it becomes my duty to explain to you as best I can some of the immediate problems we are grappling with over there. At the last convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada one of the subjects that occupied the attention of the delegates was that of a phenomenal immigration. The delegates will understand that Canada is a new and a growing country. I want to impress upon the officers of international unions especially the tremendous responsibilities that are being placed upon the shoulders of the members of the organized labor movement in Canada by virtue of the number of people being poured into that country. In addition to the one transcontinental railroad we already have, four more are being constructed, and as they are being built the governmental authorities and other agencies under various cloaks and disguises seem to be at work for the purpose of pouring into the country the surplus labor of Europe and elsewhere. The development in Canada during the next ten years will equal a development it has taken thirty years to produce in the United States. I remember, although I am a young man, the rush there was to the far West of the States a few years ago. That same or even a greater development, is taking place in Canada. I want to again impress upon international officers the necessity of coming to the aid of the officers and members of the unions in Canada to help us organize and educate and care for the tremendous influx of population into Canada at this time. Some three years ago the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress sent a representative to Great Britain to plead with the unionists there to prevent immigrants coming to Canada under misrepresentation. We found the government—the employers' executives—against us and were compelled to change our methods. Now we have resolved at the last congress to face the issues squarely and turn organizers loose in an effort to assimilate and organize and educate those men as they come in, and persuade them to join with us and face the problems as we have been doing in the past. In this gigantic task I plead for the co-operation of the affiliated unions of the American Federation of Labor. At the convention of the Trades and Labor Congress in Victoria, in 1906, after a discussion of some two or three days, the delegates came to the conclusion that in the best interests of the workers throughout Canada they would declare for absolutely independent political action. That declaration on the part of the congress has been reaffirmed at every convention from then until now. I want to point out, however, that the congress made a provision that in the carrying out of that declaration provincial autonomy was granted. The workers in each province therefore determine for themselves how best to carry out the declaration. There are so many things I might refer to in connection with this great international labor movement that I scarcely know where to begin; but as my fellow fraternal delegates have so thoroughly covered the necessity of the wage-workers, and especially the necessity of members of the organized labor movement going into politics for themselves, I do not believe it will be necessary for me to further emphasize that point. However, as my home town is in British Columbia, I will touch on the situation there. The problem of immigration is a live question in British Columbia, more so than in any other portions of the Dominion, on account of the presence of orientals. There are between 35,000 and 40,000 orientals in the Province of the British Columbia. We have occasion to believe that something more than resolutions may be required in the settlement of that problem. As a delegate to the Trades and Labor Congress for the last five or six years I have introduced a hardy annual, that, "inasmuch as the capitalists of the world create the wars they should do their own fighting." I appreciate, however, that all the privileges we, as workingmen enjoy, are granted to us only in proportion to the power we have to secure them. For the last twenty or thirty years we have been educating the orientals by the best means that could be found in Germany, in England and in the United States. We have had every ship carrying over the means of producing wealth, and the Japanese at least have demonstrated to us that they are masters at the art of warfare. They are also beginning to demonstrate their achievements in the industries. In proportion to this development among the orientals we have to handle delicately the question of the Japanese. Since we have had a little squabble with them on our coast a year or two ago their quarters there have been nothing more than an arsenal. I am opposed to militarism, but I am compelled to believe that because of this "spirit of Japan" that inspires these orientals to take the position they do we may be compelled to reconsider our position in that respect and make up our minds to take action to preserve the white race on this continent. We had hoped that by education and probably by organization we would be able to assimilate and make these people part of the international labor movement, but that does not seem probable in the near future. In British Columbia I presume we have had nothing more than the growth and development you have had in this country. When I went to the province about twenty-one years ago the different industries were in the hands of individuals. Later they grew into the hands of companies, then into syndicates, and although we sing "Britons never will be slaves," our timber interests are dominated practically by Mr. Swift, of Swift, Armour and Company; our coal mines are owned by another labor-skinning corporation, in San Francisco, in conjunction with James J. Hill, of St. Paul; and our fisheries are owned by other American and British capitalists. Whatever is left the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Companies own. No matter what flag floats over Canada, our friend Pierpont Morgan seems to rule the industrial waves! We as workingmen in the Province of British Columbia and in Canada have ourselves made all this possible. Every privilege of every corporation in the capitalized world enjoys has been given to them by the working class. Years ago in Sunday school I learned that "the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away." So it must be with the workers. Every privilege we have given them we must take away if we are to defend our own interests. They—the capitalists—have shown us how to do it. The workers of British Columbia and elsewhere have voted for the representatives of the old political parties, and, no matter whether they were Liberals or Conservatives, Democrats or Republicans, they were no better than the principles their parties stood for, and that is the corporate ownership of the means of life. As soon as three or four corporations owned the jobs of the citizens of that province we were compelled to take action. As with the workers elsewhere, we never do anything until we are compelled to. We were compelled to take some radical and revolutionary steps there. When James Dunsmuir closed down the mines on Vancouver Island because the miners had asked for an increase in pay and had gone on strike, he said to the striking miners through a royal commission: "These mines are mine. Can not I do as I like with my own property?" That statement, Mr. Chairman, is correct, no matter how brutal it may be. If the workers will walk to the ballot box on election day and confer the power to write the law and make it legal for them to own these things we must give them the right to do as they like with their own property. The miners in British Columbia then began to question their right to own that property. That famous declaration in British Columbia gave birth to the Socialist party. Its exponents declared that when they got a majority they would make all this property the collective property of the working class. I remember how unpopular it was to be a member of that party at that time. We had to carry on a campaign similar to that referred to by Mr. Turner this morning. However, since 1903 the Socialist party in British Columbia has grown from a little group of less than a dozen men in Vancouver to a party that polled twenty-one per cent of the votes in that county, despite of the fact that we had only twenty-one candidates running in forty-two constituencies. In British Columbia the Socialist Party has the distinguished honor of having one of its members the parliamentary leader of His Majesty's loyal opposition. A great deal has been said about legislation that has been secured. All the legislation that has been referred to by my comrades and all I could refer to that has been passed in British Columbia came after the appearance of a few labor members in the house. We got the eight-hour day for bituminous miners and metalliferous miners, then we secured the workman's compensation act, and much other pallistine labor legislation. Almost every province in Canada now has a workman's compensation act. That word "compensation" is very often misinterpreted. I have stood on the banks of Coal Creek in the Fernie District, after an explosion that had killed 136 bread winners. I saw the widows and children waiting for their loved ones to be brought to the surface—and then you talk to me about compensation. If all the corporations on top of earth at this moment were to relinquish their right, title and ownership and hand over to the working people everything they have on earth, it would not compensate for the wrongs they have perpetrated on our people for lo, these many years. It now costs money to kill a man in these particular provinces, and therefore there is less killing done. Where they were killing at the rate of four or five hundred miners a year, after the first and second year we had the compensation act and had wrung from two mining corporations in British Columbia $132,000, they got busy and brought in a measure which provided for mine inspectors. For the first time in our history they allowed the miners to name one inspector, the government to name one and these in turn name the third. A miner can now go to a member of his own union and inform him of gas in the mine without danger of losing his job. This is as it should be, according to the testimony given by many of the miners themselves. The real value of this Workman's Compensation Act is to better protect and fit us to fight the real battles for industrial freedom. I hope that as a result of the magnificent addresses given by my fellow delegates, and as a result of the deliberations of this convention, some new ideas, some new thoughts will be planted in the minds of the delegates. I hope also that as a result of the deliberations of this convention we will go home bigger and better men.

President Gompers introduced to the convention Rev. Charles Stelzle, Fraternal Delegate from the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ.

Fraternal Delegate Stelzle: It is a particular pleasure for me to come to this convention in St. Louis, not simply because of the privilege of attending this convention, but because about a dozen years ago I began my ministry in St. Louis among the working people on the south side of the city. I remember that work most vividly. In an auditorium about as large as this we gathered together every Sunday about a thousand children from the homes of the working people. I remember with pleasure also that we had seventy-five of the daughters of the workmen of South St. Louis in the cooking classes. We engaged the best teachers of cooking in St. Louis to give them weekly instructions. We had six boys' clubs. We had meetings of women. I remember the gymnasium and other features in connection with that enterprise. I recall also the job I used to have to find work for the men. We had a chorus of a hundred voices and we employed music teachers to bring more of sweetness and joy into the lives of those working people. I have always had a profound impression that what great numbers of working men and women and children lack is the enlargement of their lives; that which would broaden their outlook and give them a chance to enjoy the beautiful things in life, which in most cases are given to the rich. Last night I had the pleasure of going to the same church, invited by those people and there as I looked into the faces of tired mothers, of widows, I recalled my own personal experience in their homes as they lived their lives of sacrifice and suffering, due in many cases to weak husbands, due often to adverse economic conditions; but whatever the cause may have been it was my privilege as their minister to counsel with them, to help them as I had opportunity. But also I saw on that platform a great crowd of young people, a great chorus larger than the one we had twelve years ago, presided over by a little Polish girl. When I was there twelve years ago, that little Polish shop girl, then about twelve years old, was struggling in the midst of the most adverse circumstances to break out into the larger life which, by all the rights of God and of humanity, belonged to her. I remember that as she became a member of the choir we had then she was eager to learn more about music. In some way, I need not tell you how, she got the chance. Last night, still a young Polish girl, she stood before that chorus with her baton in her hand, and as they sang I was more deeply thrilled as she led that great chorus than I was when the St. Louis Choral Symphony played the other day, and I was thrilled then. As I walked out of that church last night I grinned, because there wasn't any "trough" in front of the church! There was a fountain inside, and a fountain is a whole lot better than a "trough!"

It is about six years since I first came to the convention of the American Federation of Labor as a Fraternal Delegate representing the Presbyterian Department of Church and Labor. Last year I came as a fraternal delegate representing the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which represents thirty-three denominations with a membership of about 18,000,000. I come to you in the same capacity this year. Some of you may recall that last year I made a statement that if I got the chance this year I would get that council to stand for some pretty definite things with regard to the economic conditions of the working people of America. One of the first things accomplished last year after I went back from the convention was the appointment of a special committee to visit South Bethlehem where the strike of the steel workers was in progress. We investigated conditions there. I need not repeat to this convention the things we discovered. We did make certain recommendations which were sent broadcast throughout the country and throughout the church. I want to read two or three of these recommendations.

"A twelve-hour day and a seven-day week are alike a disgrace to civilization. There is a way of avoiding each, but they will not be avoided until society requires the backward members of the community to conform to the standards recognized by decent men. The continuous industries—those necessarily operating on seven days a week—are numerous enough to require special regulation. They include today, railroads, street cars, telegraph and telephone lines, heat, light and power plants, newspaper offices, blast furnaces, hotels and restaurants and other industries. There should be laws requiring three shifts in all industries operating 24 hours a day, and there should be laws requiring one day of rest in seven for all workmen in seven-day industries.

"That directly growing out of the Bethlehem situation the Federal Government be urged to include in its specifications for armor plate, war vessels, construction work and the like, that the work be done on a six-day basis, and that where operations are necessarily continuous, the 24 hours be divided into three shifts of eight instead of two of twelve. The government is rich enough to pay for vessels constructed under the best sanitary and economic conditions.

"It is essential that there be some method whereby employes may approach their employers with their grievances without prejudice against those selected to represent them. The committee would raise the question of recognition of the right of all workmen to organize in such a manner as may seem best to them, provided that they keep within the limits of the law; and we recommend that employers of labor recognize such organizations when they speak in behalf of their members.

"The committee reaffirms, in the name of the Commission on the Church and Social Service, the three principles for which the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America asserts the church must stand:

"1. The gradual and reasonable reduction of the hours of labor to the lowest practicable point, and that degree of leisure for all which is a condition of the highest human life.

"2. A release from employment one day in seven.

"3. A living wage as a minimum in every industry, and the highest wage that each industry can afford."

That is merely a report of progress. We are on the job. We are doing what we can in our way, not as a trades union, mind you, but as a combination of the Protestant churches of America to bring about better economic conditions among the working people of this country.

But other things have happened during the past year. I have been amazed and my friends have been amazed because there has not been a more determined opposition to this department I have been representing. There has been opposition. There has been opposition by Mr. Parry and Mr. Post, but recently there has been a very decided and determined opposition by Mr. John Kirby, Jr., of Dayton, Ohio. I have never replied to any of these accusations or criticisms, and this is the first time in all my career that I have mentioned the names of these gentlemen in public in relation to their attack upon me personally and upon the department which I represent. A little while ago Mr. Kirby sent out to all the editors of our church a long letter in which he said some very strong things with reference to my personal attitude towards organized labor, and especially the attitude of the Presbyterian Church with regard to these matters. I will not read all the letter, but will read a few extracts:

"The attitude of the Presbyterian Church in encouraging and promoting the boycott in spite of the many court decisions, including the Supreme Court of the United States, that it is unlawful and wicked; the closed shop; the deprivation of opportunity for our boys to learn trades of their choice and the leveling down process of all working men, by affiliating through officially authorized delegates with the American Federation of Labor and thus condoning its record of barbarism, is so repulsive to me and from my viewpoint so out of harmony with the laws of God and the teachings of Christ that that church professes to promote that my conscience will not permit me to assist in extending its influence. Indeed it would be the height of inconsistency for me to do so. I not only criticize but I condemn the wisdom of such a policy. The spectacle of a Presbyterian minister authoritatively representing the Presbyterian Church in affiliation with such an anti-Christian organization as the American Federation of Labor and boldly advocating its doctrines, boasting that he is a member of the International Association of Machinists and carries a union card and proclaiming his approval of the closed shop and the union labels is so abhorrent to me that I wonder what material is made after all. This deception has lasted for five years or more and its influence is stronger today than ever."

It has come to pass that Mr. Kirby reports stenographically in some cases the addresses I have been giving about the country; that he reports the addresses of my associates in my department, and I have no doubt that his representative is present in this audience today. These reports are sent back to Mr. Kirby, who prints them in a subsidized paper in Dayton, a paper which poses as a labor paper. A little while ago in a six-column article Mr. Kirby roasts the speaker to a finish. I want to read a paragraph of this roast:

"In the opinion of those who have opportunity of viewing the entire field of organized labor's activity, studying its plans and analyzing its motives and have the acumen to understand what they see, hear and read, the time has come when every friend of the Y. M. C. A., every advocate of the cause and every worker in the field of Christian endeavor, should give intelligent, earnest and conscientious consideration to the plans and methods of the American Federation of Labor for capturing this great movement which has for its purpose the moral, intellectual and social uplift of the young men of America—of the civilized world. That it has such plans and is carrying them out can not be successfully denied.

"The same advice and warning is equally applicable to those who are promoting the movement to 'Take the Church to the Working Man,' by which the plotters against the non-union workman and the subservient representatives of the American Federation of Labor mean its 'capture,' its rule and domination by Gompers' trades unionism, Debs' socialism and Emma Goldman's anarchism—then, Revolution."

Another paper said:

"The conviction has been growing that the influence of Mr. Stelzie's work is bad; that Stelzie's efforts to take the Presbyterian church over to and into organized labor should be condemned and opposed, and they will be in the near future and in a general and surprising way, one which will attract general attention in and outside of the Presbyterian church."

Here is another:

"Rev. Charles Stelzie, Superintendent of the Church and Labor Department of the Presbyterian church, is the American Federation of Labor's most successful propagandist.

"He represents that large and influential denomination as fraternal delegate to the annual conventions of the American Federation of Labor, the annual conventions of national labor organizations of the different crafts, and at meetings of local trades and labor councils.

"By personal visitation, influence and entreaty he has secured the appointment of fraternal delegates to local trades and labor councils by the ministerial associations of the larger cities of the country, and arranged for representation of these trades bodies in the ministerial associations.

"He avails himself of every opportunity to proclaim his doctrine and advocate the closed shop in the pulpit, on the lecture platform, at the chautauquas, and whenever and wherever he can get an audience. His work is successful; partly because of his special qualification, but largely because of the fact that he assumes the air of thus saith the Lord, out of the mouth of His apostle, chosen by the Presbyterian Church of the United States to represent him."

I want to say, gentlemen, that the influence of this sort of thing is such as will in no sense injure either the American Federation of Labor or the department of church and labor. If there is one thing Mr. Kirby has insisted on in his public declarations it is that he believes in good unionism. Does Mr. Kirby imagine for a moment that I could afford to stand for any other kind of unionism? Does he imagine for a moment that this American Federation of Labor could afford to stand for any other kind of unionism? And while Mr. Kirby persistently reiterates the statement that he believes in organized labor, but that he does not believe in the kind of organized labor I am advocating, I insist that what Mr. Kirby practically means is that he believes in no kind of organized labor, and he would wipe the whole thing off the face of the earth if he got half a chance.

Any man who is so intemperate in his speech as Mr. Kirby so frequently is, is unfit to represent the decent manufacturers of the United States. I want to say further that if Mr. Kirby insists on lying about me he will not hesitate to lie about you. I stand by everything I have ever said in any meeting of this convention with regard to organized labor. That does not mean, and you will bear me witness, that I stand for lawlessness or anything that is contrary to the customs of our country, any more than I believe that you gentlemen do; because I have a notion that I know your sentiments with regard to these great problems. I do stand, however, for better economic conditions, and I welcome any movement, I care not where it comes from, that stands by the workmen of the world in lifting up the downtrodden and the oppressed. If Mr. Kirby believes he can intimidate or coerce me or the Presbyterian church he has undertaken a bigger job than he thinks.

I have always had an idea since I have been on this job, and long before, that the church is simply a means to an end and not an end in itself, and frankly I repeat here what I have said before our own church conventions, that while I am anxious to have workmen go to church; to the Protestant Church, if that is their church; to the Catholic church, if that is their church; to the Jewish church, if that is their church—while I believe in that and would agitate it and talk about it, I am far more anxious to have the church go to the workingman. It is the business of the church of Jesus Christ, if it is here for anything at all, to uplift our common humanity, and if it is not doing that it had better get out of business.

I need not repeat here some of the things I have said about my own personal experience and why it is I am on this job; but I do want to make this statement, that there came a time in my life, back in that old machine shop in New York, when I could no longer stay there. I had lived among the tenements of the East Side too long not to feel the great heart throb of the working people. I knew their sufferings—aye, I knew them down to the point where it weighed down my life and deprived me, and is depriving me today, of some of those privileges I believed belonged to me by reason of being born into this world. I felt I could no longer stay in that shop working at my trade, not because I did not like the job, because I did; but I had a profound conviction that I must get out and fight the battles of the working people—my people. The question arose as to whether I should become a labor agitator, talking upon the streets of the East Side of New York, from the end of a bobtail cart if I could not get a hall, talking to the people on the street corners and urging them to fight for their rights, to aspire to the better things of life and to oppose every movement and every institution that stood in the way of the progress of the people, whether to do that sort of thing or whether I should become a minister and work from within the Church outward was the problem. After thinking the whole thing over I decided, so far as I was concerned, I could do my best work from within the Church rather than from without, and from that day to this I have been honestly trying to do it, sometimes with considerable opposition, often in the face of misunderstandings from without the labor movement and from within.

But, gentlemen, let me say that I am on this job to stay, and I am on the job because of my original purpose to stand by the working people of America until the day shall arrive when they shall receive those things which rightfully belong to them in spite of every opposing force. And the thing that has spurred me on, particularly in the past few weeks, has been the messages I have received from back home, from a mother who has gone through the whole round of suffering and sacrifice, a mother who has been put out upon the streets of the East Side of New York because she could not pay the rent, who has gone hungry for days in order to give her children something to eat, and then only stale bread and salt—that mother who passed through all these things to support her six children in a rear tenement is on the point of collapse. And when I think of other women suffering as she has suffered, working for less than she worked for, I do not need an American Federation of Labor Convention or any church resolution or anything else to commit me unqualifiedly to the battle of the common people of this country in an effort to secure a square deal for these downtrodden women, these suffering children and these oppressed workingmen of our land.

Fraternal Delegate Father Dietz: Mr. President and Members of the Convention—I am very glad to be among you because of the personal satisfaction that it gives me. I was with you last year in Toronto in an unofficial capacity, and the impressions I received were strong and deep and lasting. I have not failed to give a good report whenever and wherever I have had the opportunity. I had not been a stranger to trades unionism before that. I will not go into details of the things I have been interested in; it is sufficient to say that at the present time I hold an honorary commission as organizer from the State Federation of Labor of Ohio. But my personal part, small as it is, could be of no particular interest to you were it not that I have been honored by representing an organization which in many respects resembles your own. In membership it is equal to your own organization, numbering over 3,000,000 thoroughly organized men. It is made up of many nationalities. While its primary object is a defense of the rights of the Catholic citizen it has also as an object the elevation of the standard of American citizenship, which it has in common with you of the American Federation of Labor.

I am proud that it is my privilege to be the first man to represent the American Federation of Catholic Societies in your body. It is not necessary to assure you that you enjoy the sympathy of the great organized body of the Catholic laity in the United States, for that sympathy has always been with you, and if proof were wanting it could be found in the fact that a very large part of the men who are in the service of the trades union movement owe spiritual allegiance to the Catholic faith, and I dare say that their Catholic faith has never stood in the way of their trade unionism. You yourselves will attest that they have been as loyal to you as the most loyal among you; that they have stood shoulder to shoulder with you; that they have borne with you the brunt of every battle, and to-day they sit honorably with you in this convention.

Trades unionism has always been a part of the Catholic system of thought. It may not have been in that name, but the substance of it, according to the times and the modifications of circumstances, has always been a part of the Christian civilization of the past. I need not enter into details, for any fair student of economic history will satisfy himself that the Catholic Church has not stood in the way of the just aspirations of the people, but has ever been their champion.

But today I do not wish to speak of what is past. I wish to tell you what is our conviction today. It is our idea that society is built upon the unit, the family is built upon the unit, the State is built upon the unit. As we look out over the State we notice it is an industrial State. As an industrial State it rests upon industrial society and industrial society to a great extent rests upon trades unionism. In fact, we can say that trades unionism is the very backbone of industrial society, and therefore the great problem of social reform is largely the problem of trades unionism. We have witnessed in the nineteenth century a great democratic movement. We have noticed everywhere how the power of government or of forming the government has passed from the hands of the few into those of the great masses of the common people. It is not necessary to examine the causes, but it has forced the legislatures of every civilized land to give a larger share of its work to the social problems, to the adjustment of the relations of the workmen and the employers, of the rich and the poor. The poorer and weaker portion of the population is made up of working men. They form the greatest part of the population and it is meet and just and right in a democracy that they shall have the greatest share in making and in the administration of the law, and that they are entitled to the largest benefit of the law.

But we realize that the protection of the State can not be enduring unless it be sustained by labor organization. The very fact that the country gives continued evidence of social dissatisfaction and disaster is proof to any thinking man that society is not sufficiently organized. If every industry were organized, the parasitic industries that take and use up the life-blood of the successive relays of working men, casting the worn-out toiler on the scrap heap, to be taken care of by the community, would cease to exist or would have to be amended.

We maintain two great principles which we have never denied, and which we do not deny now. We insist that it is wrong to tolerate the cut-throat competition among employers; and, on the other hand, the sham competition of individual bargaining between master and working man. It is right to regulate trading and to have collective bargaining. We are confronted sometimes with tales of trade union tyranny. In the words of Charles Staunton Devas, a Catholic political economist, it is our conviction that fifty per cent of these tales have their birth in the heated imagination of antagonists, that twenty-five per cent arise out of misunderstandings, and of the remaining twenty-five per cent a part may be justified, leaving a remainder to show that trades unionists, like other people, are subject to human infirmities. It is but common sense therefore to give encouragement to trades unionism which is not and can not be, if it is true to itself, a center of atheism and revolt. The American Federation of Labor has succeeded in elevating the standard of living, not only for the 3,000,000 men and their families who make up its membership, but also for untold millions, who ignorantly or ignobly profit by its work and its sacrifice. What was said by John Mitchell in 1903 at Wilkesbarre has always appealed to me. He said it was a pity that so many, failing to understand the fundamental principles and the lofty ideals of trades unionism, condemn without investigation the motives and the policies of those whose mission it is to relieve suffering, redress wrong and raise to a higher standard of life those who are as defenseless in their individual capacities as a rudderless ship in an ocean storm.

The Federation of Catholic Societies, therefore, holds out to the trade unionism the hand of fellowship and support. We realize and recognize that trades unionism is a primary element in the regulation of industrial society. We fail to see how within proper limits it can in any way prove injurious to the common welfare. Every business enterprise must be subject to the common welfare, and any business enterprise that to succeed rests upon a rate of wages and conditions detrimental to a decent livelihood and unworthy of manhood ought never to see the light of day.

We realize that the American Federation of Labor has been a most effective institution for the protection of the rights and liberty of the American working men. We believe that at heart it offers a safe, real, constructive, sane and Christian solution of many of our social problems. It has always been guided by conservation, and precisely because of this, the American Federation of Labor deserves the sympathy and active support of that larger portion of our American population which is the constituency of the American Federation of Catholic Societies.

President Gompers introduced to the convention Miss Anna Fitzgerald, fraternal delegate from the Women's International Union Label League.

Fraternal Delegate Fitzgerald: Mr. Chairman and Delegates—This affords me considerable pleasure, although it is unexpected. I am going to say a few words in regard to the organization I have the honor to represent. The Women's International Union Label League is an organization that is an absolute necessity to this great movement. For years the trades unionists have gone along paying very little attention to the way the money earned under union conditions has been spent. Our organization, realizing that 70 or 80 per cent of the money earned by trades unionists is spent by women, decided it was necessary to educate the women in the best way of spending that money in the interests of trades unionism. Necessarily the progress of our work is slow. We must appeal to the women in the homes. As you know, going from house to house is not like getting men and women in great halls to talk to them. We believe, however, that our work is second only to the great trade union movement itself. I believe if we could interest the wives, mothers and sisters of the trades unionists we could create a demand for the union label that would make some of our Perrys and Posts and Kirbys take notice, not only of the organized labor movement, but of the Women's International Union Label League.

I know you realize the full necessity of such an organization as ours, but I want to ask you to co-operate with us in imparting your knowledge to the women in your homes. By this means we will bring about a work that in less than five years will be so successful you will all wonder why it was not started twenty-five or thirty years ago. I realize many of you feel a woman's work is in the home. I agree with you, but in that home she can be of greater assistance to you than many of you seem to realize. It is to help make her of assistance to you that we have undertaken this work. I earnestly ask for your co-operation. It will mean but a little effort on the part of the trades unions throughout the country, but it will be a great help to the organization.

I often feel that if I had an opportunity to speak to the leaders of the trade union movement I would tell them a thing or two, but now that I have the opportunity I hesitate and wonder what will make the greatest impression in the least time. I will ask you, however, to give us all the assistance you can. It will mean more to the unions that have labels than possibly any other effort you have made.

President Gompers: To our fraternal delegates from across the ocean and across the border, as well as to the fraternal delegates from within the confines of our own country, I want to express a deep sense of gratification and appreciation for their splendid addresses. I do not think it would be doing justice to one to select an address and hold it up as conspicuous. I think we are all agreed that the character of of the addresses is not only impressive but important.

While listening the thought came to me, as the names of a few of the opponents of labor were mentioned, "What, after all, do they imagine they can accomplish by their bitter, relentless hostility to organized labor? Can they have in mind that they are going to stifle the voice of discontent with wrong? Do they expect that the hearts and the hopes of the workers of our time can be crushed under their iron heel? Do they fancy, in their fool's paradise, that if they can succeed in killing our present labor movement they will then enjoy unchecked sway? The time is passed when the men of labor yield on bended knee and bent back. The men of labor of our time stand erect.

The declaration is made by the greatest scientists that to obtain the very best product of the human family we must begin with the grandparents. Thinking of that I am impelled to the expression of this thought, that the enemies of organized labor have allowed their chance to go by if they hope to enslave the masses, and that the wealth possessors should be the absolute masters of all they survey. They began too late, they allowed their opportunity to pass when they permitted our grandparents to learn the alphabet, the letters a, b and c, and all the way through; to learn the meaning of them and to conjure with them. They learned by the use of the letters that m-a-n meant man, that the letters w-o-m-a-n meant woman, that c-h-i-l-d meant child, and then by conjuring other letters they formed the words right and wrong, justice, liberty and humanity. And we have come to learn the meaning of these terms, and by the gods we propose to stand by them!

Sometimes I permit my mind to run riot in delving or soaring in trying to understand what could or would be met, or what could or would result if the enemies of our organized labor movement could be at all successful in crushing out our movement. I say in all sincerity, woe to the men of wealth in such an event! Their very possessions would prove a curse and their undoing. The trades union movement of our time is the best and the most rational expression of the discontent of the masses, with a clear understanding and a purpose to work on and on, day by day, in developing the best that is in us and the best possible conditions for all of us.

As I said, these opponents of labor began too late. The organizations of labor have done so much for us that they cannot be checked now. There are some things that are axiomatic, that need no demonstration. Water runs down hill. No one needs to prove that, in spite of the fact that by man's ingenuity water can sometimes be forced uphill. Rain falls and men are made wet despite umbrellas; lightning strikes in spite of spires and electrical diverters. The labor organizations have taken the men and women of toll out of the deepest misery, have taken the children out of the factories and the workshops and given them the opportunity of the schoolroom, the playground and the home. Organizations of labor have made toll lighter, have made homes better, have given a ray of hope to the hearts and minds of the workers to struggle on and on for a higher and a better civilization, with no attempt or mental reservation to do a wrong to any individual in society.

And so these organizations that have written their history in the lives of the workers and have done so much for the uplift of the common people cannot be crushed out of existence. They live, and will live in spite of all antagonism. But there is so much for us to do. If our opponents, the enemies of organized labor, could have been here this morning to listen to the addresses and the messages that have come to us, would they think they could succeed in dismembering this labor movement of ours? For years we have had fraternal greetings from Great Britain and Canada. In recent years we have had messages of good-will from churches of different denominations and from organizations of women who are giving their earnest effort to upbuild the labor movement.

This very movement in our own Nation, and this movement of fraternal relations are in their infancy. The time will come as sure as the sun rises and sets that there will be an international federation of labor. The great forces making for the common good will be more closely cemented in the bonds of unity, fraternity and solidarity. Perhaps I am as impatient as any man whom I know, and yet as I look back upon the wonderful progress that has already been made within my own time, the progress in the material, the political, the moral and social welfare of our fellows, there is deep cause for gratification. And I believe the organized labor movement of the world will take on greater proportions. Increase in a greater impetus and gather in a still greater ratio, as the numbers have come to us in the past, compared with the numbers of our fellow workers who will flock to our banner and who will stand with it unfurled in the years to come.

To the fraternal delegates coming from far distances, and to the other fraternal delegates I want to express a sincere and hearty welcome. If I could only portray to you in words the real welcome these delegates would have me extend I am of the belief that you would know us better, take us for what we are, without pretense and without declaration, except that you are welcome to our midst, welcome to join with us in whatever struggles and disputes and contentions may develop in this convention. We are fighting it out in the crucible of our contention and are resolved to attain the best results we can in the interests of our fellow workers. I would not have, if I could, a convention of the American Federation of Labor a mutual admiration society. I want to see, as I do see, strong men with strong convictions, and the courage as well as the ability to express them; and then after we have come to a conclusion upon any subject to stand as a whole in endeavoring to carry it into effect. In my own humble way I endeavor to express the concrete view and decisions of the American Federation of Labor.

I trust that the sojourn of yourselves and your good wives may be pleasant as well as interesting. We have learned much by your coming and we hope that there may be a grain of thought that may be helpful that you will carry back with you. This, however, we do ask you, to carry back with you the good wishes of this court of organized labor of America to the organized movement of Great Britain and Canada, to convey to your fellow workers our goodwill and our desire for their welfare, as well as our desire that we may make common cause in this great movement for the uplift of mankind and the establishment of the brotherhood of man.

President Gompers announced the following special committee:

Special Committee on Electrical Workers' Question.

George L. Berry, T. V. O'Connor, John Tobin, Frank M. Ryan, John J. Keegan, J. E. Bray, J. A. Tazelaar, D. J. Tobin, William J. McSorley, P. M. Draper, David Kirby, T. J. O'Donnell, T. J. Curtis, W. J. Dougherty, A. J. Kennedy.

President Gompers: All things come to those who wait, I have been told, and in the fullness of time there has come about a change in the management of a company with which we were for years in a contest. The new manager of the Bucks Stove and Range Company has always lived on terms of agreement with organized labor in any plant in which he was interested, and now when he is in control of the Bucks Stove and Range Company is in full agreement with organized labor. As an evidence of his respect for organized labor he desires through me to present to the visitors and delegates to this convention a souvenir, which I think we will agree is pretty and appropriate and of use. Mr. Frederick Gardiner in a letter I have received says, "I am sending you herewith souvenirs. Present one to each of your delegates with my compliment." The souvenir is in the form of a purse. What is your pleasure?

On motion the souvenirs were accepted, ordered distributed to the delegates and a vote of thanks tendered to Mr. Gardiner for his courtesy.

Secretary Morrison read communications from the President of the Chamber of Commerce, Rochester, New York, Mr. George Deitrich, and from the Mayor of Rochester, Mr. Hiram H. Edgerton urging that the next convention of the American Federation of Labor be held in that city.

Secretary Morrison also read a communication from the Printing Trades Club of St. Louis, Missouri, tendering to the delegates the hospitality of their club room, library and reading room.

An invitation from the St. Louis Young Men's Christian Association was read, in which the delegates were invited to attend a labor mass meeting for men to be held in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A., Grand and Franklin Avenue, at 4 o'clock, Sunday, November 24th, at which addresses were to be made by President Gompers, Vice-President Mitchell and Rev. Charles Steizle.

An invitation was extended to all the cigar makers in the convention to meet in the lobby of the Planters Hotel, Friday evening, November 18th, at 7:15, to attend a meeting and banquet of the Cigar Makers' Union of St. Louis.

Secretary Morrison read the following communications:

"Cincinnati, Ohio, November 17, 1910.

To the President of the American Federation of Labor, Convention Hall, St. Louis:

Accept fraternal greetings from D. C. No. 12, and best wishes for your success.

(Signed) HENRY HUNTER, Secretary."

"Indianapolis, Ind., November 16, 1910.

American Federation of Labor, St. Louis, Mo.

The American Society of Equity of North America, in convention assembled in the city of Indianapolis, extend to the American Federation of Labor assembled in their Thirtieth Annual Convention, at St. Louis, Mo., greeting: We renew our often expressed declaration for co-operation in all interests mutually affecting the workers of the farm, factory and mine.

S. D. KUMP, National Secretary.

President Gompers announced that a request has been made to refer the dispute of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners to the Special Committee appointed to consider the Electrical Workers' dispute. No objection being offered, President Gompers stated that the matter would be so referred.

Delegate Woil stated that he desired the unanimous consent of the convention to introduce two resolutions on Monday, November 21, and gave reasons why the resolutions could not be presented sooner. The request of Delegate Woil was complied with.

Report of Committee on Credentials.

Delegate Kelley, for the committee, reported as follows:

November 16, 1910.

Your Committee on Credentials begs to report that we have received credentials from the following organizations, and recommend that their delegates be seated:

Kewanee, Ill., Trades and Labor Assembly—Edward Hippert, 1 vote.

Federal Labor Union 12,363—Guy T. White, 1 vote.

Federal Labor Union 13,068—R. J. Hubbard, 1 vote.

We further report that the Tin Plate Workers' International Protective Association has liquidated its indebtedness, and recommend the seating of its delegate, Ben Teagarden, with 8 votes.

Also Fred Hudson, representing Bellingham Central Labor Council, 1 vote.

Also John O'Connor, in place of John Roach, representing the Essex Trades Council.

In reference to the credentials of the Brotherhood of Railroad Freight Handlers we desire to report that they have paid $297.00 of their indebtedness, which pays them in full with the exception of the 2-cent hatters' assessment, and we have received the following pledge that this will be paid:

St. Louis, Mo., November 16, 1910.

This is to certify that the balance of indebtedness on an American Federation of Labor assessment will be forwarded immediately at the close of this convention.

(Signed) P. J. Flannery, International President.

We recommend that the delegates be seated, with 47 votes.

Protest of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers against the Des Moines Trades and Labor Assembly—Your committee has been furnished with evidence that the electrical workers are represented in the Des Moines Trades and Labor Assembly, but the following affidavit made by Delegate-elect A. S. Urlick is self-explanatory and the electrical workers withdraw their protest.

State of Missouri }
City of St. Louis } ss.

On the 26th day of October, 1910, at the time of my election as delegate from the Des Moines Trades Labor Assembly, there were no electrical workers of the Reid Organization of Electrical Workers in affiliation with said central body, having withdrawn some time prior thereto.

I wish to make the further statement that they are not now and have not been since the date of my election, affiliated with said central body. A. L. Urlick.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 17th day of November, A. D. 1910.

My* commission expires January 3, 1914. Mary E. Chenier, Notary Public.

Your committee recommend that this delegate be seated, with 1 vote.

MICHAEL J. HALLINAN, Chairman,
WM. J. KELLY, Secretary.

On motion the report of the committee was adopted and the delegate seated.

Delegate Duffy (Frank) stated that he would be obliged to leave the convention Friday evening to attend to matters affecting his organization, and requested that he be allowed to make a statement as one member of the special committee appointed in the Toronto convention to consider the electrical workers dispute.

Delegate Furuseth: I desire to submit something, either in the shape of a resolution or a motion, to be acted upon by this convention at once.

Delegate Furuseth read the following:

Whereas, The existing hours of the convention are inconvenient and wasteful in this that it gives no real time for committee work, consultation or recreation, therefore be it

Resolved, That rules be amended so that we meet at 12 and adjourn at 6.

Delegate Furuseth spoke at some length in support of his motion, which was then adopted.

Delegate Gallagher stated that complete reports of the committee appointed by the California State Federation of Labor to investigate charges made that organized labor was responsible for the destruction of the building in which had been housed the Los Angeles Times, would be furnished to each delegate present.

Delegate Gallagher moved that Mr. Job Harriman, attorney for the strikers in Los Angeles, be given opportunity to address the convention. The motion was seconded and carried.

Mr. Job Harriman: Mr. President, I have been asked to tell the delegates to this convention the conditions that prevail in the city of Los Angeles. On the Pacific coast the boys are all aware of the fact that there is a battle going on in Los Angeles and they want you to know the bitterness of that fight and all its meaning.

Los Angeles is probably one of the most beautiful cities of our land, but for many years there have been but few great industries there. The great industries in Los Angeles are of recent date, and they know nothing of the greater needs of the working class. The large factory and foundry is a new advent there, but they have come to stay, and the people who own them are lending every energy and all the money they have to hold wages down in order that they may take hold of the manufacturing interests of the coast. They are forcing the fight upon the trades union movement, not only in the city of Los Angeles, but in San Francisco and other coast cities.

I will describe one man we have in Los Angeles. You people have heard of C. P. Huntington. C. P. Huntington has a nephew, and that nephew had brains enough to inherit $40,000,000 that the old man had stolen from the people of the Coast. It required the courts of that State and the courts of this Nation, yea, and an act of Congress, to force him to pay the taxes that were due the people of California. This man inherited $40,000,000 in cash and as much more in property, came to the city of Los Angeles, and by means of his influence and his uncle's influence gathered unto himself all the franchises of a large number of streets of the city. He did not pay a dollar except the hand-out dollars that go to politicians who give away the rights of the people. He went to the Helman interests. You men know the Helman interests. He said to them: "If you will organize a corporation and bond it I will sell the corporation all these franchises for 51 per cent of the stock, and you can take 49 per cent. You can bond the company. We will sell the bonds and build the road with the money for which we sell the bonds." And they did. They built the roads through the city and are now operating them, and neither of them invested one dollar of their own cash, yet they own the stock, and the proceeds from those companies are paying off the debts.

Then they went out through those beautiful valleys, the San Gabriel, the Santa Anna and the Los Angeles Valley and determined the lines along which they would build roads. Huntington took the $40,000,000 he had inherited and bought thousands of acres along the proposed lines, then went to the people and said, "Give us a right of way through here and so much cash and we will build a road to Monrovia, a road to Pomona, a road to Long Beach and a road to Pasadena. We will line all these valleys with roads out to your suburban towns. We will make this a great country and your land will be enhanced in value." The people gave the right of way everywhere and gave so much cash for each road. Then they bonded each road for itself, sold the bonds, took the cash and built the roads without a dollar of expense to themselves. Not a dollar from their own treasury went into them and the lands they bought for $100 an acre are now worth $1,000 an acre.

This man Huntington is Los Angeles' greatest benefactor, so they say. When his men in the car shop asked him for a raise of wages from $1.75 to $2.50 per day, saying the cost of living had increased in the last few years so they could not meet it and educate and clothe their families, the thirty men who signed the petition were discharged. On the following morning there came a letter which stated "No conference with the men, no raise of wages. Discharge every man who signs the petition." And they were discharged. This man Huntington, this benefactor, the head of his corporation in the city of Los Angeles of the lines reaching out like the arms of a great octopus through the valleys, sucking its life's blood, would not give his men one cent of a raise, although he built a palace with $3,000,000 of the money he wrung from the people. He has nine miles of driveways in his door yard. He believes in the open shop. When the strike came on he wrote a check for $100,000 and gave it to the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles to fight the metal workers and the molders. They raised $350,000 to crush trades unionism.

About June 1 the iron workers wrote a letter to the Manufacturers' Association shortly after Huntington had discharged his men. The letter was couched in language that was honorable and manly, but determined. They asked the merchants and manufacturers of that town to grant a conference through which they might adjust their wages. They stated that their wages had been insufficient to take care of their families. On the following morning they received a letter, replying to all the labor organizations, in which this language was used: "We take pleasure in notifying you that your communication has been consigned to the waste basket." On the night that letter was dictated by Zehandelaar, Mr. Huntington, who has been the arch robber of the people of Los Angeles, wrote his check for $100,000 to aid in preventing the working men from raising wages or bettering their conditions. Then the battle was on and the trades unions of Los Angeles, eight or nine thousand strong at that time, called a strike on June 1. Fifteen hundred men walked out.

In power in the county was our good staunch Republican friend, and in power in the city was the Good Government League. I will show you in a minute what good government means in Los Angeles. We continued that strike for a month; the boys walked up and down the streets and paraded, they picketed before their stores and factories. They maintained the picket for four weeks, and in that time there were only two disturbances. One disturbance was caused by two boys of about eighteen years of age, one of whom was working and scabbing while the other one was on strike. Both had gone out, but one had returned to work, and the fellow who had stayed out was talking to him and advising him to come out with the boys and be a man. They got into a little altercation, but there were no black eyes or bruises. There were four or five witnesses on each side. When the case was brought before the court ten witnesses were heard, the court scratched his head and said, "Yes, true enough, the evidence is conflicting and it is difficult to say who is at fault, but this man has a right to work where he pleases. I will let him go. I will fine the other man $50 or 50 days."

A policeman assaulted a picket without cause. Here there was no conflict of testimony. He had no right to assault him. He was convicted and fined $1.00. Fifty dollars for a man who was fighting for his bread, $1.00 for a man who was endeavoring to coerce the man fighting for his bread! That is the temper of the courts in the city of the Lost Angels. Everything was peaceable and quiet, but the boys were succeeding. They were catching all the men who came into town, and they were pulling the men out of the shop. Money was being sent from San Francisco to feed the men. Since the first day of June San Francisco has sent the men of Los Angeles $100,000. We have millionaires in Los Angeles and we have churches galore. They have prayed for morality, but not one dollar has found its way from the coffers of the rich nor from the churches to help these men in their struggle for bread. Every dollar that has come has come from men who dig it out by the day and in giving it they have deprived their families of food and clothing they need.

At the end of a month they secured an injunction. I have a copy of it here—it covers everything. No man could picket in front of or in the vicinity of a factory or store—and "vicinity" in that case meant anywhere in the city. They were enjoined from following the men or riding on the cars with them to their homes, from going to their homes to speak to them concerning labor troubles in the city. In that four weeks not a man was arrested, not a man violated the injunction, not a man used force—but they got at the men. How they did it I don't know.

Then an ordinance was passed preventing peaceable picketing in the city of Los Angeles or in the vicinity, or loitering anywhere or speaking to the men on strike. It was drafted by the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association. We went to the City Council to argue the law of that ordinance. We thought we had shown the city fathers that it was unfair, but after it had been argued they adjourned, argued it over again, then came forward and cast it unanimously. The day following 200 trades union men were thrown in jail. These were Good Government Fathers, with old Father Alexandria at the head. He dresses up to look like Uncle Sam, combs his hair and trims his whiskers to look like the popular whiskers of Uncle Sam. He was in the Mayor's chair, and thirty minutes after the ordinance was passed "Uncle Sam" signed it and it became a law.

A few days later we went to Long Beach where the ordinance was to be presented. I said to the City Council, "You are about to pass an ordinance. By this you are about to make criminals. These very men to whom the ordinance applies have paved the street but they have gone without pavements in their own vicinity. They have woven your broadcloth, they wear overalls; they have built your palaces, they live in hovels; they dug the diamonds that bedeck the bosoms of your wives, while they have no decoration whatever; they feed you on porterhouse, while they live on bacon and onions. You men will pass an ordinance to prevent them from feeding their children better, from clothing their wives better. They are caught in the great economic vice and held there. They must fight. Your ordinance will not give clothing, it will not provide food, it will not relieve their necessity. They must fight tomorrow as well as today. Pass your ordinance. Do you think they will be criminals? No, not one of them. You will make martyrs, not criminals. They passed the ordinance unanimously in Long Beach."

The next day sixty men were arrested and thrown into jail. We tried one and the jury hung; we tried another and the jury let him loose; then they turned the whole sixty out and they are picketing today in Long Beach and being fed by the money that was sent from San Francisco and other parts of the State. In Los Angeles the jurors were hard to get. We have tried for days at a time to get a jury. As high as 140 men have been examined, and as many as fifty out of seventy-six have said they could not give a trades union man a fair and impartial trial. We got a jury and some radical man was on it and he hung the jury. They have convicted three men and we have hung all the other juries.

I was in San Francisco at a meeting of the Labor Council when they were having a strike of the barbers. One of the barbers rushed out and attacked a barber who was picketing. The barber had him arrested. When they got to court the other fellow had more witnesses than the barber. As a result the Court could not convict him and dismissed the case. The barber went on picketing. When he made his complaint before the Central Labor Council the news was carried to the judge. The judge wrote a letter which was read at the next meeting of the council. That letter would have created as much excitement in Los Angeles as a flaming sword in the streets, but they took it as a matter of course in San Francisco. The judge said he had always believed in trades unionism, and had always held that men had a right to picket. He cited decisions he had rendered. Five hundred miles south of there we were weak and would have been crushed but for the money sent from San Francisco. Those cities are in the same State, under the same statute, under the same State decisions, but the judges in the south were holding that picketing was unlawful per se peaceable or otherwise, while in the north directly the opposite conclusion was being reached. Why? Because the trades union movement there is in power and the construction put upon the law is determined by the power behind the Court.

Since that ordinance was passed the energies of the trades unionists in Los Angeles have been spent fighting the courts. Men were arrested everywhere. They had their blooming old jails so full they could not go any further, the boys could not put up the ball so they turned them out upon their own recognizance, and every man without exception, although without bail, has gone back on the day of his trial to stand the test. These men feel they are right, and there are 1,500 strikers in Los Angeles all of that material.

They could not convict, they were failing, the injunction had failed, their ordinance had failed. About that time the bankers of the country, representing billions of dollars they had stolen from the very muscles of the working people, were meeting there to contrive means by which they might still reap larger harvests. A convention of the mine owners was there, representing millions of western capital. That night we had arranged for a parade of 20,000 men and had arranged for a great audience of over 10,000 people. While these momentous things were pending an explosion took place one night and the Times Building was burned to the ground. The parade was called off. Within three hours the Times printed its paper in its own subsidiary plant. The first paper charged the labor unions with blowing up the Times Building and murdering the twenty odd men, a crime heinous in the extreme, a crime the merchants and manufacturers had subscribed a million dollars to fasten upon the trades union movement of the coast. A grand jury is now in session; they are gathering the men at the head of the movement, and it is aimed to hang the best men on the Pacific slope.

I am telling you men that you have a fight there, a fight to save the only movement that stands between the sordid, insatiable greed of the capitalist class and the working class of the Pacific slope. The attorney employed by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association is at this time standing before the Grand Jury presenting the evidence, sneering at what he dislikes, approving of what he likes, and endeavoring with all his might and all his money to get an indictment from the Grand Jury.

I think the evidence already in hand is ample to show that an explosion of gas wrecked the Times Building. Listen, you miners. A man escaped who was immediately below the point where the explosion occurred. He was in the cellar, but nothing fell. All the walls around the place of the explosion stood intact. Not a wall was broken. Glass in the windows across the street remained unbroken. At the time of the explosion there was one deep roar, not a sharp crack, and with that roar there shot up through two floors and a roof a flame that passed the sixth story of the adjoining building instantly upon the explosion. An explosion accompanied by flame, and within ten seconds the flames were through the whole building. They had smelled gas for days, and it was especially strong that day in the building. What was it, you miners? Was it dynamite or was it gas? Every one of them knows that if the shot had been sufficient to shoot a hole up through three stories it would have shattered all the walls about it and driven a hole in the ground.

A month after the explosion took place the most interesting fact that happened was the turn of the public opinion. We all thought it would have driven the public mind away from the labor movement. We were afraid it would. This is a most important thing we have met. Of the first jury picked after the calamity eight men spoke out as they had never spoken out before. They said they were opposed to the ordinance. Never had that word been spoken in a jury room before that day. They said the ordinance was a bad thing to have in the city, that they would not convict under it any man for picketing if he did not resort to violence. Our juries are much easier to get than before the calamity. The reason is that Otis has been so aggressive and so bold that the public has been sickened by his assaults. Read his papers. There is scarcely a decent man on the Pacific Coast whose character that fiend has not deliberately stabbed. He has stabbed in the back whenever they crossed his pathway, mercilessly and without care. He has tried to torture every man who stood for anything that would benefit the community.

As a protest the trades unions concluded to hold a parade about four weeks after the calamity. They got all the trades unions out. One union with 1,600 members had 1,400 of them in line. That night 15,000 men marched in the streets of Los Angeles. They started on Wall street, marched five blocks west to Main, a mile north to Temple street, a mile and a quarter south to Ninth street, a mile west and south to Fleeta Park, and when the head band of the parade was marching into the park the end had not yet left Wall street, the place of formation. Labor had wrapped its arms in and about that great city, with power to crush it at its will, yet in walking through that city there was not a voice raised, not a cheer; nothing could be heard but the tramp, tramp, tramp of 15,000 determined men. Scarcely a banner was seen. Now and then a question mark. On and on they marched into that great park, to a great amphitheatre there, thirty feet from the level to the top and a thousand feet across. When they came in there it ceased to be a cheer—it was an upheaval of human power. Then when the hour was over, the chairman said, "Be careful, do not hurt any one. Go out quietly as you came in." And they organized in line and marched out. Not a man was arrested, not a child was hurt, not a woman was hurt, and they dispersed as quietly as they gathered.

And these are the dangerous citizens of Los Angeles! These men have metal in them. The time for organizing that city has arrived. The men are there. The Frisco boys have put up $100,000 and we come today to ask your support throughout the country. If we do not get it the movement in Los Angeles will go down, the Frisco unions will be crushed and the movement will be at an end on the Coast. You must make Los Angeles the battle ground where the victory of the Pacific Coast will be won.

A motion was made and seconded that a vote of thanks be extended Mr. Harriman for the able manner in which he had described the situation in Los Angeles.

It was moved as an amendment that the address be printed in the daily proceedings. The amendment was accepted by the mover of the motion. The original motion was adopted, as amended, by a unanimous rising vote.

Delegate Berger moved that a special committee of five be appointed to investigate the Los Angeles situation and report to the convention a way in which aid might be rendered the Los Angeles strikers.

The motion was withdrawn after a statement by Delegate Gallagher that a resolution dealing with that subject had been introduced.

Delegate Duffy (Frank): repeated his request that he be allowed to make a statement in regard to the Electrical Workers' case before leaving the convention.

Delegate McCullough (T. W.): I move that Mr. Duffy be granted the privilege of the floor as a special order at an hour to be agreed upon between himself and the chairman of the convention. (Seconded.)

Delegate Furuseth: I move as a substitute that the question of the Electrical Workers be made a special order for one o'clock tomorrow, and that we give everybody a chance. (Seconded.)

Delegate Lewis (T. L.): I move to amend the substitute by striking out one o'clock and inserting 12 o'clock tomorrow.

The amendment was accepted by Delegate Furuseth.

Delegate Tobin (D. J.): Is it the intention of Delegate Furuseth that the special committee bring in a report at 12 o'clock tomorrow? If so, I desire to say it is impossible.

Delegate Keegan: I move to amend the motion that the case be taken from the special committee here tomorrow morning, and that it come before the convention in the form of the recommendation contained in the report of the Executive Council.

Delegate Lewis (T. L.): I want to know if the amendment offered by Brother Keegan does not nullify the intent of the substitute offered by Brother Furuseth?

President Gompers: The chair would answer that in the negative, but would hold that any matter presented to this convention upon the subject in controversy would be matter properly before the convention also.

Delegate Lewis: If the amendment offered by Delegate Keegan becomes the action of the convention, does it confine the entire matter to the report of the Executive Council?

President Gompers: It does not.

The question was discussed by Delegates Lewis, Tobin, Lennan, Keegan, Furuseth, Ryan, Frye, Walker (J. H.)

On motion, debate was closed.

Consent was given the chairman to make a statement after debate was closed.

President Gompers: I am of the opinion that it would be a most excellent thing if we were to have statements from the gentlemen who constituted the committee, that then the convention would informally discuss the entire controversy for say two, three or four hours tomorrow afternoon, then without taking any further action on the subject, let the whole subject matter be committed to the special committee having the matter in charge. It seems to me the committee would be in a better position, in view of that enlightenment, to put in definite, concrete form the recommendations of the convention as outlined in the discussion.

The amendment to the amendment offered by Delegate Keegan was lost.

The amendment offered by Delegate Furuseth was carried, and the original motion as amended was carried.

Vice-President O'Connell: I desire to make a reference from the Committee on Adjustment of a matter referred from the report of the Executive Council in regard to the wood, wire and metal lathers and the bridge and structural iron workers. We desire to refer it to the Committee on Building Trades.

In discussing the question Delegate Ryan said: The question was closed when the Executive Council reported to this convention, as it had been referred by this convention to the Building Trades Committee and by them to the Executive Council.

Vice-President Duncan: I think there is a solution of that subject here. The subject that has been brought to the attention of the convention by Delegate Ryan is an appeal that has been going the round of different parties for some time and was finally put up to the Executive Council, which gave a decision and rendered it to this convention. I hold as a general proposition that when a decision is given by the Executive Council and officially announced, unless there is objection entered by some of the interested parties to the dispute, the decision is final and binding without reference to any other committee. President Gompers was giving the different portions of the report of the Executive Council to committees and naturally slid that along with the others. If he had given it attention I think he would not have done so. I think both the parties interested have agreed to let the decision of the Executive Council remain, and therefore the subject announced by Vice-President O'Connell to be referred to the Building Trades Committee could be withdrawn and the decision of the Executive Council be considered final and binding on both parties.

Delegate McSorley: I had intended to ask for the withdrawal of the appeal, but did not know I had that right, inasmuch as the Executive Council has recommended to the convention that they gave this subject matter thorough consideration. So far as my organization is concerned, we are perfectly willing to withdraw the appeal.

President Gompers: The reference of that subject to the Building Trades Committee is withdrawn and it stands as reported by the Executive Council.

During the session the following resolutions were presented and referred by the Chairman to the various committees:

Resolution No. 76—By Delegate James Murray, State Federation of Labor of Texas.

Whereas, The influx of Mexican labor into the Southwestern States is assuming larger proportions each year, and, if not properly and promptly attended to by this Federation will in all probability result in the disaffection of many of the locals now affiliated with this Federation, and

Whereas, The belief is common with those who have given this subject the closest study and investigation that this Federation has not been pursuing a wise policy in the past in regard to this matter, thereby endangering the continued existence of the locals now organized and affiliated, and by this neglect weakening its own strength when it should be pursuing an entirely different policy, therefore be it

Resolved, That such delegates as may be now attending this convention from the Southern or Southwestern States be requested to go before the Committee on Organization and submit such information as they may possess in relation to this matter, and that the committee be instructed to report back to this convention with such recommendations as they may deem best for the interest of the Federation.

Referred to the Committee on Organization.

Resolution No. 77—By the delegation representing the Cigar Makers' International Union:

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor, in annual session assembled, that we neither seek nor desire special privileges, but do desire an equal opportunity with all classes.

That we believe and hereby declare that successful and permanent government must rest primarily upon the recognition of the rights of men and the absolute sovereignty of the people.

That no man has natural authority over his fellowman. The basis of his authority is mutual agreement. In society the individual surrender is not to a particular person, but to all. His compensation is the acquisition of an equivalent right over every other member of this community. The people as a whole are sovereign and each individual a participant in that sovereignty.

That the success and duration of representative government depends upon responsibility and accountability—the responsibility of the people for their laws and selection of their public servants and the accountability of the public servants directly to the people. Under popular government, meaning in its present evolution the initiative and referendum, an efficient direct primary, corrupt practices and recall laws, general welfare must be the basis of every law and goal of every public servant. The people are responsible for their laws, and the public servant is directly accountable to the people, the result being the necessitated development of both the electorate and the public servant.

That under delegated government, still in vogue in most of our States, the people have no voice in their legislation, thus restraining the development of the electorate, nor have they any voice in the selection of their public servants, thus debauching public service because of the direct accountability of the public servant to the political boss or special interest for his nomination.

That under the convention system every public servant knows the interest or the individual to whom he owes his nomination, hence his inclination to serve a selfish interest.

That under the direct primary law, the public servant is nominated, not by any known individual or interest, but by the composite electorate, hence his inclination must be to serve the general welfare.

That we therefore urge organized labor throughout the United States to make the adoption of the initiative and referendum the issue in every campaign without regard to party lines until such amendment has been adopted and that then a campaign be commenced for adoption of the direct primary, corrupt practices act and recall.

That we urge every council of the American Federation of Labor to study and discuss the Oregon system of Popular Government as explained by Honorable Jonathan Bourne, Jr., in the speech delivered by him in the United States Senate, May 5, 1910.

That we urge all citizens to question candidates for legislative offices as to their attitude upon these questions and refuse to support any candidate, regardless of party, who is not pledged to every voter in his State to work and vote for the initiative and referendum, direct primary, corrupt practices act and recall, substantially in the form of the Oregon laws which have been demonstrated by practical experience to be the best thus far evolved by the brains of man.

Referred to the Committee on President's Report.

Resolution No. 78—By Delegate H. A. Vurpia, of the International Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees:

Whereas, During 1909, according to the Interstate Accident Bulletins Nos. 31, 32, 33 and 34, there were 135 passengers killed and 7,097 injured, and in the same period 431 employees were killed and 4,251 injured; that 2,042 derailments were reported as caused by defective track; 353 caused by obstructed track, and 1,180 from miscellaneous causes, or a total for the year 1909 of 566 killed and 11,348 injured, and that out of a total of 5,449 derailments 3,575 were of a preventable nature; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention place itself on record as favoring the examination each year as to the competency of every roadmaster and foreman or any other who may be placed in charge of the work in the track, bridge and building and interlocking departments of American railways, whose duty it is to look after the roadbed and safeguard the lives and limbs of passengers using the same, and that it shall be illegal for any railway company to employ any man in either of the above positions in charge of any repairs unless the employee shall have passed an examination as to his competency before a skilled examiner or board appointed by the government and received a certificate which must be renewed yearly; further

Resolved, In the interest of public safety, that the government shall appoint skilled inspectors who shall be practical and certified men, and whose duty it shall be to inspect at least twice each year, at intervals of at least three months apart, by handcar or on foot, all tracks over which passenger trains are operated, who shall make a report in writing to the Railway Commissioners as to the physical condition of each separate road inspected by him, giving day and date of such inspection and of all defects in detail with exact mileage and location of same. Upon receipt of said report of defect, the Railway Commissioners shall be empowered to order the railway company to make proper repairs within a specified time; failing to do this, the commissioners shall be empowered to order the suspension of all passenger traffic over the defective track; and further

Resolved, That this convention is of the opinion that on all main and branch lines of railway operating passenger trains there shall be regularly employed during the whole year not less than one man to each mile of single track and a foreman to each section, which shall not exceed six miles in length of single track; and further

Resolved, On all lines where passenger trains are operated during the night, a competent track-walker shall be employed, whose duty it shall be to patrol each section of not more than six miles of single track on every night on which passenger trains are run. And if from any preventable cause the railway company shall neglect to make provision for carrying out any or all of these provisions and an accident occur in which life is lost or limb endangered or injured, then the company at fault shall be adjudged guilty of criminal negligence; and further shall take such steps as they may deem proper to secure the passage of legislation by Congress making these resolutions effective at the earliest possible moment.

Referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 79—By Delegate Frank J. Weber, of Federated Trades Council, Milwaukee, Wis.:

Whereas, In almost every locality where there is a Local Building Trades Council there are some trades who refuse to join the local council; and

Whereas, Such action is at all times detrimental and not to the best interest of the trades union movement; therefore, be it

Resolved, That any international organization that fails to compel their locals to join local councils when notified by the secretary-treasurer or Executive Board of the Building Trades Department shall be suspended until they obey the instructions of the Building Trades Department.

Referred to the Committee on Building Trades.

Resolution No. 80—By Delegates O. A. Tveitmo, Andrew J. Gallagher, Cyrus F. Grow, L. W. Butler, P. W. Buckley, Thomas Bone, representing California organizations:

Whereas, The National Manufacturers' Association, through its subsidiary, the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles, has started a war of extermination against the unions on the Pacific Coast; and

Whereas, The consequent result of this deep-laid and sinister plan of the employers forced the brewery workers on strike on the 18th day of May, and the entire Metal Trade Department of Los Angeles on strike on the 1st day of June, in addition to the members of the leather workers on horse goods, who were already on strike; and

Whereas, The aforesaid union men of Los Angeles so forced on strike, in order to maintain a living wage and humane conditions, have, supported by the trades unionists of California, put forth one of the most gallant and heroic struggles on record within the annals of the trades union movement; and

Whereas, At the early beginning of the aforesaid strike the city council of Los Angeles did pass a so-called anti-picketing ordinance prohibiting members of trades unions from walking along the streets, or talking to people whom they might meet; and

Whereas, Hundreds of union men have been arrested and persecuted under the provisions of this ordinance for alleged crimes, misdemeanors and felonies, all in violation of the rights of free speech and free assemblage guaranteed by the provisions of the constitutions of the United States and of the State of California; and

Whereas, The Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles, through its attorney, who has been appointed special prosecutor, is endeavoring, through the refined torture of the grand jury room and the third degree, to fasten the crimes of arson, conspiracy and murder upon aggressive, loyal and staunch organizers and trade unionists—honored members of organized labor who are delegates to this convention—who have been shackled to private detectives, dragged into the morgue to gaze upon mutilated and charred bodies, taken back to the dark prison cell and threatened with violent demonstrations of lynching; and

Whereas, The Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles, through its private owned grand jury and PERSECUTING-attorney, is desperately trying to tie a rope of hemp around the necks of union men, organizers and labor leaders who have carried the brunt of the battle for the cause of organized labor in California; and

Whereas, Through the same infernal agency of the Los Angeles merchants and manufacturers, innocent widows and wives have been ruthlessly taken from their homes, charged with murder, or detained in gloomy corridors of the grand jury rooms for weeks, while their little children were suffering for want of care; all of which has been carried on in conformity with the deep-laid plots of the National Manufacturers' Association to annihilate the trades unions on the Pacific Coast; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor, that its Executive Council be and hereby is authorized and directed to issue an appeal immediately to all affiliated international and national unions, central labor bodies, State federations of labor and local unions, for contributions of funds necessary to support the union men on strike in Southern California, and for the further purpose of thoroughly unionizing the city of Los Angeles; and be it further

Resolved, That the executive officers of the international and national unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor be requested by its president to issue similar appeals to their various affiliated local unions.

Referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 81—By Delegates W. J. Dougherty and C. N. Glover, International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers:

Whereas, The International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, engaged in trade organization with the object of the thorough organizing of the men of this craft under one head, thereby making the uplift of the men of this trade a certainty instead of an uncertainty, and,

Whereas, The International Association of Carriage and Wagon Workers claims jurisdiction over the Blacksmiths and Helpers engaged in the carriage, wagon and automobile industry, to the detriment of the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers and the blacksmiths and helpers engaged in the industry, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled that the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers is the only organization having jurisdiction over the blacksmiths and helpers engaged in the vehicle industry.

Referred to the Committee on Adjustment.

Resolution No. 82—By Delegates of the International Molders' Union of North America:

Whereas, The Boston Convention of the American Federation of Labor gave jurisdiction over all brass molders to the International Molders' Union of North America, and

Whereas, This decision was reaffirmed by the Toronto Convention of the American Federation of Labor, and

Whereas, This decision has not been observed by the Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers and Brass Workers' International Union, who since the adjournment of the Toronto Convention of the American Federation of Labor, has continued to use the name "Brass Molders," in its official title on its literature, on its label, and to organize brass molders; be it

Resolved, That unless the decision of the Boston and Toronto Conventions giving jurisdiction over all brass molders to the International Molders' Union of North America, is observed and placed into effect within sixty days by the Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers, and Brass Workers' International Union, that its charter shall be revoked by the American Federation of Labor.

Referred to the Committee on Adjustment.

Resolution No. 83—By Delegates Wm. D. Huber, Frank Duffy, Wm. B. Macfarlane, W. J. Kelly, Carl Young, Thos. Flynn, A. M. Swartz, representing the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America:

Whereas, Since the 19th day of August, 1910, twenty carpenters of R. H.

Macy & Company's department store are on strike for the prevailing rate of wages and hours, and

Whereas, The above firm absolutely refuses to meet representatives of the organization of carpenters engaged in a strike against starvation wages and long hours, and

Whereas, The firm of R. H. Macy & Company is at present employing strike breakers under such conditions as are a menace to the union conditions prevailing in other department stores of the city of New York, be it

Resolved, That the undersigned organization pledge itself to give the organization of carpenters all the necessary support in their fight for a good cause, and furthermore, be it

Resolved, To notify all organizations affiliated with this central body, of the trouble pending between R. H. Macy & Company and the Carpenters' organization.

(Signed) United Board of Business Agents of the New York Building Trades Council, American Federation of Labor; Lawrence Storey, Chairman, Rosswell D. Tompkins, Secretary-Treasurer.

Central Federated Union of New York, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor; A. Block, Chairman, Ernst Bohm, Secretary.

Women's Trade Union League; Mary E. Dreier, Chairman, Helen Marot, Secretary.

Endorsed by the Hudson County Central Labor Union.

Endorsed by the State Council of New York State, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

Resolution No. 84—By Wm. J. Tracy, United Association Plumbers, etc.:

Whereas, The organizers of the American Federation of Labor are compelled to visit all sections of the country in the interest of our movement, and

Whereas, The organizers are continuously required to meet the constantly increasing expenses of hotel and other accommodations, the present allowance of $2.50 per day being inadequate, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council is hereby instructed to allow the organizers not less than $3.50 per day for hotel expenses.

Resolution No. 85—By Delegate O. A. Tveitmo, United Laborers 12992, of San Francisco, Cal.:

Whereas, A movement has been launched to hold a world's fair in San Francisco in the year 1915; and

Whereas, The precedent has been established by the world's fairs in Paris and in Chicago, at which time and places representatives from the various industrial organizations throughout the world met and conferred; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor in Thirtieth Annual Convention assembled, that its Executive Council be, and is hereby authorized, directed and instructed to issue a call to the proper authorities and bodies for an International Labor Congress, to convene and be held in the city of San Francisco, California, at a convenient date, in the year 1915, in order that the workers of the world, who make a world's fair and exposition possible, may be afforded an opportunity of closer affiliation and a better understanding, with the consequent result that the various sections of the globe where these producers dwell, may be made a better place in which to labor and live.

Resolution No. 86—By Delegate O. A. Tveitmo, United Laborers 12992, of San Francisco, Cal.:

Whereas, It is the duty of the organized artisans, mechanics and laborers to help in the uplift of all who toil for a living; and

Whereas, Steps have already been taken by organizations in various States to organize the migratory and unskilled laborers in accordance with a definite and systematic plan; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that all authorized organizers of the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated International and National unions, be directed to use every effort within their power to organize the unskilled and migratory laborers of the various cities and counties wherein they may be employed; and, be it further

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor be, and is hereby instructed to give particular attention and care to this great mass of unskilled labor, and endeavor to perfect an International organization in accordance with the principles of the trades union movement and the laws of the American Federation of Labor.

Referred to the Committee on Organization.

Resolution No. 87—By Delegates Wm. E. Eckenrod, Tennessee Federation of Labor; Chas. P. Fahey, Trades and Labor Council, Nashville, Tenn.; S. H. Laws, Trades and Labor Council, Jackson, Tenn.; C. C. Zeigler, Trades and Labor Council, Oklahoma City, Okla.; G. L. Hunter, Okmulgee Central Labor Council; Mont R. Powell, Oklahoma

State Federation of Labor; Jerome Jones, Georgia Federation of Labor; Louis P. Marquardt, Atlanta Federation of Trades:

Whereas, There is an organization in the South known as the Southern Conference on Child and Women Labor, composed of representatives of organized labor, women's clubs, boards of trade, business men's clubs, firms or corporations employing women or children, labor commissioners, factory inspectors and five delegates appointed by the governor of each Southern State; three of them must be employers of women or children, for the purpose of recommending uniform legislation in the Southern States relating to the employment of women and children; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that we endorse the organization known as the Southern Conference on Child and Women Labor, and its announced objects, and recommend to all labor organizations of the South that they send representatives to the next annual conference which will be held in Atlanta, Georgia, in April, 1911.

Resolution No. 88—By Delegate Frank Grimshaw, of the Stove Mounters' International Union:

Whereas, The Favorite Stove and Range Company, of Piqua, Ohio, in January, 1908, imposed a change of conditions in the mounting department, embodying a reduction in day wages and piece prices, and an increase in the hours of labor from nine to ten, and because the Stove Mounters' Union No. 23, affiliated with Stove Mounters' International Union, would not accept these conditions the company declared that no more would a union of stove mounters be tolerated, and

Whereas, Stove Mounters' Union No. 23 was endorsed in its position by the Stove Mounters' International Union, by the Piqua Trades and Labor Council, and by the Ohio State Federation of Labor, and

Whereas, This strike was being prosecuted with apparent success until in June, 1909, a circular letter was issued by Local No. 94, International Molders' Union, of Piqua, Ohio, under seal and signed by five officers of said local, in which the action of our organization in prosecuting a strike against the Favorite Stove and Range Company is condemned, and untrue statements made regarding the standing of said company with organized labor, and

Whereas, Our efforts to bring about a settlement of this trouble are practically nullified by the circulation of the aforesaid false statements, which are still being issued to the detriment of our cause, and

Whereas, This matter has been brought to the attention of the International Molders' Union and the Metal Trades Department without any relief as yet being received, be it, therefore

Resolved, By this the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, that this matter be referred to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, for the purpose of investigation, and if the statements herein made are found to be true that action be taken as the facts warrant, and that the position of the Stove Mounters' International Union in its controversy with the Favorite Stove and Range Company be endorsed; and that an effort be made by the Executive Council to bring about an adjustment of this long standing controversy.

Resolution No. 89—By Delegate Butterworth of the Brick, Tile and Terra Cotta Workers' Alliance:

Whereas, The Brick, Tile and Terra Cotta Workers' Alliance, the International Brotherhood of Steam Shovel and Dredgemen and the Stationary Firemen's Union have, since the 13th day of April, been engaged in a struggle with the Purlington Paving Brick Company, of Galesburg, Ill., in defense of their right to organize; and

Whereas, The Purlington Paving Brick Company has placed itself on record that its chief objection to the above organizations is their affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, and positively refuses to meet representatives of the American Federation of Labor to discuss an honorable settlement; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled pledges the moral support of its affiliated unions to the unions affected and requests our officers to do all in their power to assist in securing to the striking men the right to be members of unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

FRANK BUTTERWORTH,
Brick, Tile and Terra Cotta Workers' Alliance.

Resolution No. 90—By Delegate John J. Flynn, of Brooklyn Central Trades Union:

Whereas, There is operated in the Borough of Brooklyn a factory for the manufacturing of linotype machines, known as The Mergenthaler Linotype Company; and

Whereas, There are employed in that factory many hundreds of men, women, boys and girls, including craftsmen, such as electricians, machinists and tool and diemakers, metal polishers, carpenters, engineers, firemen, and others; and

Whereas, The employees in this factory are grossly underpaid and exploited, and the company is showing its distaste for organized labor, by repeatedly discharging members of unions who had the temerity to wear an emblem of their union, or when it came to the knowledge of the officials of the company that they were members; and

Whereas, The manufactured products of this company are used and operated by organized labor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the convention of the American Federation of Labor assembled in its Thirtieth Annual Convention at St. Louis, Mo., November, 1910, direct the trades interested to concentrate their efforts in an endeavor to organize The Mergenthaler Linotype Company; and be it further

Resolved, That the International Typographical Union and the trades affiliated, directly and indirectly, give all necessary assistance in furthering the organizing of the craftsmen in the employ of that company, in keeping with the spirit of the American labor movement.

Resolution No. 91—By Delegate R. A. McDewitt of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters:

Whereas, The credentials of Brother Jules Scarcerioux, a bona fide member of Local Union 45, National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, were rejected by the Central Labor Union of Trenton, N. J., in which jurisdiction said local union is situated, on the ground that Brother Scarcerioux had shown an active interest in the "Industrial Workers of the World;" and

Whereas, This action of Trenton's central body was appealed from to President Samuel Gompers, and said action by him sustained upon what, to Local Union 45, seem untenable grounds; therefore, it is

Resolved, That this convention is appealed to to hear the evidence in the case, and the question decided on its merits.

Resolution No. 92—By Delegate Chas. W. Fear of Joplin, Mo., Trades Assembly:

Whereas, The unorganized wage-workers of the Southwest Missouri district present an opportunity for the organization of a number of local unions, particularly in the city of Joplin, Mo., and vicinity; and

Whereas, The Joplin Trades Assembly is working to thoroughly organize the tollers of that vicinity under the trade union banner of the American Federation of Labor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor call the attention of officers of affiliated international unions to the unorganized Southwest Missouri district, and again urge that international organizers be detailed to work in the Joplin district during the coming year with the purpose of more thoroughly organizing the workers of the different crafts into their unions; and be it further

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor be and are hereby authorized to render all assistance possible in organizing the tollers of Southwest Missouri.

Resolution No. 93—By Delegates Urban Fleming and John Golden, United Textile Workers of America:

Whereas, The textile industry in its many branches employs over 1,000,000 wage-workers scattered over the North American Continent, and

Whereas, The prevailing condition in many parts of the country in connection with the textile industry are long hours of labor, a low scale of wages, coupled with unhealthy and unsanitary conditions, mostly due to the non-enforcement of the factory laws in some States, and the absolute lack of humane laws in other States, especially those south of the Mason and Dixon line, be it therefore

Resolved, That the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor hereby instruct the Executive Council to co-operate as far as possible with the officers of the United Textile Workers of America during the coming year in a joint effort to bring about a more thorough organization of textile workers and a consequent uplift of their conditions.

Resolution No. 94 — By Delegate Thomas Bone, Central Labor Council, Stockton, Cal.:

Whereas, The International Hod Carriers and Building Laborers' L. U. 73, of Stockton, Cal., is affiliated with the San Joaquin County Central Labor Council, also with the Stockton Building Trades Council, also with the State Building Trades Council, and all with the American Federation of Labor, and its members carry State Building Trades Council working cards, and

Whereas, Only four other local hod carriers' unions of the State will recognize B. T. C. cards (although there are many other hod carriers' unions in this State carrying the same B. T. C. cards) and said other unions require members of the local Hod Carriers' Union No. 73 to pay a new initiation fee and rejoin their union if they go into any other local jurisdiction, thus working a great injustice upon good and loyal union members, to the general detriment of all organized labor and particularly to the hod carriers, therefore be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in annual convention assembled hereby declares itself in favor of a universal and interchangeable working card for all hod carriers' unions, and further recommends to the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor that steps be taken at the earliest possible moment to have such laws enacted as will bring about the desired results, with fairness and justice to the hod carriers of this State.

Resolution No. 95—By Delegate Edw. P. Baum, of the Belleville, Ill., Trades and Labor Assembly:

Whereas, A good many of the crafts in the stove and range shops and the foundries in general all over this country are not organized, and it has been shown that in a good many shops where said crafts are not organized, other crafts are thoroughly organized and receive the recognition of the firms; in fact, in some of the shops some of the smaller crafts, such as the metal polishers, stove mounters, steel range workers, foundry employes and, in some instances, the iron molders, are out on strike and scabs are working in their places, the firms placed on the unfair list and such unfairness indorsed by the Trades and Labor Assembly of said respective districts, and still we find that other crafts organized under the American Federation of Labor and affiliated with the Metal Trades Department continue to work in said unfair shops with said scabs and strike-breakers, without rendering any assistance toward organizing these non-union men; and

Whereas, If said crafts who are organized in said unfair shops would speak to said non-union men they could bring pressure to prevail upon them to identify themselves with the unions under whose jurisdiction they work, where, as it is, they work with them for years and never ask them any questions relative to their becoming union men, and in most instances costs the unions under whose jurisdictions they work considerable time and money to get them organized; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the convention of the American Federation of Labor, held in St. Louis, Mo., November, 1910, that the American Federation of Labor insist that the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor make their prime issue the organizing of all crafts working in the said foundry industries, and that said crafts who are organized in any foundry do all in their power to organize the other metal trades crafts that are yet unorganized; and be it further

Resolved, That no international union grant or permit its affiliated locals to grant the use of their union label to any firm unless all crafts whose international unions are affiliated with the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor working in said firms' shops or foundry are organized.

Endorsed by the Eighth District, Stove Mounters and Steel Range Workers' Union Convention, Belleville, Ill., October 29, 1910.

Further recommended by Frank Grimshaw, Stove Mounters' International Union; George Bechtold, International Brotherhood of Foundry Employes; Thomas Rumsey, Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers and Brass Workers' International.

Referred to Committee on Organization:

Resolution No. 96—By Delegates Edw. P. Baum, Belleville, Ill., Trades and Labor Assembly; Thomas Rumsey, Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers and Brass Workers' International; Frank Grimshaw, Stove Mounters' International Union:

Whereas, The Union Label of some of the trades working in the stove and foundry industry has been in a good many instances issued to companies who are unfair to other craft unions, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Board of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to confer with the International Officers of all the International Unions affiliated with the Metal Trades Department, with a view of establishing an allied Metal Trades Union Label.

Referred to the Committee on Labels.

Resolution No. 97—By Delegate Thomas Bone, Central Labor Council, Stockton, Cal.:

Whereas, The first Monday in September of each year has been, and is now set aside as labor's own day, and is so observed throughout the entire country by the members of organized labor, and

Whereas, Organized labor in general observes that day as a holiday, by resting from labor and by fitting celebrations, and

Whereas, Nearly all the national and international unions and associations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor make it compulsory for their members to refrain from work on said Labor Day, thereby causing them to lose a day's pay for that day; and

Whereas, The San Joaquin County Central Labor Council, representing some twenty-nine affiliated locals (and sixteen unaffiliated locals) has at all times been a willing and faithful observer of said Labor Day, its members, with the exception of one union, freely and strictly sacrificing the day's work and its accompanying wage and marching annually unpaid on the streets and otherwise faithfully and fittingly observing and celebrating the day, and

Whereas, It is our sincere belief that all unions should be required to parade on Labor Day without pay on an equal basis without exception, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the San Joaquin County Central Labor Council hereby urges the American Federation of Labor to use its best efforts to have the American Federation of Musicians so amend their constitution that their affiliated locals may be permitted to donate their services in parade on Labor Day, free of charge.

Referred to the Committee on President's Report.

Resolution No. 98—By Delegate E. C. Morris, Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants' Union No. 12646:

Whereas, Officers of international and national unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor hold commissions as organizers, and

Whereas, Many stenographers, bookkeepers and general office workers are employed in the offices of these international and national unions and there seems to be no opportunity for the American Federation of Labor to assign a special organizer to work among these employes, be it

Resolved, That the officers of international and national unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor use their best efforts as organizers commissioned by the A. F. of L., to secure the membership of their office workers in existing local unions of these crafts and to promote the formation of such local unions in cities wherein they do not now exist.

Resolution No. 99—By Delegates Chas. H. Lee, of Rhode Island State Federation, and John Golden, of United Textile Workers; Roderick McGarry, Providence Central Labor Union:

Whereas, In the State of Rhode Island a property qualification law prevails which deprives thousands of working men, citizens of the United States, the privilege of equal franchise at the ballot box, and

Whereas, We believe that such an unjust and un-American law is retained for the sole purpose of reducing the vote of the men of labor to the lowest possible minimum, realizing full well that many workmen, on account of their economic conditions, can never hope to attain the necessary qualification as prescribed by this unjust law, thereby conferring the voting power to special interests, and

Whereas, The labor movement has at all times stood for equality and equal privileges at the ballot box, be it therefore

Resolved, That we, the delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, pledge ourselves to assist to the fullest extent our brothers in Rhode Island in securing the same rights at the ballot boxes as are enjoyed in all the other sovereign States by workmen, and be it further

Resolved, That the officers of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to co-operate with the officers of the Rhode Island State Federation of Labor in an effort to secure the repeal of this law, which, under the present conditions, only serves to rob the laboring man of his right to vote.

Referred to Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 100—By Delegate Thomas Bone, of Central Labor Council of Stockton, Cal.:

Whereas, The union label on union made products and the demand for goods bearing said label is one of the most potent, if not the most powerful, weapons within the hands of members of organized labor for the betterment of the conditions of the wage-earners of the land; and

Whereas, There are at this time so many and so varied union labels of the different trades and crafts that a great many members of organized labor do not know the labels of the other crafts, and those outside the ranks of labor (whose sympathies are with labor) must of necessity be confused by such numerous labels and the work of the Label Leagues is greatly hampered by so many and so different labels, and believing that this confusion could and should be eliminated; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in annual convention assembled, take action at this time to arrange for a joint committee with representatives from all national unions having emblems, labels or union signs, that some form of universal union label may be adopted for the use of all unions affiliated with said American Federation of Labor, and that this convention does now declare itself in favor of such a universal union label.

Referred to the Committee on Labels.

Resolution No. 101—By Delegate Geo. F. Golden, Illinois State Federation of Labor, Rock Island, Ill.:

President and delegates of the American Federation of Labor, St. Louis, Mo., asking the bricklayers to join the American Federation of Labor, at the meeting of the Galesburg Trades Assembly, on September 8, 1910; the following resolutions were unanimously adopted, and are presented to this body for your consideration and concurrence. Trusting they will meet with your favorable action, we remain fraternally,
Executive Committee, Galesburg Trades Assembly.

Galesburg, Ill., September 8, 1910.—To the Galesburg Trades Assembly: Inasmuch as the Bricklayers' and the Masons' Union have repeatedly refused to become affiliated with the Building Trades Council, thereby preventing the formation of such an organization and causing many nonunion jobs which otherwise would have been fair, and inasmuch as the said Bricklayers' and Masons' Union have been scabbing on the Brick Makers' Union, thereby prolonging the strike of the brick makers, stationary firemen, the steam shovel and dredgemen at the Purington Brick Yards, and, inasmuch as the brick makers, steam shovel and dredgemen and stationary firemen are all affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and the bricklayers and masons are not, and have several times refused so to affiliate themselves, therefore, be it

Resolved, That these matters be presented to the meeting of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, in suitable resolutions, with a request that they take the matter up at the next convention of the American Federation of Labor, and the bricklayers and masons be again asked to join hands with other organized workers under the American Federation of Labor; shall take steps toward the formation of a bricklayers' union, which shall be so affiliated, to the end that the stumbling block in the way of the progress of the organized workers be removed.

Resolution No. 102—By Delegate Chas. D. Wheeler of Chicago Federation of Labor:

Whereas, The convention of the American Federation of Labor in regular session at Toronto, Canada, disposed of the proposition dealing with the controversy existing between the Printer Roller Makers' Union 10638, A. F. of L., and the Samuel Bingham Sons Manufacturing Company, both of Chicago, Ill., by referring same to the Executive Board; and

Whereas, The Samuel Bingham Sons Manufacturing Company has, through its agents, taken advantage of the lack of definite expression and action by the American Federation of Labor to spread a distorted version of the actual facts in the case best suited to serve their interests; and

Whereas, Every effort on the part of the Chicago Printer Roller Makers' Union 10638, aided by the Chicago representatives of the American Federation of Labor, to secure an amicable adjustment of the situation, has been met by a defiant attitude on the part of the representatives of the Samuel Bingham Sons Manufacturing Company; and

Whereas, It is the aim and object of Chicago Printer Roller Makers' Union 10638, in its plea for equity and justice, to acquaint the delegates to this convention in brief form with the exact status of the controversy through the medium of the attached pamphlet; and

Whereas, The facts as therein stated undoubtedly warrant compliance by the convention to the request of its affiliated local, the Chicago Printer Roller Makers' Union 10638, to place the firm of Samuel Bingham Sons Manufacturing Company on the unfair list; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the delegates to the American Federation of Labor in regular session assembled in condemnation of the methods employed by the Samuel Bingham Sons Manufacturing Company to justify their maintenance of non-union conditions in their printer roller making establishments and that the firm's persistent and arrogant declination to settle the controversy on a basis consistent with honor and equity demands that the firm of Samuel Bingham Sons Manufacturing Company be placed upon the unfair list and all affiliated unions be officially notified of such action.

Resolution No. 103—By Delegate Ben Commons, International Street Railway Employees:

Whereas, The officials and engineers in charge of the construction of the Panama Canal have announced that it will be completed and open for commerce in 1915, and

Whereas, Practically the unanimous sentiment of the President of the United States and other officials, the members of Congress and the American people generally is that no celebration of the canal can produce such immediate and beneficial results as the holding of an exposition where the people of the world will be brought closer together through this union of the Atlantic and Pacific. The East and West will meet and confer with each other and exhibit the resources and products of their several countries, be it

Resolved, That we see in New Orleans the logical point for such exposition, by reason of its proximity to the canal and because it is the gateway for a large part of the import and export commerce of these United States with the countries south of us and with the world, easily reached from all points in this Continent, North, Central and South America, and in all respects suited to hold a great world's exposition, and we therefore indorse New Orleans as the best point at which to hold the world's Panama exposition in honor of the completion of the canal.

Resolution No. 104—By Delegate Geo. F. Golden, Illinois State Federation, Rock Island, Ill.:

Whereas, The introduction of metal and combination trim is taking the place of wood in the construction of all modern buildings, and

Whereas, The introduction of this trim is causing jurisdictional fights in the building trades and all such fights are detrimental to the organized labor movement; and

Whereas, The placing in proper position in the building, or in other words, the erecting thereof is done by the sole use of carpenters' tools, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Twenty-eighth Annual Convention of the Illinois State Federation of Labor in regular session assembled, that the erection of the above mentioned trim of right belongs to the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, and, be it further

Resolved, That the delegate elected to the Convention of the American Federation of Labor, to be held at St. Louis, in November, be, and is hereby instructed to use his influence and vote to this end.

Referred to the Committee on Adjustment.

Resolution No. 105—By Delegate Thomas Bone, Central Labor Council, Stockton, Cal.:

Whereas, It is absolutely necessary for the best interests of organized labor, that local unions shall have the right to complete autonomy and self-government in all local affairs, to the end that they may be in a position to meet and successfully combat any and all attacks that may be made upon local organized labor, and

Whereas, Local unions are at all times the best judges of their own local interests in the places where they exist, especially so in matters demanding their immediate attention and decisive action, and

Whereas, It is often the case that the very life of a local union depends upon the prompt and instant moral and financial support and assistance of the other local unions in that locality, and

Whereas, Said prompt and instant moral and financial support and aid is often times denied and prohibited to local unions, which are forced by circumstances not of their own creation, to demand said local support in order to preserve their very existence, and

Whereas, The denial and prohibition of prompt and instant moral and financial aid and support to local unions in need of such help, is caused solely by certain unreasonable laws and restrictions of the national and international unions and associations with which the various locals are affiliated, to-wit:

First—The law refusing a local the right to declare a sympathetic strike (locally) without the consent of the national or international, with which it is affiliated.

Second—The law refusing the local the right to assess its members in time of local trouble, without the consent of the national or international with which they may be affiliated.

Third—The law refusing the local the right to place a special initiation fee on "rats" and "scabs" who have worked as strike-breakers; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the San Joaquin County Central Labor Council, representing some twenty-nine affiliated local unions does hereby respectfully and earnestly urge that the American Federation of Labor (with which this body is affiliated) in regular annual convention assembled in St. Louis, Mo., take decided and prompt action, recommending and instructing the various national and international unions and associations affiliated with said American Federation of Labor, to amend or strike from their respective constitutions and by-laws the above mentioned laws, to the end that locals may be in a position to successfully combat all sudden attacks of any kind that may be made upon them, and, be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor be apprised of the fact that the San Joaquin County Building Trades Council (affiliated with the California State Building Trades Council, and the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor) and representing some twenty-six local unions, has by official action endorsed the above set of resolutions and concurred in this joint request to the American Federation of Labor.

Referred to the Committee on President's Report.

Resolution No. 106—By Delegate George F. Golden, of the Illinois State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, This white plague is a disease known and become general to the present jurisdiction; and

Whereas, The medical fraternity of the United States sees the necessity of devising ways and means to stay the ravages of this dreadful disease and have applied to the assistance of organized labor; and

Whereas, The Pittsburg American Federation of Labor Convention recommended that all the affiliated trades take up this sympathetic work along the line set forth by the printers of Colorado Springs; and

Whereas, It has been proven that relief can be accomplished at home as well as elsewhere; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this the Twenty-Eighth Annual Convention of the State Federation of Labor take up the work of establishing a State sanitarium in some healthful locality in the State of Illinois, and that the president of the I. S. F. of L. will use his office and appoint a committee to introduce a bill in the State legislature for an appropriation to nominate a sanitarium in the State for the care and treatment of those afflicted with dreaded diseases, and that the trades unions of the State of Illinois give their moral and financial support to this sympathetic work.

Resolution No. 107—By Delegate J. C. Skemp, Delegate Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, by request of Local Union 201, Albany, N. Y.:

Whereas, The private trademarks placed upon goods by manufacturers are calculated to confuse or mislead those who desire to buy union goods, in some instances are designed for that purpose, and

Whereas, The increasing number of genuine union labels and devices to distinguish union made products and union establishments are themselves confusing to union men and their friends who desire to patronize union labor, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Label Department of the American Federation of Labor devise and copyright a union label for general and universal use by all crafts affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and that upon the special label be provided a space for the insertion of the title of the organization issuing it and of the individual firm or corporation manufacturing the goods upon which it is placed, so that the intending customer may be fully informed as to the conditions under which the goods are produced.

Resolution No. 108—By Delegate Geo. F. Golden.

Whereas, Lodge No. 195 of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Ship Builders of America, of Kewanee, Ill., is on a strike at the plant of the Kewanee Boiler Company, manufacturers of heating and power boilers, at Kewanee, Ill.; and

Whereas, The terms submitted and the position taken by the said Lodge No. 195 have been sanctioned by the Executive Council of the said International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Ship Builders; and

Whereas, The said Kewanee Boiler Company refuses to come to any reasonable agreement with the said Lodge No. 195 and are unfair to said members of Lodge No. 195, and are seeking to destroy and disrupt the said Lodge No. 195 by making the plant of the Kewanee Boiler Company an open shop; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Illinois State Federation of Labor, and especially the members of the Steamfitters, Boilermakers and Teamsters' Union, to use every lawful means to compel the said Kewanee Boiler Company to recognize the said Lodge No. 195 and to come to fair terms with the members of said lodge; and we urge upon all men who favor fair play to encourage and uphold the members of Lodge No. 195 in their long and manly struggle for reasonable working conditions.

The above is fully indorsed by the Kewanee Trades and Labor Assembly.

Resolution No. 109—By Delegate J. C. Skemp, of Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers:

Whereas, We believe that the cost of compensation for accidents, loss of health, and loss of life occurring during employment or resulting from an occupation, should be charged to the industry, that such compensation should be fixed by law, and its prompt payment, without cost to the injured or to the dependents of the killed, be assured by the State; and

Whereas, This principle is recognized and embodied in the law enacted at the last session of the legislature of the State of New York, providing fixed compensation for the injury or death of men engaged in certain specified hazardous occupations and permitting employers and employees in other occupations to voluntarily place themselves under the law without surrendering their right to enter suit under the Employers' Liability Law, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention recommends that all affiliated national and international unions advise and urge their local unions situated in the State of New York to include in all future agreements with their employers a provision requiring them to place themselves under the Workmen's Compensation Law, and, be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, through the Executive Council, and all its affiliated organizations, endeavor to secure the extension and broadening of the Workmen's Compensation Act in the State of New York, so that it will apply compulsorily to all wage-earners regardless of occupation or sex, and so that compensation may be provided not only for injury through accident, and for death, but for loss of health and earning capacity due to disease resulting from the occupation; and, be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated organizations use their utmost endeavors to secure the enactment of a comprehensive and liberal workmen's compensation law in every State of the Union and in each province of Canada.

Resolution No. 110—By Delegate J. E. Hartvigsen, Michigan Federation of Labor:

The following resolution was presented at the twenty-first annual convention of the Michigan Federation of Labor, held at Muskegon, September 22 to 24, 1910:

Whereas, The Michigan Federation of Labor annually sends a delegate to the American Federation of Labor, therefore be it

Resolved, That the delegate elected at this convention to represent the Michigan Federation of Labor at the American Federation of Labor, to be held at St. Louis, Mo., be instructed to request the American Federation of Labor to send or appoint an organizer for a specified time to thoroughly organize the State of Michigan.

This resolution was unanimously adopted by the Michigan State Federation after having been referred to Resolutions Committee and reported favorably by said committee to convention.

Whereas, The State of Michigan holds the residence of C. W. Post, at Battle Creek, from which place emanate the most vicious tirades against organized labor, printed in publications of various sorts as paid matter, and being inimical to the union movement at large, therefore be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled applaud the action of the Michigan State Federation of Labor in the decision to hold the 1911 State convention in Battle Creek, thus invading the enemy's home territory, and be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor Executive Board assist in every manner possible, by sending or appointing organizers and in other ways, the coming year, to thoroughly organize the State of Michigan, from which the pernicious non-union propaganda of C. W. Post is disseminated.

Referred to the Committee on Local and Federated Bodies.

Resolution No. 111—By Delegate Geo. F. Golden:

Whereas, Organized labor has ever jealously guarded the ethics and principles of the cause that has proven so decided a factor in the development of modern civilization, and

Whereas, The aforesaid ethics have invariably found expression in the religious observance of contractual provisions in existence between employer and employee, and

Whereas, In many instances the employer has flagrantly ignored similar duties incumbent upon him by a deliberate disregard of all contract requirements, thereby meriting the rebuke of all honest minded people, and

Whereas, The Inter-Ocean, a daily newspaper of the city of Chicago, has been guilty of breaking faith with the Chicago Allied Printing Industry in that city, by discharging its web pressmen and operating that department with nonunion help, and

Whereas, The Inter-Ocean management insolently declined to recede from its arrogant position upon the solicitation of committees from both the Chicago Federation of Labor and the Chicago Allied Printing Trades Council, necessitating the withdrawal of the union label privileges heretofore enjoyed by the publication and placing the same on the unfair list, and

Whereas, The above recited action logically demands similar action by the central body representing the toilers of the State of Illinois to the end that they may not unconsciously render aid to an admitted enemy of organized labor, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the delegates of the Illinois State Federation, in regular session assembled, denounce the perfidy of the Chicago Inter-Ocean in its deliberate violation of contract provisions and declare it unfair to organized labor because of such action, and, be it still further

Resolved, That the Chicago Inter-Ocean be placed on the "We don't patronize list," of the Illinois State Federation of Labor and the secretary be instructed to acquaint every affiliated union and central body with the action taken.

Referred to the Committee on Boycotts.

Resolution No. 112—By delegates of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America:

Whereas, The American Federation of Labor recognizes that the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America has jurisdiction over all painters and decorators, including those employed in the painting and decorating of railroad cars, engines and other equipment, and

Whereas, In order to secure proper consideration for the demands of its members employed by railroad companies it is necessary that the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America have direct representation upon committees to confer with the railroad officials regarding wages, hours and conditions of labor, and

Whereas, Such representation can be properly and effectively secured only through the affiliation of the said brotherhood with the Railway Employees Department of the American Federation of Labor, and

Whereas, Said brotherhood has made application for admission, accompanied by the initiation fee, and no action has as yet been taken upon its application, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Railway Department of the American Federation of Labor be advised that the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America is eligible to admission to membership and requested to seat its delegates at its coming convention.

Referred to Committee on Adjustment.

Resolution No. 113—By Delegate P. D. Drain, Central Labor Union:

Evansville Building Trades Council are asking the adoption of the resolution herein and a copy be given to the delegates who will attend the American Federation of Labor Convention, which will be held in St. Louis, November 14:

Whereas, In every locality where there is a local Building Trades Council there are some trades who refuse to join the local council, therefore, be it

Resolved, That Section 33 of the Building Trades Department by-laws, which states that all local unions shall be compelled to join the local Building Trades Council, be strictly enforced, and, be it further

Resolved, That any international organization that fails to compel their locals to join their local councils when notified by the secretary-treasurer or Executive Board of the Building Trades Council, shall be suspended till they obey the instructions of the Building Trades Council Department.

Referred to the Committee on Building Trades.

Resolution No. 114—By Delegate John Mitchell, United Mine Workers of America:

Whereas, Recent investigations in Europe and America indicate that the suffering and economic loss occasioned by occupational poisons and diseases can be greatly minimized and in some cases absolutely eliminated through labor legislation requiring strict regard for the health of the workers, and

Whereas, The American Association for Labor Legislation has attacked the problem in a scientific way, and with a presentation of facts and figures is demanding national and State action; and, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor urges such investigation of conditions, such labor legislation, such thorough factory and mine inspection, such provision for the health of the workers, such enforcement of labor laws as shall place America on a level with the most progressive of nations; and it endorses and commends the American Association for Labor Legislation for the work it is doing in this direction.

Referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 115—By Delegate A. J. Sanarens, Trades Council, Macomb, Miss.:

Believing that the work of organizing the workers of the South, especially the States of Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, and believing that by an effort on the part of the American Federation of Labor, through its organizers, results can be obtained, therefore be it further

Resolved, that the American Federation of Labor be instructed to place as many organizers in the States mentioned as possible to the end that the interests of the cause may be benefited.

Referred to Committee on Organization.

Resolution No. 116—By Delegates Matthew Woll, International Photo-Engravers Union, Andrew J. Gallagher, San Francisco Labor Council:

Whereas, President Gompers, in his report to convention, has ably expressed the advisability and necessity for legislation to protect the children of our country against exploitation, and to advance their physical, moral and educational welfare, and that of society, and

Whereas, The president's report and that of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor contain no reference to legislation now pending before congress bearing upon this humane and important subject matter, other than the enactment into law of a bill intended for the better enforcement of the Child Labor Law of the District of Columbia, and

Whereas, (Quoting the language of President Gompers used in his report to convention) "The period has now arrived when the average member of a legislature is proud if he can make a good record on Child Labor Legislation." Be it therefore

Resolved, By this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that the American Federation of Labor take cognizance of and give approval to the intent and purpose of a bill now pending before congress, "To establish in the Department of the Interior a bureau to be known as the Children's Bureau," of which the following is an exact copy:

Sixty-first Congress, second session, Calendar No. 411, section 423, report No. 417, in the Senate of the United States, March 22, 1909—Mr. Flint introduced the following bill, which was read twice and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, March 18, 1910, reported by Mr. Flint, with amendments: A bill to establish in the Department of the Interior, a bureau to be known as the Children's Bureau. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled; that there shall be established in the Department of Commerce and Labor a bureau to be known as the Children's Bureau. Section 2. That the said bureau shall be under the direction of a chief, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall receive an annual compensation of four thousand dollars. The said bureau shall investigate and report upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life, and shall especially investigate the questions of infant mortality, the birth rate, physical degeneracy, orphanage, juvenile delinquency and juvenile courts, desertion, dangerous occupation, accidents and diseases of children, employment, legislation affecting children in the several States and territories, and such other facts as have a bearing upon the health, efficiency, character and training of children. The chief of said bureau may from time to time publish the results of these investigations. Section 3. That there shall be in said bureau, until otherwise provided for by law, an assistant chief, to be appointed by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, who shall receive an annual compensation of two thousand four hundred dollars; one private secretary to the chief of the bureau, who shall receive an annual compensation of one thousand five hundred dollars; one statistical expert, at two thousand dollars; two clerks of class four; two clerks of class three; one clerk of class two; one clerk of class one; one clerk at one thousand dollars; one copyist at nine hundred dollars; one special agent at one thousand four hundred dollars; and one special agent at one thousand two hundred dollars. Section 4. That the Secretary of Commerce and Labor is hereby directed to furnish sufficient quarters for the work of this bureau at an annual rental not to exceed two thousand dollars. Section 5. That this act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to establish in the Department of Commerce and Labor, a bureau to be known as the Children's Bureau," and be it further

Resolved, That the President and Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor are hereby authorized and instructed to exert their best efforts and use every possible influence for the adoption and enactment into law of this or legislation of similar character and purport.

Referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 117—By Delegate Walter Gazzolo, I. A. B. P. and B. of A. Labels:

Greeting: The International Alliance of Bill Posters and Billers, being a young organization, and desirous of bringing their labor in more common use amongst the various crafts who should use it; therefore, be it further

Resolved, That the A. F. of L., through which delegates at this convention instruct the affiliated local, both national, and federal, and city central body, to see that the label of the International Bill Posters is placed on all advertising matter, such as cards and posters.

Referred to Committee on Labels.

Resolution No. 118—By Delegate Geo. F. Golden, of the Illinois State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, It is universally conceded by the trades unionists that the State branches of the American Federation of Labor are important factors in advancing the welfare of organized labor, both in the industrial field and in securing legislation favorable to the workers; and,

Whereas, It is extremely difficult, without the active co-operation of the American Federation of Labor, to secure affiliation of all local branches of the national and international organizations, thereby throwing the burden of financing the State Federations upon a portion of the union men and women of the several jurisdictions. With a united membership much more effective organizations would be placed in the field at a smaller individual cost than at present and the work of the State Federations be more nearly in accord with the theory advanced for the formation of such bodies; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Article X, Section 1, of the Constitution be amended to empower the secretary of the American Federation of Labor to collect one-half cent per capita per month, on the full membership of all trades affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, the same to be forwarded to the secretaries of the various State Federations on a pro rata basis of the union men in their jurisdiction.

Referred to Local and Federated Unions.

Resolution No. 119—By Delegates E. Frank Moorhouse, Samuel Kelly, Daniel J. Evans, J. Tazelaar, J. C. Skemp, Delegates to the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America :

Whereas, The Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America has jurisdiction over all men employed in the painting industry, including those engaged in painting, lettering and decorating cars, locomotives and other railroad equipment, stations and other buildings; and

Whereas, The Pittsburg Convention of the American Federation of Labor instructed the International Association of Car Workers to cease to admit painters and decorators to membership, and to transfer to the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, all members of said International Association of Car Workers engaged in any branch of the painting industry; and,

Whereas, A charter has been granted by the American Federation of Labor to the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, an organization similar in structure, methods and objects to the International Association of Car Workers, both having jurisdiction over men employed in the building, repairing and inspection of railroad cars; therefore be it

Resolved, That this convention hereby instructs the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen to cease admitting to membership men engaged in the different branches of the painting business, and further instructs said organization to transfer within a reasonable time all of its members so engaged to the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, they to be accepted by that organization without being required to pay any initiation fee.

Resolution No. 120—By Delegates Matthew Woll, International Photo-Engravers' Union; Andrew J. Gallagher, San Francisco Labor Council :

Whereas, The American Federation of Labor has commendably interested itself in the righting of a wrong perpetrated upon the right of organized labor to advance the social and economic interest and welfare of its members through the unwarrantable exercise of the equitable power of the federal judiciary, intensified by and through the operation and judicial interpretation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, by approving and seeking the enactment into law of a bill introduced by Mr. Wilson of Pennsylvania, intended to regulate the issuance of restraining orders and injunctions and procedure thereon, and to limit the meaning of "conspiracy" in certain cases; and

Whereas, A similar violation of the right of organized labor to better the conditions of its members, right the wrongs and amend the grievances realized by them under the present industrial arrangement, is experienced and intensified by a similar unwarranted exercise of the equitable power of the State judiciary; and

Whereas, A united agitation and concentration of effort and energy by all organized labor for the enactment of legislation in all States of the Union, similar to that contemplated in the said Wilson bill, will arouse an increasing public interest, attract greater sympathy and support for organized labor in the amending of the deplorable conditions now existing, and serve to limit the equitable powers of both State and federal courts in the issuance of injunctions; and,

Whereas, The American Federation of Labor is well fitted, by reason of its Central and Federated Bodies, its affiliated international and local unions to undertake and intelligently direct this agitation and concentration of effort and energy; be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor include in its legislative policy the enactment of laws in all States of the Union, similar in purport to the said Wilson bill, and to this end instruct its president and Executive Council to prepare or cause to be prepared, bills of a similar character to be introduced into the several State legislatures through and by the means of the Central and Federated Bodies to the American Federation of Labor; and be it further

Resolved, That every affiliated Central and Federated Labor Body, each and every international and local union is hereby instructed to exert every effort possible, and use whatever influence is in their power to secure the enactment of laws herein contemplated, this agitation, effort and energy to be under the direct supervision of the officers of the American Federation of Labor.

Referred to the Committee on President's Report.

Resolution No. 121—By Delegate M. A. Murphy, Boston Central Labor Union :

Whereas, The unorganized women workers form the most helpless class in the competition that fixes hours, wages and conditions of work; and,

Whereas, The Woman's Trade Union League has given signal service in promoting trade union organization of woman workers, and has proven of strong and wise assistance in the time of strife; be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, recommend that in cities where there is a branch of the Woman's Trade Union League, that the central body of said cities give the League their co-operation and support to the end that the women workers of the country may be organized.

Referred to the Committee of Local and Federated Bodies.

Resolution No. 122—By Delegates Andrew J. Gallagher, San Francisco Labor Council : also introduced by the following delegates from California: Thomas Bone, Stockton; L. W. Butler, Los Angeles; Cyrus F. Grow, Los Angeles; P. W. Buckley, Oakland; O. A. Tveitmo, San Francisco; Frank A. Monaghan, San Francisco, Cal.; Andrew Fureth, San Francisco, Cal.; Geo. W. Bell, Gas Workers, No. 9840; Fred J. Grahame, San Francisco, Cal.:

Whereas, The citizens of San Francisco and the people of California have guaranteed by voluntary subscriptions and public appropriation, sufficient funds to make a world's fair, in commemoration of the completion of the Panama Canal, a success; and

Whereas, San Francisco has been approved and endorsed by a large number of commercial bodies, fraternal organizations and the chief executives of many States as the most fitting and proper place for such an exposition; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor that the City of San Francisco is hereby endorsed as the logical place for a world's fair, to be held in the year 1915, for the purpose of properly celebrating and commemorating one of the great achievements in human history—the completion of the Panama Canal; and be it further

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor be, and is hereby authorized and directed to use all honorable means with the members of the House of Representatives and the United States Senate in order that they may, by the powers vested in them, officially select San Francisco as the place for a world's fair or exposition, to be held in the year 1915, in commemoration of the completion of the Panama Canal.

Resolution No. 123—By Delegate T. V. O'Connor, International Longshoremen's Association:

Whereas, The School Teachers' Association of Buffalo, N. Y., whose members are striving to better their conditions and to secure a fair compensation for their labor, which is of an arduous nature, both physically and mentally; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the representatives of the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, declare in favor of a higher standard of wages and salaries to be paid to the school teachers of our country, and we now go on record as indorsing the efforts of the school teachers of Buffalo to improve their conditions of employment, and pledge our support to the members of that organization.

Resolution No. 124—By Delegate Victor L. Berger, Wisconsin State Federation of Labor. Affiliation of Locals with Central Bodies:

Whereas, It is now universally acknowledged by the trade unionists throughout the United States that the State Federations of Labor are an important factor to obtain favorable legislation and other benefits for the toilers; and

Whereas, Under the present law of the American Federation of Labor it is found to be impossible for the international unions to compel their local unions to join State Federations, thereby failing to contribute their share of the labor and expense required in the enactment of protective laws for the toilers; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Section 2 of Article XI, of the Constitution of the American Federation of Labor be abolished, and the following section substituted:

"The national and international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor shall, on or before the first day of May, 1911, notify their local unions that they must, within sixty days after notification, join the chartered central labor bodies and departments in their vicinity, also join the chartered State Federation of Labor in their respective States. Any local union failing to carry out said instructions within sixty days after said instructions are received, shall have its charter revoked by the national or international union with which said local is affiliated."

Resolution No. 125—By the Delegates of the International Longshoremen's Association, T. V. O'Connor, M. W. Kelleher, J. H. Sanderson, T. J. Dolan:

Whereas, The United Steel Corporation and Subsidiary Corporations are alleged to maintain agents in Europe to export labor corporation labor agents; further, be it

Resolved, That the General Executive Council investigate this matter and ascertain if it is not true that the worst criminals of continental countries are brought to this country through the efforts of these corporation labor agents; further be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council report the result of its investigation to the entire labor world, and publish same at large.

Resolution No. 126—By Delegates E. Frank Moorhouse, Dan J. Evans, Sam Kelly, Jacob Tazelaar, J. C. Skemp, Delegates of Brotherhood of Painters, and Decorators, and Paper Hangers of America:

To the President and Delegates of the A. F. of L., St. Louis, Mo.:

International or national organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and in good standing, shall not be discriminated against when applying for membership in any of the departments of such trades or organizations has been granted jurisdiction over the work which the department controls.

On applications for admission the department shall issue a certificate of application without delay.

Resolution No. 127—By Delegate T. J. Dolan, International Longshoremen's Association :

Whereas, The construction of deep waterways will provide a great deal of public work for workingmen ; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the A. F. of L. is in favor of the active work on the deep waterway from the lakes to the gulf being started at once by the government.

Resolution No. 128—By Delegate Wm. O'Brien, of the Silver Bow Trades Council :

I, Wm. O'Brien, delegate from Silver Bow Trades and Labor Council, Silver Bow County, Montana, representing forty local unions or more, wish to enter a protest against the granting of a charter to the Western Federation of Miners, by the A. F. of L., under the conditions recommended by the Executive Council. My reasons for doing so are that it would work a hardship on, and be a detriment to every international mechanic working in and around mines, mills or smelters where quartz mining is carried on. In Silver Bow County alone the following unions would be affected :

Carpenters, with a membership of 350 ; 200 would be affected. Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, membership 120 ; affected 100. Blacksmiths and Helpers, 274 ; 250 affected. Electricians, 100 ; 40 affected. Machinists, 375 ; 360 affected. Boilermakers 60 ; 50 affected. Painters, 150 ; 30 affected. Total, 1500 ; 1030 affected.

The results would be similar in Great Falls or Anaconda, where the large smelting operations are carried on.

Resolution No. 129—By Delegate Albert Abrahams, Central Federated Union of Greater New York and vicinity :

Whereas. In almost every locality where there is a central body, a number of unions chartered directly by the American Federation of Labor, or by national or international unions, such unions do not affiliate with the central body in such locality ; be it

Resolved, That Article XI. Section 2, of the A. F. of L., which instructs all chartered unions, national and international unions to have the local unions affiliate with such central body, be immediately enforced, and that the incoming Executive Council be and is hereby directed to issue a notice to these bodies to that effect.

Resolved, That any of these bodies refusing to comply within sixty days after the adjournment of this convention with this instruction, shall stand suspended until they do comply.

Resolution No. 130—By Delegates representing Cigar Makers' International Union :

Whereas, For some time past there has been displayed in various localities moving pictures that pretend to represent instances that occur in so-called strikes, that are not only unwarranted, but are base misrepresentations ; and,

Whereas, It is self-evident that the scenes produced have emanated from those who are unfriendly to the cause of labor, and their purpose is to prejudice the minds of the general public against our movement by falsely and maliciously misrepresenting it by these pictures ; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor places itself on record as condemning such pictures as being untruthful representations of labor's cause, and declaring that those who are interested in providing them have this object in view ; and be it further

Resolved, That we urge our members and friends to use all legitimate means in their power to discourage the exhibition of such moving pictures that falsely pretend to represent instances in connection with our movement.

Resolution No. 131—By Delegate James Murray, Texas State Federation of Labor :

Be it Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that the best interest of this federation can be best served by this convention by instructing the president and secretary to supply copies of the different laws now in existence and in force, relative to the employer's liability and employees' compensation, as well as copies of such bills as may be proposed dealing with this subject, to the various secretaries of the State Federations of Labor where such laws do not exist, and where it is intended to try to have such laws enacted, to the end that the best information may be at their command for their guidance in the presentation of bills before such legislative bodies as may have to deal with this subject.

Resolution No. 132—By Delegate Emmett L. Adams, Central Labor Union, Washington, D. C. :

Whereas, The people of the District of Columbia have been deprived of the right of local self-government, and a form of government under which an immense majority have neither voice nor influence has been forced upon them by Congress without their consent ; and,

Whereas, The present form of government in the capital of the republic—the political heart of the nation—is contrary to the fundamental principles of American liberty to establish which our revolutionary forefathers pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor ; and,

Whereas, The ballot is the workers' most effective weapon, deprived of which they are powerless to redress many of their grievances or to prevent the few men despoiling the many ; and,

Whereas, The Central Labor Union of Washington, D. C., have a number of times petitioned the Congress of the United States for the restoration of a republican form of government in the national capital, and have presented a plan for such a form of government; and,

Whereas, The people in no other city in this country are deprived of the right and opportunity to express their views and register their will through the ballot box; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the American Federation of Labor that Congress re-establish in the District of Columbia a government of the people and by the people under which it would be more responsive to the needs of the masses; and be it further

Resolved, That the Executive Council is hereby directed to lend such aid, as they may deem wise and helpful to secure for the citizens of Washington such a change in the form of government.

Resolution No. 133—By Delegates T. Healy, C. L. Shamp, Jos. W. Morton:

Whereas, the Twenty-ninth Annual Convention of the A. F. of L., held in Toronto, Canada, November, 1909, several conferences were held between the delegates representing the I. U. of S. E. and the I. D. of S. F. for the purpose of arriving at a satisfactory working agreement; and,

Whereas, These conferences have failed to bring about the desired result, and no settlement has been arrived at since that time; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the president of the A. F. of L. request the delegates of the I. U. of S. E. to confer with delegates from the I. D. of S. F. in conference, and that he appoint a member of the Executive Council to act as referee for the purpose of bringing about a mutual agreement by and between the above-named organizations, and make a report of his findings to this convention.

Resolution No. 134—By Delegate Mont. R. Powell, of Oklahoma State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, The voting power of the American Federation of Labor, delegated to the National and International unions through its constitution is not in keeping with the democratic government of the American Federation of Labor, thereby making it possible for three or four crafts to control the destinies of the American labor movement to the possible detriment of other crafts or State Federations and city central bodies, and the time having arrived in the progress of the labor movement for the American Federation of Labor to readjust the system of representation, and believing the voting strength of the State Federation and city central bodies combined should equal that of the National and International unions; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, in regular session assembled, that a committee of five members be appointed by the president to take up the matter of readjustment of representation and report at the next annual convention; said committee to be composed of at least one member from a State Federation and one member from a city central body; and, be it further

Resolved, That the expenses accruing from the deliberations of said committee at the next American Federation of Labor Convention be paid by the American Federation of Labor.

Resolution No. 135—By the Delegation of the Seamen's International Union:

Whereas, We believe it to be of interest to the licensed officers on merchant vessels and to licensed marine engineers, as well as to the labor movement, that they, through their organization, should be affiliated to the labor movement, in the American Federation of Labor; therefore,

Resolved, That these two organizations be invited to join the American Federation of Labor, and that the president be instructed to so inform them.

Resolution No. 136—By Delegates Daniel J. Tobin, Thomas L. Hughes, William Neer, Anton J. Hermann, Lawrence A. Grace of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters:

Whereas, The International Brotherhood of Teamsters find, in many sections of the country, that the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union have in their membership men who distinctly drive wagons; and,

Whereas, We believe they are entirely outside the bakery shop, and not bakers; and,

Whereas, Our charter grants us jurisdiction over all classes of drivers on all kinds of wagons; and,

Whereas, We have at the present time several local unions of bakery wagon drivers organized and chartered under our jurisdiction; be it

Resolved, That this convention instruct the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' Union of America to turn over to the International Organization of Teamsters, all drivers who are now members of their organization.

Resolution No. 137—By Delegates Daniel J. Tobin, Thomas L. Hughes, William Neer, Anton J. Hermann, Lawrence A. Grace of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters:

Whereas, The International Brotherhood of Teamsters, by a unanimous vote of their Convention, decided to change their name from International Brotherhood of Teamsters to International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers; and,

Whereas, At the last convention of the American Federation of Labor, held in Toronto, Resolution No. 155, making this same request of the Federation, was referred to the Adjustment Committee, who, in turn, referred same to the Executive Council; and,

Whereas, The Executive Council have not given any decision on this matter, and as we believe we are entitled to immediate action, inasmuch as a large percentage of our membership are now engaged in operating automobiles in every branch of our trade, from passenger service to freight and building material service; and,

Whereas, We have already chartered from our international over thirty local unions of chauffeurs and several locals of stablemen; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention grant us the desired request of changing our title and giving us the jurisdiction requested herein.

Referred to Committee on Adjustment.

Resolution No. 138—By Delegates Daniel J. Tobin, Thomas L. Hughes, William Neer, Anton J. Hermann, Lawrence A. Grace of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters:

Whereas, The charter of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters gives them the sole right and jurisdiction to have in their organization all men driving wagons of all classes; and,

Whereas, There exists in the City of New York, Federal Union No. 9463, titled, Newspaper and Mail Deliverers; and,

Whereas, This Federal Union has in its membership from three to five hundred newspaper wagon drivers; be it

Resolved, By this convention, that the Executive Council stand instructed to notify this Federal Union No. 9463, and any other Federal Union, in any part of the country, that they be compelled, and are ordered, to turn all drivers over to the International Organization of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers.

Resolution No. 139—By Delegate B. A. Larger:

Whereas, In nearly every State penal institution and reformatory the labor of the inmates is contracted for by unscrupulous manufacturers, who place the product of said convict labor in competition with that of free labor; and

Whereas, Such competition is unfair and unjust inasmuch as the product of convict contract labor is sold below the regular market price of the product of free labor, thereby throwing many wage earners out of employment; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the various State branches and central bodies be advised to begin a campaign of publicity to arouse the trade unionists and the general public to the end that convicts be employed at such labor that will not place their product in competition with that of free labor.

Resolution No. 140—By Delegates from the United Garment Workers of America:

Whereas, Forty-five thousand unorganized workers in the clothing industry are out on strike in the City of Chicago during the past eight weeks we, the delegates representing the United Garment Workers of America, who have been and are continuing to assist these people, feel it incumbent upon us to place the facts of this strike and matters pertaining to it before the delegates attending the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled at St. Louis, Mo., November, 1910.

These workers were in the employ of the wholesale clothing firms of Hart Schaffner & Marx, B. Kuppenheimer and about one hundred other ready-made and made-to-measure houses. The strike began in one of the pant shops of the firm of Hart Schaffner & Marx as the result of a reduction of wages, said reduction was but one of previous reductions.

When the workers refused to submit to such cut in wages, and went out on strike, all of the other shops of the firm of Hart Schaffner & Marx followed, and soon most of the workers in the entire clothing industry of Chicago left their shops, claiming that there were other matters that needed remedying that were of greater importance than wages. The complaints made were investigated by an impartial tribunal of citizens and publicists known as the Citizens' Committee, who has issued a public statement as to the correctness of these complaints. Some of the more flagrant are as follows:

1. Discrimination against and dismissals for belonging to a trade union.

2. Having to secure a pass from a foreman to get a drink of water, or go to the lavatory.

3. An unfair system of fines and charges for the use of soap in the wash rooms, needles, bobbins, etc.; a charge of 25 cents for oil cans which can be secured at wholesale for 5 cents; a charge of 60 cents for the loss of a silk spool, full or empty. When a spot is found on a garment the one in whose hands the garment is found is subject to a fine of a small or large amount to the extent of the compulsory purchase of the garment at retail prices. This, in spite of the fact that the garment in the course of section work may have passed through a dozen different hands.

4. In the cutting rooms "suit lengths," instead of bolts of cloth are furnished the cutters, out of which a full size suit is expected; the amount of goods furnished is in many instances, insufficient to get the suit out properly, and should the stripes not match with perfectness, or the cutter be short the smallest or shortest piece of goods, and have to apply to the foreman for the same, he is fined or charged for the same.

5. The clothing manufacturers of Chicago have what is known as the Clothiers' Board of Trade or Association, and in order to secure employment in one of these houses an employe must first secure a pass or permission to work from said association, and must submit to a minute cross-examination of pedigree and pledge not to join a union.

6. Latterly, the entire system has been changed from week to piece work, and the prices paid are so low that the greatest speed is necessary to earn enough to keep body and soul together. The same class and amount of work is now required at piece work that was required formerly at week work, while the average week's earnings is greatly reduced. Again, all piece work employes are compelled to remain in the shop the full time, whether there is work for them to do or not.

7. Time clocks are subjects of grievance inasmuch as workers through a little oversight are deprived of wages actually earned. All workers are compelled to register both on entering or leaving employment, but should a worker neglect to register on leaving employment, in spite of the fact that his work slips and foreman of his department can prove he had done his work, yet he is deprived of his wages.

These are but some of the grievances and tyrannies these people out on strike were subject to, and from which they seek redress.

An offer has been made for a partial remedy and adjustment of the controversy, and the ending of the strike; but those involved are standing out for a strictly union shop, and the reinstatement of all who went out. They are still standing firm, and are determined to win.

The United Garment Workers of America has had its entire force of organizers in the City of Chicago to organize, advise and assist the strikers to bring the strike to a successful issue.

Our organized members in Chicago are assisting the strike financially, by a weekly membership assessment. We have also sent out an appeal for financial aid to all of our affiliated unions in the United States and Canada, and we desire such moral or financial aid as lies in the power of the trade union movement in America, and to this end be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, endorse an appeal for funds which will be sent to all local unions for aid to win this strike, and that all delegates present give said appeal their hearty support when such reaches the union or central body with which they are affiliated.

Referred to Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 141—By Delegates T. L. Lewis, J. H. Walker, Frank J. Hayes, John Mitchell, E. S. McCullough, Edwin Perry, W. E. Wilson of the United Mine Workers of America:

Whereas, The Western Federation of Miners have applied for a charter of affiliation to the American Federation of Labor, with similar jurisdiction to be accorded to them that is now accorded to the United Mine Workers of America.

Whereas, We believe that the Western Federation of Miners should be affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and accorded the same rights and privileges as the United Mine Workers of America in their jurisdiction of men working in and around the mines, to be organized under the Western Federation of Miners.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the delegates representing the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that the Western Federation of Miners should be granted a charter of affiliation, with jurisdiction of employes working in and around the mines metalliferous under their present organization, and that the officers and Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor are hereby instructed to issue to the Western Federation of Miners a charter of affiliation with the American Federation of Labor on that basis. On behalf of United Mine Workers of America.

Referred to Committee on Adjustment.

Resolution No. 142—By Delegate John H. Riley, Danbury, Conn., Central Labor Union:

Whereas, In the State of Connecticut, less than 50 per cent of the local unions of that State are affiliated with the State Branch of the American Federation of Labor of Connecticut; and,

Whereas, The same conditions exist in many of the other States, compelling the few to carry on the work of many; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the same law of the American Federation of Labor compelling local unions to affiliate with central labor unions in these respective cities apply to local unions compelling them to affiliate with the State branches of the American Federation of Labor.

Referred to Committee on Local and Federated Bodies.

At 4:45 the convention was adjourned to reconvene at 12 m., Friday, November 18.

Fifth Day's Proceedings—Friday, November 18, 1910.

The convention was called to order at 12 o'clock noon, Friday, November 18th, President Gompers in the chair.

Absentees—Kline, Dolan (C. T.), Young (Carl), Richardson, Humphrey, Barnes, Licht, Landers, Bloch, Nestor, Lowe, Daly, Perry, Weber (J. N.), McGivern, Donlin, Smyth, Roth, Paquin, Commons, Evans (Jo.), Grimshaw, Casey, Teagarden, Skaggs, Lee, Joyner, Cathon, Jennings, Sears, Sheehan, Kiefer, Britt, Bratton, Christiansen, Wentz, Kleyhauer, Woodman, Tate, Wilson, (G. A.), Miller (Abraham), Mawman, Lippert, Harris, Hudson, East, McShea.

Delegate Furuseth: I ask permission to make a reference. I request that the last paragraph of that portion of the President's report under the sub-head "Organization and Growth," on page 3, be referred to the Committee on Law.

No objection being offered, the matter was so referred.

Delegate Furuseth: On page 5, of the President's Report, under the sub-head "Canada," I move that everything be referred to the Special Committee on Canadian Relations.

No objection being offered, the matter was so referred.

Secretary Morrison read a communication from the pastor of St. Lawrence O'Toole's Church, in which the delegates were invited to attend a special service at the Church at 11 o'clock, Sunday, November 20th, at which Archbishop Glennon will preach the sermon. The communication stated that seats would be reserved for the attending delegates.

Secretary Morrison read a communication from the Lecture Committee of the local Socialist party, in which an invitation was extended to the delegates to attend a mass meeting at which the following delegates of the American Federation of Labor Convention would speak: Victor L. Berger, Charles Moyer,

President of the Western Federation of Miners, Miss Maud Younger, Ben Turner, Fraternal Delegate from Great Britain, Max Hayes and J. M. Barnes.

Secretary Morrison read the following telegram:

Los Angeles, Cal., November 16, 1910.
Samuel Gompers, Convention Hall, St. Louis, greetings:

Whereas, The Metal Trades Craft and Structural Iron Workers of Los Angeles are on strike, and

Whereas, Other Building Trades Craft remained at work on struck jobs, and in some cases handled struck work; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the strikers in mass meeting assembled, that we ask the convention to demand that all departments of American Federation of Labor see that all union men cease work on struck jobs, and, be it

Resolved, That Los Angeles strikers do declare our intention to continue our fight for eight-hour day on the Pacific Coast.

E. H. MISNER, Chairman.

The chairman of the Committee on Adjustment asked that Resolution No. 7 be referred to the Committee on Organization; Resolutions Nos. 17 and 18 to the Building Trades Committee, and Resolution No. 75 to the Building Trades Committee. No objection being offered, in each case the reference was made as requested.

Secretary Morrison read the following telegrams:

Portland, Oregon, November 13, 1910.

D. W. Robinson, Planters Hotel, Care Secretary Morrison, St. Louis, Mo.:

To the American Federation of Labor, greetings:

Organized labor of the city of Portland and State of Oregon call on your convention now in session to use every endeavor to adjust the differences between the two factions of the I. B. E. W., that this great organization of union men may be brought together that thereby this blot on the escutcheon of trades unionism may be removed.

Central Labor Council of Portland and vicinity.

M. OLNEY, Secretary.

Los Angeles, Cal., November 17, 1910.
 Andrew J. Gallagher, care Planters Hotel,
 St. Louis, Mo.:

Get first-class Italian organizer; will have great results here. Unskilled organizations developing splendidly. Everything in fine shape; fever of agitation in the city. Now is the time for fruitful efforts; Mexicans all right, Russians coming along. Italian speaker and organizer sadly needed.

AUSTIN LEWIS.

San Antonio, Texas, November 17, 1910.
 Samuel Gompers, Planters Hotel, St. Louis, Mo:

While not present in corporal form my spirit is with you and hope that the A. F. of L. will never succumb to any "isms" that will rend it asunder.

WM. L. HOEFGUR,

President Texas State Federation of Labor.

City Island, New York, Nov. 13, 1910.
 The Officers and Delegates of the Thirtieth Annual Convention A. F. of L.:

Greeting: May convention crown thirty years' achievement of labor legislation by American Federation of Labor with demanding a labor amendment to the United States Constitution abolishing master and servant wage slavery and voluntary servitude, injunctions and usurpation, and ordering industrial emancipation.

Fraternally,

American Anti-Wage Slavery Society.

RUDOLPH MODEST, President,
 AMBROSE HAAS, Vice-president,
 HERMAN WALTHER, Treasurer,
 ALEXANDER SCHLESSINGER, Sec'y.

President Gompers announced that the hour for the special order of business had arrived, and the question of the Electrical Workers' dispute was before the convention.

Delegate Duffy (Frank) made an extended statement of his work on the special committee appointed in the Toronto Convention of the American Federation of Labor, and during the course of his discussion read a number of letters and documents in regard to the case.

Delegate Frey, a member of the special committee appointed in the Toronto convention, discussed the question at some length, and explained the work of the committee at the different meetings held during the year.

Delegate Gallagher: I understand there are several resolutions dealing with the adjustment of this Electrical Workers' dispute now the property of the convention. What has become of them?

President Gompers: They were referred to the Committee on Adjustment, together with the report of the Executive Council on that subject.

Delegate Gallagher: I understand the entire matter is now out of the hands of all committees and the property of the convention itself.

President Gompers: That is not the understanding of the chair.

Delegate Gallagher discussed the question at some length, and urged that a plan be adopted to settle the troubles existing in Electrical Workers' organizations.

Delegate Kelly (W. J.) discussed the matter at some length, and during the course of his remarks asked: "Is it not a fact that this question was referred to a special committee after being taken from the hands of the Adjustment Committee, and last night taken from the hands of the Special Committee to which it had been referred and brought before this convention?"

President Gompers: If the chair remembers correctly, the matter was not taken from the hands of the special committee. I have not looked over the minutes, but the secretary will read the minutes he has upon that subject.

The minutes were read by Secretary Morrison.

President Gompers: In that form the matter is before the convention.

The question was discussed by Delegate Lynch (James), by Delegate Walker, (J. H.), Delegate Furuseth, Delegate Hayes, (F. J.), Delegate Berry, Delegate Tobin (John) and Delegate Mahon.

Prior to offering an amendment to the motion before the house Delegate Mahon said: The Executive Council has said in its recommendations, "In our opinion, if the entire matter is referred to the Executive Council for the exercise of their good offices, and without any instructions binding them to any specific course to this convention, our Federation may in the course of time bring about amalgamation." They believe if the entire matter is left in the hands of the Council they can work out a satisfactory settlement in time to come. I believe they can.

I believe they should try. I believe it is the course they should pursue. I therefore move as a substitute that the entire matter be referred to the incoming Executive Council.

Later, Delegate Mahon restated his motion, as follows: I move to carry out the recommendation of the Executive Council which reads: "It is our opinion that if the entire matter is referred to the Executive Council for the exercise of their good offices, and without instructions binding them to any specific course by this convention, our Federation may, in the course of time, bring about amalgamation," and that the entire matter be referred to the incoming Executive Council. (Seconded.)

Delegate Lynch (James M.) offered the following amendment:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that the Special Committee on Arbitration as provided for by the Toronto Convention in the case of the Electrical Workers be continued, and that the special committee chosen to adjust the differences be increased by the appointment of two delegates by this convention. (Seconded.)

The question was further discussed by Delegate Mahon.

Delegate Lewis (T. L.) offered the following substitute:

Whereas, The Toronto Convention of the American Federation of Labor provided a method for the settlement of the factional strife among the organized Electrical Workers of the country.

Whereas, The method provided by the Toronto Convention of the American Federation of Labor was the appointment of a committee of three representing the opposing factions of the American Federation of Labor.

Whereas, The work of that committee is not completed for the reason that one member of the committee resigned.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that the action of the Toronto Convention be reaffirmed, and that the committee appointed at the Toronto Convention, or in the event of their failure or refusal to serve, such other members as may be appointed to fill vacancies on the committee, be instructed to complete its work.

The authority is hereby conferred on the committee authorized by the American Federation of Labor to

1. Demand the release of all funds tied up by litigation.

2. That the services of all attorneys employed by either or both factions of the Electrical Workers be promptly discontinued.

3. That the committee endeavor to bring the factions of organized Electrical Workers together, failing to do so, the Arbitration Committee will endorse a call for a joint convention of the two factions of Electrical Workers, such convention to be called within ninety days.

4. That when a special convention of the two factions of the Electrical Workers is called, the committee of three selected by the authority of the American Federation of Labor Convention shall take charge of the special convention of Electrical Workers.

5. That the faction of the Electrical Workers that complies with all the provisions of these instructions shall be recognized as the regular organization and chartered as an affiliated body with the American Federation of Labor.

6. The result of the work of the special convention of the Electrical Workers, in the judgment of this convention of the American Federation of Labor should be final and binding on all factions of the Electrical Workers.

The substitute offered by Delegate Lewis was seconded by Delegate Berry.

The question was discussed by Delegate Lewis, (T. L.), Delegate Collins, of the Electrical Workers, Delegate Furuseth, Vice-president Duncan, Delegate Wilson (W. B.), and Delegate Mitchell (John).

Delegate Mitchell moved, That the entire subject matter of the dispute between the Electrical Workers be referred for adjustment to the Executive Council without instructions binding them to any specific course. (Seconded by Delegate Tobin.)

The motion was withdrawn after the amendment offered by Delegate Mahon had been stated.

The question was further discussed by Delegate Urlick, a member of the special committee appointed in the Toronto convention to consider the question of the Electrical Workers.

A number of delegates asked for the previous question. President Gompers asked for a show of hands to determine if a sufficient number desired the previous question put to warrant closing debate.

President Gompers: A sufficient number has asked that the main question be put to a vote. The chair desires to state that Mr. Reid, President of the Electrical Workers unaffiliated, has arisen and asked recognition. The chair cannot, of course, upon his own authority recognize Mr. Reid.

Delegate Walker (J. H.): I move that Mr. Reid be given the privilege of the floor before a vote is taken. (Seconded.)

Delegate Gallagher desired to know if Mr. Reid, if given the privilege of the floor would go into the merits of the controversy or confine himself to the question of reference to a committee.

Mr. Reid stated it was not his desire to indulge in criminations or recriminations, but as a party to a contract with the A. F. of L. he thought it was his right to defend his position.

Delegate Gallagher: I desire to get the idea of what is known as the seceding faction as to the method of settling the dispute. I would like to know if Mr. Reid is given the floor will he address himself strictly to the motion before the house.

Mr. Reid: Absolutely.

The motion offered by Delegate Walker was carried. Mr. Reid was given the privilege of the floor, and discussed the question before the house at some length.

Delegate Sanderson: I would like to ask Mr. Reid a question. He stated he was willing to let the committee that handled this proposition call a convention. Is he aware of the contents of the resolution offered on this question by Delegate Mahon?

Mr. Reid: I am fully aware of it.

Delegate Sanderson: Are you prepared, if that prevails, to let that be the procedure, that the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. use its best offices to deal with this question?

Mr. Reid: I believe in sticking to a contract. We made the contract and our membership would not want us to abrogate it.

A motion was made that Delegate McNulty be allowed the privilege of the floor.

Delegate McNulty: I do not desire to speak long, merely to say that the last answer of Mr. Reid satisfies me the delegates know his position very clearly.

The motion to close the debate was carried.

President Gompers: The motion of Delegate Furuseth proposes to cancel the charter. The motion of Delegate Mahon proposes that the entire matter be referred to the Executive Council, as they propose to this convention. Delegate Lynch moved that the committee be continued and enlarged. The proposition of Delegate Lewis as a substitute to the whole gives specific instructions and calls for the revocation of a charter. The constitution of the American Federation of Labor provides that when any such question is before the convention it will be settled by roll call. The secretary will call the roll.

Delegate Lewis: I want to correct the statement of the Chair with reference to the substitute offered by Delegate Lewis.

In response to a request from the chairman Secretary Morrison read the substitute offered by Delegate Lewis.

Delegate DeVeaux: Is there not a provision for the revocation of a charter in one of those sections?

President Gompers: This proposition has been read three times, once by Delegate Lewis and twice by Secretary Morrison.

Delegate Walker (J. H.): If Brother Mahon's motion is adopted, in the interim between now and the time the Executive Council takes action will all hostilities cease and neither organization be discriminated against in the field?

President Gompers: That is not a point of information. The secretary will call the roll. The substitute offered by Delegate Lewis as just read will be voted on.

Delegate Lavin asked if one delegate had a right to cast the entire vote of his organization if none of his co-delegates were present.

President Gompers: In the Birmingham convention of the American Federation of Labor it was held that if an organization is entitled to three delegates and but one is present, that delegate may cast the vote to which the organization is entitled.

At 4:45 p. m. the secretary proceeded to call the roll on the substitute offered by Delegate Lewis. Following is the roll call:

A.), Hubbard, Bohm, Mawman, Lippert, Harris, Hudson, East, Nihil, McShea, Brace, Turner, Pettipiece, representing 318 votes.

President Gompers: The substitute is lost. The chair desires to call attention to the subjects as they are now and have been presented, the motion of Delegate Furuseth to revoke or annul the charter of the Electrical Workers, the motion of Delegate Mahon to refer to the Executive Council as explained, and the amendment of Delegate Lynch.

The amendment offered by Delegate Lynch was lost on a viva voce vote.

The amendment offered by Delegate Mahon was carried on a viva voce vote.

President Gompers: It is carried and that carries with it the motion of Delegate Furuseth.

Vice-President O'Connell stated it had been very difficult to get committees together to work, and in order to give the committees an opportunity to meet and prepare reports, moved that when the convention adjourned it be to reconvene at the regular time on Monday. (Seconded and carried.)

Delegate Berry: I would like to inquire if the special committee appointed yesterday to handle the Electrical Workers' matter is done away with by the action of the convention.

The statement was made that the case of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and the Amalgamated Carpenters was still before the special committee.

Vice-President O'Connell: I desire to make two references. Resolution No. 204 being a building trades matter, the Committee on Adjustment desires to refer to the Building Trades Committee.

No objection being offered, the matter was so referred.

The Committee on Adjustment also received permission to refer No. 108 to the Committee on Resolutions.

Secretary Morrison: A resolution was left at the wrong room last evening. Other resolutions needed change. For that reason they were not printed with the others. I desire permission to print them in today's proceedings.

The request was granted.

Delegate Duffy (Frank): I would ask the chairman to place somebody on the Committee on President's Report in my place, as I am leaving the convention tonight.

President Gompers: To fill the vacancy caused by the necessity of Delegate Duffy leaving the convention, the chair will appoint J. W. Morton, of the Firemen.

Delegate Wheeler asked for and received the unanimous consent to the introduction of a resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

President Gompers: Last evening I attended a banquet tendered to the delegates by the St. Louis Trades and Labor Council. One of the morning papers published a statement that does me a very grave injustice and this labor movement a great wrong. The statement read that I had "read the negro out of the labor movement." No greater misstatement could be made. First, I have no power to do it, and if I had the power I would not do it. In reviewing the organized labor movement abroad and in the United States I called attention to the conditions confronting the working people of our time and incidentally among several things to which I referred I called attention to the fact that we had with us a population of eight million negroes, and that they are but a little more than half a century from a condition of slavery, and as a consequence it could not be expected that, as a rule, they would have the same conception of their rights and duties as other men of labor have in America.

Instead of "reading the negro out of the labor movement" my contention and the contention of the American Federation of Labor is to try to bring them into the organized labor movement of our country. We are trying our level best, and will continue to do so, to organize the men and women of toil without regard to their religion, their politics, their nationality, their sex or their race. I could not permit this entire day to pass by without thus publicly, in this convention and in the presence of our visitors and the representatives of the press, making this correction.

The Committee on Credentials made the following report:

Your Committee on Credentials beg to report that they have received the following credential and recommend the seating of the delegate:

Sedalia, Mo. Federation of Labor, R. T. Wood, 1 vote.

We have a communication from the Galesburg, Illinois Trades and Labor Assembly, stating that their delegate Edward A. Tate could not attend the convention, and they have sent the alternate, Conrad Nystrom, with request that he be seated. We recommend that Mr. Nystrom be seated, as requested, with 1 vote.

MICHAEL J. HALLINAN, Chairman,
A. J. KUGLER,
WM. J. KELLY, Secretary.

The report of the committee was adopted and the delegates seated.

During the session the following resolutions were presented and referred by the Chairman to the various committees:

Resolution No. 143—By the delegation representing the Cigar Makers' International Union:

Whereas, For a period of more than four months 9,000 members of the Cigar Makers' International Union in the city of Tampa, Florida, have been forced out of employment by the members of the Cigar Manufacturers' Association, the efforts of this association being to disrupt the organization of the Cigar Makers as well as that of every other organization of labor in that city, particularly the organizations of the building trades, the purpose being to establish in Tampa the "open shop;" and,

Whereas, In the efforts made in this direction by the Cigar Manufacturers' Association there has been organized what is known as the Citizens' Association, this latter Association having transgressed all law and order by constituting itself as an armed authority, having not only attempted to force the members of the Cigar Makers' International Union to return to work against their will, but having also threatened the lives of many of the members for refusing to return to work; and,

Whereas, This self-constituted Citizens' Association has by force of arms closed the offices of the labor organizations of Tampa, has refused to permit the officers of the various local unions of Cigar Makers to transact their business in a peaceful and lawful manner, and has had several officers of these local unions arrested and imprisoned on charges that are unwarranted and false, the authorities refusing to accept a bail bond, and denying the plea for a speedy trial; and,

Whereas, The Governor of the State of Florida, as well as the Mayor of Tampa, has refused to make an investigation of the conditions arising from the action of this self-constituted citizens' committee; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor hereby enters an emphatic protest against this unwarranted and uncalled for interference with the rights and liberties of the working men and women of Tampa; and, be it

Resolved, That this convention also emphatically protests against the action of the municipal authorities of Tampa by reason of their refusal to protect the rights of those citizens whose property was confiscated by the closing of the halls where their meetings were held, and, be it

Resolved, That this Convention protests against the unwarranted arrests and incarceration of the officers and members of the unions of Tampa; and, be it further

Resolved, That this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor calls upon the organizations herein represented and their members and friends to give all possible moral and financial assistance to our fellow working men and women of Tampa involved in this controversy, to the end that their organization may be maintained and their rights and liberties as American citizens upheld.

Referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 144—By Delegates Joe N. Weber, Owen Miller, D. A. Carey, Joe F. Winkler, of the A. F. of M. at A. F. of L. Convention:

Whereas, The United States authorities have repeatedly decided that musicians do not come under the provisions of the alien contract labor law, and

Whereas, In the past and at the present time orchestras and bands are imported into this country under contract, and

Whereas, The bands and orchestras so imported generally displace American musicians by contracting to work for pauper wages, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Convention of the American Federation of Labor consider the replacing of American musicians by foreign musicians under the circumstances as complained of, an injustice and hereby declares itself in full sympathy with all efforts of the American Federation of Musicians to have the alien contract labor law amended so as to afford the necessary protection to American musicians.

Referred to Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 145—By Delegates J. A. Franklin, Thos. Flynn and Joseph Flynn, of the International Brotherhood of Boiler Makers:

Whereas, There is a large and insistent demand for remedial legislation having for its object the prevention of the large number of locomotive boiler explosions with their accompanying loss of life; the list of such explosions are becoming larger each year and the experience of other nations shows the only effective remedy is Government supervision of inspection of boilers, and

Whereas, There is now before the Congress of the United States a bill to provide for Federal Supervision of Locomotive Boilers, which if enacted into law, would greatly reduce the number of these appalling disasters by requiring more careful and frequent inspections, promptness in making repairs when defects are found and compel a discontinuance of the present practice on many roads of taking chances with defective boilers, by continuing them in service in order to overcome a shortage of engines even after their dangerous condition has been ascertained: therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, in regular session assembled, do heartily approve of the principle of Federal supervision of locomotive boiler inspection and direct that the Legislative Committee of this body do all in their power to assist in having this measure enacted into law at the coming session of Congress; and we request all affiliated bodies to aid in the matter; and, be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these preambles and resolutions be sent to the President, Senators and Congressmen of the United States.

Referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

Resolution No. 146—By Delegate Chas. D. Wheeler, Delegate Chicago Federation of Labor.

Whereas, The 29th of next November (1911) will be the one hundredth birthday of Wendel Phillips, and

Whereas, This greatest of all American agitators and reformers (if not the greatest of all the world's agitators and reformers) has been studiously ignored by the plutocratically controlled institutions and publications of our country, therefore be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor do, at this convention, resolve to celebrate the centennial anniversary of this great advocate of human liberty, and be it further

Resolved, That we recommend to all affiliated international, central and local unions the educational effect that a general celebration of his birthday is bound to have on all the people of this country, as it will encourage a study of his life, work and character.

Resolved, That the Resolution Committee be requested to draw up suitable resolutions covering this matter, so that the day, or the Sunday previous, can be properly observed.

Referred to Committee on Resolutions.

At 6 p. m. the convention was adjourned, to reconvene at 12 o'clock, noon, Monday, November 21, 1910.

Sixth Day's Proceedings—Monday, November 21, 1910.

The convention was called to order at 12 o'clock, Monday, November 21, 1910, President Gompers in the chair.

Delegate Furuseth requested that Resolution No. 120 be referred from the Committee on President's Report to the Committee on Resolutions. No objection being offered, the matter was so referred.

Delegate Ramsay, of the Committee on Organization, requested that Resolution No. 94 be referred to the Building Trades Committee, that Resolution 131 be referred to the Committee on Education, that Resolution No. 133 be referred from the Committee on Organization to the Committee on Adjustment, and that Resolution No. 126 be referred to the Committee on Law. No objection being offered, the resolutions were referred as requested.

Vice-President O'Connell requested that Resolution No. 131 be referred from the Committee on Adjustment to the Committee on Resolutions, that Resolution No. 83 be referred to the Committee on Resolutions, and that Resolution No. 112 be referred to the Committee on Law. No objections being offered, the resolutions were referred as requested.

Vice-President Perham: The Committee on Local and Federated Bodies desires to refer Resolution No. 118 and Resolution No. 124 to the Committee on Law. No objection being offered, the resolutions were referred as requested.

Report of Committee on Organization.

St. Louis, Mo., November 18, 1910.

The Committee on Organization met and organized with Mr. John Mitchell in the chair. D. G. Ramsay was chosen secretary. Several resolutions asking for the appointment of organizers being in the hands of the committee, the question of their disposition was fully considered and it being the understanding of the committee that at the present time the funds available for organizing purposes are not in excess of the amount necessary to defray the expenses of those now employed it was considered best to refer these resolutions to the Executive Council with instructions to give all possible attention to the work of organization in the localities referred to in the following resolutions:

Resolution No. 3—By Delegate James Buckley of the Wyoming State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, The state of Wyoming has several fair-sized towns in which there are no labor organizations, and several in which we believe various locals could be organized, and in the past the state has received practically no assistance in organizing from any source; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor consider the question of sending an organizer for a specified time to work in this field.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 6—By Delegate Homer D. Call of Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen:

Whereas, The Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America has for the past six years made a determined and consistent effort to organize the employes in the packing industry; and

Whereas, Their efforts have been vigorously opposed by what is known as the American Meat Trade Association, who have repeatedly declared for the open or non-union plant; and,

Whereas, At the present time the wages and conditions of the employes have been systematically reduced until today the average wage of the butcher workmen is less than $7.00 per week; and,

Whereas, Owing to the present system of government inspection, we believe the time opportune for organizing the said butcher workmen of North America; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled do hereby request the Incoming Executive Council to render such aid and assistance as possible to organize the butcher workmen of this country; and be it further

Resolved, That some one general organizer of the American Federation of Labor be designated to take charge of the work of organizing, with instructions to devote his entire time to that work, at the expense of the A. F. of L.

The committee recommended that the resolutions be referred to the Executive Council.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed by Delegate Call, who spoke briefly in regard to the conditions existing among the employes of the American Meat Trade Association.

The motion to concur in the recommendation of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 32—By Delegate C. F. Russi, Jr., San Antonio Trades Council:

Whereas, Texas has not been getting the recognition of the American Federation of Labor that it is entitled to in way of general organizers; and

Whereas, Texas is in need of a general organizer on account of the bad conditions existing throughout the state; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor send a general organizer to Texas on the first of January, 1911; and be it further

Resolved, That the organizer be kept active in Texas permanently.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 33—By Delegate Roderick McGeary, C. F. U. of Providence, R. I.:

Resolved, That an organizer be sent to Providence, R. I., and vicinity for the purpose of organizing the jewelry workers. At the present time there are 30,000 skilled workmen employed at their craft in this section, none of them being organized.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 51—By Delegate Geo. W. Bell of Gas Workers' Union 9841:

Whereas, The large army of wage workers now employed in the manufacturing and distributing of artificial and natural gas in the United States and Canada are unorganized except in the state of California; and

Whereas, If these men were organized it would be the means of bringing into the fold of the American Federation of Labor many thousands of wage-workers; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council be and is hereby instructed to make every effort to organize the gas workers in the large cities of the East and Middle West.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 53 — By Delegate Charles Lavin of Pennsylvania State Federation:

Whereas, The state of Pennsylvania employs over 50,000 people in the silk industry; and

Whereas, The larger portion of these are women and girls, working long hours and for meager wages, as a result of their lack of organization; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, do strongly urge upon the Executive Council the advisability of placing one organizer in that territory for at least six months of the coming year, with a view of assisting to bring about a more thorough organization among these silk workers; and be it further

Resolved, That the organizer so assigned shall be one who has at least some knowledge of the silk industry.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

It was moved and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed at length by Delegate Lavin, who described the deplorable condition of the children and young girls working in the silk mills. He urged that all other organizations assist in obtaining better conditions for them.

Vice-President Lennon: I just desire at this time to say a few words regarding the situation of the American Federation and the Executive Council in taking up these matters. It is not because of lack of interest, nor because of a lack of desire to furnish organizers. The federation now has in its general fund about $4,000. I think only about two months ago we had absolutely nothing in the general fund. Delegates must remember that the organizers who are already in the field have work in hand which, if abandoned, will make a large part of the work they have already done inefficient and of no value. Therefore the council, when it is without funds, cannot act upon these propositions. If they take away men who have certain work in hand and send them to other places, they render the work already done of no avail, and in going into new fields the men can accomplish but little and make no showing for the organization for some time to come. I want to call your attention to the fact now that what is needed to carry out this work is more money, and the Law Committee will submit a proposition to this convention looking for an addition to the funds of the federation that will enable the council to carry out a very considerable portion of this work that is assigned to them. I felt a statement of this kind would not be amiss in handling resolutions of this character by the committee.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 57 — By Delegates Christ Kerker and Henry Koch, of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union:

Whereas, Unscrupulous employers of the baking industry, employing thousands of craftsmen of the baking trade have in the past year reduced wages and forced men to inhuman conditions, and while we are doing all within our power to uphold and defend our constitution against the wanton attack of corporate power, which seeks to take advantage and fasten upon its employees a slavish condition of servitude; and

Whereas, The members of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union have been engaged in bitter strikes the country over, we feel that the conditions of the bakery industry must be sharply looked after, and

Whereas, As the situation presents itself to us, we picture it with serious alarm and apprehension, for we recognize in it an insidious attack on organized labor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor be authorized by this convention to give to our organization assistance in the way of organizing by instructing organizers in all localities to give particular attention to the organizing of bakers.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 61—By Delegate Riley, Brotherhood of Railway Clerks:

Whereas, There are approximately one-fourth million clerical employees of the various railroad companies in the United States at the present time who are unorganized, and

Whereas, This vast number of wage-earners is by far the largest contingent of unorganized labor embraced in a single class now in existence, and

Whereas, The Brotherhood of Railway Clerks has organized a certain percentage of this class and upon a number of railroad lines this class has materially increased its wages, reduced its hours of service and secured other improved conditions through such organization, and

Whereas, The organization of this vast body of workingmen is of paramount importance to the labor movement at the present time, and

Whereas, The said Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, claiming jurisdiction over this class of wage-earners, is an affiliated body; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled that special effort be made to organize this large contingent of unorganized labor; that each and every organizer of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to at once begin and prosecute a vigorous campaign of education along trade union lines among this class, and, be it further

Resolved, That the officers of the American Federation of Labor be, and hereby are, instructed to assign at least one of its organizers to the special and exclusive work of organizing this one-fourth million unorganized wage-earners, such organizer or organizers to work under the assignment and direction of the Grand President of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 69—By Delegate Geo. W. Bell, Gas Workers' Union, 9840:

Whereas, The Sugar Workers' Union 10519 is the one and only union of its kind in America, and therefore not in a position to organize the sugar workers throughout the country, and

Whereas, The sugar workers of America, if organized, would form one of the largest organizations in the country; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Incoming Executive Board of the American Federation of Labor be, and hereby is, instructed to use its best efforts to organize the sugar workers in the Eastern States.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 73—By Delegate Sim A. Bramlette, Central Labor Union, Kansas City, Kan.:

Whereas, The Central Labor Union of Kansas City, Kan., has been carrying on a campaign of organization among the unorganized workers of that city with the of being able to ultimately organize the several thousand unorganized workers, and in such effort have exhausted practically every means available.

Whereas, Such effort on the part of the Central Labor Union has been supplemented by the State Federation of Labor as far as that organization was able to contribute to the work, with the result that favorable conditions have been established to form several local organizations, provided the work is continued; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor place a general organizer in said city or appoint some competent local worker as a special organizer to take up the work of organization in Kansas City, Kan., and that such organizer maintain headquarters in said city while engaged in such work.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 76—By Delegate James Murray, of State Federation of Labor of Texas:

Whereas, The influx of Mexican labor into the Southwestern States is assuming larger proportions each year, and, if not properly and promptly attended to by this Federation will in all probability result in the disaffection of many of the locals now affiliated with this Federation, and

Whereas, The belief is common with those who have given this subject the closest study and investigation that this Federation has not been pursuing a wise policy in the past in regard to this matter, thereby endangering the continued existence of the locals now organized and affiliated, and by this neglect weakening its own strength when it should be pursuing an entirely different policy, therefore be it

Resolved, That such delegates as may be now attending this convention from the Southern or Southwestern States be requested to go before the Committee on Organization and submit such information as they may possess in relation to this matter, and that the committee be instructed to report back to this convention with such recommendations as they may deem best for the interest of the Federation.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 44—By Seamen's Delegation:

Whereas, There are a large number of men who, by their occupation (that of general laborers), are under great difficulty in trying to organize, and yet who, more than any other class of men, are in serious need of organization, and

Whereas, These men (more than three million) travel from place to place to obtain work of different kinds; and

Whereas, These men are ill-paid, ill-fed, ill-housed and treated in a way that denies their common humanity, that prevents them from obtaining promptly even the pitiful small pay which they are promised; and

Whereas, These men are gradually getting to believe that not only the world generally, but even the trade unionists are their enemies and are therefore learning to hate unionism; and

Whereas, We seem thus to be traveling in nearly the same way as did the gulls to a condition which will divide them from the rest of the workers; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council be instructed to devise a form of organization that shall be suitable to the needs of these migratory laborers; and be it further

Resolved, That such part of the funds of the federation as can possibly be spared be devoted to the organization of what may be called the migratory laborer of such states where such work may give the best promise of results.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to Executive Council, being covered by Resolution No. 86.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 86—By Delegate O. A. Tveitmoe, United Laborers 12992, of San Francisco, Cal.:

Whereas, It is the duty of the organized artisans, mechanics and laborers to help in the uplift of all who toil for a living; and

Whereas, Steps have already been taken by organizations in various states to organize the migratory and unskilled laborers in accordance with a definite and systematic plan; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that all authorized organizations of the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated International and National unions, be directed to use every effort within their power to organize the unskilled and migratory laborers of the various cities and counties wherein they may be employed; and, be it further

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor be, and is hereby instructed to give particular attention and care to this great mass of unskilled labor, and endeavor to perfect an International organization in accordance with the principles of the trades union movement and the laws of the American Federation of Labor.

The committee recommended that the resolution be adopted.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 115—By Delegate A. J. Sanarens, Trades Council, Macomb, Miss.:

Whereas, Believing that the work of organizing the workers of the South, especially the States of Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, and believing that by an effort on the part of the American Federation of Labor, through its organizers, results can be obtained; therefore, be it

Resolved, that the American Federation of Labor be instructed to place as many organizers in the States mentioned as possible to the end that the interests of the cause may be benefited.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 9—By the delegates of the International Longshoremen's Association:

Whereas, The closer affiliation of all organizations of the workers employed in the industry of transportation, such as longshoremen, seamen, teamsters, railroaders, freight-handlers, street carmen, boatmen, etc., will be of advantage to all concerned; and

Whereas, The development of industry will eventually force the workers to organize and affiliate on industrial lines; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor be asked to inaugurate a movement to establish a Transportation Department within the American Federation of Labor.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council, with instructions to confer with the representatives of the organizations in question as to the practicability of organizing such a department

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed briefly by Delegate Furuseth and Vice-President Mitchell.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 21—By Delegate P. J. Brice, Stone Derrick Men's Union No. 12878:

Whereas, We, the Stone Derrick Men's Union No. 12878 of St. Louis, have tried to form an international union of our craft, consisting of men over 21 years of age, employed at the following work:

The handling of all cut stone and granite cut by stone and granite cutters, in yards and on buildings, and the helping to set of all stone and granite.

The handling of all saws (except granite saws), travelers and derricks in yards, when used to handle cut stone or granite.

The drilling of stone or granite, whether by hand, steam, air or any other method.

Where specified granite drilling, said drilling is controlled by granite cutters.

Where specified hand drilling, this does not apply to mash hammer drilling when done by a stonecutter.

The handling and rigging of all derricks when used for the purpose of handling cut stone or granite, whether on construction, reconstruction and alterations of buildings, where cut stone or granite is handled.

All rubbing of stone (except granite polishing), all cleaning down of new stonework on buildings.

The handling and helping to set all artificial cut stone made in molds, blocks or slabs. By the term "artificial cut stone" is meant where molds, blocks or slabs are to take the place of cut stone. We do not claim the manufacture.

The handling and helping to set exterior marble, when said marble work is being done by stonecutters or stonemasons.

Having also solicited the aid of the American Federation of Labor in forming said international union, and having been informed by Mr. F. Morrison, your secretary, that the American Federation of Labor would do all in its power to help us form said union, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this, the thirtieth convention of the American Federation of Labor, give us their support to further the work of organizing the locals engaged in our class of work, and be it further

Resolved, That the thirtieth convention of the American Federation of Labor instruct its organizers to work to that end, namely, that said international union may be formed.

We find in different cities that men of our craft are at this time unorganized, and we feel that locals could be organized, thereby getting together enough to warrant the forming of the proposed international union, and we, the Stone Derrick Men's Union No. 12878 pledge our financial support to further this movement.

In connection with the above resolution will say we have an eight-hour day schedule at the rate of 37 1-2¢ per hour; a schedule of four hours on Saturday, with time and a half for overtime; double time for Sundays and holidays, which are New Year's Day, Fourth of July, Thanksgiving and Christmas. No work on Labor Day.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

Secretary Morrison: Part of the whereas says that Secretary Morrison promised to do all in his power to help form this particular union. The secretary has no recollection at this time of ever having made such a statement orally or to have written a statement of that character in regard to this particular organization, although the officers of the American Federation and the Executive Council are instructed by the constitution to form international organizations out of local unions wherever possible. I desire to make this correction at least in the minds of the delegates.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 26—By Delegate Harry DeVeaux, representing the Actors' International Union.

Whereas, At the Toronto (Canada) convention of the American Federation of Labor two resolutions were introduced by the Actors' International Union, one of which requested the assistance of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to aid the Actors' International Union in forming an international association of actors in all parts of the world; and the other resolution requested the assistance of the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. to induce an organization known as The White Rats of America, a theatrical association of vaudeville actors, to become a component part of the American Federation of Labor, and

Whereas, Through the personal efforts of President Samuel Gompers several conferences were held between the Actors' International Union and The White Rats of America, which resulted in the amalgamation of the two organizations on the 7th day of November, 1910, at the Victoria Hotel, in New York City, at which conference representatives of the Actors' International Union, The White Rats of America and President Gompers were present, thereby forming in fact an international association of actors allied with the English, German, French and Australian federations of organized actors, under the title of The White Rats Actors' Union of America; therefore, be it

Resolved, That all organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor render their moral support and influence to The White Rats Actors' Union of America in their efforts to have all places of amusement in the United States and Canada employ members of the only recognized body of theatrical performers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor; and, be it further

Resolved, That due notice of the amalgamation of the Actors' International Union and The White Rats of America be submitted officially by the American Federation of Labor, through its Executive Council, to all national and international unions, state federations and local city central bodies.

The committee recommended that the resolution be adopted.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 27 be amended by striking out "shall" in the fourth line and inserting "be requested"; also striking out the words "every assistance will be given," in lines six and seven, and insert in line nine, after the word "name" "be requested to give their assistance." The resolution as amended is as follows:

Resolution No. 27—By Delegate Harry De Veaux of the Actors' International Union:

Whereas, Through the efforts made by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, the association of actors, formerly known under the title of The White Rats of America, have been amalgamated with the Actors' International Union, thereby forming a well-organized branch of the amusement profession under the new title of The White Rats Actors' Union of America, and

Whereas, It is to the best interests of those that are employed in the various places of amusement in this country and Canada, that the various crafts so employed, should assist in the practical organization of all engaged in these various branches; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Musicians and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees be requested to use their best efforts to assist The White Rats Actors' Union of America in their campaign of organization, and that the various locals of the two organizations named be requested to give their assistance in regulating any local differences that may occur between the employer and the employee in so far as the constitutions of the international organizations above named will permit.

The committee recommended the adoption of the resolution as amended.

Delegate De Veaux discussed the resolution briefly, and stated that he had no objection to the amendment.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in and the resolution adopted.

Resolution No. 54—By Delegate Wm. E. Eckenrodt, Tennessee Federation of Labor; Chas. P. Fahey, of Nashville Trades and Labor Council, and S. H. Lowe, of Jackson Trades and Labor Council:

Whereas, The State Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union in Tennessee has passed the following resolutions at their annual convention, held September 13, 14, 1910, at Dickson, Tenn.

Whereas, The organized workmen of Tennessee are striving to improve the condition of themselves and their families; and

Whereas, It is the desire of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of Tennessee to assist them in every practical way possible; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the State Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union, that we request the Tennessee Federation of Labor to prevail upon the International Labor Organization to send representatives to our country meetings to explain to our members the importance of purchasing the product of union labor that bears the union label; and be it further

Resolved, That our state secretary be instructed to furnish the secretary of the State Federation of Labor, on his request, the dates and places of the meetings of our county unions for that purpose. Be it

Resolved, That our legislative committee is hereby instructed to meet and co-operate with the legislative committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor on all measures pertaining to the common interest of labor and that all legislation agreed upon by both organizations shall be submitted to all candidates for legislative honors.

Resolved, That the President of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of Tennessee be empowered to appoint a committee of three from this body to co-operate with the authorities of the Tennessee Federation of Labor to arrange a joint convention of the two orders above named at a convenient point in the state during the year 1911; and

Whereas, The Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union in Tennessee has by the passage of the above resolutions indicated their desire to co-operate with and assist the Trade Unionists in Tennessee in a practical way to improve their condition; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that we most heartily endorse the proposed working agreement between the organized Farmers and the Trade Unionists of Tennessee; and, be it further

Resolved, That we instruct the Incoming Executive Council to comply with the request contained in the resolutions and send some person to attend the meetings of the county unions of the farmers to explain and instruct them of the importance of purchasing the goods that bear the union label.

The committee recommended that the alliance between the State Federation and the Farmers' Union of Tennessee be commended, and that the subject matter of the resolution be referred to the Union Label Trades Department.

The question was discussed at some length by Delegate Fahey, who explained at length the conditions existing in Tennessee and stated that a large amount of benefit would be derived by every international union that has a label if the suggestion contained in the resolution could be carried out.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 90—By Delegate John J. Flynn of Brooklyn Central Trades Union:

Whereas, There is operated in the Borough of Brooklyn a factory for the manufacturing of linotype machines, known as The Mergenthaler Linotype Company; and

Whereas, There are employed in that factory many hundreds of men, women, boys and girls, including craftsmen, such as electricians, machinists and tool and diemakers, metal polishers, carpenters, engineers, firemen, and others; and

Whereas, The employees in this factory are grossly underpaid and exploited, and the company is showing its distaste for organized labor, by repeatedly discharging members of unions who had the temerity to wear an emblem of their union, or when it came to the knowledge of the officials of the company that they were members; and

Whereas, The manufactured products of this company are used and operated by organized labor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the convention of the American Federation of Labor assembled in its Thirtieth Annual Convention at St. Louis, Mo., November, 1910, direct the trades interested to concentrate their efforts in an endeavor to organize The Mergenthaler Linotype Company; and, be it further

Resolved, That the International Typographical Union and the trades affiliated, directly and indirectly, give all necessary assistance in furthering the organizing of the craftsmen in the employ of that company, in keeping with the spirit of the American labor movement.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council, with instructions to seek the co-operation of the International Union in question in an effort to organize the employees of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 92—By Delegate Charles W. Fear, of Joplin, Mo., Trades Assembly:

Whereas, The unorganized wage workers of the Southwest Missouri district present an opportunity for the organization of a number of local unions, particularly in the city of Joplin, Mo., and vicinity; and

Whereas, The Joplin Trades Assembly is working to thoroughly organize the tollers of that vicinity under the trade union banner of the American Federation of Labor; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor call the attention of officers of affiliated international unions to the unorganized

Southwest Missouri district, and again urge that international organizers be detailed to work in the Joplin district during the coming year with the purpose of more thoroughly organizing the workers of the different crafts into their unions; and be it further

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the Federation of Labor be and are hereby authorized to render all assistance possible in organizing the tollers of Southwest Missouri.

The committee recommended that the resolution be adopted.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 93—By Delegates Urban Fleming and John Golden, of United Textile Workers of America:

Whereas, The textile industry in its many branches employs over 1,000,000 wage-workers scattered over the North American Continent, and

Whereas, The prevailing condition in many parts of the country in connection with the textile industry are long hours of labor, a low scale of wages, coupled with unhealthy and unsanitary conditions, mostly due to the non-enforcement of the factory laws in some States, and the absolute lack of humane laws in other States, especially those south of the Mason and Dixon line, be it therefore

Resolved, That the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor hereby instruct the Executive Council to co-operate as far as possible with the officers of the United Textile Workers of America during the coming year in a joint effort to bring about a more thorough organization of textile workers and a consequent uplift of their conditions.

The committee recommended that the resolution be adopted.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 95—By Delegate Edw. P. Baum, of the Belleville (Ill.) Trades and Labor Assembly:

Whereas, A good many of the crafts in the stove and range shops and the foundries in general all over this country are not organized, and it has been shown that in a good many shops where said crafts are not organized, other crafts are thoroughly organized and receive the recognition of the firms; in fact, in some of the shops some of the smaller crafts, such as the metal polishers, stove mounters, steel range workers, foundry employees and, in some instances, the iron molders, are out on strike and scabs are working in their places, the firms placed on the unfair list and such unfairness indorsed by the Trades and Labor Assembly of said respective districts, and still we find that other crafts organized under the American Federation of Labor and affiliated with the Metal Trades Department continue to work in said unfair shop with said scabs and strike-breakers, without rendering any assistance toward organizing these non-union men; and

Whereas, If said crafts who are organized in said unfair shops would speak to said non-union men they could bring pressure to prevail upon them to identify themselves with the unions under whose jurisdiction they work. Where, as it is, they work with them for years and never ask them any questions relative to their becoming union men, and in most instances costs the unions under whose jurisdictions they work considerable time and money to get them organized; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the convention of the American Federation of Labor, held in St. Louis, Mo., November, 1910, that the American Federation of Labor insist that the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor make their prime issue the organizing of all crafts working in the said foundry industries, and that said crafts who are organized in any foundry do all in their power to organize the other metal trades crafts that are yet unorganized; and be it further

Resolved, That no international union grant or permit its affiliated locals to grant the use of their union label to any firm unless all crafts whose international unions are affiliated with the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor working in said firms' shops or foundry are organized.

Endorsed by the Eighth District, Stove Mounters and Steel Range Workers' Union Convention, Belleville, Ill., October 29, 1910.

Further recommended by Frank Grimshaw, Stove Mounters' International Union; George Bechtold, International Brotherhood of Foundry Employees; Thomas Rumsey, Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers and Brass Workers' International.

The committee recommended that the first resolve be referred to the Executive Council, with instructions to correspond with the Metal Trade organization looking to a more complete organization of all foundry employees, and that the second resolve be referred to the Metal Trades Department.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 98—By Delegate E. C. Morris, Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants' Union No. 12,646:

Whereas, Officers of international and national unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor hold commissions as organizers, and

Whereas, Many stenographers, bookkeepers and general office workers are employed in the offices of these international and national unions and there seems to be no opportunity for the American Federation of Labor to assign a special organizer to work among these employees, be it

Resolved, That the officers of international and national unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor use their best efforts as organizers commissioned by the A. F. of L. to secure the membership of their office workers in existing local unions of these crafts and to promote the formation of such local unions in cities wherein they do not now exist.

The committee recommended that the resolution be adopted.

On motion the recommendation of the Committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 101—By Delegate Geo. F. Golden, Illinois State Federation of Labor, Rock Island, Ill.:

President and delegates of the American Federation of Labor, St. Louis, Mo., asking the bricklayers to join the American Federation of Labor, at the meeting of the Galesburg Trades Assembly, on September 8, 1910; the following resolutions were unanimously adopted, and are presented to this body for your consideration and concurrence. Trusting they will meet with your favorable action, we remain fraternally,

Executive Committee, Galesburg Trades Assembly.

Galesburg, Ill., September 8, 1910—To the Galesburg Trades Assembly: Inasmuch as the Bricklayers' and the Masons' Union have repeatedly refused to become affiliated with the Building Trades Council, thereby preventing the formation of such an organization and causing many nonunion jobs which otherwise would have been fair, and inasmuch as the said Bricklayers' and Masons' Union have been scabbing on the Brick Makers' Union, thereby prolonging the strike of the brick makers, stationary firemen, the steam shovel and dredgemen at the Purlington Brick Yards, and inasmuch as the brick makers, steam shovel and dredgemen and stationary firemen are all affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and the bricklayers and masons are not, and have several times refused so to affiliate themselves; therefore, be it

Resolved, That these matters be presented to the meeting of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, in suitable resolutions, with a request that they take the matter up at the next convention of the American Federation of Labor, and the bricklayers and masons be again asked to join hands with other organized workers under the American Federation of Labor; shall take steps toward the formation of a bricklayers' union, which shall be so affiliated, to the end that the stumbling block in the way of progress of the organized workers be removed.

Delegate Ramsay: Your committee desires to express their regret at the unfraternal policy of isolation pursued by the Bricklayers' and Masons' International Union, and we recommend that the Executive Council be instructed to continue its efforts to bring into affiliation with the American Federation of Labor the organization in question.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The committee recommended that that part of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "Organization and its Extension," be concurred in.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was adopted.

The committee recommended that the recommendation of the Executive Council contained in that part of its report under the caption "Status of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers' Struggle with the United States Steel Corporation," be concurred in.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was adopted.

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "Organized Farmers," the committee reported as follows: We express our gratification at the good relationship established and now existing between organized farmers and organized wage earners. As a further evidence of our appreciation it is recommended that the Executive Council be authorized to send a representative of the American Federation of Labor to the next convention of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of America, and that they be invited to be represented through fraternal delegates to the American Federation of Labor.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Report of Committee on Credentials.

Delegate Kelley (W. J.): reported as follows for the committee:

The committee received the following credentials from the American Society of Equity of North America: "This is to certify that Dr. J. T. Tuohy, LL.D., of Missouri, a member of the American Society of Equity of North America, has been duly elected at our National Annual Convention now in session in the city of Indianapolis, Indiana, a fraternal delegate to represent the above named Society at your national convention now in session in the City of St. Louis, Missouri." The communication is signed M. F. Sharp, President S. D. Kump, Secretary-treasurer.

The committee recommended that Dr. Tuohy be seated as a fraternal delegate without vote.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Report of Committee on Resolutions.

Delegate Frey, Secretary of the Committee, reported as follows:

Resolution No. 4—By Delegates Brais, Lindala and Lennon of Journeymen Tailors' Union:

Whereas, The General Executive Board of the Journeymen Tailors' Union of American have been impressed by recent events in the world of industry with the very great importance to all wageworkers of making a special and persistent effort to organize into the trade union movement women engaged in industrial life; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we respectfully urge upon the American Federation of Labor both the necessity and importance of placing some women organizers in the field; and be it further

Resolved, That the delegates of the Journeymen Tailors' Union of America be and are hereby directed to submit these resolutions for action by the St. Louis Convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 5 be amended by striking out the words "and also protest against the Interstate Commerce Commission acquiescing in the request of the railroad employes if such a course is contemplated by the said body;" that the second resolve be stricken out entirely and the following substituted in its place: "Resolved, that the protest be communicated to the Interstate Commerce Commission," the resolution as amended to read as follows:

Resolution No. 5—By Delegate Steve McDonald of the Scranton, Pa., Central Labor Union:

Whereas, Some of the employees of the railroads of this country have petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission to permit those who control the means of transportation to boost the present freight rates; and

Whereas, The earnings of the railway corporations are enormous, even upon a capitalization that drips with water, after paying for improvements and equipments out of the earnings, thus proving without doubt that there is no necessity for an increase in the freight rates; therefore be it

Resolved, By the delegates here assembled, in the interests of the tolling masses, the business men and public in general, that we protest against the contemplated move by those who are working for the selfish interests of the railroads, because it would only inflict greater hardships upon the tolling masses, the business men, and the independent operators who have been figuratively strangled by the coal-carrying roads, through the pernicious system of unfair, unjust and infamous discrimination, and be it further

Resolved, That this protest be communicated to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed briefly by Delegate Furuseth, Delegate Hawley, Vice-President Duncan and Delegate McDonald.

The motion to adopt the resolution as recommended by the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 8—By Delegate Oscar F. Nelson of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, Indorsing Senate Bill No. 5900 and House Bill No. 19796, providing for the regulation of the hours of labor of postoffice clerks:

Whereas, The post office clerks are the only federal civil service employees who have no legalized regulation as to the number of hours that shall constitute a day's work, and for that reason are compelled to work an excessive number of hours without extra compensation; and

Whereas, The duties of a postoffice clerk are of an arduous nature, both physically and mentally, and as a consequence long hours of labor imperil the health of such workers; and

Whereas, Senator Jones of Washington has introduced Senate Bill No. 5900, which provides "that forty-eight hours shall constitute a week's work for postoffice clerks," and Congressman Goebel of Ohio has introduced a like bill in the House of Representatives, No. 19796; and

Whereas, The National Federation of Postoffice Clerks have indorsed these bills as meeting with their approval, and as we believe our government should be foremost amongst all employers of labor in maintaining a high standard of working conditions and equitable treatment of its employees; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the American Federation of Labor, in annual convention assembled at St. Louis, Mo., do hereby go on record as indorsing Senate Bill No. 5900 and House Bill No. 19796, and do hereby instruct our Legislative Committee to strive to have this measure, as well as such other measures that will improve the working conditions of the postoffice clerks, enacted into law.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 11 be amended to read:

Resolution No. 11—By the Delegates of the International Longshoremen's Association:

Whereas, In the work of loading and unloading of vessels of all classes there is absolutely no government rules to protect and safeguard the lives and health of the men engaged in such work and no government inspection of same, such as is provided for construction, factory and mining industries; and

Whereas, The lives and health of the members of this association are daily jeopardized and sacrificed to the most reckless speeding up of work for the sake of more profits for the employers; and

Whereas, We consider the lives and health of our members and of workmen in general more precious than profits; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor be and is hereby instructed to have introduced in the Congress of the United States a bill containing rules and regulations governing the work of loading and unloading of vessels, tending to safeguard the lives and health of the men employed in such work, and to have a government inspection established for the purpose of properly enforcing such rules and regulations.

The committee recommended the adoption of the resolution as amended.

The question was discussed by Delegate Furuseth, Delegate O'Connor (T. V.), and Delegate Olander.

Delegate Furuseth moved as an amendment that the provision for the adoption of the resolution be stricken from the motion and that it be referred to the Executive Council.

The amendment was seconded, and carried by a vote of 73 in the affirmative to 64 in the negative.

Delegate Furuseth: May I be permitted to make a short statement? I want to make an offer to the Longshoremen I am sure they will accept. I want to offer our hearty co-operation in the passing of an employers' liability law in this field that the employers cannot contract themselves out of and put upon insurance companies.

Resolution No. 24—By Delegate Steve McDonald, of Scranton Central Labor Union:

Whereas, A number of railroad employees have lent their aid to the railroad manipulators for the purpose of petitioning the Interstate Commerce Commission to persuade that body to grant permission to increase the present freight rates; and

Whereas, Fabulous dividends are paid now as a result of the present freight rates charged on all commodities; therefore be it

Resolved, That the president of the A. F. of L. appoint a committee of five trade unionists, whose duty it shall be to make an investigation to ascertain the earnings and dividends of the railroads in this country, so that the American people may be placed in a position to determine whether the request for the privilege of increasing the freight rates is justifiable; be it further

Resolved, That all labor organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor be requested to withhold any assistance from the railroads in the manner of indorsing the request of the owners and manipulators of said railroads, for an increase in freight rates until such time as the true condition of affairs is ascertained.

Secretary Frey: Your committee nonconcurred in the resolution. Such a committee of investigation as called for in the resolution could have no power conferred upon it by the American Federation of Labor which would force railroad corporations to give the free access to their books and accounts which would be necessary to secure the information required. The subject of freight rates is now before the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has power to grant or refuse permission to advance freight rates.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 34—By Delegate E. Wm. Carr of the International Printing Pressmen's Union:

Whereas, Owing to the centralization system of industry affording the people a lesser opportunity of launching successfully into business individually for themselves as formerly, and in view of the fact that almost all manufactories, mercantile and transportation, being owned and controlled by a comparative few, there is now but little opportunity for those among the masses to distinguish themselves through intellect, energy and capability, except as salaried individuals in the capacity of managers, clerical positions, skilled artisans, mechanics and laborers; and in further view of the fact that no matter how talented the individual rarely is the salary allowed to be but little, if any, more than enough to keep them beyond the day whereof they toil; thus those who produce the wealth and splendor of the earth of a right, it is not just that when nearing the end of their journey they should be mortified and dependent on charity or turned away to the poorhouse and finally to the potter's field; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this body. The American Federation of Labor, herein instructs its Legislative Committee to engage legal talent and have formulated a proposed law, the same to be introduced in congress, substantially as hereinafter included, to-wit:

"Any person having been legally married and having previously been regularly engaged in an honorable business, or having previously been employed regularly at an honorable vocation, but being no longer in business or employed and having an income of less than six hundred dollars, or an equivalent thereto, per annum, and who shall be and shall have been a resident in and a citizen of the United States of America for at least twenty-one years, and who shall arrive at the age of sixty (60) years, shall be entitled to a pension of thirty dollars ($30) per month from the government."

The committee recommended nonconcurrence in the resolution, and further recommended reaffirmation of the action of the Toronto convention of the American Federation of Labor in relation to the subject of Old Age Pensions.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed at some length by Delegate Carr.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 38 be amended to read as follows:

Resolution No. 38—By Delegate John S. Whalen, New York State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, Several attempts have been made during the past few years to have legislation enacted, both state and national, which would destroy the efficient and practical pilot system in New York; and

Whereas, The present laws have proven beneficial to life and property, as the records will demonstrate; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this workingmen's federation condemn any attempt to amend the present law, which would not alone destroy the efficiency of the pilot system, but would also destroy the union whose members have been following this calling for a livelihood for many years; be it further

Your committee recommends that the action of the New York State Federation of Labor as expressed in the resolution, be endorsed by this convention.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 39 be amended to read:

Resolution No. 39—By Delegate John S. Whalen, New York State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, The struggle to maintain and re-establish union conditions among the seamen of the great lakes has been conducted during the past season with such success as to give promise of ultimate victory, and

Whereas, The seamen and others are directly involved 'n the struggle against the Steel Trust and its system of labor, named by it "The Welfare Plan;" therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention congratulate the seamen upon their magnificent struggle; that we urge upon them to persevere, and we renew the pledge of the Toronto Convention of the A. F. of L. to furnish to them both moral and financial assistance.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 43—By the Seamen's Delegation:

Whereas, Congress again has under consideration the proposition to give a general subsidy to the merchant marines of the United States, and

Whereas, Great and systematic agitation, in fact, a regular educational campaign—has been and is carried on to mislead the people of this country on the subject of ships and seamen, by distributing "facts that are not so" with reference to these matters, especially maintaining that the cost of operation is greater under the American than any other flag; and

Whereas, This in the main is untrue and in the few instances where it is true can be amended or changed by this country ceasing to hunt up, arrest and deliver back to their owners the sea slaves of other nations; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we enter our emphatic protest against any such legislation; and further

Resolved, That full information on the real facts will disclose that any such subsidy under existing railroad domination of transportation by water as well as by land will be a subsidy to the railroads and of no value whatever to the shipping of the country.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was adopted.

Resolution No. 45—By Delegate John P. Frey of the International Molders' Union of North America:

Whereas, The thorough education of all workmen and the public in the principles and policies of trade unionism is one of the prominent purposes of the American Federation of Labor; and

Whereas, There are many publications indorsed by the American Federation of Labor, its affiliated bodies and sub-divisions, which, nationally and locally, are constantly engaged in an effort to spread the gospel of trade unionism and keep their readers informed on all questions of interest affecting the welfare of labor; be it

Resolved, That a bureau of information be created and placed in charge of a secretary to be selected by the President and Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of the bureau of information shall furnish a weekly letter, without cost, to all publications officially indorsed by the American Federation of Labor, its affiliated bodies and sub-divisions, which shall contain a summary of all important matters affecting labor occurring in the industrial, legislative and judicial fields, and all such other matters which will tend to further the development and progress of the trade union movement.

Secretary Frey: Your committee was informed that the general features of this resolution were before the Executive Council for action, by reference from a previous convention. We recommend similar reference of this resolution, so that at the earliest opportunity this issuance of news letters may be instituted by the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 46—By the Seamen's Delegation:

Whereas, The seamen themselves describe their status, their needs and the injustice under which they live in the following petition:

To those who govern nations, to those who make laws, to humanitarians, democrats, Christians and friends of human freedom everywhere: Do we, the seamen, the yet remaining bondmen, humbly yet earnestly submit this our petition that we may be made free men and that the blighting disgrace of bondage be removed from our labor, which once was considered honorable, which is yet needed in the world of commerce, and which has been held to be of great importance to nations with sea coasts to defend.

Existing maritime law, except in the domestic trade of these United States, makes of us the property of the vessel on which we sail. We can not work as seamen without signing a contract which brings us under this law. The contract is fixed by law or authorized by governments. We have nothing to do with its terms. We either sign it and sail or we sign it not and remain landmen.

When signing this contract we surrender our working power to the will of another man at all times while the contract runs. We may not leave the vessel, though she is in perfect safety. We may not without the master's permission go to a mother's sick bed or funeral or attend to any other duties of a son, a brother a Christian or a citizen.

If our owner thinks he has reason to fear that we desire to escape, he may, without judicial investigation, cause us to be imprisoned for safekeeping until he shall think it proper to take us out. If we have escaped, he may publish our personal appearance along with a reward for our apprehension and return. He may through contracts between nations cause the peace officers and police to aid him in recovering his property. The captain may change, the owner may change—we are sold with the vessel, and so long as the flag does not change there is nothing except serious illness or our master's pleasure that will release us from the vessel.

The master, acting for the vessel, may release himself and the vessel by paying a few dollars, with no alternative.

He that owns another man's labor-power owns his body, since the two can not be separated.

We stand in the same relation to the vessel as the serf did to the estate, as the slave to his master. When serfdom was abolished in Western Europe we were forgotten by the liberators and our status remained. When the slaves of the United States and Brazil were emancipated our status continued. When serfdom was abolished in Russia no change came to us.

We now raise our manacled hands in humble supplication to restore to us our rights as brother men, to our labor that honor which belonged to it until your power, expressing itself through your law, set upon it the brand of bondage in the interest of cheap transportation by water.

We respectfully submit that this serfdom of the men in our calling is of comparatively modern origin. Earlier maritime law bound while in strange countries and climes the seaman to his shipmates and his ship, and the ship to him, on the principle of common hazard. In his own country he was free—the freest of men. We further humbly submit that, as the consciousness of the seamen's status penetrates through the population, it will be impossible to get free men to send their sons into bondage or to induce free men's sons to accept it, and we, in all candor, remind you that you, when you travel by water, expect us—the serfs—to exhibit in danger the highest qualities of free men, by giving our lives for your safety.

At sea the law of common hazard remains; there must be discipline and self-sacrifice, but in any harbor where the vessel and you are safe, we beseech you, give to us that freedom which you claim for yourself and which you bestow on others, to the end that we may be relieved of that bitterness of soul that is the heavy burden of him who knows and feels that his body is not his own; and

Whereas, We are satisfied that the seaman's status is correctly described in this petition, and that the great loss of property and of life at sea is caused by the condition here described, that the seaman's helplessness has its origin therein and that a fundamental change is absolutely necessary; and

Whereas, House Bill 11193, introduced by Mr. Spight of Mississippi, and Senate Bill 6155, introduced by Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin, are designed to and when enacted will abolish the existing status of the seaman, make of him a free man, give him possibilities of self-help and improve the safety of travel at sea; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we urge upon Congress the immediate consideration and enactment of this bill into law.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 52—By Delegate C. D. Wheeler of the Chicago Federation of Labor:

Protesting against executive orders that deprive federal civil service employees of their constitutional right as citizens to petition Congress for a redress of grievances and the right of free speech:

Whereas, Executive orders now in effect and part of the rules and regulations of the federal civil service forbids and prohibits all federal civil service employees (250,000 in number) from in any way attempting to influence legislation, directly or indirectly, in behalf of better working conditions, and which orders prohibit even the right to petition Congress in behalf of such legislation and restricts freedom of speech in that a civil service employee is forbidden to respond to requests for information desired by a member of either house of Congress or a committee of Congress, unless first granted permission to do so by departmental heads; and

Whereas, Such orders are not consistent with the Constitution of the United States, which reads "Congress shall make no laws abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people to peaceably assemble, and to petition Congress for a redress of grievances"; and

Whereas, The officials of the Post Office Department have removed employees because of alleged violation of such orders, and in one particular instance did summarily dismiss from the service Brother Oscar F. Nelson, president of the Chicago Post Office Clerks' Union, on the charge that he attempted to influence legislation in the interest of better working conditions indirectly through the Legislative Committee of this American Federation of Labor, and because of his action in introducing a resolution in the Chicago Federation of Labor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the American Federation of Labor, in annual convention assembled, at St. Louis, Mo., denounce as un-American and despotic executive orders and rules that prohibit or restrict federal employees from exercising to the fullest extent the inalienable right of free speech and free press and the right to petition Congress; and be it further

Resolved, That a committee of three, consisting of the president and secretary of this A. F. of L. and the chairman of its Legislative Committee be and are hereby instructed to present a copy of this resolution to President Taft in person and request the revocation of executive orders protested against and the reinstatement of Oscar F. Nelson to the service.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed briefly by Delegates Wheeler and O'Donnell.

The motion to concur in the recommendation of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 55—By Delegate James Murray, of the Texas State Federation of Labor:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that the National Congress should cease to make further appropriations and expenditure of public money for the improvement of harbors, rivers or other internal waterways to aid navigation or to promote traffic thereon, unless that the state wherein such expenditure and improvements are made and which are to be benefited by the same, shall have previously made ample provision for the public use of all wharves and landings bordering on such navigable channels within their boundaries or under their legal jurisdiction free from discrimination; and be it further

Resolved, That where such discriminations are practiced against one shipper or carrier, as against another in the use of such wharves or landings or railroad terminals connected therewith and intended for the purpose of completing the service of the same, or by one locality or community as against another for the purpose of lessening or destroying the industries or commerce of the one in order that the other may benefit thereby, that such discriminations should be penalized by imprisonment and fine, and the revocation of charters or franchises to operate such utilities.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 63—By Delegate John Mitchell, United Mine Workers of America:

Whereas, The American Federation of Labor has in every possible way aided the movement for the study and prevention of tuberculosis throughout the United States and Canada, and

Whereas, The American National Red Cross has been in the past and is now making an especial effort, through the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals, to secure funds to carry on the war against tuberculosis, and by means of the funds raised in this manner has been able to do much effective work in this direction, therefore be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor give its endorsement to the movement of the American National Red Cross and encourage its members to further in every reasonable way the sale of these seals in their respective communities.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 70—By Delegate A. Abrahams of Central Federated Union of Greater New York and Vicinity:

Whereas, The great purpose of organized labor is to accomplish by its organized strength the improvement of the material conditions of the workers, and

Whereas, It is becoming more and more evident, day by day, that we must meet the employing class with a more compact system of attack, and

Whereas, The American labor movement is considerably hindered by the powerlessness of the American Federation of Labor to demand of international unions that they materially assist a sister organization in its struggles, and

Whereas, In central bodies, requests are constantly made for the assistance of the other organization, which the central body is powerless to give, we have reached a stage in the development of the American labor movement where power should be vested in the supreme body and in central bodies, to command organizations to call out their men in sympathy, if necessary, to assist their brother union men in the struggles for a betterment of their condition; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention appoint a committee of three, who shall bring in recommendations to so amend the Constitution of the American Federation of Labor as to bring about this state of organization.

The committee recommended nonconurrence in the resolution.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

Vice-President O'Connell in the chair.

Delegate Abrahams spoke at length in favor of the resolution; Vice-president Duncan opposed the resolution, and spoke in favor of the report of the committee. The question was discussed in a general way by Delegate Gallagher, Delegate Lavin, Delegate Daly, Delegate Furuseth, Delegate Gearing, President Gompers, Delegate Walker (J. H.), Delegate Leary, Delegate Hawley, Delegate Hayes (Max).

On motion the debate was closed. The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 71—By Delegate Owen Miller, of the American Federation of Musicians (by request):

Whereas, Oleomargarine is conceded by chemists and food experts to be a wholesome food product; and

Whereas, Existing laws discriminate against this wholesome food product through a tax of 10 cents a pound when artificially colored, the only purpose of which is to make it appear palatable; and

Whereas, Artificial coloring matter is permitted in butter and other dairy products, which clearly establishes a discrimination; and

Whereas, The discriminatory tax placed upon oleomargarine must be paid in the main by the poorer classes of people, and has a tendency to increase the price of butter; and

Whereas, The placing of a tax of 10 cents per pound on colored oleomargarine has rather increased than decreased violations of the law; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, that Congress be petitioned to so amend the oleomargarine law that a tax not exceeding 2 cents per pound be placed upon the product, whether colored or uncolored, and that a license fee not exceeding six dollars ($6.00) per year be placed upon the retailer for the privilege of vending oleomargarine, and that the product be packed in one-half, one, two and three-pound packages only, and that the product be sold only in original tax-paid packages.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed by Delegate Furuseth, Delegate Miller (O.), Delegate McCullough (T. W.), Delegate Wilson (W. B.), Vice-President Duncan and Delegate Cope.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 78—By Delegate H. A. Vurpla, of the International Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees:

Whereas, During 1909, according to the Interstate Accident Bulletins Nos. 31, 32, 33 and 34, there were 135 passengers killed and 7,097 injured, and in the same period 431 employees were killed and 4,251 injured; that 2,042 derailments were reported as caused by defective track; 353 caused by obstructed track, and 1,180 from miscellaneous causes, or a total for the year 1909 of 566 killed and 11,348 injured, and out of a total of 5,499 derailments 3,575 were of a preventable nature; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention place itself on record as favoring the examination each year as to the competency of every roadmaster and foreman or any other who may be placed in charge of the work in the track, bridge and building and interlocking departments of American railways, whose duty it is to look after the roadbed and safeguard the lives and limbs of passengers using the same, and that it shall be illegal for any railway company to employ any man in either of the above positions in charge of any repairs unless the employee shall have passed an examination as to his competency before a skilled examiner or board appointed by the government and received a certificate which must be renewed yearly; further

Resolved, In the interest of public safety, that the government shall appoint skilled inspectors who shall be practical and certified men, and whose duty it shall be to inspect at least twice each year, at intervals of at least three months apart, by handcar or on foot, all tracks over which passenger trains are operated, who shall make a report in writing to the Railway Commissioners as to the physical condition of each separate road inspected by him, giving day and date of such inspection and of all defects in detail with exact mileage and location of same. Upon receipt of said report of defect, the Railway Commissioners shall be empowered to order the railway company to make proper repairs within a specified time; failing to do this, the commissioners shall be empowered to order the suspension of all passenger traffic over the defective track; and further

Resolved, That this convention is of the opinion that on all main and branch lines of railway operating passenger trains there shall be regularly employed during the whole year not less than one man to each mile of single track and a foreman to each section, which shall not exceed six miles in length of single track; and further

Resolved, On all lines where passenger trains are operated during the night, a competent track-walker shall be employed, whose duty it shall be to patrol each section of not more than six miles of single track on every night on which passenger trains are run. And if from any preventable cause the railway company shall neglect to make provision for carrying out any or all of these provisions and an accident occur in which life is lost or limb endangered or injured, then the company at fault shall be adjudged guilty of criminal negligence; and further

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor shall take such steps as they may deem proper to secure the passage of legislation by Congress making these resolutions effective at the earliest possible moment.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution,

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 80 be amended to read as follows:

Resolution No. 80—By Delegates O. A. Treitmo, Andrew J. Gallagher, Cyrus F. Grow, L. W. Butler, P. W. Buckley, Thomas Bone, representing California organizations,

Whereas, The National Manufacturers' Association, through its subsidiary, the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles, has started a war of extermination against the unions on the Pacific Coast; and

Whereas, The consequent result of this deep-laid and sinister plan of the employers forced the brewery workers on strike on the 18th day of May, and the entire Metal Trade Department of Los Angeles on strike on the 1st day of June, in addition to the members of the leather workers on horse goods, who were already on strike; and

Whereas, The aforesaid union men of Los Angeles so forced on strike in order to maintain a living wage and humane conditions, have, supported by the trades unionists of California, put forth one of the most gallant and heroic struggles on record within the annals of the trades union movement; and

Whereas, At the early beginning of the aforesaid strike the city council of Los Angeles did pass a so-called anti-picketing ordinance prohibiting members of trades unions from walking along the streets, or talking to people whom they might meet; and

Whereas, Hundreds of union men have been arrested and persecuted under the provisions of this ordinance for alleged crimes, misdemeanors and felonies, all in violation of the rights of free speech and free assembly guaranteed by the provisions of the constitutions of the United States and of the State of California; and

Whereas, The Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles, through its attorney, who has been appointed special prosecutor, is endeavoring, through the refined torture of the grand jury room and the third degree, to fasten the crimes of arson, conspiracy and murder upon aggressive, loyal and staunch organizers and trade unionists—honored members of organized labor who are delegates to this convention—who have been shackled to private detectives, dragged into the morgue to gaze upon mutilated and charred bodies, taken back to the dark prison cell and threatened with violent demonstrations of lynching; and

Whereas, The Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles, through its privately owned grand jury and PERSECUTING-attorney, is desperately trying to tie a rope of hemp around the necks of union men, organizers and labor leaders who have carried the brunt of the battle for the cause of organized labor in California; and

Whereas, Through the same infernal agency of the Los Angeles merchants and manufacturers, innocent widows and wives have been ruthlessly taken from their homes, charged with murder, or detained in gloomy corridors of the grand jury rooms for weeks, while their little children were suffering for want of care; all of which has been carried on in conformity with the deep-laid plots of the National Manufacturers' Association to annihilate the trades unions on the Pacific Coast, therefore be it

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor that its Executive Council be, and is hereby authorized and directed to issue an appeal immediately to all affiliated international and national unions, central labor bodies, state federations of labor and local unions, for contributions of funds necessary to support the union men on strike in Southern California and along the Pacific Coast, and for the further purpose of thoroughly unionizing the city of Los Angeles and maintaining trades union organizations along the Pacific Coast.

Resolved, That the Executive officers of the international and national unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor be requested by its president to issue similar appeals to their various affiliated local unions.

The committee recommended the adoption of the resolution as amended.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed at length by Delegate Kugler, Delegate Grow, Delegate Tveitmoen and Delegate Furuseth.

The motion to adopt the report of the committee was carried.

President Gompers introduced to the convention Miss Fannie Sellins, a representative of the Garment Workers of St. Louis. Miss Sellins spoke at length in regard to the strike being conducted by the Garment Workers against the firm of Marx & Haas and appealed for assistance for the strikers. During the course of her address Miss Sellins thanked the delegates representing international and national organizations for the help extended to the St. Louis Garment Workers for several months past.

Secretary Morrison: Delegate Bohm states that in the vote on the proposition of the Electrical Workers on November 18th he is recorded as having been absent. He states that he voted "No" when his name was called. I recollect distinctly calling the absentees and calling his name twice. If this goes into record as his statement, I presume it will be satisfactory.

President Gompers: The chair desires to say that unanimous consent was given on Thursday for the introduction of a resolution today by the Photo-Engravers' Union. The resolution has been introduced, and because of the subject in a general way being under consideration by the Committee on President's Report, the resolution is referred to that committee.

Following is the resolution:

Resolution No. 147—By Delegates Matthew Woll, International Photo-Engravers' Union, and Andrew J. Gallagher, San Francisco Labor Council:

Whereas, Local Photo-Engravers' Union of the City of Boston, Mass., with approval of the International Photo-Engravers' Union of N. A., in the ordinary and lawful conduct of its organization, solicited into membership craftsmen in this city, unaffiliated with our movement, and in so doing met with the combined and organized opposition of employers to such an extent that membership in the union was cause for their dismissal, notwithstanding their published statement of neutrality, and

Whereas, This combined and organized opposition of employers compelled members of the local photo-engravers' union to assert and protect their rights of association, affiliation and organization by endeavoring to collectively bargain and contract for a better working condition, viz.: reduction of working hours to forty-eight hours per week, payment of time and one-half for overtime, double time for Sundays and holidays, establishment of a minimum wage scale, regulation of apprentices, and protection of their right of association and organization, resulting in a strike, after several months' attempt to negotiate for these improved working conditions, and having made every possible effort to avoid friction, and

Whereas, The employers even before the strike became effective sought to prevent the strike by means of an injunction writ, and have since the calling of the strike secured a number of permanent injunctions not only declaring our strike illegal, because of our attempt to protect our right of association and of organization and permitting us to defend this right by force of perfect organization, but denying us the right to continue the strike for any other purpose or purposes, such as the establishment of a minimum wage scale, payment of time and one-half for overtime, double time for Sundays and holidays, and regulation of apprentices, and to this end have enjoined us from paying strike benefits directly or indirectly to our members, and

Whereas, The local union was, by order of court, not only compelled to call off our strike and stop paying strike benefits for any purpose, but the employers at the present time, by perverting our motives and misinterpreting our actions, are now attempting to prevent us from paying to members unemployed in this city, by reason of the employers refusing to treat with our members as a union for any purpose, "out of work benefits," by citing the local officers, the international president and international organizer into court for contempt of court for paying benefits to members unemployed, and asking for jail sentence for paying these unemployed benefits, and

Whereas, the success of employers in these proceedings has not only served to prevent the payment of strike benefits, and may serve the purpose of preventing us from paying out of work benefits, thereby laying the foundation for the complete destruction of the power, influence and efficiency of trades unions to enforce a better working condition for its members and prevent future attacks upon working conditions already established, and in addition can only serve the purpose of a precedent, and prove an incentive and encouragement for a still greater destructive exercise of the judiciary power in labor controversies,

Therefore, be it resolved, that the American Federation of Labor take cognizance of the conditions confronting the Photo-Engravers' Union in the city of Boston, and that of organized labor generally, protest this exercise of the equitable power of the judiciary, instruct its president and executive council to thoroughly inquire into the situation confronting the Photo-Engravers, and all organized labor, related in the fore part of this resolution, and take such action in this legal and industrial controversy as will secure to the Photo-Engravers and to all organized labor, the rights which rightfully and justly belong to the workers, and obtain for them the conditions of labor deemed fair, just and equitable.

Referred to Committee on Presidents' Report.

President Gompers announced that Rev. J. T. Tuohy, General Secretary of the American Co-operative Unions, would give a lecture on the subject of Working Men's Co-operation, "What They Have Done and Are Doing," in the convention hall on Monday evening. The statement was made that all were cordially invited to attend.

At 6 o'clock the convention was adjourned under the rules, to reconvene at 12 o'clock noon, Tuesday, November 22nd.

Seventh Day's Proceedings—Tuesday, November 22, 1910.

The convention was called to order at 12 o'clock, noon, Tuesday, November 22, President Gompers in the chair.

Absentees—Glover, Feeney, Hannahan, Rickert, Bloch, Moffitt, Marshall, McSorley, Coakley, Handley, McCullough (E. S.), Tracy (W. ### Report of Committee on Resolutions.

Delegate Frey, secretary of the committee, reported as follows:

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 87 be amended to read as follows:

Resolution No. 87—By Delegates Wm. E. Eckenrod, Tennessee Federation of Labor; Chas. P. Fahey, of Trades and Labor Council, Nashville, Tenn.; S. H. Laws, of Trades and Labor Council, Jackson, Tenn.; C. C. Zelgler, of Trades and Labor Council, Oklahoma City, Okla.; G. L. Hunter, Okmulgee Central Labor Council; Mont R. Powell, of Oklahoma State Federation of Labor; Jerome Jones, of Georgia Federation of Labor; Louis P. Marquardt, of Atlanta Federation of Trades:

Whereas, There is an organization in the South known as the Southern Conference on Child and Women Labor, composed of representatives of organized labor, women's clubs, boards of trade, business men's clubs, firms or corporations employing women or children, labor commissioners, factory inspectors and five delegates appointed by the governor of each Southern State; three of them must be employers of women or children. For the purpose of recommending uniform legislation in the Southern States relating to the employment of women and children; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that we endorse the organization known as the Southern Conference on Child and Women Labor, and its announced objects, and recommend to all labor organizations of the South that they send representatives to the next annual conference which will be held in Atlanta, Georgia, in April, 1911, and that the endorsement of this resolution by this convention be communicated to all State and central bodies in the Southern States not later than February, 1911, by the secretary of the American Federation of Labor.

The committee recommended the adoption of the resolution as amended.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The motion was discussed at length by Delegate Fahey, who reviewed the work of the organizations and clubs of the South in connection with the Conference on Child and Women Labor.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 83—By Delegates Wm. D. Huber, Frank Duffy, Wm. B. Macfarlane, W. J. Kelly, Carl Young, Thos. Flynn, A. M. Swartz, of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America:

Whereas, Since the 19th day of August, 1910, twenty carpenters of R. H. Macy & Company's department store are on strike for the prevailing rate of wages and hours, and

Whereas, The above firm absolutely refuses to meet representatives of the organization of carpenters engaged in a strike against starvation wages and long hours, and

Whereas, The firm of R. H. Macy & Company is at present employing strike breakers under such conditions as are a menace to the union conditions prevailing in other department stores of the city of New York, be it

Resolved, That the undersigned organization pledge itself to give the organization of carpenters all the necessary support in their fight for a good cause, and furthermore, be it

Resolved, To notify all organizations affiliated with this central body, of the trouble pending between R. H. Macy & Company and the Carpenters' Organization.

(Signed) United Board of Business Agents of the New York Building

Trades Council, American Federation of Labor; Lawrence Storey, Chairman, Roswell D. Tompkins, Secretary-Treasurer.

Central Federated Union of New York, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor; A. Block, Chairman, Ernst Bohm, Secretary.

Women's Trade Union League; Mary E. Dreier, Chairman, Helen Marot, Secretary.

Endorsed by the Hudson County Central Labor Union.

Endorsed by the State Council of New York State, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council, with instructions to investigate and render such assistance as possible in effecting an adjustment of the controversy.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed by Delegate Healy (T.) and Macfarlane.

The motion to adopt the report of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 85—By Delegate O. A. Tveitmo, of United Laborers' Union No. 12992, of San Francisco, Cal.:

Whereas, A movement has been launched to hold a world's fair in San Francisco in the year 1915; and

Whereas, The precedent has been established by the world's fairs in Paris and in Chicago, at which time and places representatives from the various industrial organizations throughout the world met and conferred; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor in Thirtieth Annual Convention assembled, that its Executive Council be, and is hereby authorized, directed and instructed to issue a call to the proper authorities and bodies for an International Labor Congress, to convene and be held in the city of San Francisco, California, at a convenient date, in the year 1915, in order that the workers of the world, who make a world's fair and exposition possible, may be afforded an opportunity of closer affiliation and a better understanding, with the consequent result that the various sections of the globe where these producers dwell, may be made a better place in which to labor and live.

On Resolution No. 85 the committee reported as follows: Inasmuch as several conventions of the American Federation of Labor will be held before 1915, and as the intervening conventions of this body cannot be bound by the action of this convention, your committee recommends that action upon the subject matter of holding an International Labor Congress at a 1915 world's fair in connection with the opening of the Panama Canal be deferred until the year preceding the holding of the Panama Exposition.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be adopted.

The question was discussed briefly by Delegate Gallagher.

Delegate Daly: I move as a substitute for the report of the committee an endorsement of the city of San Francisco as the place for holding the World's Fair.

Delegate Gallagher: This is not the World's Fair resolution, but one in regard to the World's Congress of Labor.

Delegate Kemper opposed deferring action on the resolution until the convention to be held in 1914. Vice-President Duncan, Chairman of the Committee, spoke in favor of the recommendation of the committee.

Treasurer Lennon: I move that the report be amended to read that the matter shall be deferred for the consideration of the first convention after the date and place have been fixed.

The committee accepted the amendment offered by Treasurer Lennon, and the recommendation of the committee as amended was adopted.

President Gompers: The Chairman of the Committee on Adjustment states to the chair that one of the resolutions before that committee provides for the doing of an act by this convention, and asks that that action may be determined upon in order that the work can proceed.

Chairman O'Connell, of the Committee on Adjustment, reported as follows:

Resolution No. 133—By Delegate T. Healy, C. L. Shamp, Jos. W. Morton:

Whereas, The Twenty-ninth Annual Convention of the A. F. of L., held in Toronto, Canada, November, 1909, several conferences were held between the delegates representing the I. U. of S. E. and the I. D. of S. F. for the purpose of arriving at a satisfactory working agreement; and,

Whereas, These conferences have failed to bring about the desired result, and no settlement has been arrived at since that time; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the president of the A. F. of L. request the delegates of the I. U. of S. E. to confer with delegates from the I. D. of S. F. in conference, and that he appoint a member of the Executive Council to act as referee for the purpose of bringing about a mutual agreement by and between the above-named organizations, and make a report of his findings to this convention.

The committee recommended that the resolution be adopted.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

President Gompers: I will appoint Vice-President Alpine to act for the convention, as provided by the resolution.

Secretary Frey, for the Committee on Resolutions, proceeded with the report of that committee, as follows:

Resolution No. 89—By Delegates Buterworth of the Brick, Tile and Terra Cotta Workers' Alliance; T. J. Dolan, of the International Brotherhood of Steam Shovel and Dredgemen, and Jos. W. Morton, of the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen:

Whereas, The Brick, Tile and Terra Cotta Workers' Alliance, the International Brotherhood of Steam Shovel and Dredgemen, and the Stationary Firemen's Union have, since the 13th day of April, been engaged in a struggle with the Purlington Paving Brick Company, of Galesburg, Ill., in defense of their right to organize; and

Whereas, The Purlington Paving Brick Company has placed itself on record that its chief objection to the above organizations is their affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, and positively refuses to meet representatives of the American Federation of Labor to discuss an honorable settlement; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled pledges the moral support of its affiliated unions to the unions affected and requests our officers to do all in their power to assist in securing to the striking men the right to be members of unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 99 be amended by striking out the word "privilege" in the fourth line of the first section and in the third line of the third section, and inserting in lieu thereof in both instances the word "right," the amended resolution as follows:

Resolution No. 99—By Delegates Chas. H. Lee, of Rhode Island State Federation and John Golden, of United Textile Workers; Roderick McGeary, of Providence Central Labor Union:

Whereas, in the State of Rhode Island a property qualification law prevails which deprives thousands of working men, citizens of the United States, the right of equal franchise at the ballot box, and

Whereas, We believe that such an unjust and un-American law is retained for the sole purpose of reducing the vote of the men of labor to the lowest possible minimum, realizing full well that many workmen, on account of their economic conditions, can never hope to attain the necessary qualification as prescribed by this unjust law, thereby conferring the voting power to special interests, and

Whereas, The labor movement has at all times stood for equality and equal rights at the ballot box, be it therefore

Resolved, That we, the delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, pledge ourselves to assist to the fullest extent our brothers in Rhode Island in securing the same rights at the ballot boxes as are enjoyed in all the other sovereign States by workmen, and be it further

Resolved, That the officers of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to co-operate with the officers of the Rhode Island State Federation of Labor in an effort to secure the repeal of this law, which, under the present conditions, only serves to rob the laboring man of his right to vote.

The Committee recommended the adoption of the resolution as amended.

The recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 106—By Delegate George F. Golden, of the Illinois State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, This white plague is a disease known and become general to the present jurisdiction; and

Whereas, The medical fraternity of the United States sees the necessity of devising ways and means to stay the ravages of this dreadful disease and have applied to the assistance of organized labor; and

Whereas, The Pittsburg American Federation of Labor Convention recommended that all the affiliated trades take up this sympathetic work along the line set forth by the printers of Colorado Springs; and

Whereas, It has been proven that relief can be accomplished at home as well as elsewhere; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this the Twenty-Eighth Annual Convention of the State Federation of Labor take up the work of establishing a State sanitarium in some healthful locality in the State of Illinois, and that the president of the I. S. F. of L. will use his office and appoint a committee to introduce a bill in the State legislature for an appropriation to nominate a sanitarium in the State for the care and treatment of those afflicted with dreaded diseases, and that the trades unions of the State of Illinois give their moral and financial support to this sympathetic work.

Secretary Frey: While this resolution does not ask for any action by this convention, and does not request the endorsement of the American Federation of Labor, it being a resolution introduced and acted upon by the Illinois State Federation of Labor in relation to the creation of a State sanitarium, your committee is of the opinion that the endorsement of this convention is desired by the Illinois State Federation of Labor. Your committee therefore recommends that the endorsement of this convention be given to the Illinois State Federation of Labor for its action, as indicated by Resolution No. 106.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was adopted.

Resolution No. 108—By Delegate Geo. F. Golden, of the Illinois State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, Lodge No. 195 of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Ship Builders of America, of Kewanee, Ill., is on strike at the plant of the Kewanee Boiler Company, manufacturers of heating and power boilers, at Kewanee, Ill.; and

Whereas, The terms submitted and the position taken by the said Lodge No. 195 has been sanctioned by the Executive Council of the said International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Ship Builders; and

Whereas, The said Kewanee Boiler Company refuses to come to any reasonable agreement with the said Lodge No. 195 and are unfair to said members of Lodge No. 195, and are seeking to destroy and disrupt the said Lodge No. 195 by making the plant of the Kewanee Boiler Company an open shop; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Illinois State Federation of Labor, and especially the members of the Steamfitters, Boilermakers and Teamsters' Union, to use every lawful means to compel the said

Kewanee Boiler Company to recognize the said Lodge No. 195 and to come to fair terms with the members of said lodge; and we urge upon all men who favor fair play to encourage and uphold the members of Lodge No. 195 in their long and manly struggle for reasonable working conditions.

Secretary Frey: Your committee recommends that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council for investigation and such assistance as can be given to Lodge No. 195 of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Ship Builders of America.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 109 be amended by inserting in the sixth line of the last resolution, after the word "law" "as uniform as possible." Later the resolution was amended by the convention by striking out the last line, which read "and in each province of Canada."

The amended resolution is as follows:

Resolution No. 109—By Delegate J. C. Skemp, of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers:

Whereas, We believe that the cost of compensation for accidents, loss of health, and loss of life occurring during employment or resulting from an occupation, should be charged to the industry, that such compensation should be fixed by law, and its prompt payment, without cost to the injured or to the dependents of the killed, be assured by the State; and

Whereas, This principle is recognized and embodied in the law enacted at the last session of the legislature of the State of New York, providing fixed compensation for the injury or death of men engaged in certain specified hazardous occupations and permitting employers and employees in other occupations to voluntarily place themselves under the law without surrendering their right to enter suit under the Employers' Liability Law, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention recommends that all affiliated national and international unions advise and urge their local unions situated in the State of New York to include in all future agreements with their employers a provision requiring them to place themselves under the Workmen's Compensation Law, and, be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, through the Executive Council, and all its affiliated organizations, endeavor to secure the extension and broadening of the Workmen's Compensation Act in the State of New York, so that it will apply compulsorily to all wage-earners regardless of occupation or sex, and so that compensation may be provided not only for injury through accident, and for death, but for loss of health and earning capacity due to disease resulting from the occupation; and, be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated organizations use their utmost endeavors to secure the enactment of a comprehensive and liberal workmen's compensation law, as uniform as possible, in every State of the Union.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution as amended.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed by Vice-President Mitchell, Delegate Curtis, Delegate Hawley, Delegate Robinson (D. W.), Delegate Proebstle, Delegate Walker (J. H.), President Gompers, Delegate Furuseth, Delegate Olander, Delegate Gehring and Delegate Draper.

On motion of Delegate Draper the words "and in each province of Canada" were stricken from the last line of the resolution.

The question was further discussed by Delegate Skemp.

On motion the debate was closed.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee, as amended, was adopted.

Delegate Wilson (W. B.): Will a motion on the subject be in order at this time?

President Gompers: The chair will recognize Delegate Wilson.

Delegate Wilson: If it is in order, I desire to offer the following: That the Executive Council be instructed to investigate the entire subject of liability and compensation, and report to the next convention of the American Federation of Labor such recommendations, relative to legislation, as in their judgment will enable us to proceed along as uniform lines as possible to secure just laws on these questions.

The motion offered by Delegate Wilson was seconded and carried.

Vice-President Duncan: I do not arise as chairman of the committee, but as a delegate. As this is the first session after a very important event has taken place, I will read the following, which, I think, will meet the approval of the delegates of the convention:

Whereas, The civilized world has just learned, with regret, of the passing, at a ripe old age, after a well-spent life, of Leo Tolstol, the great Russian exile, educator and world-wide economist, litterateur and humanitarian.

Resolved, That in commemoration of this great international loss, and as an expression of appreciation of Count Tolstol's life work, this convention place on record an expression of admiration of the work and example of the great philosopher and reformer, and of grief at his passing on, by the delegates attending this, the Thirtieth Convention of the American Federation of Labor, arising on call of our president, and remaining standing for one minute in silent meditation.

The resolution offered by Delegate Duncan was adopted by unanimous vote, and all the delegates arose, and remained standing silent for one minute, upon the call of President Gompers.

Secretary Frey, for the Committee on Resolutions, continued the report of that committee, as follows:

Resolution No. 114—By Delegate John Mitchell, United Mine Workers of America:

Whereas, Recent investigations in Europe and America indicate that the suffering and economic loss occasioned by occupational poisons and diseases can be greatly minimized and in some cases absolutely eliminated through labor legislation requiring strict regard for the health of the workers, and

Whereas, The American Association for Labor Legislation has attacked the problem in a scientific way, and with a presentation of facts and figures is demanding national and State action; and, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor urges such investigation of conditions, such labor legislation, such thorough factory and mine inspection, such provision for the health of the workers, such enforcement of labor laws as shall place America on a level with the most progressive of nations; and it endorses and commends the American Association for Labor Legislation for the work it is doing in this direction.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 116—By Delegate Matthew Woll of International Photo-Engravers' Union; Andrew J. Gallagher, San Francisco Labor Council:

Whereas, President Gompers, in his report to convention, has ably expressed the advisability and necessity for legislation to protect the children of our country against exploitation, and to advance their physical, moral and educational welfare, and that of society, and

Whereas, The president's report and that of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor contain no reference to legislation now pending before congress bearing upon this humane and important subject matter, other than the enactment into law of a bill intended for the better enforcement of the Child's Labor Law of the district of Columbia, and

Whereas, (Quoting the language of President Gompers used in his report to convention): "The period has now arrived when the average member of a legislature is proud if he can make a good record on Child Labor Legislation." Be it, therefore,

Resolved, By this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that the American Federation of Labor take cognizance of and give approval to the intent and purpose of a bill now pending before congress, "To establish in the Department of the Interior a bureau to be known as the Children's Bureau," of which the following is an exact copy:

Sixty-first Congress, second session, Calendar No. 411, section 423, report No. 417, in the Senate of the United States, March 22, 1909—Mr. Flint introduced the following bill, which was read twice and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, March 18, 1910, reported by Mr. Flint, with amendments: A bill to establish in the Department of the Interior, a bureau to be known as the Children's Bureau. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled; that there shall be established in the Department of Commerce and Labor a bureau to be known as the Children's Bureau. Section 2. That the said bureau shall be under the direction of a chief, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall receive an annual compensation of four thousand dollars. The said bureau shall investigate and report upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life, and shall especially investigate the questions of infant mortality, the birth rate, physical degeneracy, orphanage, juvenile delinquency and juvenile courts, desertion, dangerous occupation, accidents and diseases of children, employment, legislation affecting children in the several States and territories, and such other facts as have a bearing upon the health, efficiency, character and training of children. The chief of said bureau may from time to time publish the results of these investigations. Section 3. That there shall be in said bureau, until otherwise provided for by law, an assistant chief to be appointed by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, who shall receive an annual compensation of two thousand four hundred dollars; one private secretary to the chief of the bureau, who shall receive an annual compensation of one thousand five hundred dollars; one statistical expert, at two thousand dollars; two clerks of class four; two clerks of class three; one clerk of class two; one clerk of class one; one clerk at one thousand dollars; one copyist at nine hundred dollars; one special agent at one thousand four hundred dollars; and one special agent at one thousand two hundred dollars. Section 4. That the Secretary of Commerce and Labor is hereby directed to furnish sufficient quarters for the work of this bureau at an annual rental not to exceed two thousand dollars. Section 5. That this act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to establish in the Department of Commerce and Labor, a bureau to be known as the Children's Bureau," and be it further

Resolved, That the President and Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor are hereby authorized and instructed to exert their best efforts and use every possible influence for the adoption and enactment into law of this or legislation of similar character and purport.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 123—By Delegate T. V. O'Connor, of International Longshoremen's Association:

Whereas, The School Teachers' Association of Buffalo, N. Y., whose members are striving to better their conditions and to secure a fair compensation for their labor, which is of an arduous nature, both physically and mentally; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the representatives of the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, declare in favor of a higher standard of wages and salaries to be paid to the school teachers of our country, and we now go on record as indorsing the efforts of the school teachers of Buffalo to improve their conditions of employment, and pledge our support to the members of that organization.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The committee recommended that some minor changes be made in Resolution No. 125, the amended resolution to read as follows:

Resolution No. 125—By Delegates T. V. O'Connor, M. W. Kelleher, J. H. Sanderson, T. J. Dolan, of the International Longshoremen's Association:

Whereas, The United Steel Corporation and Subsidiary Corporations are alleged to maintain agents in Europe to export labor to this country; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council investigate this matter and ascertain if it is true that criminals of continental countries are brought to this country through the efforts of these corporation labor agents; further, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council report the result of its investigation to the entire labor world, and publish same at large.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution as amended.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 127—By Delegate T. J. Dolan, of International Longshoremen's Association:

Whereas, The construction of deep water-ways will provide a great deal of public work for workingmen; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor is in favor of the active work on the deep waterway from the lakes to the gulf being started at once by the government.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

President Gompers: The chair would suggest to the convention that the prosecution of the deep water-ways, simply for the purpose of procuring work is not the only reason that work should be furthered. It should be furthered for the purpose of commerce and the public good. I do not think the proposition is quite defensible from that point alone.

The motion to concur in the recommendation of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 132—By Delegate Emmett L. Adams, of Central Labor Union, Washington, D. C.:

Whereas, The people of the District of Columbia have been deprived of the right of local self-government, and a form of government under which an immense majority have neither voice nor influence has been forced upon them by Congress without their consent; and,

Whereas, The present form of government in the capital of the republic—the political heart of the nation—is contrary to the fundamental principles of American liberty to establish which our revolutionary forefathers pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor; and,

Whereas, The ballot is the workers' most effective weapon, deprived of which they are powerless to redress many of their grievances or to prevent the few men despoiling the many; and,

Whereas, The Central Labor Union of Washington, D. C., have a number of times petitioned the Congress of the United States for the restoration of a republican form of government in the national capital, and have presented a plan for such a form of government; and,

Whereas, The people in no other city in this country are deprived of the right and opportunity to express their views and register their will through the ballot box; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the American Federation of Labor that Congress re-establish in the District of Columbia a government of the people and by the people under which it would be more responsive to the needs of the masses; and be it further

Resolved, That the Executive Council is hereby directed to lend such aid as they may deem wise and helpful to secure for the citizens of Washington such a change in the form of government.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed by Delegate Wilson (W. B.), Delegate Adams, Vice-President Duncan, Delegate Ramsay, President Gompers, Delegate Sullivan (Jere), Vice-President O'Connell and Delegate Keegan.

The motion to concur in the recommendation of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 134—By Delegate Mont. R. Powell, of Oklahoma State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, The voting power of the American Federation of Labor, delegated to the National and International unions through its constitution is not in keeping with the democratic government of the American Federation of Labor, thereby making it possible for three or four crafts to control the destinies of the American labor movement to the possible detriment of other crafts or State Federations and city central bodies, and the time having arrived in the progress of the labor movement for the American Federation of Labor to readjust the system of representation, and believing the voting strength of the State Federation and city central bodies combined should equal that of the National and International unions; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, in regular session assembled, that a committee of five members be appointed by the president to take up the matter of readjustment of representation and report at the next annual convention; said committee to be composed of at least one member from a State Federation and one member from a city central body; and, be it further

Resolved, That the expenses accruing from the deliberations of said committee at the next American Federation of Labor Convention be paid by the American Federation of Labor.

The committee recommended nonconcurrency in the resolution.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The motion was carried by a vote of 111 in the affirmative to 22 in the negative.

Report of Committee on Local and Federated Bodies.

Delegate Wheeler, secretary of the committee, reported as follows:

Your Committee on Local and Federated Bodies beg leave to submit for your consideration the following report upon the various matters that have been referred to it:

Resolution No. 12—By Delegate James Buckley, of the Wyoming State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, At the Second Annual Convention of the Wyoming State Federation of Labor the following resolution was unanimously adopted: That the convention place itself on record as favoring the interchange of transfer cards between the various labor unions, and that the American Federation of Labor at its next convention try and have this matter submitted to a referendum vote of all affiliated unions. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention take the necessary steps to submit this proposition to a referendum vote of the affiliated unions.

The committee recommended nonconcurrency in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 29—By Delegate John S. Whalen, of New York State Federation of Labor.

Whereas, This organization has been organized for a number of years and is continually looking after the interest of organized labor in this state and for their benefit, and

Whereas, There are a large number of locals in the state that are not affiliated with this State Federation; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Federation petition the American Federation of Labor to have its general, district and deputy organizers to do all in their power to have those locals affiliate with this State Federation; and be it further

Resolved, That the delegate to the American Federation of Labor Convention present an amendment to the American Federation of Labor Constitution to compel all city and local central bodies, local unions and federal unions to become affiliated at once with their respective State Federations.

Secretary Wheeler: The committee concurs in the first part of the resolution relating to district and deputy organizers, and nonconcurrency in the second part of the resolution relating to compelling organizations to become affiliated with State Federations. As many of the resolutions submitted to your committee bear upon the subject of compelling local unions to become affiliated with city central bodies and state federations in a manner that appears to your committee to be impractical, your committee has formulated recommendations relating to affiliation with the object of covering the subject that has been approached in many different ways by these resolutions.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

Delegate Robinson requested that the two resolutions be taken up separately.

President Gompers: The sense of the resolution will admit of dividing it.

The secretary of the committee read the first resolution, and stated that the committee recommended concurrence. On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The secretary of the committee read the second resolution, and stated that the committee recommended nonconcurrency. On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The resolution as adopted, as amended, is as follows:

Resolution No. 29—By Delegate John S. Whalen, delegate of New York State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, This organization has been organized for a number of years and is continually looking after the interest of organized labor in this state and for their benefit; and

Whereas, There are a large number of locals in the state that are not affiliated with this State Federation; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Federation petition the American Federation of Labor to have its general, district and deputy organizers to do all in their power to have those locals affiliate with this State Federation.

Resolution No. 42—By Delegate Harry T. Brady, of Jefferson County Trades and Labor Assembly, Steubenville, Ohio:

Whereas, The Jefferson County Trades and Labor Assembly of Steubenville, Ohio, recognizes the fact that organized labor should grow much stronger and become an educator to all; and

Whereas, We believe a great benefit could be derived in both the central bodies and all local unions affiliated if Section 2, Article X, of Resolution No. 35, passed at the Twenty-eighth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at Denver, Colorado, was placed in force; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, that Section 2, Article X, of the constitution, be placed in force and to continue so; and be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor notify all national and international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, that Section 2, Article X, will be enforced within thirty days after adjournment of this convention.

Secretary Wheeler: Inasmuch as your committee has covered the subject matter of this resolution in its recommendation, and owing to the fact that erroneous references are made in the resolution, it recommends that the terms of the resolution be nonconcurrent in.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed by Delegate Gallagher and Vice-President Perham.

During the course of his remarks Vice-President Perham, chairman of the committee, said: The committee, having heard various delegates on the subject of compelling local unions to become affiliated with the city central bodies and the state federations, took cognizance of the fact that most of the delegates who appeared before the committee were in favor of such compulsion that they concluded to make recommendations of their own after reading all of these resolutions. That question will probably come up when the recommendations of the committee on the subject are read.

The motion to concur in the recommendation of the committee was carried.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 49 be amended by striking out the last section that read, "That the label of the A. F. of L. be placed upon the product of the mills that have contracts signed with the International Union in place of the label now in use," the amended resolution to read as follows:

Resolution No. 49—By Delegate C. F. Russi, Jr., of San Antonio Trades Council:

Whereas, The affairs of the International Union of Flour and Cereal Mill Employees are in such bad condition that they need to be investigated, the international union having decreased in membership in the last six years from 21 votes to 3 votes in the convention of the A. F. of L., as the report of the secretary of the A. F. of L. will show; and

Whereas, The financial condition of the international union is so bad that notice has been sent to our local union that in case of trouble it can not pay strike or lockout benefits. (There is no international president, as the last one was expelled for non-payment of dues. There has not been a financial statement issued from headquarters for more than a year. Our local union has not received a communication nor answers to its letters from headquarters except receipts for money sent in payment of per capita tax); and

Whereas, The condition of the International Union of Flour and Cereal Mill Employees is so bad as to discourage the few remaining locals and cause them to disband, which could be avoided if attended to at once; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. be instructed to investigate the affairs of the International Union of Flour and Cereal Mill Employees; and be it further

Resolved, That if conditions are found to be in bad shape, have the secretary of the A. F. of L. revoke the charter of the international, and have the charters of the remaining few local unions transferred back to the A. F. of L. and issue new charters as Federal Labor Unions.

The committee recommended concurrence in the amended resolution.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed by Delegate Howley.

In reply to a question, Vice-President Perham, chairman of the committee, said: This resolution provides that the entire matter in relation to this international union be investigated by the Executive Council. The committee concurs in that part of the report. That part of the report which refers to the label of the American Federation of Labor being placed upon the products of the mills has been left open and not concurred in by this committee on account of the clash that now exists as to the proper label to be placed on the products of those mills. That question also should be investigated by the Executive Council, and investigated on its merits.

The question was further discussed by Delegate Russi, who explained at length the conditions under which the men in some of the locals still remaining in the International were working. He spoke in favor of concurring in the report of the committee. He also spoke in favor of taking the present label off the product of the flour and cereal mills and using the label of the American Federation of Labor.

Delegate Kemper discussed the question at some length, stating that his organization, the Brewery Workers, was very much interested, as the breweries used various products of the flour and cereal mills and they wished to have this product made under union conditions.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 110 be amended by striking out the word "applaud" in line three of the first resolution and inserting the word "approve," the amended resolution to read as follows:

Resolution No. 110—By Delegate J. E. Hartvigsen, of Michigan Federation of Labor:

The following resolution was presented at the twenty-first annual convention of the Michigan Federation of Labor, held at Muskegon, September 22 to 24, 1910:

Whereas, The Michigan Federation of Labor annually sends a delegate to the American Federation of Labor, therefore be it

Resolved, That the delegate elected at this convention to represent the Michigan Federation of Labor at the American Federation of Labor, to be held at St. Louis, Mo., be instructed to request the American Federation of Labor to send or appoint an organizer for a specified time to thoroughly organize the State of Michigan.

This resolution was unanimously adopted by the Michigan State Federation after having been referred to Resolutions Committee and reported favorably by said committee to convention.

Whereas, The State of Michigan holds the residence of C. W. Post, at Battle Creek, from which place emanate the most vicious tirades against organized labor, printed in publications of various sorts as paid matter, and being inimical to the union movement at large; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled approve the action of the Michigan State Federation of Labor in the decision to hold the 1911 State convention in Battle Creek, thus invading the enemy's home territory; and, be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor Executive Board assist in every manner possible, by sending or appointing organizers and in other ways, the coming year, to thoroughly organize the State of Michigan, from which the pernicious non-union propaganda of C. W. Post is disseminated.

Secretary Wheeler: Your committee recommends that the first part of the resolution, relating to organizers for the State of Michigan, be referred to the incoming Executive Council.

Your committee, after amending the second part of the resolution by substituting the word "approve" for "applaud," concur in that part of the resolution.

Your committee recommends that the last clause in the resolution be referred to the incoming Executive Council.

On motion the recommendations of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 121—By Delegate M. A. Murphy, of Boston Central Labor Union:

Whereas, The unorganized women workers form the most helpless class in the competition that fixes hours, wages and conditions of work; and,

Whereas, The Woman's Trade Union League has given signal service in promoting trade union organization of woman workers, and has proven of strong and wise assistance in the time of strife; be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, recommend that in cities where there is a branch of the Woman's Trade Union League, that the central body of said cities give the League their co-operation and support to the end that the women workers of the country may be organized.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 129—By Delegate Albert Abrahams, of Central Federated Union of Greater New York and vicinity:

Whereas, In almost every locality where there is a central body, a number of unions chartered directly by the American Federation of Labor, or by national or international unions, such unions do not affiliate with the central body in such locality; be it

Resolved, That Article XI, Section 2, of the American Federation of Labor, which instructs all chartered unions, national and international unions to have the local unions affiliate with such central body, be immediately enforced, and that the Executive Council be, and is hereby directed to issue a notice to these bodies to that effect.

Resolved, That any of these bodies refusing to comply within sixty days after the adjournment of this convention with this instruction, shall stand suspended until they do comply.

The committee recommended nonconcurrence in the resolution.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

Delegate Abrahams spoke at some length, in opposition to the recommendation of the committee, and moved as an amendment that it be recommitted to the committee to bring in a report covering the question dealt with by the resolution.

Chairman Perham: I remarked once before that the committee had made some recommendations in regard to this matter of compulsory affiliation of local unions with city central bodies and state federations. We gave this matter very deep consideration. We were fully in sympathy with the aspirations of the city central bodies and the state federations. We understand what they want to do, and we would like to help them do that thing; but we have in mind that a compulsory arrangement in a voluntary association of voluntary associations is a very dangerous trend of affairs. A domineering policy in this direction would mean destruction in the end. Moral suasion means progress from the bottom. Along these lines we have been working; along these lines we have formed machinery, we have formed the city central bodies, the state federations and the departments. We have them all ready for the individual action of union men, and if individual action is brought into play in these organizations we know the city central bodies and the state federations will be built up from the bottom and will endure forever.

The motion to concur in the recommendation of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 142—By Delegate John H. Riley, of Danbury, Conn., Central Labor Union:

Whereas, In the State of Connecticut, less than 50 per cent of the local unions of that State are affiliated with the State Branch of the American Federation of Labor of Connecticut; and

Whereas, The same conditions exist in many of the other States compelling the few to carry on the work of many; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the same law of the American Federation of Labor compelling local unions to affiliate with central labor unions in these respective cities apply to local unions compelling them to affiliate with the State branches of the American Federation of Labor.

The committee recommended nonconcurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was adopted.

Chairman Wheeler: The committee desires to offer the following recommendation: In view of the many resolutions submitted to your Committee indicating that it is the desire of many city central bodies and state federations to compel local unions to affiliate with them, your Committee, while being in full sympathy with the aspirations of the city central bodies and state federations, yet, recognizing the impracticability of the American Federation of Labor attempting to compel affiliation, with the attendant penalties of revocation of charter, offers the following in the manner of a practical suggestion.

We recommend that the national and international organizations be requested to make it mandatory on their local unions to affiliate with state federations and city central bodies, in order that the general labor movement may be better fortified to adopt more effective means of defense in time of trouble. In the opinion of your Committee, if all the local unions, instead of a few of them, would affiliate with the city central bodies and state federations, it would make the cost of such affiliation very much less because the dues could be reduced.

The following section of the recommendation of the committee was read by Secretary Wheeler, but later eliminated by the committee: "Your Chairman is of the opinion that the city central bodies and state federations, under the present laws of the American Federation of Labor, can accomplish the end desired by withholding support and assistance from all local unions that fail or refuse to affiliate with city central bodies or state federations. Experience has demonstrated clearly that many unions stay out of the city central bodies and state federations until they get into trouble of some sort, and then they are very urgent in their demands for assistance from the bodies with which they have hitherto failed to affiliate."

The report was signed by

H. B. PERHAM, Chairman,
C. E. WHEELER, Secretary,
CHARLES LAVIN,
W. D. MAHON,
FRANK T. HAWLEY,
FRANK GEHRING,
M. W. KELLEHER,
M. E. LICHT,
E. F. WARD,
JOHN T. BUTLER,
SAM DE NEDREY,
GEORGE F. GOLDEN,
JOSEPH ARMISTEAD,
HARRY DEVEAUX,
E. T. DOLAN,

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be adopted.

Delegate Deltch: I want to understand if that means we are to insert something in our International constitution compelling our locals to belong to the city central bodies and state federations?

Chairman Perham: The idea of the committee was to pass back to the international their autonomy. If they desire to make it mandatory upon their locals they are at liberty to do so.

The question was discussed by Delegate Fahey, Delegate Gallagher, Secretary Morrison and Treasurer Lennson.

Chairman Perham: I will make the suggestion, if it meets with the approval of the other members of the committee, it can be brought about immediately. I suggest eliminating the following portion of the recommendation of the committee: "Your committee is of the opinion that the city central bodies and State Federations, under the present laws of the American Federation of Labor, can accomplish the end desired by withholding support and assistance from all local unions that fail or refuse to affiliate with city central bodies or State Federations. Experience has demonstrated clearly that many unions stay out of the city central bodies and State Federations until they get into trouble of some sort, and then they are very urgent in their demands for assistance from the bodies with which they have hitherto failed to affiliate."

No objection being offered, the section of the recommendation read by Chairman Perham was eliminated.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee, when amended by the elimination of the section referred to by Chairman Perham, was carried by unanimous vote.

On motion the report of the committee, as a whole, as amended, was adopted.

Report of Special Committee on Relation of Organizations in Canada and the United States.

Delegate Tobin (John), secretary of the committee, read the report.

Following is the report as amended by striking out the word "economic," in the first paragraph:

Your Special Committee on the Relations of Organizations in Canada and the United States, beg leave to report as follows:

1. That the Trades and Labor Congress of the Dominion of Canada have the sole right to speak and act for organized labor in all political and legislative matters in the Dominion and all of its provinces.

2. That the autonomy of International Unions in trade matters be maintained as heretofore.

3. That the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress shall have the sole right to issue charters (certificates of affiliation) to provincial or local central bodies in Canada.

4. That Canadian provincial or central bodies holding charters from the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress may at their discretion also hold charters from the American Federation of Labor.

Your committee desires to express its cordial indorsement of the expressions from the annual report of President Gompers under the sub-head Canada, and we warmly congratulate our Canadian Brethren on the unremitting activity they have shown in pushing forward the cause of organized labor and the success that has accompanied their efforts to date.

T. W. McCULLOUGH, Chairman;
W. D. MAHON,
J. F. DUNACHIE,
BEN TEAGARDEN,
FRANK PAQUIN,
FRANK M. RYAN,
SAMUEL KELLY,
NORVAL WHITE,
ROBERT GLOCKLING,
ALEX. KELSO,
E. L. SMYTH,
JOSEPH EVANS,
CHARLES H. JOYNER,
JOHN F. TOBIN, Secretary.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be adopted.

On motion of Delegate Furuseth the report was taken up seriatim.

Secretary Tobin, read the first section of the report, "That the trades and Labor Congress of the Dominion of Canada have the sole right to speak and act for organized labor in all economic, political and legislative matters in the Dominion and in all of the Provinces."

A motion was made and seconded that the section be adopted:

Delegate Furuseth: I move that it be amended by striking out the word "economic." (Seconded.)

The question was discussed by Delegate Furuseth and Delegate McCullough, Chairman of the Committee.

The committee accepted the amendment offered by Delegate Furuseth, and the section as amended was adopted.

The second section, "That the autonomy of international unions in trade matters be maintained as heretofore," was adopted without changes or amendments.

The third section, "That the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress shall have the sole right to issue charters (certificates of affiliation) to provincial or local central bodies in Canada," was adopted without changes or amendments.

The fourth section, "That Canadian provincial or central bodies holding charters from the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress may at their discretion also hold charters from the American Federation of Labor," was read, and a motion made and seconded that it be adopted.

The question was discussed by Delegate Furuseth, Delegate McCullough, Chairman of the Committee; President Gompers, Delegate Draper, Delegate Skemp, Delegate Sanderson, Delegate Kennedy, Delegate Carey and Delegate Stevenson.

The motion to adopt the fourth section of the report of the committee was carried.

The final section of the report was adopted without changes or amendments.

The report of the committee as a whole was adopted.

At 6:30 p. m. the convention was adjourned, to reconvene at 12 o'clock noon, Wednesday, November 23d.

Eighth Day's Proceedings—Wednesday, November 23, 1910.

The convention was called to order at 12 o'clock noon, Wednesday, November 23, 1910, President Gompers in the chair.

Absentees—Glover, Richardson, Humphrey, Tracy (T. F.), Hinder, Morton, Bechtold, Rickert, Moffitt, Coakley, Evans (D. J.), Foster, Tracy (W. J.), Malley, Malin, McHugh, Evans (Jo.), Grimshaw, Teagarden, Drake, Mikel, Skaggs, Cullen, Lee, Joyner, Cathon, Maddox, Marquardt, Jennings, Baum, Hudson (Fred), Courtenay, Flynn (J. J.), Klefer, Andrick, Britt, Wentz, Kleyhauer, Nystrom, Willson (G. F.), Smith (J. U. P.), Smith (O. P.), Bell, Keough, Leonard, McDonald, Anderson (A. C.), Rizzie, James, Stafford, Skelley, Gaede, Siebert, Eckert, White (G. T.), Swenson, Carter, Bartholomew, Hubbard, Leibowitz, Greenbaum, Miller (A.), Lippert, Harris, Nihil.

Vice-President O'Connell asked the privilege of the floor, and stated that, according to the custom of the convention, the delegates of the American Federation of Labor desired to present to the fraternal delegates from Great Britain and Canada and to their wives, some small tokens of the appreciation they felt of their presence in the convention. He presented to Fraternal Delegates Brace and Turner, of the British Trades Union Congress, and to Fraternal Delegate Pettipiece, of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, handsome watches suitably engraved. To Mrs. Turner and Mrs. Brace, on behalf of the delegates, he presented silver purses, and to Mrs. Pettipiece a pin set with diamonds.

Fraternal Delegates Brace and Turner in short addresses expressed their appreciation of the gifts and their pleasure in being able to attend the convention. They stated that they had received nothing but kindness from trades unionists everywhere since landing in America, and that they had learned much about the movement which was of interest to themselves and to the people they represented. Fraternal Delegate Pettipiece, in a brief address, expressed his appreciation of the gift and of the kindness shown him during the convention.

President Gompers stated that he had asked the wives of the fraternal delegates if they desired to address the convention. He stated further that they had asked him to convey their thanks and appreciation to the convention for the gifts presented them. President Gompers also expressed the pleasure felt by the delegates in having the fraternal delegates and their wives meet with them in convention, and in concluding wished them Godspeed and a safe return to their homes.

President Gompers introduced to the convention Mrs. D. W. Knefler, of St. Louis, Fraternal Delegate from the National Women's Trade Union League of America.

Mrs. Knefler: Mr. President and Delegates. I will not take up much of your time this morning, because I know you are very much interested in important affairs. If I did not feel I had a subject to present to you, not only of vital importance to the Women's Trade Union League, but also to the men representing the national and international trade unions, I would not do so. The Women's Trade Union League is organized for the purpose of organizing women into trades unions. Locally and nationally that is our purpose; but we do not feel that women are organized in trades unions when we have gathered a few girls together, had them apply for a charter and elect officers. We have then to educate the girls; we have to make them know and understand the things that are an old story to you, and that were an old story to your fathers and your fathers' fathers. We have to tell them the things their mothers have not taught them, or that their fathers have not taught them, and we have to have them unlearn many things their fathers and mothers have taught them.

Since the beginning of woman's entrance into industry she has been indirectly taught that any wage is good enough for a woman, that she is to go out and get what sum she can, because it is only a temporary thing—she is going to get married. Consequently when she goes into the factory she feels that any wage is good enough for a woman, and she and her sisters take any wage.

She is not one girl, she is not a hundred girls, she is not a thousand girls—in America she is three million girls, a mighty army going out to take any wage, because any wage is good enough for a girl. When she does this she reduces the wage in her individual factory for all the girls, and she does more than that, she reduces the wages of the men in the factory, she reduces the wages of the firemen, the engineers and the electricians; she brings them all down to meet the pitiful pittance she is willing to accept. The result is that when dividends are declared at the end of a year or two years, a new precedent in dividends is established; they are just a shade higher and the wages a shade lower, and they will never be adjusted until there is a struggle to bring them back again.

It is the duty of the Women's Trade Union League to present these things to the girls. That is the educational work we must do. The league in St. Louis in the something more than two years of its existence has organized about 1,200 girls into unions. Of that number 750 have secured the eight-hour day, and something more than 300 have secured a raise in wages. We have not only organized them into trades unions, but we have exerted an influence in politics. We had a bill passed in the legislature limiting the hours of work to fifty-four in one week. The bill was tampered with, it was of no account, and we had to go into court and have it declared unconstitutional. We expect to secure another and a better bill. The man who was instrumental in defeating our bill last year, the secretary of the Manufacturers' Association, was a candidate for member of the State Legislature. The Women's Trade Union League went out and defeated him. We were told we could not do it because he had the Manufacturers' Association, the Business Men's League and the Republican machine back of him. Our girls, our garment workers, our waitresses and others worked through the day in shops and factories, and at night went out carrying cards, and we beat that man. We have a political standing in Missouri just as well as a standing as organizers, because I think that although we could not get one line of our story in the papers, either while we were fighting this man or after he was defeated, there are no politicians in the State of Missouri who do not know what the Women's Trade Union League did.

Our work makes an appeal to the public that organizations of men do not make. You cannot talk of tired, weary, spiritless young girls and overworked, anxious women to any kind of people with hearts without their responding. And herein lies our danger. If we are to live we must have money, considerable money. If our work makes an appeal indiscriminately to people who only have a human idea of their suffering sisters we are taking a chance on subsidizing ourselves in a way that will prove detrimental, not only to the women's movement, but to the whole labor movement.

I do not want to be misunderstood; I do not want the delegates to feel that we want to create too much class consciousness. We have had a few saintly women of very great wealth who have given to us in vast sums, but I think it is a very dangerous thing for the women trades unionists to have to accept the support of men and women of great wealth throughout the country. We are perfectly willing that every man and woman who understands the trades union movement, who knows what we are working for, who will come in and help us organize, who will stand by our girls after they are organized, who will go on the firing line and stand with us to the last, shall help us—we care not where they come from, they are welcome.

But we do not want money—and I say this fearfully lest I may be misunderstood—we do not want money with the idea that we are a new sort of charitable organization, a highly developed philanthropy. If people do not understand us, if they are not willing to accept us as trades unionists, we do not want them and we do not want their money. I believe when we adopt war methods, we are justified in taking money from any source we can. I care not where the money comes from that helps the garment workers of Chicago today; but I do care where the money comes from that supports our League day in and day out. We cannot have part of the labor movement subsidized and the other part free. We are, after all, only a sex movement in so far as we are bringing the women up to the understanding that you have, so that they may keep pace with you, so that they may mark time with you.

So we cannot, if we are to remain a labor movement, be looked upon as philanthropists, we must be supported by labor. If there is any man or men in this convention today who believe that we who are here without our union cards are only philanthropists or highly developed social workers, I advise you before your convention adjourns this evening, to vote us out of your ranks—you don't want us here. We are trades unionists, we must be trades unionists; we must keep the league a labor movement, and we cannot do that unless we have the support, financial and moral, of the trades union men of the United States.

Vice-President Mitchell read the following report:

Report of Special Committee on Industrial Education.

We have reviewed the work of the Committee on Industrial Education appointed by authority of the Denver Convention, the report of the President and of the Executive Council to this convention, and beg leave to submit the following:

During the past year the work of the Committee on Industrial Education has been confined largely to the activities of a sub-committee. The chief things accomplished have been the introduction before Congress of the Vocational Education Bill and the securing of a Federal investigation.

Vocational Education Bill.

Through the efforts of the sub-committee, labor's bill for vocational education was presented to Congress, given an extensive hearing before the Senate Committee, and put on the calendar for early consideration at the next session of Congress. This bill, providing for educational co-operation with the States, comprehends provisions for State and federal control and supervision of public education, as recommended by the Toronto Convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The main provisions of this bill offer to each State its proportion of ten million dollars as a co-operative fund towards placing agriculture, the trades and industries, and home economics in the secondary or high schools of the entire country. The States are required to supply all lands and buildings and to pay for all general studies needed to make broad and well-rounded courses of study. The money from the federal treasury will be available only for teaching the vocational subjects. This will enable the cities to establish several hundred splendidly equipped schools throughout the agricultural regions of the United States. It will also provide funds for studies in trades and industries, home economics, and agriculture in the smaller towns.

Federal Investigation.

On December 20 of last year, a committee consisting of President Gompers, Vice-Presidents Mitchell and O'Connell, and Secretary Morrison, conferred with Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor, and Commissioner Neill of the Bureau of Labor. It was agreed that a comprehensive federal investigation should be undertaken within the year. The investigation was actually begun April 10, 1910, and is now understood to be nearing completion.

The scope of the investigation has aimed to cover all phases of trade and vocational training throughout the United States. Careful study is being made of all vocational schools (elementary and secondary), apprenticeship, continuation, co-operative, part time, and trade schools in this country. The inquiry covers:

1. Organization, including purpose of the school, trades or occupations taught, and number of pupils registered by trades; personnel of directory and advisory boards, and the determining of local industries and conditions.

2. Finances, report of the value or building and equipment, sources of funds for same, fees, bonds, free instruction, etc.

3. Teachers.—Personal data are being obtained from all teachers of trade subjects, regarding training for teaching, experience in teaching, and of actual practical experience in the trades they are purporting to teach.

4. Program, including a study of both academic and trade courses and the correlation of the same, with special effort to ascertain what is being done that will make for better and more intelligent citizenship.

5. Industrial Position.—Careful study of the relation of the school work to the apprenticeship, both on the part of organized labor and the employers, and of the extent to which pupils are prepared for higher positions.

6. Product.—In schools making a marketable product, the inquiry is being carried to a study of kind of product, market for and value of the same.

When completed this report will be the most comprehensive study of the whole subject of industrial education that has ever been made in the United States.

American Federation of Labor Report on Industrial Education.

Since the last convention the report of your Committee on Industrial Education appointed by authority of the Denver Convention, has been printed and has had a wide circulation. It has been very favorably received and highly commended.

Royal Commission.

A Royal Commission on Industrial Training and Technical Education has been appointed by the Canadian Government, resulting from a memorandum dated May, 1910, from the Minister of Labor, stating that industrial efficiency is all-important to the development of the Dominion and to the promotion of the home and foreign trade of Canada in competition with other nations, and can be best promoted by the adoption in Canada of the most advanced systems and methods of industrial training and technical education.

The Minister recommends that authority be granted for the appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire into the needs and present equipment of the Dominion as respects industrial training and technical education, and into the systems and methods of technical education obtaining in other countries; and accordingly a Commission of seven was appointed, duly authorized to proceed with the investigation.

The Commission purposes to extend the inquiry into the United States, Great Britain, and European countries. No report has yet been received from this Commission, but it is anticipated that when received their report will be a very valuable addition to the sum total of information on the subject of industrial education.

The fact that this step was taken by the Dominion Government since the Toronto Convention and the report made thereto by the American Federation of Labor Committee on Industrial Education is very gratifying.

State Commissions.

Within the year two States, Wisconsin and Maine, have appointed Commissions to report upon the subject of Industrial Education to their respective legislatures, and the Maryland Commission, which was appointed in 1908, has this year submitted a very commendable report.

The Wisconsin Commission, with the co-operation of the Legislative Reference Bureau, will submit a report to the next session of the State Legislature, with recommendations for legislative action. The Commission will submit plans, not only for a trade school but also for a broad industrial education, placing emphasis upon the teaching of hygiene and citizenship. The industrial education matter is to be one of the main issues before the Wisconsin Legislature this year.

Trade Union Investigations.

During the year 1910 the Chicago Federation of Labor appointed a committee on industrial education which made a thorough inquiry into the work done in Chicago, the attitude of the local labor organizations in regard thereto, and submitted a report within the past few days.

The Boston Central Labor Union appointed a committee to investigate industrial education in the city of Boston. The report of this committee—which was submitted recently—endorses the work now being undertaken in the schools of Boston.

Newark, Worcester, Lynn, Brocton, and several other larger cities are making local investigations of the subject of industrial education. In this work the co-operation of trade unionists is being sought, and much has been accomplished.

The Chicago Commercial Club, interested in the subject from a very different view point, last spring furnished funds to finance an investigation of foreign methods of industrial education and has sent Mr. E. G. Cooley, ex-Superintendent of Chicago Public Schools, abroad to spend two years studying the subject. He will study particularly the German trade schools and the question of the adaptability of German methods to the school system of Chicago.

Attitude of Manufacturers.

The attitude of the manufacturers toward the subject of industrial education is best shown in the 1910 report of the National Association of Manufacturers.

The National Association of Manufacturers first officially recognized the question in 1904, by the appointment, at the convention, of a committee, which reported to the 1905 convention.

The committee reported in favor of factory schools as a means of opposing organized labor. The recommendation stated, "When the great manufacturing establishments of this country shall maintain their own schools, strikes will be unknown in these establishments. When they shall educate their own workmen, these workmen will be loyal to the company, rather than to an outside organization."

The attitude in this respect has not changed in the succeeding conventions. The manufacturers have continued to favor factory or apprenticeship schools, whose policy they could dictate, and have appealed to philanthropists to establish schools for the training of recruits for the industries. They have looked with suspicion upon the efforts of organized labor in behalf of industrial education and have not shown any great desire to co-operate.

Their interest has been passive throughout. They professed themselves willing to support the Davis Bill if the words "trades and industries" were substituted for "mechanic arts." The Davis Bill was allowed to die and the suggested wording was incorporated in the Dolliver Bill, but no manufacturer appeared at the hearing to urge the passage of the bill.

The 1910 convention adopted the report of its committee, which advocated part-time or co-operative schools. They also declared in favor of trade schools which should make a marketable product and which should give a reasonable amount of mental culture, at the public expense.

Your committee calls attention to the reversal, in five years, of the position of the National Association of Manufacturers from appealing for philanthropic establishment of schools to demanding that schools be established for the training of the youth, at public expense.

Attitude of Organized Labor.

Organized labor has taken the same stand on the question of industrial education that it has always taken on the question of general education. It is a public function and should be provided for by public funds. No person should be denied the best possible preparation for his life's work because he is unable to pay a school tuition; neither should that person be obliged to be regarded as an object of charity and forced to get his training through the offices of philanthropically inclined persons. He is entitled to it and the State or nation should supply it equally to all. The machinist and the carpenter is entitled to training for his work as fully as the lawyer, the doctor, the teacher, or the business man.

Organized labor holds also that all education should be under federal control and subject to federal supervision and regulation; and therein we differ from the most recent stand taken by organized employers. While they endorse industrial education at public expense, they would have it under the supervision and control of the manufacturers interested. Such a policy must eventually defeat, in part at least, the real purpose of trade training.

Impetus to Movement.

It is very gratifying to note the great impetus to the movement for industrial education. While it is not a new movement by any means, it has been a very much neglected one until recently. At the time of the appointment of the American Federation of Labor Committee on Industrial Education, in 1908, there were but very few schools pretending to give to the ninety per cent of our boys and girls that preparation for their life's work for which the regular public school courses fail to provide. During the years 1909-1910, however, a large number of public schools have engrafted some form of trade or vocational training upon their educational system.

The awakening is not confined to public schools. Employers are alert to the need and a large number of corporations have established some form of apprentice instruction. Several of the great railroads were already operating apprentice schools, others have followed their lead until in some form or other all of the more important lines give some instruction to their apprentices.

People gradually are coming to the opinion that industrial education is, like any other education, a public function, to be paid for by public funds. We concur in that opinion, but just here we should like to sound a note of warning. As the support of trade education in general is passing from private philanthropy to public funds, manufacturing interests are coming to control the administration and dictate the policy of those schools; and that we can not afford. For example, we can not afford to allow the Metal Trades Association to control the policy of the schools which are supported wholly from public funds. If education as a public function is to be a success, it must be free from the control of any private interest.

Vocational Direction.

The committee believes that one of the most important subjects before us is the matter of vocational direction. This question is being worked out by a Vocation Bureau in Boston which is achieving most gratifying results. Attention should be called to the fact that similar bureaus are being established in many of the large cities of the country.

These bureaus are voluntary organizations of public spirited men and women, representing educators, labor men, social workers, business men, and manufacturers, formed for the purpose of co-operating with business men, manufacturers, parents, teachers, young people, and the community as a whole, in stimulating young people to consider what vocation they are best fitted for, in pointing out the way to prepare for such chosen vocation systematically, and in encouraging the purpose to follow the chosen life-work with intelligence and a progressive spirit. There is no fee or expense of any kind for the services of the bureaus.

"The Vocation Bureau does not attempt to decide for a person what he or she ought to do. Decisions must be self-made.

"The Bureau starts and guides the important business of personal and outside investigation. It helps with counsel, suggestion, sympathy, information, and practical directions as to sources of further light on particular problems.

"In the case of young people the Bureau puts together all the facts it can get showing what parents, teachers, and others who know the young applicant think about his or her possibilities. In close co-operation with the school teachers and others, the Bureau believes that young people growing up in the cities will stand a better chance in life with this stimulus and inspiration to select a life work. The mere earnest effort to select, the training to choose, is no small part of a real education.

"The Bureau does not favor or disfavor any particular vocations. It has no bias, academic, professional, industrial, or commercial.

"It does, however, intend to raise whenever need be, vocational storm-signals, warning against over-crowded pursuits, declining, from the applicant's situation, undesirable and possible dangerous occupations."

It intends to deal with facts about the vocations and educational foundations of the trades and professions. It is studying over one hundred vocations and is now preparing simple bulletins which teachers will use in order to inform themselves about the demands of the various occupations, and the conditions ~~and~~ success in them.

The present waste, unhappiness, and economic loss due to a system which relied upon stumbling upon a chance job must give way in time to forethought and enlightened choice. Resources will be organized in time to give such choice its opportunity. Both school and the world of work must join in time to furnish the workers the best possible investment of their individual capacities.

"Society willingly invests its young blood in the world of wage-earning, and in return it asks co-operation in protecting its most valuable assets. The demand upon the vocations for co-operation is not made in a spirit unappreciative of their character-building possibilities. Rather is this social challenge to vocational life a full recognition of the community's loss in the present abyss between life and a livelihood."

Recommendations.

Your committee recommends the continued advocacy of labor's bill for Vocational Education—known as the Dolliver Bill—which, as you will recall, provides for educational co-operation between the State and Federal governments and for State and Federal control and supervision of public industrial education.

It recommends, also, that the special committee appointed by authority of the Denver Convention be continued, and that that committee "be urged and authorized to prosecute their investigation, and to lend every assistance to the accomplishment of the extension and completion of comprehensive industrial education in every field of activity."

Report of Committee on Adjustment.

Delegate Golden, secretary of the committee, reported as follows:

To the Officers and Delegates of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor:

Your Committee on Adjustment begs leave to submit for your consideration the following report upon the various matters referred to it:

Secretary Golden read that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption, "Jewelry Workers' Jurisdiction," and the following resolution:

Resolution No. 7.—By International Jewelry Workers' Union of America:

Whereas, The annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at Toronto, Ontario, Canada, November 8 to 20, 1909, referred Resolution No. 20, presented by the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America, to President Samuel Gompers for investigation and a final settlement; and

Whereas, A conference was called at New York City on June 23, 1910, by Organizer Hugh Frayne, representing the American Federation of Labor, and all interested organizations were notified and attended conference; and

Whereas, Decision rendered through conference and indorsed by the American Federation of Labor Executive Board, granting jurisdiction to the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America over all metal parts of badges, buttons, medallions and novelties, not in conflict with Sheet Metal Workers' Union; and

Whereas, The Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers' Union refuse to withdraw their label from factories employing one to three of their members, while six to one hundred or more were eligible to membership in the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America, thereby hindering the organization of these factories; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers' Union be and is hereby ordered to immediately withdraw their label from factories manufacturing badges, buttons, medallions and novelties; and be it further

Resolved, That this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor assembled at St. Louis, Mo., 1910, do hereby indorse the decision of the General Executive Board of the American Federation of Labor granting jurisdiction to the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America over all metal parts of badges, buttons, medallions and novelties made in all metals other than tin and sheet iron.

Referred to Committee on Adjustment.

Your committee recommends the endorsement of the report of the Executive Council in their approval of the agreement arrived at in the conference in New York City on June 23, 1910, between representatives of the following unions: Jewelry Workers' International Union, the International Brotherhood of Tip Printers, International Typographical Union, United Textile Workers of America, Badge Makers' Local Union 12249, New York City, Badge Makers' Local Union 11555, Jersey City, and Organizer Hugh Frayne, representing the American Federation of Labor. The representatives of the Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance were invited to be present but failed to attend. Your committee nonconcur in the resolution submitted by the Jewelry Workers' International Union, requesting the Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers' International Union to withdraw their label from those shops where it is in force.

Secretary Golden: I move the adoption of the recommendation of the committee. (Seconded and carried.)

The committee reported on that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "Moving Picture Machine Operators," and the following resolution:

Resolution No. 13—By the Delegates of the Theatrical Stage Employees' International Alliance:

Whereas, The Seventeenth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at Nashville, Tenn., 1897, pronounced in no uncertain phrases that all work done back of the curtain is to be done under and by the sole jurisdiction of the then National Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees—this, however, not to include either engineer and fireman; and

Whereas, Through the growth of outside unions to the work of the theatrical stage employees these outside foreign trade unions seek to arrogate to themselves the jurisdiction granted to the above National Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees; therefore, be it

Resolved, By this the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, assembled in session in the city of St. Louis, Mo., that they do reconfirm the decision rendered by the Seventeenth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, to wit: "That all work done behind the curtain line or proscenium arch of all theaters and places of amusement shall be done by the members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees—this not to include engineers and firemen."

Your committee recommends that, inasmuch as both the Theatrical Stage Employees' and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers have filed briefs stating their claims as to jurisdiction, that the whole subject matter be referred to the Executive Council, with instructions that the President of the American Federation of Labor appoint a representative at the earliest possible date to bring about an adjustment of the matters in dispute between the two above-named organizations.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 14—By Delegate J. J. McAndrews of the Elevator Conductors and Starters' Union No. 11959:

Whereas, The Chicago Elevator Conductors and Starters' Union No. 11959 has been duly organized and chartered by the American Federation of Labor; and

Whereas, The jurisdiction of the Elevator Conductors and Starters' Union has not been defined and no mention of said organization is made in the A. F. of L.'s instructions to organizers; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the jurisdiction of the Chicago Elevator Conductors and Starters' Union No. 11959 be and is hereby defined as follows: "That the Chicago Elevator Conductors and Starters' Union No. 11959 shall have the right to operate all passenger and freight elevators installed in buildings, and to operate all elevators that carry passengers, furniture, freight and merchandise in buildings in the course of construction, when such buildings are tenanted," and be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor instruct its organizers to organize into unions all persons engaged in the operation of elevators as above described in all cities where such unions are not already organized.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution, with the addition of the following: "That this shall not include the hoisting of such building material to be used on the premises."

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Secretary Golden stated that Resolutions No. 22 and No. 81 referred to the same subject, and would be reported on together.

Resolution No. 22—By Delegate L. F. Maire, of the Carriage and Wagon Workers' International Union:

Whereas, It is universally conceded that the organizations of labor are all striving to the one end, viz.: Bettered conditions and uplift of the toilers, and

Whereas, It is further conceded that no organization can sustain a healthy growth with any member of its concrete body rent asunder, and

Whereas, It is still further conceded that what is tonic for some is poison for others; therefore, be it

Resolved, That inasmuch as the carriage and wagon workers have evolved into the twentieth century automobile workers, and are still evolving into aeroplane workers, that the word automobile be incorporated as per adoption at Buffalo Convention; also that the word aeroplane be also incorporated and that the carriage and wagon workers as now constituted, be henceforth known as Carriage, Wagon, Automobile and Aeroplane Workers' International Union of North America; and be it further

Resolved, That its jurisdiction shall extend only to such crafts as are rightfully theirs, viz.:

Carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane body makers and woodworkers; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane painters; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane trimmers; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane blacksmiths; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane wheel makers; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane spoke and hub makers; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane flat spring makers; carriage, wagon, automobile and aeroplane bent stiff makers, such as shafts and fellos and all component parts of carriages, wagons, automobiles and aeroplanes in the rough.

In submitting this resolution, the movers recognize the various complex questions governing such jurisdictional awards and respectfully submit that they in no wise wish to encroach on the domain of sister international unions. They also wish to present for your earnest consideration the fact that, as an organization, the carriage and wagon workers can not exist and do your honorable body justice under its present status, and we earnestly appeal to you to right our wrongs. We ask only simple justice. Can you give less?

Resolution No. 81—By Delegates W. J. Dougherty and C. N. Glover, of the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers:

Whereas, The International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, engaged in trade organization with the object of the thorough organizing of the men of this craft under one head, thereby making the uplift of the men of this trade a certainty instead of an uncertainty; and,

Whereas, The International Association of Carriage and Wagon Workers claims jurisdiction over the Blacksmiths and Helpers engaged in the carriage, wagon and automobile industry, to the detriment of the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers and the blacksmiths and helpers engaged in the industry, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled, that the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers is the only organization having jurisdiction over the blacksmiths and helpers engaged in the vehicle industry.

On resolutions 22 and 81 the committee reported as follows:

Owing to the fact that your committee is not fully acquainted with the changes that have taken place in the affairs of the International Carriage and Wagon Workers' Union, due in a great measure to a complete change in officers, etc., we recommend that the whole subject matter be referred to the Executive Council, with instructions to call a conference of all parties in interest within ninety days with a view of clearly defining the lines of jurisdiction.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

Secretary Golden: The introducer of Resolution No. 22 agreed to drop the word "Aeroplane."

The question was discussed by Delegate Mairre, Delegate Dougherty and Delegate Skemp.

Delegate Mairre stated that he withdrew his opposition to the adoption of the recommendation of the committee.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

Secretary Golden: The Committee on Adjustment reported on that portion of the report of the Executive Council referred to it under the caption of "Elevators Constructors' Machinists," and on Resolution No. 28.

We have a great mass of stuff here in regard to the matter. It contains the action of the last convention, the report of the Adjustment Committee, the agreement submitted, and also the action of the Executive Council in its endeavor to carry out the agreement during the year. I want to know if the delegates desire to have this read in full.

Secretary Morrison: It is stated in the report of the second day's proceedings.

Secretary Golden: I will read the resolution.

Resolution No. 28—By delegation of the International Association of Machinists:

Whereas, The controversy existing between the International Association of Machinists and the International Union of Elevator Constructors is yet unadjusted, and

Whereas, The Committee on Adjustment at the Toronto Convention of the A. F. of L. favorably recommended a plan of amalgamation, which report of the committee was approved by the convention, and

Whereas, The International Union of Elevator Constructors refused to present the plan of amalgamation to its members, thereby preventing the carrying out of the wishes of the Toronto Convention, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. is authorized and hereby instructed to carry into effect the plan of amalgamation as recommended by the Adjustment Committee of the Toronto Convention and approved by the Toronto Convention on or before April 1, 1911, and on the latter date the charter of affiliation held by the International Union of Elevator Constructors be canceled.

The report of the Adjustment Committee of the Toronto Convention was as follows:

Committee has carefully reviewed the report of the Executive Council of the A. F. of L., the proposition of the International Association of Machinists for amalgamation and the evidence submitted. The proposition of the International Association of Machinists containing the terms of amalgamation is as follows:

1. The I. U. of E. C. to be known in the I. A. of M. as Elevator Constructors' District No. 67. Said district to have jurisdiction over all men engaged in elevator construction work on buildings or wherever elevators may be erected.

2. The present international officers of the I. U. of E. C. shall be the district officers and conduct the affairs of the district in accordance with the laws of the I. A. of M. The salary of the officers to be the same as now paid.

3. The I. A. of M. will grant charters and supplies free of cost to all unions in good standing in the I. U. of E. C., and assign them numbers in accordance with the list of lodges of the I. A. of M.

4. All money in the treasury or hands of other officers or in any way held as the money of the I. U. of E. C. shall become the treasury and money of Elevator Constructors' District No. 67, and be held for the purpose of conducting the financial affairs of that district.

5. All members engaged in the construction of elevators in buildings, or elsewhere, where same is to be used, shall carry their membership in a lodge connected with Elevator Constructors' District No. 67. Members of the I. A. of M. who may be employed now or in the future in the erection or construction of elevators, holding membership in another lodge, shall transfer to the lodge having jurisdiction over this work in the locality where the member or members may be employed in Elevator Constructors' District No. 67.

6. The I. A. of M. agrees to pay 50 per cent of the legitimate salary and expenses of all business agents now paid by and under salary of the I. U. of E. C., in accordance with the constitution of the I. A. of M., said business agents who have their offices in the same office as the business agents of the I. A. of M. are located in order that the unnecessary expense of conducting two offices may be avoided.

7. Whereas, The constitution of the I. A. of M. requires that members, to be entitled to strike or victimized benefits of $6.00 per week to single men and $8.00 per week, married men, shall be in three months' good standing to be entitled to same; it is hereby agreed that upon the amalgamation of the two organizations all members of the I. U. of E. C. transferring to the I. A. of M.

shall be immediately placed in good standing and entitled to strike and victimized benefits as provided for in the constitution of the I. A. of M.

8. All per capita tax of the A. F. of L. Building Trades Department, and such other departments or organizations as the consolidated organization may become attached to, shall be paid out of the general fund of the I. A. of M.

9. The Elevator Constructors' District No. 67, of the I. A. of M., can hold conventions, adopt laws to govern the district, and carry on the affairs of said district practically on the same lines as now being done by the I. U. of E. C., with the exception that all rules, regulations and laws adopted by Elevator Constructors' District No. 67 shall be in conformity with the general constitution of the I. A. of M.

10. All members of the I. U. of E. C., affiliated with the I. A. of M. shall pay to their local union at least $1.00 per month dues, and each local lodge shall pay to the grand lodge the standard rate of per capita tax prescribed by our constitution, as follows: Journeymen initiation stamp, $1.50; apprentice initiation stamp, 75c; reinstatement stamp, $1.50; monthly due stamp, 55c; apprentice monthly due stamp, 25c; unemployed stamp, 20c. It being understood that the above per capita tax covers the subscription to the monthly journal, the same to be supplied to each lodge in proportion to the number of members in good standing. Each lodge affiliated to conduct its financial business in accordance with the constitution of the I. A. of M.

11. As the I. A. of M. levied a one day's assessment of $2.50 upon each member for three years, covering the years 1908, 1909 and 1910, it is agreed that members of the I. U. of E. C. coming into the I. A. of M. during the year 1909 shall be exempt from payment of the 1908 and 1909 assessments.

12. The I. A. of M. agrees to give all members of the I. U. of E. C. in good standing at the time of amalgamation a credit of six months' good standing membership, so that they will be entitled to the death benefits of the I. A. of M. as soon as the amalgamation takes place.

13. All lodges of the I. U. of E. C. becoming part of the I. A. of M. shall be entitled to send delegates to the convention of the I. A. of M. on the same basis as all other lodges of the I. A. of M. are entitled to.

14. It is hereby agreed that all members of the I. U. of E. C. transferring to and becoming a part of the I. A. of M. shall be entitled to all benefits, privileges and assistance of the association, and the general officers of the I. A. of M. as is given all members and lodges of the I. A. of M.

In the judgment of your Committee on Adjustment, the interests of the machinists and elevator constructors can best be protected by an amalgamation of the two international unions.

We, therefore, recommend that the terms proposed by the International Association of Machinists be accepted and adopted by the Elevator Constructors' International Union as a basis of settlement of the differences between those organizations; that the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. be instructed to use its good offices without delay to consummate the amalgamation of the Machinists and Elevator Constructors' International Union; and that the Executive Council for the American Federation of Labor become a party to the plan of amalgamation and settlement, as a guarantee to the absolute fulfillment of its terms.

We, your committee, further recommend that the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. be authorized and instructed to take such action in the premises as may be deemed necessary to accomplish the desired result.

Secretary Golden: Your committee recommends the adoption of the resolution. (Seconded.)

The question was discussed at length by Delegate Feeney, who spoke in opposition to the recommendation of the committee.

Delegate Fry and Vice-President O'Connell spoke at length in favor of the recommendation of the committee.

The question was further discussed by Delegate Mangan, who opposed the recommendation of the committee; by Delegate Keegan, who spoke in favor of the recommendation of the committee, and by Delegate Kelley (W. J.), who opposed the recommendation of the committee.

Vice-President Duncan discussed the matter at some length, and suggested ways in which the dispute between the organizations might be adjusted.

The question was further discussed by Delegate Feeney, Delegate Williams, who opposed the recommendation of the committee, and Vice-President Alpine, who spoke in favor of the recommendation of the committee.

Delegate Wilson (James): I do not rise to discuss the subject, but to offer a motion. I move that the entire matter be referred to the Executive Council; that they bring the contending parties together within ninety days, with a view to bringing about amalgamation. (Seconded.)

Delegate McDonald (S. J.): I move that the motion be laid upon the table. (Seconded.)

President Gompers stated that the motion to table, if carried, would lay the entire subject matter on the table.

The motion to lay upon the table was lost.

Delegate Feeney: A point of information. Will that necessitate a roll call? Will the motion offered by Delegate Wilson require a roll call? It is that the matter be placed in the hands of the Executive Council for them to amalgamate the two unions. In that event it will mean the revocation of the charter. Does it not require a roll call to bring that about?

Secretary Morrison read the motion offered by Delegate Wilson.

President Gompers: That does not involve a cancellation or revocation of a charter.

Delegate Wilson: I introduced this motion to get away from the question of revoking charters.

Delegate Feeney: I am not afraid to let the matter go before the Executive Council. I believe we will get all the justice they are capable of giving us, but I am opposed to the time limit placed by this amendment. We may not be able within the next ninety days to effect any kind of an arrangement, and I would suggest that it be changed to ninety days after May 1, 1911.

Delegate Willson: That motion means that they be brought together within ninety days. It may take six months to bring about a settlement of the proposition.

Delegate Feeney: If it is understood that we will not be compelled within ninety days to amalgamate, I have nothing further to say.

President Gompers: In the proposition offered by Delegate Wilson there is no statement, no implication that amalgamation is compulsory at all.

Delegate Feeney: I am perfectly satisfied with that statement, Mr. President.

The motion offered by Delegate Willson was carried.

Delegate Miller (Owen) stated that the proprietor of the hall wished to have it vacated at 5 o'clock, and suggested that the convention adjourn at that hour.

Delegate Keegan: I move that we adjourn at 5 o'clock, to reconvene Friday morning at 9 o'clock, and that we have an all day session Friday. (Seconded.)

Later the motion was divided, and the motion to adjourn at 5 o'clock was voted on and carried. The balance of the motion was withdrawn.

Following is the resolution introduced by Delegate Walker (J. H.) during the convention, and referred to the Committee on Resolutions:

Resolution No. 148—By Delegate Walker, of the United Mine Workers of America:

Whereas, The workers of the E-Z Opener Bag Co., White Oak Mills and Bag Factories, of Taylorville, Ill., are involved in a struggle for better wages and conditions, and

Whereas, They are pitted against a corporation with large financial resources, which is a bitter enemy of organized labor, and has done everything in its power to keep their employes from organizing to prevent the injustices imposed on them, and after submitting patiently for years to the mercy of the employer, and the fact being established that the company had no regard for their welfare, as their wages and conditions remained the same in the face of the increased cost of living for the last ten years, and

Whereas, The women and girls have been forced to work ten hours for 75 cents per day, and the men and boys ten to thirteen hours per day, for wages from 75 cents to $2.00 per day, they demanded a nine-hour workday, with a 25 cent per day advance on all classes of labor, and full recognition of their union, and

Whereas, The company has absolutely refused to grant any of the demands, but has tried to break the strike and ignore their organization by trying to treat with the individual members, using intimidating and disheartening tactics. Their efforts were unsuccessful, and had the reverse effect: It solidified and made them more determined than ever to stay out until their demands are granted in full, and

Whereas, Their strike has been endorsed by the Taylorville Central Trades and Labor Assembly, and at a mass meeting of all the different members of the trades unions, we therefore appeal to the officers and delegates of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor to endorse their strike and render them the necessary assistance to obtain their demands; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, now assembled, do hereby endorse the strike of the Paper Mill Workers of Taylorville, Ill., and stand ready to do everything in their power to help and assist them in their fight for justice.

Referred to Committee on Resolutions.

Delegate Daly: During the absence of the delegates of the Metal Polishers, who are appearing before a committee, a resolution was adopted on which we desired to be heard. The resolution affects our organization. We would like to have the action of the convention reconsidered.

Delegate Ramsey: I move that the action on Resolution No. 7, pertaining to the Jewelry Workers and Metal Polishers, be reconsidered. (Seconded and carried.)

Delegate Furuseth: I move you that Resolution No. 7, together with all matters thereto, be recommitted to the Committee on Adjustment. (Seconded and carried.)

Delegate McNulty: The Building Trades Committee is ready to report. We desire to be heard after the Adjustment Committee. I move that the report of the Building Trades Committee be heard immediately upon the conclusion of the report of the Adjustment Committee.

No objection being offered, it was stated that the report of the Building Trades Committee would be a special order at the close of the report of the Adjustment Committee.

Delegate Landers: A representative from the Central Body of Winnipeg, Canada, has arrived in this city. He had a matter he desired to lay before the Canadian delegates. We held a short session, discussed the matter, and I ask the unanimous consent of the convention to the introduction of a resolution in regard to the efforts of the Russian Government to extradite a refugee now in jail in Winnipeg.

Delegate Furuseth: I want to ask a question. Do they ask this convention to pass a resolution with a view of influencing the Government of Canada?

Delegate Landers: The motion asks that the delegates to this convention endorse the action of Canadian Trades Unionists who are fighting the extradition of this man.

W. H. Hoop, of Winnipeg, Canada, was given the privilege of the floor, and made an eloquent plea for the endorsement of the resolution to be presented by the Canadian delegates:

Secretary Landers read the following resolution:

Resolution No. 149—By Canadian Delegates:

Whereas, The Russian Government seeks to create a precedent, in its endeavor to extradite one Sarva Fedorenko, a Russian refuger, and member of the first Russian Duma, now lying in jail at Winnipeg, Canada, which can be utilized at any time to seize and secure the extradition of workers who have given the best years of their lives for the freedom of their fellows during the many years the people of Russia have been struggling for political liberty, many of whom have in the past found asylum in the American Continent, and

Whereas, Organized labor in Canada, a goodly portion of the pulpit and press have declared that it would be a blot on the principle of constitutional government, if the said Fedorenko is allowed to be sent back, and views with abhorrence the tyrannical power of the Czar in seeking to punish and exile to Siberia those who have worked for the cause of humanity, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor assembled at St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 23, 1910, endorse the sentiment and expression of our Canadian Brethren in resisting all efforts of the Russian Government to extradite this member of the first Russian Duma, and one who has worked so faithfully for the cause of freedom; and be it further Resolved, That W. H. Hoop, from Winnipeg Canada, a representative of organized labor who is assisting the Russian Freedom League be given ten minutes to address the convention on this matter.

Delegate Mahon moved the adoption of the resolution. The motion was seconded, and carried by unanimous vote.

At 5 o'clock p. m. the convention was adjourned, to reconvene at 12 o'clock noon, Thursday, November 24th.

Ninth Day's Proceedings—Thursday, November 24, 1910.

The convention was called to order at 12 o'clock, noon, Thursday, November 24th, President Gompers in the chair.

Secretary Morrison read a telegram from F. J. Paxton, president Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, stating that he was joined by the governor of Georgia and the mayor of Atlanta in extending an invitation to the American Federation of Labor to hold its next convention in Atlanta, Georgia.

Similar telegrams were read from Robert F. Maddox, mayor of Atlanta; G. W. Cooper, secretary Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; the Metal Trades Council of Atlanta, the Hon. Hoke Smith, the Savannah Trades and Labor Assembly, the Tennessee Federation of Labor and the Chattanooga Central Labor Union.

Communications from the Central Trades and Labor Council of Rochester, New York, and from Hiram H. Edgerton, mayor of Rochester, contained invitations to hold the convention in that city in 1911.

A telegram from John D. Colpays, president of Washington Central Labor Union, contained an invitation to the American Federation of Labor to hold its next convention in Washington, D. C.

A communication from the secretary of the International Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes was read, which contained an invitation to the delegates to accept the hospitality of the headquarters of that organization, Vandeventer avenue and Olive street.

An invitation was read from the Painters' District Council to an entertainment and lunch, given in honor of the members of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, who were delegates to the A. F. of L. Convention.

Secretary Morrison read the following telegrams:

New York, November 15, 1910.

B. A. Larger, Planters Hotel, St. Louis: Prison Labor Committee through you, extend greetings to Federation, and desires co-operation in meeting prison labor problem.

LESLIE WILLIS SPRAGUE,
Secretary.

Cleveland, Ohio, November 21, 1910.

American Federation of Labor, St. Louis, Mo.:

"Congratulations on Thirtieth Convention. Wish you success.

JOINT EXECUTIVE BOARD,
Ladies' Garment Workers of Cleveland.

San Jose, Cal., November 17, 1910.

Samuel Gompers, President A. F. of L., St. Louis, Mo.:

The Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of California, in second annual convention assembled, send fraternal greetings. May your deliberations result in the advancement of the interests of workers of every calling.

H. W. WRIGHTSON, President.

Secretary Morrison read a communication from Delegate James H. Anderson, in which he stated that he was incorrectly recorded in the tabulated vote on the substitute offered during the Electrical Workers' controversy in the fifth day's proceedings. He stated he was reported as voting in the affirmative on the motion, but that he voted No, and desired to have it so recorded.

Secretary Morrison: The secretary is of the opinion the delegate was recorded as he voted, but I have no objection to the statement going in the minutes.

Report of Committee on Adjustment.

Delegate Golden, Secretary of the Committee, reported as follows:

Resolution No. 37—By International Typographical Union Delegation:

Whereas, The jurisdictional question on single wrapping has been pending for some time; and

Whereas, The International President of the Brotherhood of Bookbinders' Union has absolutely refused to settle same in a labor court, and

Whereas, The International Brotherhood of Bookbinders have been chartering and maintaining a dual mailers' organization; be it

Resolved, That this convention go on record as declaring single wrapping part of the mailing trade, and under the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union.

Secretary Golden: Your committee recommends that this matter be referred to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, with instructions to determine the question as to who shall have jurisdiction over single wrapping mail matter.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was adopted.

Resolution No. 66 — By Delegate Homer D. Call, of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America:

Whereas, The Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, whose charter of affiliation was granted in the year 1897, has jurisdiction over all persons employed in the meat industry, and

Whereas, There is at the present time small dual organizations posing as butcher workmen, to the detriment of the labor movement as a whole, in violation of the recognized and admitted jurisdiction of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, and which is injurious to the welfare and progress of the men engaged in the meat industry, therefore be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that the International Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America is the only organization having jurisdiction over the butcher workmen, and recommend to all men engaged in the trade to affiliate themselves with their fellow-workmen by becoming members of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor notify all general and special organizers of the Federation to organize the men in the meat trade into the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America.

The committee recommended that the resolution be adopted and the recommendations contained therein indorsed.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

Delegate Sullivan (J.): I understand it provides any one having anything to do with cutting and preparing meat must be a member of the butcher workmen. Our members are somewhat interested in this. We want this defined so that it will not arise in the future, and cause trouble. There is hardly an establishment of any size in the country where we have not a meat cutter in the kitchen.

Vice-President O'Connell: I will say in behalf of Brother Call, who is not here, that he made the statement before the committee that the purpose of the resolution was to provide for men who handle meat for sale. Your men prepare the meat for eating.

Delegate Sullivan: When we cut the meat we also get it ready for sale.

Vice-President O'Connell: It could not apply in that sense.

The motion to concur in the recommendation of the committee was carried.

Secretary Golden: Resolution No. 83, and that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "Brass Molders," was referred to this committee. The two parties at issue have come to an agreement, and, instead of reading the resolution, I will read the agreement entered into.

The following agreement has been reached between the duly accredited representatives of the Metal Polishers, Brass & Silver Workers' International Union and the International Molders' Union of North America, as an adjustment of the question of jurisdiction over brass molders and coremakers.

1. That brass molders and core-makers will be turned over to the International Molders' Union of North America, and the International Molders' Union of North America will accept without any discrimination all members, except those who as previous members of the International Molders' Union of North America may have embezzled the funds of that organization, or have been duly found guilty of scabbing against the International Molders' Union of North America, in a strike sanctioned by the Executive Board of that organization.

2. That no initiation or reinstatement fee, or any penalty of any character be required of brass molders and coremakers transferred by the Metal Polishers, Brass and Silver Workers' International Union, to the International Molders' Union of North America, with the exception of those who would come under the specifications laid down in the first clause.

3. That the same amount of funeral benefits to which these members are now entitled in the Metal Polishers, Brass & Silver Workers' International Union be granted to such transferred members by the International Molders' Union of North America immediately upon their transfer.

4. That the brass molders and the coremakers shall have the right to regulate their own affairs in their locals, in accordance with the Constitution of the International Molders' Union of North America.

5. That if the brass molders and the coremakers, members of the Metal Polishers, Brass & Silver Workers' International Union, refuse to transfer to the International Molders' Union of North America, on the above specified conditions, that in such case their membership in the Metal Polishers, Brass & Silver Workers' International Union will be canceled by that organization.

6. That the provisions of this agreement providing for free entrance into the International Molders' Union of North America shall be in effect until March 1, 1911, after which no brass molder or coremaker will be entitled to any of the provisions as above set forth.

Signed on behalf of the Metal Polishers, Brass & Silver Workers' International Union:

T. M. DALY, International President.
JOHN J. FLYNN, Vice-President.
GEO. LEARY, Vice-President.
ED. LEBERMAN, Vice-President.
THOS. RUMSEY, Delegate, A. F. of L.

Signed on behalf of the International Molders' Union of North America:

JOS. F. VALENTINE, President.
JOHN P. FREY, Editor.
JOHN O'NEILL,
WM. SCHWAB.
JOHN F. DUNACHIE.

Secretary Golden: The committee recommends the ratification of the agreement entered into by the two organizations.

Delegate Daly: I move that the recommendation of the committee be adopted. (Seconded and carried.)

Resolution No. 119—By Delegates E. Frank Moorhouse, Samuel Kelly, Daniel J. Evans, J. Tazelaar, J. C. Skemp, of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America:

Whereas, The Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America has jurisdiction over all men employed in the painting industry, including those engaged in painting, lettering and decorating cars, locomotives and other railroad equipment, stations and other buildings; and

Whereas, The Pittsburg Convention of the American Federation of Labor instructed the International Association of Car Workers to cease to admit painters and decorators to membership, and to transfer to the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, all members of said International Association of Car Workers engaged in any branch of the painting industry; and,

Whereas, A charter has been granted by the American Federation of Labor to the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, an organization similar in structure, methods and objects to the International Association of Car Workers, both having jurisdiction over men employed in the building, repairing and inspection of railroad cars; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention hereby instructs the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen to cease admitting to membership men engaged in the different branches of the painting business, and further instructs said organization to transfer within a reasonable time all of its members so engaged to the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, they to be accepted by that organization without being required to pay any initiation fee.

Secretary Golden: No conference having been held by the representatives of the two organizations named in the resolution, your committee recommends that the President of the American Federation of Labor arrange for such a conference within the next ninety days; that he, or some representative he may appoint, shall preside over the conference, in an effort to bring about a satisfactory adjustment of the claims of the two organizations.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed at some length by Delegate Skemp, who offered the following amendment to the report of the committee: That the conference be for the purpose of providing for the future enforcement of the jurisdiction of the Brotherhood of Painters, and to determine the status of painters now members of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen. (Seconded.)

The question was further discussed by Vice-President O'Connell, Delegate Gallagher, Delegate Vurpla, Delegate Flannery, Delegate Ryan (M. F.), Delegate Tazelaar, Delegate Adams and Delegate Skemp.

The amendment offered by Delegate Skemp was lost.

The motion to adopt the report of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 136—By Delegates Daniel J. Tobin, Thomas L. Hughes, William Neer, Anton J. Hermann, Lawrence A. Grace of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters:

Whereas, The International Brotherhood of Teamsters find, in many sections of the country, that the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union have in their membership men who distinctly drive wagons; and,

Whereas, We believe they are entirely outside the bakery shop, and not bakers; and,

Whereas, Our charter grants us jurisdiction over all classes of drivers on all kinds of wagons; and,

Whereas, We have at the present time several local unions of bakery wagon drivers organized and chartered under our jurisdiction; be it

Resolved, That this convention instruct the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' Union of America to turn over to the International Organization of Teamsters, all drivers who are now members of their organization.

Secretary Golden: No conference having been held between the representatives of the Brotherhood of Teamsters and the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union relative to this matter, your committee recommends that the President of the American Federation of Labor arrange such a conference at the earliest possible date, with the object of bringing about a satisfactory agreement between the two organizations.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Later the committee recommended that the conference be called by the President of the American Federation of Labor.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 137—By Delegates Daniel J. Tobin, Thomas L. Hughes, William Neer, Anton J. Hermann, Lawrence A. Grace, of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters:

Whereas, The International Brotherhood of Teamsters, by a unanimous vote of their Convention, decided to change their name from International Brotherhood of Teamsters to International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers; and

Whereas, At the last convention of the American Federation of Labor, held in Toronto, Resolution No. 155, making this same request of the Federation, was referred to the Adjustment Committee, who, in turn, referred same to the Executive Council; and

Whereas, The Executive Council have not given any decision on this matter, and as we believe we are entitled to immediate action, inasmuch as a large percentage of our membership are now engaged in operating automobiles in every branch of our trade, from passenger service to freight and building material service; and

Whereas, We have already chartered from our international over thirty local unions of chauffeurs and several locals of stablemen; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention grant us the desired request of changing our title and giving us the jurisdiction requested herein.

Secretary Golden: Your committee recommends that the change in the title requested by the International Brotherhood of Teamsters be endorsed by this convention with the understanding that it does not give any rights to the International Brotherhood of Teamsters to infringe on the jurisdiction claims of any other affiliated organization.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

Delegate Ward: The representatives of the International Union of Brewery Workers of America wish to serve notice that if the intended extension of jurisdiction as provided for in Resolution 137 carries with it any infringement or encroachment upon the jurisdiction now enjoyed by the International Union of United Brewery Workers of America over chauffeurs, stablemen and helpers employed in the brewing industry, then and in that event only, will we protest against such extension of jurisdiction. Resolution No. 137 is identical with Resolution No. 155 introduced at the Toronto convention of the American Federation of Labor by the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, and this notice is of like nature to that served by the representatives of the brewery workers at that time.

I present the following protest:

St. Louis, Mo., November 18, 1910.

To the Adjustment Committee of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. James O'Connell, Chairman:

According to the fourth day's proceedings of the convention Resolution No. 137 introduced by the International Brotherhood of Teamsters asks for extension of jurisdiction over chauffeurs and stablemen and helpers, and a corresponding change of title. We, the undersigned representatives of the International Union of the United Brewery Workmen of America wish to serve notice that if the intended extension of jurisdiction as provided for in Resolution 137 carries with it any infringement or encroachment upon the jurisdiction now enjoyed by the International Union of United Brewery Workmen of America over chauffeurs, stablemen and helpers employed in the brewing industry, then, and in that event only, will we protest against such extension of jurisdiction. Resolution No. 137 is identical with Resolution No. 155, introduced at the Toronto Convention of the American Federation of Labor by the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and this notice is of like nature as that served by the representatives of the Brewery Workers at that time.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed)

ED. F. WARD,
JOHN SULLIVAN,
A. J. KUGLER,
JOSEPH PROEBSTLE,
LOUIS KEMPER.

Delegate Tobin (D. J.): I had some hope of keeping off the floor of the convention the old fight between the brewery workers and the teamsters. In line with that hope I want to say that I am perfectly satisfied with the recommendation of the committee. We must have something in our charter to cover chauffeurs and stablemen. Every man in this convention understands that the horse is becoming almost a thing of the past, and that almost the entire teaming business is being done by automobiles. We have locals of stablemen. The stablemen are very close to the teamsters. Whenever a teamster is sick or away from his work a stableman is put in his place. We have 2,000 chauffeurs on strike in New York. We have had a strike of chauffeurs in Chicago for several months. We are organizing them everywhere. We are willing to leave the jurisdiction as it now stands in order to avoid the unpleasant arguments that have taken place on this floor between ourselves and the brewery workers for years. We understand the jurisdiction, we believe the jurisdiction is that rendered by the Minneapolis convention. We decided last year to cease hostilities for one year on the recommendation of the Adjustment Committee. We are willing that that condition shall continue. We see no reason for a protest. We object to the brewery workers trying to prevent us from getting the change in our title, which we are entitled to.

The motion to adopt the report of the committee was carried.

Secretary Golden: On that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "Sheet Metal Workers—Stove Mounters," your committee, after hearing both parties, have decided to recommend that the title of the Stove Mounters' International Union be changed to "Stove Mounters, Malleable and Cast Iron Workers' International Union."

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be adopted. (Carried.)

Delegate Frey: I move that this convention request both organizations to appoint a committee of two on each side to meet previous to February 1st for the purpose of determining some points of jurisdiction. (Seconded and carried.)

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "United Brotherhood of Carpenters—Amalgamated Wood Workers," the committee reported as follows:

Your committee recommends the adoption of the recommendation of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, namely: "That unless the Amalgamated Wood Workers' International Union comply with the decision of the Toronto Convention of the American Federation of Labor, and become amalgamated with the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, on or before April 1, 1911, the action and decision of the Toronto Convention shall become effective on that date."

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed at length by Delegate Mulcahy, who spoke in opposition to the recommendation of the committee. Delegate Macfarlane spoke in favor of the recommendation of the committee. Delegate Pratt opposed the recommendation of the committee.

Delegate Pratt: I move as an amendment that the same course be taken in regard to the Amalgamated Wood Workers and Carpenters as was taken in regard to the Elevator Constructors and Machinists, that is, that it be referred to the Executive Council and a further effort made to bring about an honorable amalgamation. (Seconded.)

The question was further discussed by Delegate O'Sullivan, Delegate Huber, Delegate Klapetzky, Delegate Kelly, Delegate Furuseth and Delegate Mulcahy.

The motion to refer to the Executive Council was carried.

Resolution No. 138—By Delegates Daniel J. Tobin, Thomas L. Hughes, William Neer, Anton J. Hermann, Lawrence A. Grace of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters:

Whereas, The charter of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters gives them the sole right and jurisdiction to have in their organization all men driving wagons of all classes; and,

Whereas, There exists in the City of New York, Federal Union No. 9463, titled, Newspaper and Mail Deliverers; and,

Whereas, This Federal Union has in its membership from three to five hundred newspaper wagon drivers; be it

Resolved, By this convention, that the Executive Council stand instructed to notify this Federal Union No. 9463, and any other Federal Union, in any part of the country, that they be compelled, and are ordered, to turn all drivers over to the International Organization of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers.

Secretary Golden: No conference having been held between the two organizations named in the resolution, your committee recommends that such a conference be held, with a view to arriving at a satisfactory agreement, and that the conference be called by the President of the A. F. of L.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

Delegate Tobin (D. J.): I rise, not to object to the report of the committee, but this is not a jurisdiction between ourselves and any other international union, but between ourselves and the American Federation of Labor. The printers are most nearly connected with this question. I request that President Lynch of the International Typographical Union be present.

Vice-President O'Connell: The committee will accept that—that all interested parties be notified.

The question was discussed at length by Delegate Dunne, Vice-President Duncan, Vice-President O'Connell, Delegate Probst, Delegate Tobin and Delegate Grace.

Delegate Kugler: On behalf of the International Union of the United Brewery Workmen I object to the language contained in both Resolutions Nos. 136 and 138.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

Delegate Dunne desired to be recorded as voting in opposition to the report of the committee.

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "Pavers and Rammers—Blue Stone Cutters—Granite Cutters," the committee reported as follows:

Secretary Golden: In lieu of this portion of the report of the Executive Committee, we recommend the ratification of the agreement entered into in New York City November 11, 1910, which is as follows:

Agreement.

New York, November 11, 1910.

Meeting of joint committees representing the Granite Cutters' Local Branch and the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters, Flaggers, Bridge and Curb Stone Setters, and General Organizer Hugh Frayne, acting as mediator, as per resolution adopted by the Building Trades Council on the report of the grievance committee in connection with the grievance of the Granite Cutters against the Blue Stone Cutters.

Those present at the meeting were as follows:

From the Granite Cutters—Wm. J. O'Brien, Jas. Sweeney, Lawrence Foley, W. Webster and S. Squibb.

From the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters—Edward Broderick, Daniel Murphy and James Urell.

General Organizer Hugh Frayne acting as chairman. Samuel Squibb, Secretary.

A general discussion of the grievances existing between both organizations was entered into in which all those present expressed their views. Two documents were read by Mr. Broderick, relative to the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters getting a national charter from the American Federation of Labor. The other in reference to the protest against granting an extension of charter rights by the American Federation of Labor to the Pavers and Rammermen which conflicted with the jurisdiction of the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters. Jurisdictions claimed by both organizations were freely discussed, after which both sides were made thoroughly acquainted with the general proposition. General Organizer Frayne then suggested the following:

We, the joint committee representing Local Branch of the Granite Cutters' International Association of America, and the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters, Flaggers, Bridge and Curb Stone Setters of America agree to recommend to our respective unions the following:

That the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters, Flaggers, Bridge and Curb Stone Setters of America, make application for a charter to the International Association of Granite Cutters of America, and that the same be granted under the following conditions:

That they be given full authority and jurisdiction over all the work which they now control, all contracts and agreements with employers governing their working condition, hours of labor and wages to remain in effect.

Motion by Brother Broderick of the Blue Stone Cutters and seconded by Brother Sweeney of the Granite Cutters that the recommendation of the joint committee be adopted and that same be recommended to our respective unions for their endorsement and ratification.

Motion unanimously carried.

A motion then was made that all hostilities cease between the Granite Cutters and the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters and that both unions work in harmony pending the granting of the charter to the Amalgamated Blue Stone Cutters, Flaggers, Bridge and Curb Stone Setters of America.

Motion unanimously carried.

Hugh Frayne, General Organizer of the American Federation of Labor, representing the Building Trades Department.

Secretary Golden: Your committee recommends the ratification of the agreement.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed by Delegate Hannah, Vice-President O'Connell and Vice-President Duncan.

Delegate Hannah: I move as an amendment to the report of the committee that the agreement entered into or the negotiations, by the representatives of the two organizations and Organizer Frayne be construed to mean that the Blue Stone Cutters will make application to the Granite Cutters for a charter as Blue Stone Cutters only.

In discussing the question Vice-President Duncan stated that the convention could ratify the agreement or refuse to ratify it, but could not change or amend it in any way.

The question was further discussed by Delegate Cullinan, Delegate Abrahams, Delegate Woll, Delegate Klappetzky.

President Gompers: The motion offered by Delegate Hannah is out of order. It is an effort to construe an arbitration award, an agreement not subject to definition, construction or modification in any degree.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was declared carried on a viva voce vote. A division was called for. The motion was declared carried by a vote of 125 in the affirmative to 11 in the negative.

Secretary Golden: That portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption, "Jewelry Workers' Jurisdiction," and Resolution No. 7, were reported on yesterday by the committee. The matter was referred back to the committee in order to give a hearing to both sides, and to Organizer Frayne, who assisted in drawing up the agreement.

Resolution No. 7—By International Jewelry Workers' Union of America:

Whereas, The annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at Toronto, Ontario, Canada, November 8 to 20, 1909, referred Resolution No. 20, presented by the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America to President Samuel Gompers for investigation and a final settlement; and

Whereas, A conference was called at New York City on June 23, 1910, by Organizer Hugh Frayne, representing the American Federation of Labor, and all interested organizations were notified and attended conference; and

Whereas, Decision rendered through conference and indorsed by the American Federation of Labor Executive Board, granting jurisdiction to the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America over all metal parts of badges, buttons, medallions and novelties, not in conflict with Sheet Metal Workers' Union; and

Whereas, The Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers' Union refuse to withdraw their label from factories employing one to three of their members, while six to one hundred or more were eligible to membership in the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America, thereby hindering the organization of these factories; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers' Union be and is hereby ordered to immediately withdraw their label from factories manufacturing badges buttons, medallions and novelties; and be it further

Resolved, That this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, assembled at St. Louis, Mo., 1910, do hereby indorse the decision of the General Executive Board of the American Federation of Labor granting jurisdiction to the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America over all metal parts of badges, buttons, medallions and novelties made in all metals other than tin and sheet iron.

Your committee desires to submit its former report without change. The report is as follows:

Your committee recommend the endorsement of the report of the Executive Council in their approval of the agreement arrived at in the conference in New York City, on June 23, 1910, between representatives of the following unions: Jewelry Workers' International Union, the International Brotherhood of Tip Printers, International Typographical Union, United Textile Workers of America, Badge Makers' Local Union 12,249, New York City; Badge Makers' Local Union 11,555, Jersey City, and Organizer Hugh Frayne, representing the American Federation of Labor. The representatives of the Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance were invited to be present, but failed to attend. Your committee nonconcurs in the resolution submitted by the Jewelry Workers' International Union requesting the Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers' International Union to withdraw their label from those shops where it is in force.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed by Delegate Daly, Delegate O'Sullivan, Vice-President O'Connell and Delegate Golden (J.).

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "Newspaper Solicitors' Union — San Francisco Call," the Committee on Adjustment reported as follows:

The decision rendered by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor is as follows:

Toronto Canada, November 21, 1909.
Andrew J. Gallagher, Secretary Labor Council, 318 Sixteenth street, San Francisco, Cal:

Your telegram as well as letters and other telegrams received relating to dispute between the Newspaper Solicitors' and Newspaper Carriers' Union and the San Francisco Call. The Executive Council decided that declaring a firm unfair in effect is similar to the declaration of a strike, therefore, no firm or its product should be declared unfair by a local trade union directly affiliated to the American Federation of Labor until application has been made and approved by the Executive Council. The substance of this telegram was also telegraphed to the secretaries of the two unions interested.

(Signed) SAMUEL GOMPERS.

Your committee recommend that this convention endorse the decision rendered by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor.

Respectfully submitted,

The question was discussed by Delegate Gallagher (A.), Delegate Woll, Delegate Lynch (J. M.), Delegate Jer-ling, President Gompers, Treasurer Lennon and Delegate Furuseth.

Delegate Furuseth: I want to ask a question with reference to this: I do not for, one solitary minute, dispute the soundness of the rule that Federal local unions shall consult the Executive Council before levying a boycott, but the statement contained in their reasons for it, that a boycott has the same effect as a strike, I absolutely deny. For the purpose of this record, let me ask a question: You do not, then, intend that by the statement of the Executive Council a boycott would carry with it the right to call out union men who might be working for the boycotted firm?

President Gompers: Your statement is exactly correct. We had no such idea.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

At 6:30 p. m. the convention was adjourned to reconvene at 12 o'clock, noon, Friday, November 25th.

Tenth Day's Proceedings, Friday, November 25, 1910.

The convention was called to order at 12 o'clock noon, Friday, November 25th, President Gompers in the chair.

President Gompers: The special order of business is the report of the Building Trades Committee, but as that committee is not here the Committee on Resolutions will continue its report.

Report of Committee on Resolutions.

Delegate Frey, Secretary of the Committee, reported as follows:

As Resolutions No. 128 and No. 141 contain the same subject matter, the committee reports on them together.

Resolution No. 128—By Delegate Wm. O'Brien, of the Silver Bow Trades Council:

I, Wm. O'Brien, delegate from Silver Bow Trades and Labor Council, Silver Bow County, Montana, representing forty local unions or more, wish to enter a protest against the granting of a charter to the Western Federation of Miners, by the A. F. of L., under the conditions recommended by the Executive Council. My reasons for doing so are that it would work a hardship on, and be a detriment to every international mechanic working in and around mines, mills or smelters where quartz mining is carried on. In Silver Bow County alone the following unions would be affected:

Carpenters, with a membership of 350; 200 would be affected. Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, membership 120; affected 100. Blacksmiths and Helpers, 274; 250 affected. Electricians, 100; 40 affected. Machinists, 375; 360 affected. Boilermakers, 60; 50 affected. Painters, 150; 30 affected. Total, 1,500; 1,030 affected.

The results would be similar in Great Falls or Anaconda, where the large smelting operations are carried on.

Resolution No. 141—By Delegates T. L. Lewis, J. H. Walker, Frank J. Hayes, John Mitchell, E. S. McCollough, Edwin Perry, W. B. Wilson of the United Mine Workers of America:

Whereas, The Western Federation of Miners have applied for a charter of affiliation to the American Federation of Labor, with similar jurisdiction to be accorded to them that is now accorded to the United Mine Workers of America.

Whereas, We believe that the Western Federation of Miners should be affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and accorded the same rights and privileges as the United Mine Workers of America in their jurisdiction of men working in and around the mines, to be organized under the Western Federation of Miners.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the delegates representing the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that the Western Federation of Miners should be granted a charter of affiliation, with jurisdiction of employees working in and around the mines metalliferous under their present organization, and that the officers and Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor are hereby instructed to issue to the Western Federation of Miners a charter of affiliation with the American Federation of Labor on that basis. On behalf of United Mine Workers of America.

Secretary Frey: In addition to these two resolutions there is the subject matter contained in the report of the Executive Council referred to your committee.

Your committee has given careful consideration to Resolutions No. 128 and No. 141 and has heard parties for and against the issuance of the charter. We also fully considered the subject as set forth on pages 4 to 10 of the Executive Council's report, second day's proceedings, wherein we find that at a conference held at Indianapolis, Ind., August 18, 1910, it was mutually agreed as follows:

1. That wherever locals of machinists under the International Association of Machinists now exist, their status shall not in any way be disturbed by claim to jurisdiction by the Western Federation of Miners.

2. That the officers of the organizations in this conference represented agree to aid to the fullest in furthering the mutual interests of all workers in and around the mines.

JAMES O'CONNELL,
T. L. LEWIS,
JOHN MITCHELL,
CHARLES H. MOYER,
W. W. WHITE,
WILLIAM D. HUBER,
SAMUEL GOMPERS.

It appears that a misunderstanding arose as to the meaning or interpretation of the language of Clause 1, resulting in correspondence which did not seem to settle the point at issue. This correspondence has a specific reference as to whether or not Paragraph 1 of the conference report applied to local unions of the I. A. of M. other than those that are situated in the mining camps.

President Moyer held that a local of the I. A. of M. for instance, in Salt Lake City, should not claim jurisdiction over machinists in the different mining camps of that State, but instead that Paragraph 1 "only applies to the local unions of machinists now existing in mining and smelting plants."

On the other hand President O'Connell of the I. A. of M. contended that the paragraph "means that where a lodge exists of the I. A. of M. and has members working in mines and smelters their status shall not be disturbed."

On the interpretation of the paragraph in question we find that the Executive Council after reviewing the correspondence between Presidents Moyer and O'Connell, decided and reported to this Convention as follows:

"We have had the correspondence and the Indianapolis agreement transmitted to us for consideration but have had no meeting for the discussion of the subject until our coming to this city. At this meeting we entered fully into the subject and our interpretation of the point of dispute is:

That the agreement reached at Indianapolis does not require any member of the International Association of Machinists working within the jurisdiction of a local thereof to become a member of the Western Federation of Miners."

The Executive Council has authorized the issuance of the charter to the Western Federation of Miners upon the agreement reached at Indianapolis, and this interpretation thereof.

Your committee examined the fundamental law of the American Federation of Labor on the subject of the application for this charter and found it in clause 1 of the report of the so-called Autonomy Committee, page 240 of the proceedings of the Scranton, Pa. Convention, as follows:

"As the magnificent growth of the American Federation of Labor is conceded by all students of economic thought to be the result of organization on trade lines, and believing it neither necessary nor expedient to make any radical departure from this fundamental principle, we declare that, as a general proposition, the interest of the workers will be best conserved by adhering as closely to that doctrine as the recent great changes in methods of production and employment make practicable. However, owing to the isolation of some few industries from thickly populated centers where the overwhelming number follow one branch thereof, and owing to the fact that in some industries comparatively few workers are engaged over whom separate organizations claim jurisdiction, we believe that jurisdiction in such industries by the paramount organization would yield the best results to the workers therein, at least until the development of organization of each branch has reached a stage wherein these may be placed, without material injury to all parties in interest, in affiliation with their national trade unions."

Your Committee submits that the application in question properly comes under the provisions of the above quoted clause 1, which specifically refers to the isolation of industries from thickly populated centers, etc., and therefore in a general way are in the same relative position to the American Federation of Labor as are the United Mine Workers of America and as nearly as the circumstances will permit, are entitled to similar recognition.

That there is some difference between the relationship of the United Mine Workers of America and the Western Federation of Miners is apparent, in that metal mining smelters and reduction plants have no similar counterpart in coal mining. This appears to have been in mind when the August 18, 1910, conference was held in Indianapolis, Indiana, and when a qualification to the application for this charter was recognized and signed by representatives of the metal miners, of the coal miners, of the machinists, and by President Samuel Gompers of the A. F. of L. Under these circumstances your Committee recommends that the decision of the Executive Council on this subject be endorsed with the addition of a few words to the second clause of its report, so that the clause will read as follows:

"That the agreement reached at Indianapolis does not require any member of the International Association of Machinists working within the jurisdiction of a local union thereof to become a member of the Western Federation of Miners. Said jurisdiction herein referred to to mean the city or mining camp where said local is situated."

That a charter be issued to the Western Federation of Miners with the qualification agreed to at the Indianapolis Conference as defined by the Executive Council in its report to this convention and our addition thereto.

Secretary Frey: I move the adoption of the report of the committee. (Seconded.)

Vice-President Mitchell: I move that the consideration of the committee's report be deferred until 3 o'clock and that it be made a special order of business at that time. (Seconded and carried.)

Secretary Frey, for the Committee on Resolutions, continued the report, as follows:

Resolution No. 68—By Delegate Albert Abrahams, for the Central Federated Union of Greater New York and vicinity:

Whereas, The American Federation of Labor, as set forth in the preamble of its constitution, has recognized that a struggle is going on in all the nations of the civilized world between the oppressors and the oppressed of all countries, a struggle between the capitalist and the laborer, which grows in intensity from year to year, and will work disastrous results to the tolling millions if they are not combined for mutual protection and benefit, and it, therefore, behooves the representatives of the trade and labor unions of America, in convention assembled, to adopt such measures and disseminate such principles among the mechanics and laborers of our country as will permanently unite them to secure the recognition of rights to which they are justly entitled.

Whereas, The decisions of the United States Supreme Court and of the State courts in labor and injunction cases, based upon the United States Constitution, have conclusively shown that the Constitution of the United States is a wall for the protection of the capitalist interests as against the interests of the tolling millions.

Whereas, Article V of the Constitution of the United States provides that amendments to the Constitution may be made,

Whereas, The American Federation of Labor and its affiliated State Federations have devoted their energies to the enactment of national, State and territorial labor legislation, and to the embodying of provisions for the protection of labor in several State constitutions, and

Whereas, Logically and inevitably the next great step in the struggle of the oppressed to secure the recognition of rights to which the tolling millions of our country are justly entitled, is the demand and propaganda for a labor amendment to the United States Constitution, ordaining that "neither wage slavery nor voluntary servitude shall exist within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction," and embodying all legislative demands of the American Federation of Labor, which shall bring about the industrial emancipation of all toilers, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor in the Thirtieth Annual Convention assembled, that the time has arrived to crown the thirty years' work for labor legislation in our generation, as achieved by the American Federation of Labor, with the demand and propaganda for a labor amendment to the Constitution of the United States, to secure the industrial emancipation of all toilers.

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor be and hereby is instructed to frame a labor amendment to the United States Constitution and to inaugurate and encourage a movement leading to its adoption by the people of our country; and

Resolved, That for the purpose of defraying the expenditures to be incurred by the Executive Council in carrying out these instructions a one cent assessment be contributed by the membership of the American Federation of Labor to what shall be known as the Labor Amendment Fund.

The committee recommended nonconcurrency in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 120 be amended by changing the word "equitable" to "equity," and inserting "requested" instead of "instructed" in the last Resolve.

Resolution No. 120—By Delegates Matthew Woll, International Photo-Engravers' Union; Andrew J. Gallagher, San Francisco Labor Council:

Whereas, The American Federation of Labor has commendably interested itself in the righting of a wrong perpetrated upon the right of organized labor to advance the social and economic interest and welfare of its members through the unwarrantable exercise of the equity power of the federal judiciary, intensified by and through the operation and judicial interpretation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, by approving and seeking the enactment into law of a bill introduced by Mr. Wilson of Pennsylvania, intended to regulate the issuance of restraining orders and injunctions and procedure thereon, and to limit the meaning of "conspiracy" in certain cases; and

Whereas, A similar violation of the right of organized labor to better the conditions of its members, right the wrongs and amend the grievances realized by them under the present industrial arrangement, is experienced and intensified by a similar unwarranted exercise of the equity power of the State judiciary; and

Whereas, A united agitation and concentration of effort and energy by all organized labor for the enactment of legislation in all States of the Union, similar to that contemplated in the said Wilson Bill, will arouse an increasing public interest, attract greater sympathy and support for organized labor in the amending of the deplorable conditions now existing, and serve to limit the equity powers of both State and Federal Courts in the issuance of injunctions; and

Whereas, The American Federation of Labor is well fitted, by reason of its Central and Federated Bodies, its affiliated International and Local Unions to undertake and intelligently direct this agitation and concentration of effort and energy; be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor include in its legislative policy the enactment of laws in all States of the Union, similar in purport to the said Wilson Bill, and to this end instruct its president and Executive Council to prepare or cause to be prepared, bills of a similar character to be introduced into the several State Legislatures through and by the means of the Central and Federated Bodies to the American Federation of Labor; and, be it further

Resolved, That every affiliated Central and Federated Labor Body, each and every International and Local Union is hereby requested to exert every effort possible, and use whatever influence is in their power to secure the enactment of laws herein contemplated, this agitation, effort and energy to be under the direct supervision of the officers of the American Federation of Labor.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution as amended.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 131—By Delegate James Murray, Texas State Federation of Labor:

Be it Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that the best interest of this federation can be best served by this convention by instructing the president and secretary to supply copies of the different laws now in existence and in force, relative to the employers' liability and workmen's compensation act, as well as copies of such bills as may be proposed dealing with this subject, to the various secretaries of the State Federations of Labor where such laws do not exist, and where it is intended to try to have such laws enacted, to the end that the best information may be at their command for their guidance in the presentation of bills before such legislative bodies as may have to deal with this subject.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Secretary Frey: The committee has two resolutions bearing somewhat on the same subject, and will be read together.

Resolution No. 103—By Delegate Ben Commons of International Street Railway Employees:

Whereas, The officials and engineers in charge of the construction of the Panama Canal have announced that it will be completed and open for commerce in 1915, and

Whereas, Practically the unanimous sentiment of the President of the United States and other officials, the members of Congress and the American people generally is that no celebration of the canal can produce such immediate and beneficial results as the holding of an exposition where the people of the world will be brought closer together through this union of the Atlantic and Pacific. The East and West will meet and confer with each other and exhibit the resources and products of their several countries; be it

Resolved, That we see in New Orleans the logical point for such exposition, by reason of its proximity to the canal and because it is the gateway for a large part of the import and export commerce of these United States with the countries south of us and with the world, easily reached from all points in this Continent, North, Central and South America, and in all respects sulted to hold a great world's exposition, and we therefore indorse New Orleans as the best point at which to hold the world's Panama exposition in honor of the completion of the canal.

Resolution No. 122—By Delegate Andrew J. Gallagher, of San Francisco Labor Council; also introduced by the following delegates from California: Thomas Bone, Stockton; L. W. Butler, Los Angeles; Cyrus F. Grow, Los Angeles; P. W. Buckley, Oakland; O. A. Treitmoie, San Francisco; Frank A. Monaghan, San Francisco, Cal.; Andrew Furuseth, San Francisco, Cal.; Geo. W. Bell, Gas Workers No. 9840; Fred J. Grahame, San Francisco, Cal.:

Whereas, The citizens of San Francisco and the people of California have guaranteed by voluntary subscriptions and public appropriation, sufficient funds to make a world's fair, in commemoration of the completion of the Panama Canal, a success; and

Whereas, San Francisco has been approved and endorsed by a large number of commercial bodies, fraternal organizations and the chief executives of many States as the most fitting and proper place for such an exposition; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor that the City of San Francisco is hereby endorsed as the logical place for a world's fair, to be held in the year 1915, for the purpose of properly celebrating and commemorating one of the great achievements in human history—the completion of the Panama Canal; and be it further

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor be, and is hereby authorized and directed to use all honorable means with the members of the House of Representatives and the United States Senate in order that they may, by the powers vested in them, officially select San Francisco as the place for a world's fair or exposition, to be held in the year 1915, in commemoration of the completion of the Panama Canal.

Secretary Frey: Your committee is of the opinion it would be unwise for this convention to participate in a contest between two great cities for the honor of holding the Panama exposition. We could only consider the question from the trades union standpoint and the effect which the exposition would have on the advancement and betterment of the labor movement. We do not believe it advisable to take part in the effort being made by large financial interests to secure the exposition for the prime object of the financial returns to be secured. We therefore recommend that no action be taken by this convention as between the cities aspiring for the holding of this exposition.

Resolution No. 135—By the Delegation of the Seamen's International Union:

Whereas, We believe it to be of interest to the licensed officers on merchant vessels and to licensed marine engineers, as well as to the labor movement, that they, through their organization, should be affiliated to the labor movement, in the American Federation of Labor; therefore,

Resolved, That these two organizations be invited to join the American Federation of Labor, and that the president be instructed to so inform them.

Secretary Frey: Your committee recommends that the two organizations referred to in the resolution shall be invited to become affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and that the question of the issuing of separate charters or their affiliation through amalgamation with organizations already chartered by the American Federation of Labor be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 139 be amended by inserting the words "continue more vigorously than ever the" in the resolution.

Resolution No. 139—By Delegate B. A. Larger:

Whereas, In nearly every State penal institution and reformatory the labor of the inmates is contracted for by unscrupulous manufacturers, who place the product of said convict labor in competition with that of free labor; and

Whereas, Such competition is unfair and unjust inasmuch as the product of convict contract labor is sold below the regular market price of the product of free labor, thereby throwing many wage earners out of employment; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the various State branches and central bodies be advised to continue more vigorously than ever the campaign of publicity to arouse the trade unionists and the general public to the end that convicts be employed at such labor that will not place their product in competition with that of free labor.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution as amended.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was adopted.

Resolution No. 140—By Delegates from the United Garment Workers of America:

Whereas, Forty-five thousand unorganized workers in the clothing industry are out on strike in the City of Chicago during the past eight weeks we, the delegates representing the United Garment Workers of America, who have been and are continuing to assist these people, feel it incumbent upon us to place the facts of this strike and matters pertaining to it before the delegates attending the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled at St. Louis, Mo., November, 1910.

These workers were in the employ of the wholesale clothing firms of Hart, Schaffner & Marx, B. Kuppenheimer and about one hundred other ready-made and made-to-measure houses. The strike began in one of the pant shops of the firm of Hart, Schaffner & Marx as the result of a reduction of wages, said reduction was but one of previous reductions.

When the workers refused to submit to such cut in wages, and went out on strike, all of the other shops of the firm of Hart, Schaffner & Marx followed, and soon most of the workers in the entire clothing industry of Chicago left their shops, claiming that there were other matters that needed remedying that were of greater importance than wages. The complaints made were investigated by an impartial tribunal of citizens and publicists known as the Citizens' Committee, who has issued a public statement as to the correctness of these complaints. Some of the more flagrant are as follows:

1. Discrimination against and dismissals for belonging to a trade union.

2. Having to secure a pass from a foreman to get a drink of water, or go to the lavatory.

3. An unfair system of fines and charges for the use of soap in the wash rooms, needles, bobbins, etc.; a charge of 25 cents for oil cans which can be secured at wholesale for 5 cents; a charge of 60 cents for the loss of a silk spool, full or empty. When a spot is found on a garment the one in whose hands the garment is found is subject to a fine of a small or large amount to the extent of the compulsory purchase of the garment at retail prices. This, in spite of the fact that the garment in the course of section work may have passed through a dozen different hands.

4. In the cutting rooms "suit lengths," instead of bolts of cloth are furnished the cutters, out of which a full size suit is expected; the amount of goods furnished is in many instances, insufficient to get the suit out properly, and should the stripes not match with perfectness, or the cutter be short the smallest or shortest piece of goods, and have to apply to the foreman for the same, he is fined or charged for the same.

5. The clothing manufacturers of Chicago have what is known as the Clothiers'

Board of Trade or Association, and in order to secure employment in one of these houses an employee must first secure a pass or permission to work from said association, and must submit to a minute cross-examination of pedigree and pledge not to join a union.

6. Latterly, the entire system has been changed from week to piece work, and the prices paid are so low that the greatest speed is necessary to earn enough to keep body and soul together. The same class and amount of work is now required at piece work that was required formerly at week work, while the average week's earnings is greatly reduced. Again, all piece work employees are compelled to remain in the shop the full time, whether there is work for them to do or not.

7. Time clocks are subjects of grievance inasmuch as workers through a little oversight are deprived of wages actually earned. All workers are compelled to register both on entering or leaving employment, but should a worker neglect to register on leaving employment, in spite of the fact that his work slips, and foreman of his department can prove he had done his work, yet he is deprived of his wages.

These are but some of the grievances and tyrannies these people out on strike were subject to, and from which they seek redress.

An offer has been made for a partial remedy and adjustment of the controversy, and the ending of the strike; but those involved are standing out for a strictly union shop, and the reinstatement of all who went out. They are still standing firm, and are determined to win.

The United Garment Workers of America has had its entire force of organizers in the City of Chicago to organize, advise and assist the strikers to bring the strike to a successful issue.

Our organized members in Chicago are assisting the strike financially, by a weekly membership assessment. We have also sent out an appeal for financial aid to all of our affiliated unions in the United States and Canada, and we desire such moral or financial aid as lies in the power of the trade union movement in America, and to this end be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, endorse an appeal for funds which will be sent to all local unions for aid to win this strike, and that all delegates present give said appeal their hearty support when such reaches the union or central body with which they are affiliated.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed at some length, by Delegate Wheeler and Delegate Landers.

The motion to concur in the recommendation of the committee was carried.

The following substitute was recommended by the committee for Resolution 143, with the consent of the delegation of the Cigar Makers' International Union:

Resolution No. 143—By delegation Cigar Makers' International Union:

Whereas, For a period of more than four months 9,000 members of the Cigar Makers' International Union in the city of Tampa, Florida, have been forced out of employment by the members of the Cigar Manufacturers' Association, the efforts of this association being to disrupt the organization of the Cigar Makers as well as that of every other organization of labor in that city, particularly the organizations of the building trades, the purpose being to establish in Tampa the nonunion shop; and,

Whereas, In the efforts made in this direction by the Cigar Manufacturers' Association there has been organized what is known as the Citizens' Association, this latter Association having transgressed all law and order by constituting itself as an armed authority, having not only attempted to force the members of the Cigar Makers' International Union to return to work against their will, but having also threatened the lives of many of the members for refusing to return to work, thereby compelling many of them to leave Tampa; and,

Whereas, This self-constituted Citizens' Association has by force of arms closed the offices of the labor organizations of Tampa, has refused, until recently, to permit the officers of the various local unions of Cigar Makers to transact their business in a peaceful and lawful manner, and has had several officers of these local unions arrested and imprisoned on charges that are unwarranted and false, the authorities refusing to accept a bail bond, and denying the plea for a speedy trial; and,

Whereas, The Governor of the State of Florida, as well as the Mayor of Tampa, have refused to make more than a superficial investigation of the conditions arising from the action of this self-constituted Citizens' Committee; and,

Whereas, At all time during this difficulty the officers and representatives of the Cigar Makers' International Union have been ready and willing to confer with the Manufacturers' Association to bring about an amicable adjustment, but have met with a refusal by the said Manufacturers' Association; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor hereby enters an emphatic protest against this unwarranted and uncalled for interference with the rights and liberties of the working men and women of Tampa; and, be it

Resolved, That this convention also emphatically protests against the action of the municipal authorities of Tampa by reason of their refusal to protect the rights of those citizens whose property was confiscated by the closing of the halls where their meetings were held; and, be it

Resolved, That this convention protests against the unwarranted arrests and incarceration of the officers and members of the unions of Tampa; and, be it further

Resolved, That this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor calls upon the organizations herein represented and their members and friends to give all possible moral and financial assistance to our fellow working men and women of Tampa involved in this controversy, to the end that their organization may be maintained and their rights and liberties as American citizens upheld.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed at length by Delegate Tracy (T. F.), who gave a brief history of the strike and the conditions in Tampa that led up to it.

A motion was made and carried that Mr. Lanbias, a representative of the Tampa unions, be given the privilege of the floor to speak on the situation. Mr. Lanbias described the situation of the strikers and the difficulties under which the organization was laboring owing to the fact that their officers had been imprisoned and their members persecuted in various ways. He appealed to the delegates from national and international unions to acquaint their members with the conditions in Tampa and asked them to assist the strikers both morally and financially.

The question was discussed by President Gompers. President Gompers spoke of the condition of the Tampa unions after their offices had been closed, their officers imprisoned for conspiracy and denied the opportunity of paying out the benefits provided by the Cigar Makers' International Union. He stated that the lives of the imprisoned officers had been threatened by a self-constituted committee of citizens of Tampa, called the Citizens' Committee. President Gompers stated that he had written several times to the governor of Florida asking him to make an investigation of the conditions prevailing in Tampa, but that no satisfactory response had been received.

Delegate O'Connell (J. J.) discussed the matter, and urged members of organized labor everywhere to patronize the blue label of the Cigar Makers' Union. He said if that advice were generally followed such occurrences as those related would be impossible.

The question was discussed at length by Delegate Commons, who described in some detail the conditions existing in Tampa, and the conditions that existed early in the year when he visited Tampa in behalf of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees. He stated that no help need be expected from the authorities in Tampa, and that no good legal talent could be employed by the strikers, as the Manufacturers' Association invariably offered greater inducements to attorneys to take cases on the other side.

Vice-President Hayes in the chair.

The motion to concur in the recommendation of the committee was carried by unanimous vote.

Resolution No. 144—By Delegates Joe N. Weber, Owen Miller, D. A. Carey, Joe F. Winkler, of the American Federation of Musicians:

Whereas, The United States authorities have repeatedly decided that musicians do not come under the provisions of the alien contract labor law, and

Whereas, In the past and at the present time orchestras and bands are imported into this country under contract, and

Whereas, The bands and orchestras so imported generally displace American musicians by contracting to work for pauper wages, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Convention of the American Federation of Labor considers the replacing of American musicians by foreign musicians under the circumstances as complained of, an injustice and hereby declares itself in full sympathy with all efforts of the American Federation of Musicians to have the alien contract labor law amended so as to afford the necessary protection to American musicians.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 145—By Delegate J. A. Franklin, of the International Brotherhood of Boiler Makers:

Whereas, There is a large and insistent demand for remedial legislation having for its object the prevention of the large number of locomotive boiler explosions with their accompanying loss of life; the list of such explosions is becoming larger each year and the experience of other nations shows the only effective remedy is Government supervision of inspection of boilers; and

Whereas, There is now before the Congress of the United States a bill to provide for Federal supervision of locomotive boilers, which, if enacted into law, would greatly reduce the number of these appalling disasters by requiring more careful and frequent inspections, promptness in making repairs when defects are found and compel a discontinuance of the present practice on many roads of taking chances with defective boilers, by continuing them in service in order to overcome a shortage of engines even after their dangerous condition has been ascertained; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, in regular session assembled, do heartily approve the principle of Federal supervision of locomotive boiler inspection and direct that the Legislative Committee of this body do all in their power to assist in having this measure enacted into law at the coming session of Congress; and we request all affiliated bodies to aid in the matter; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these preambles and resolutions be sent to the President, Senators and Congressmen of the United States.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 146 be amended by striking out the following sections:

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor do, at this convention, resolve to celebrate the centennial anniversary of this great advocate of human liberty, and, be it further

Resolved, That we recommend to all affiliated international, central and local unions the educational effect that a general celebration of his birthday is bound to have on all the people of this country, as it will encourage a study of his life, work and character.

Resolved, That the Resolution Committee be requested to draw up suitable resolutions covering this matter, so that the day, or the Sunday previous, can be properly observed.

And that it be further amended by adding a new section, the amended resolution to read as follows:

Resolution No. 146—By Chas. D. Wheeler, Chicago Federation of Labor:

Whereas, The 29th of next November (1911) will be the one hundredth birthday of Wendell Phillips, and

Whereas, This greatest of all American agitators and reformers (if not the greatest of all the world's agitators and reformers) has been studiously ignored by the plutocratically controlled institutions and publications of our country, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention of the American Federation of Labor recommend to all trade union organizations the celebration in an appropriate manner, of the centennial anniversary of the birth of Wendell Phillips.

The committee recommended that the resolution as amended be adopted. The recommendation was adopted by unanimous vote.

Resolution No. 148 — By Delegate Walker, of the United Mine Workers of America:

Whereas, The workers of the E-Z Opener Bag Co., White Oak Mills and Bag Factories, of Taylorville, Ill., are involved in a struggle for better wages and conditions, and

Whereas, They are pitted against a corporation with large financial resources, which is a bitter enemy of organized labor, and has done everything in its power to keep their employees from organizing to prevent the injustices imposed on them, and after submitting patiently for years to the mercy of the employer, and the fact being established that the company had no regard for their welfare, as their wages and conditions remained the same in the face of the increased cost of living for the last ten years, and

Whereas, The women and girls have been forced to work ten hours for 75 cents per day, and the men and boys ten to thirteen hours per day, for wages from 75 cents to $2.00 per day, they demanded a nine-hour workday, with a 25-cent per day advance on all classes of labor, and full recognition of their union, and

Whereas, The company has absolutely refused to grant any of the demands, but has tried to break the strike and ignore their organization by trying to treat with the individual members, using intimidating and disheartening tactics. Their efforts were unsuccessful, and had the reverse effect; it solidified and made them more determined than ever to stay out until their demands are granted in full, and

Whereas, Their strike has been endorsed by the Taylorville Central Trades and Labor Assembly, and at a mass meeting of all the different members of the trades unions, we therefore appeal to the officers and delegates of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor to endorse their strike and render them assistance to obtain their demands; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, now assembled, do hereby endorse the strike of the Paper Mill Workers of Taylorville, Ill., and stand ready to do everything in their power to help and assist them in their fight for justice.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "Convention City" the committee reported as follows:

Your committee heartily concurs in the sentiment as expressed in the Executive Council's report and recommends that delegates placing cities in nomination for the convention city should be called upon to submit to the convention a carefully prepared statement as to the facilities, hotel and hall accommodations which the cities contain.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "Civil Service Employees Bridled," the committee reported as follows:

Your committee endorses the action which has been taken by the Executive Council, and recommends that continued and vigorous efforts should be made until all civil service employees are in the enjoyment of all the rights of citizenship.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Secretary Frey announced that the report of the Committee on Resolution was completed, with the exception of two resolutions which would be reported on later.

Delegate Urlick announced that Delegate Coffey, of the Lincoln, Nebraska, Central Labor Union, had been ill for several days, and desired that that fact be noted to account for his absence from the convention. He states that Delegate Coffey had been removed to the American Hospital, and requested that the local committee notify the Typographical Union of his illness so they might visit him from time to time while he remained in the hospital.

President Gompers announced that Secretary Morrison would make note of the matter mentioned.

Report of Committee on Building Trades.

Delegate McNulty, Secretary of the Committee, reported as follows:

Resolution No. 18—By Delegates W. D. Huber, Frank Duffy, W. B. Macfarlane, Thomas Flynn, W. J. Kelly, Carl Young and A. M. Swartz, of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America:

Whereas, The erection of the material known as hollow metal trim, sash and doors, metallic trim, sash and doors, and metal trim was awarded to the carpenters by the Hon. Wm. J. Gaynor, who had been selected as umpire in accordance to all the laws and requirements laid down by the Arbitration Plan, in the matter of arbitration between the sheet metal workers on one side and the Joint District Council of Carpenters on the other; and

Whereas, Our General Executive Board has ruled on several occasions that the U. B. of C. & J. of A. claims jurisdiction over the erecting and placing of all hollow metal sash, frames, doors and trim; and

Whereas, The carpenters have been erecting this material since it first appeared on the market, and are still erecting it in New York City, as well as in a number of other cities, for the reason that it is a strictly carpenters' proposition and requires the methods and skill of the carpenters to prepare the grounds in order to apply and properly execute the work; and

Whereas, Every effort is being made by the sheet metal workers and the Kalamazoo Association to deprive the carpenters of the erection of this material; therefore be it

Resolved, That we declare emphatically and unequivocally as a whole to retain the erection of steel and hollow metal trim, sash and doors, in accordance with the rulings of our General Executive Board; and be it further

Resolved, That the officers of the American Federation of Labor and the officers of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor be notified of our action, and that our delegates to the conventions of the American Federation of Labor and the Building Trades Department are hereby instructed to carry out these resolutions.

Secretary McNulty: Your Committee on Building Trades finds that the subject matter of this resolution having been decided by a convention of the Building Trades Department is not properly before this Convention, and can not be brought properly before this convention except on an appeal, properly taken from the action of the Building Trades Department to the first court of appeals, the Executive Council. Therefore, your Committee non-concurs in the resolution, but in doing so desires to inform all interested parties that the non-concurrence therein does not in any way deprive them of their right to appeal in the proper manner.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 17—By Delegates W. D. Huber, Frank Duffy, W. B. Macfarlane, Thomas Flynn, W. J. Kelly, Carl Young and A. M. Swartz, of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America:

Whereas, For some time past there has been considerable conflict between the organization of the U. B. and the Wood-wire and Metallic Lathers as to jurisdiction over the putting on of metal corner-heads and picture moulding; and,

Whereas, At a former meeting of the D. C. of St. Louis action was taken whereby said D. C. emphatically declared that all such work rightfully belonged to the carpenters, and for the purpose of establishing their claim by proof of the work being done throughout the country by carpenters, caused to be sent to the various district councils and local unions of the brotherhood, a circular asking information and facts regarding the placing of said work; in the great majority of replies received it was stated that carpenters claimed and did the work; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the D. C. of St. Louis, that we again reiterate our claim to the said work; and,

Whereas, By the changes in the methods of building construction and the introduction of metal trim taking the place of what was formerly made of wood and put in place by carpenters, the same having brought about a conflict as to jurisdiction, it is therefore

Resolved, That in all such cases where such trim is used that the carpenters claim the right to put it up and will oppose all claims made by any and all of the trades now claiming jurisdiction over the same. We also claim jurisdiction over trim made of wood pulp, straw board, asbestos, etc.; also the setting of all concrete forms, regardless of material used. Be it

Resolved, That the delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to present our claims to said convention, and work for their adoption before that body.

Secretary McNulty: Your Committee on Building Trades finds that the subject matter of this resolution having been decided by a Convention of the Building Trades Department is not properly before this convention, and can not be brought properly before this convention except on an appeal, properly taken from the action of the Building Trades Department to the first court of appeals, the Executive Council. Therefore, your committee non-concurs in the resolution, but in doing so, desires to inform all interested parties that the non-concurrence therein does not in any way deprive them of their right to appeal in the proper manner.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 104—By Delegate Geo. F. Golden, of Illinois State Federation, Rock Island, Ill.:

Whereas, The introduction of metal and combination trim is taking the place of wood in the construction of all modern buildings, and

Whereas, The introduction of this trim is causing jurisdictional fights in the building trades and all such fights are detrimental to the organized labor movement; and

Whereas, The placing in proper position in the building, or in other words, the erecting thereof is done by the sole use of carpenters' tools, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Twenty-eighth Annual Convention of the Illinois State Federation of Labor in regular session assembled, that the erection of the above mentioned trim of right belongs to the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, and, be it further

Resolved, That the delegate elected to the Convention of the American Federation of Labor, to be held at St. Louis, in November, be, and is hereby instructed to use his influence and vote to this end.

Secretary McNulty: Your Committee on Building Trades finds that the subject matter of this resolution having been decided by a convention of the Building Trades Department is not properly before this convention, and can not be brought properly before this convention except on an appeal, properly taken from the action of the Building Trades Department to the first court of appeals, the Executive Council. Therefore, your committee non-concurs in the resolution, but in doing so, desires to inform all interested parties that the non-concurrence therein does not in any way deprive them of their right to appeal in the proper manner.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 94 — By Delegate Thomas Bone, of Central Labor Council, Stockton, Cal.:

Whereas, The International Hod Carriers and Building Laborers' L. U. 73, of Stockton, Cal., is affiliated with this San Joaquin County Central Labor Council, also with the Stockton Building Trades Council, also with the State Building Trades Council, and all with the American Federation of Labor, and its members carry State Building Trades Council working cards, and

Whereas, Only four other local hod carriers' unions of the State will recognize B. T. C. cards (although there are many other hod carriers' unions in this State carrying the same B. T. C. cards) and said other unions require members of the local Hod Carriers' Union No. 73 to pay a new initiation fee and rejoin their union if they go into any other local jurisdiction, thus working a great injustice upon good and loyal union members, to the general detriment of all organized labor and particularly to the hod carriers, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in annual convention assembled hereby declares itself in favor of a universal and interchangeable working card for all hod carriers' unions, and further recommends to the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor that steps be taken at the earliest possible moment to have such laws enacted as will bring about the desired results, with fairness and justice to the hod carriers of this State.

Secretary McNulty: Your committee on Building Trades took no action on this resolution inasmuch as Delegate Bone, the introducer thereof, appeared before the committee and stated that he desired to withdraw same. His request was concurred in by the committee.

The recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council, under the caption, "Chicago Building Trades Situation," the committee reported as follows:

Your Committee on Building Trades partly approves of the results obtained by the Executive Council in uniting the building trades unions of Chicago under a charter of the Building Trades Department.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council, under the caption: "Paper Hangers—Painters," the committee reported as follows:

Your Committee on Building Trades concurs in the action of the Executive Council on this question and commends the Council on the splendid results obtained in the premises.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council, under the caption: "Hod Carriers and Building Laborers," the committee reported as follows:

Your Committee on Building Trades concurs in the action of the Executive Council on this question, and recommends that the subject matter be referred to the Building Trades Department, with instructions that the Department use its best efforts in organizing all hod carriers and building laborers under the banner of the Hod Carriers and Building Laborers' International Union.

On motion, the report of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 41—By Delegate Victor R. Midgley. Vancouver Trades and Labor Council:

Whereas, In almost every locality where there is a local Building Trades Council there are some trades which refuse to join the local council; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Section 38 of the Building Trades Department by-laws, which states that all local unions shall be compelled to join the Local Building Trades Council, be strictly enforced; and be it further

Resolved, That any international organization that fails to compel their locals to join the local councils when notified by the secretary-treasurer or Executive Board of the Building Trades Department, shall be suspended until they obey the instructions of the Department.

Secretary McNulty: Your Committee on Building Trades recommends that this resolution be referred to the Building Trades Department.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 74—Communicated by the New York Building Trades Council:

Whereas, In almost every locality where there is a local building trades council, there are some trades who refuse to join the local council, therefore be it

Resolved, That Section 38 of the Building Trades Department by-laws, which states that all local unions shall be compelled to join the local building trades council be strictly enforced, and be it further

Resolved, That any international organization that fails to compel their locals to join the local councils when notified by the Secretary-Treasurer or Executive Board of the Building Trades Department, shall be suspended until they obey the instructions of the Building Trades Department.

Secretary McNulty: Your Committee on Building Trades recommends that this resolution be referred to the Building Trades Department.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 79—By Delegate Frank J. Weber, of Federated Trades Council, Milwaukee, Wis.:

To the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, Greeting:

Whereas, In almost every locality where there is a Local Building Trades Council there are some trades who refuse to join the local council; and,

Whereas, Such action is at all times detrimental and not to the best interest of the trades union movement; therefore, be it

Resolved, That any international organization that fails to compel their locals to join local councils when notified by the secretary-treasurer or Executive Board of the Building Trades Department shall be suspended until they obey the instructions of the Building Trades Department.

Secretary McNulty: Your Committee on Building Trades recommends that this resolution be referred to the Building Trades Department.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 113—By Delegate P. D. Drain:

Evansville Building Trades Council are asking the adoption of the resolution herein and a copy be given to the delegates who will attend the American Federation of Labor Convention, which will be held in St. Louis, November 14:

Whereas, In every locality where there is a local Building Trades Council there are some trades who refuse to join the local council, therefore, be it

Resolved, That Section 38 of the Building Trades Department by-laws, which states that all local unions shall be compelled to join the local Building Trades Council, be strictly enforced, and be it further

Resolved, That any international organization that fails to compel their locals to join their local councils when notified by the secretary-treasurer or Executive Board of the Building Trades Council, shall be suspended till they obey the instructions of the Building Trades Council Department.

Secretary McNulty: Your Committee on Building Trades recommends that this resolution be referred to the Building Trades Department.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Dock and Bulkhead Builders.

Your Committee on Building Trades considered the application for charter of the Dock and Bulkhead Builders and found that the jurisdiction claim of work conflicted with the jurisdiction claims of one or two affiliated organizations. The Committee, therefore, recommends that this matter be referred to the Executive Council with the recommendation that a meeting be arranged for all parties interested.

On motion the report of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 75—By Delegate John F. O'Flaherty, of Central Trades and Labor Union, East St. Louis, Ill.;

Whereas, In the city of East St. Louis, Ill., the local unions of carpenters, lathers, plasterers and painters have withdrawn from the Building Trades Council to work with and are at the present time doing so, with non-union plumbers, steamfitters, gasfitters, electricians and cement workers, contrary to Section 38 of the laws of the Building Trades Department,

Resolved, That any international union which does not compel its local organizations to affiliate with the Building Trades Council and Central Trades and Labor Union, be instructed by the American Federation of Labor, to revoke that local's charter, and on their failure, the international charter be revoked, until such time as they comply with said constitution. The said resolution to apply to all organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Secretary McNulty: Your Committee on Building Trades recommends that that portion of this resolution relative to the Building Trades Department be referred to the Building Trades Department, and that portion referring to the Central Trades and Labor Unions be referred to the Committee on Local and Federated Bodies.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Secretary McNulty: This completes the report of the Building Trades, and is respectfully submitted,

JOHN DONLIN,
J. C. SKEMP,

Vice-President O'Connell: I desire the unanimous consent of the convention to the introduction of a resolution.

No objection being offered, Vice-President O'Connell introduced the following resolution:

Resolution No. 150—By the delegates of the machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths and sheet metal workers' organizations:

Whereas, The members of the above organizations have been on strike for several months on the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain Railroads to secure shorter hours, better wages and improved conditions of employment, and

Whereas, Every honorable effort has been made to bring about an adjustment of the strike without success; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that we call upon organized labor and its friends everywhere to render all assistance possible to the organizations carrying on this strike by making it publicly known in every way, so that organized labor and its friends may avoid the dangers of traveling over railroads where danger to public and private interests is very great; and be it further

Resolved, That the delegates to this convention, in returning home, keep in mind the conditions existing on the above roads.

A motion was made and seconded that the resolution be adopted. (Carried by unanimous vote.)

Vice-President Alpine, acting as the referee appointed by President Gompers, as provided for in the following resolution, reported that an agreement had been entered into between the parties in interest:

Resolution No. 133—By Delegates T. Healy, C. L. Shamp, Jos. W. Morton:

Whereas, The Twenty-ninth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, held in Toronto, Canada, November, 1909, several conferences were held between the delegates representing the I. U. of S. E. and the I. B. of S. F. for the purpose of arriving at a satisfactory working agreement; and,

Whereas, These conferences have failed to bring about the desired result, and no settlement has been arrived at since that time; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the president of the American Federation of Labor request the delegates of the I. U. of S. E. to confer with delegates from the I. B. of S. F. in conference, and that he appoint a member of the Executive Council to act as referee for the purpose of bringing about a mutual agreement by and between the above-named organizations, and make a report of his findings to this convention.

Agreement.

Agreement entered into this 25th day of November, 1910, between the International Union of Steam Engineers and the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, to the end that in the creation of agreements between the organizations herein mentioned, and the respective employers thereof, better understandings may prevail and the best interests of all be more generally protected. It is mutually agreed by the subscribers hereto, that if the following plan is faithfully adhered to by the organizations at interest, it will serve to effectually remove any and all disputes that have heretofore existed, or that may arise in the future, and we guarantee to carry into effect the full spirit and intent of this agreement mutually entered into.

Section 1. The I. U. of S. E. and I. B. of S. F. shall, through the directions of their respective international officers, cause to be created where local unions of both organizations exist, joint local conference boards of equal representation, which shall meet from time to time as the occasion may require, with the object in view of mutually protecting each other's interests and promoting the creation of joint agreements with their employers. This action shall be taken as soon as possible and not later than January 1, 1911.

Section 2. It shall be the duty of these joint conference boards to assist the international officers of the organizations herein mentioned with regard to the creation of agreements between employer and employee, as well as assisting in the settlement of disputes of any nature that may arise.

Section 3. In the event of disagreement between the conference boards already referred to, the international representatives of both organizations in dispute shall proceed to the scene of such dispute and endeavor to properly dispose of the same. In the event of failure with regard to settlement, the President of the American Federation of Labor shall appoint some member of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to act as referee and the latter's decision shall be final and binding on all parties to this agreement.

Section 4. Since it is mutually agreed by both parties to this agreement, that the question of agreements between the organizations herein mentioned, and the employers thereof, as concerns the date of commencement and expiration of such agreements is primarily the cause for existing differences, it is, therefore, unanimously decided by the subscribers of this agreement, that in the future, when creating new agreements with their employers, the International Union of Steam Engineers and the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, shall make such agreements jointly and these agreements shall be identical with regard to date of commencement and expiration.

Section 5. It is also further agreed, that both organizations shall assist each other in organizing steam plants, and members of the International Union of Steam Engineers who have the hiring of firemen, water-tenders, oilers or helpers, shall hire members of the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, wherever possible.

Vice-President Alpine: I move the adoption of the report of the committee and the ratification of the agreement. (Seconded and carried.)

Report of Committee on President's Report.

Delegate Wilson (W. B.), Secretary of the committee, reported as follows:

Your committee have carefully considered the report of President Gompers, and herewith submit for your consideration our views and recommendations in connection therewith.

Organization and Growth.

It is with pleasure that we note the continued growth and healthy condition of the American Federation of Labor and the different organizations of which it is composed.

Thirty years ago the American Federation of Labor came into existence. Twenty-two years ago it held an annual convention in this city. In the language of President Gompers: "The labor movement and the great cause of justice and humanity for which it stands, can only be understood and appreciated by the studious and by the retrospective view to be taken by the workers who will compare the situation and the condition of the wage-working masses then and now."

We may not be able to observe distinctly the progress that may have been made since yesterday, or the day before, but when we take a retrospective view over the period elapsing since we last met in this city and note the improvement that has taken place in the sanitation of mills, factories and mines, the enactment of laws for the protection of women and children, the better educational facilities which have been secured for the children of the workers, the laws for the protection of life and limb which have come into existence in the different States and the Federal Government, the reduction of the hours of labor in many lines of industry, the increase which has been obtained in wages even where the hours have been shortened, and the improved standard of living made possible by a combination of all of these accomplishments, we are forced to the conclusion that we have been making rapid strides forward, notwithstanding the criticism of those who see no material good in the trade union movement.

The accomplishment of this great work has been made possible by the earnest, intelligent work and self-sacrifice of many thousands of wage-workers, and we feel confident that the work yet to be accomplished will be dealt with in the same intelligent, aggressive and self-sacrificing manner which has made our past accomplishments possible.

We congratulate the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated unions upon the efficient corps of officers and organizers, paid and volunteer, who have so greatly contributed towards securing these results and upon whom, in a great measure the future growth of our movement depends.

We endorse the recommendation of the President to "Let every union member regard it as his mission to organize, to bring at least one fellow worker into membership of his trade union. Let the slogan be: Organize, Agitate, Educate."

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Our Movement Not "Narrow."

We are in entire accord with the President when he says: "Trade unionism is not narrow." Trade unionism is as broad as human endeavor. It knows no distinctions of race, creed, color or nationality. It is the organized expression of human equality and protest against existing wrong. In a word, it is the concentrated movement of the workers for the establishment and maintenance of liberty, equality and justice.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

American Federation of Labor Departments.

We agree with the President's recommendation: "That this convention authorize the selection of a special committee to give consideration to the subject of Departments, the relation of the Departments to the American Federation of Labor, how they can be practically extended and improved, to the end that the cause of labor may be the more effectively pursued and the promotion and advancement of the interests of the workers attain the greatest degree of success."

Your Committee believes that this work can not be performed in a satisfactory manner by any committee in time to report to this convention, and therefore recommends that a committee of five be appointed in accordance with the recommendation of the President, said committee to report to the next convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Porto Rico.

We read with pleasure what the President has to say under this heading of the work attempted; of the work done. We are pleased to note that the higher officials in the island are in sympathy with the hopes and aspirations of the islanders to become citizens of the United States in the full meaning of that term.

We are in entire accord with the President in urging forward the organization of the working people, and their closer and more direct affiliation with the rest of the working people of our common country. We learn with pleasure of the earnest work of the members of Congress who are members of trade unions, and who, led by Congressman Wilson of Pennsylvania, accomplished such splendid results in the framing of laws for the government of the island.

Strikes—Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

We desire to compliment the officers of the organization and the lawyers associated with them for the able manner in which the charges against the United States Steel Corporation were prepared and presented to the Department of Justice. We regret to learn that the attorney general, to whom the president had referred labor's charges, deemed it inexpedient "to take any action until the Supreme Court of the United States shall have decided the bills now under consideration by it from the judgments of the Circuit Courts in the proceedings against the American Tobacco Company and the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, respectively."

We look upon the United States Steel Corporation and its subsidiary companies as being one of the greatest combinations in restraint of trade existing anywhere in the United States; that it affects all classes of our people, from the owner of the tin dinner pail to the controller of the locomotive. Its ramifications extend in every direction and affect every walk in life. It collects tribute from the consumer by controlling the price and from the worker by controlling wages. In our judgment it is of much more importance to the people that the United States Steel Corporation should be compelled to conform to the anti-trust laws than that a special representative of the Department of Justice should waste its time in prosecuting a few Burley tobacco growers in Kentucky, who have committed no crime except that of seeking to protect themselves, if that be a crime, against the oppressive business methods of the Tobacco Trust.

We endorse the recommendation of the president that: "During the approaching sessions of the legislatures in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Alabama and elsewhere, that the State authorities be urged to institute thorough investigations and proceedings against the corporation in so far as it is operating illegally and improperly within the State or States, and it is further urged that the investigation be extended to the industrial and economic conditions prevailing among the workers in the industry."

And we further recommend that the Federal Government, either through the Department of Commerce and Labor, or by special committee of Congress, be urged to make a complete investigation of the operations of the United States Steel Corporation, not only in its iron, steel and tin plates, but also into its methods in the shipping industry on the Great Lakes.

Ladies' Garment Workers and Shirtwaist Makers.

We desire to congratulate the workers upon their earnestness, their solidarity and their success, and to thank those who assisted for the help rendered. We trust that the same quality and the same sympathy and determination that made these struggles a success, and built up the splendid organization which now exists may be employed in maintaining this organization for the further improvement and development of the workers in this industry.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Miners' Strikes and Others.

We are pleased to note the almost general success of the United Mine Workers of America in the struggle entered into by it for increased wages last April, but regret that several thousand miners in what is known as the Irwin Field in Western Pennsylvania, have not yet secured a settlement of their strike.

Although but recently organized, "these men have made, and are still making, a splendid and heroic struggle for better wages and conditions, and for the right to organize for their protection and advancement."

In doing so, they have not only been compelled to meet the power of the great coal corporations that control these fields, but have also been subject to harsh treatment and numerous indignities at the hands of Pennsylvania's Cossack System. The so-called mounted constabulary of that State have been clearly demonstrated to be an adjunct of the employing classes and a menace to the peace of the commonwealth whenever labor disputes arise. The condition of these workmen before the strike commenced was deplorable beyond description, and the feeling of desperation growing out of that condition has been one of the principle main-springs of the heroic struggle they have conducted. It is a condition which no civilized country should tolerate, and which we hope no State in the Union will continue to tolerate when its people become acquainted with the facts.

We recommend that the legislature of the State of Pennsylvania be urged to repeal the law creating and maintaining the Cossack System, and, further, that the Governor of the State or the State Legislature, be urged to appoint a commission to investigate the conditions leading up to the strike in the Irwin Field, and those existing since its inception.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Directly Affiliated Locals.

We note with pleasure what the President says in his report as to the strikes that our directly affiliated local unions have been engaged in and the splendid success attained. We recommend the continuation of giving such moral and financial assistance to these organizations in the future when they become engaged in these difficulties. We heartily endorse the suggestion made by the President in the direction of organizing international unions in given industries from those directly affiliated local unions whenever the membership of the same warrants its being done.

Anti-Trust Law and Injunctions.

We can not do better than re-affirm what was said by this committee and adopted by the Toronto Convention. It is as follows:

"Injunctions in labor disputes are innovations in our modern jurisprudence. The original purpose for which injunctions were issued was to restrain parties to any dispute about the title or damages to property from interfering with this property in question, until the courts had determined the property rights involved. These restraining orders were made returnable at the next term of court, or at the session of court where the cases were to be heard and determined, and consequently were never permanent, expiring by their own limitations when the court had convened to determine the questions at issue. That they are clearly intended to protect property rights, and property rights only, is demonstrated by the fact that the courts invariably insist upon a bond being furnished by the parties suing out the writ to indemnify the parties enjoined for any loss that may accrue to them by virtue of the writ having been issued. When such an order of court has been violated it is not a difficult matter for the court to determine the actual damages, if any, that have been sustained through the issuance of the injunction, thereby protecting the restrained parties against any unwarranted invasion of their rights, but when the court issues an injunction in a labor dispute, restraining persons in controversy with employers from doing those things that they have a legal and moral right to do, and as a result of that injunction the contest is lost to the workers, there is no court on earth that can determine the damage that has been sustained by the persons enjoined, and consequently they can not recover from the bond. When the court arrogates to itself the power to issue injunctions never contemplated by the rules of equity, and in direct violation of constitutional and statutory law, and assumes the right to issue injunctions for the purpose of enforcing criminal law, it departs from the domain of property rights and invades that of personal rights in a manner for which there can be no excuse except that the court thereby becomes the sole judge of the law and the fact, and, if the parties enjoined are declared guilty of contempt, the extent of the punishment. All of which is in direct violation of the fundamental laws of the land and the Anglo-Saxon concept of human liberty.

The great charter of human liberty, the Magna Charta of Great Britain, the basis upon which British and American freedom rests, in Clause 39 declares:

"No free man shall be taken or imprisoned, disseized, or outlawed, or banished or any ways destroyed, nor will we pass upon him, nor will we send upon him, save by the lawful judgment of his peers, or by the law of the land."

The Bill of Rights enunciated by the British Parliament for the protection of the common people and signed by William and Mary upon their accession to the British throne as a condition upon which their title to sovereignty would rest, declares:

Paragraph 1. That the pretended power of suspending of laws, or the execution of laws, by legal authority, without consent of Parliament is illegal.

Paragraph 2. That the pretended power of dispensing with laws, or the execution of laws by regal authority, as it hath been assumed, and exercised of late, is illegal.

The Declaration of Independence declares: "That all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, and that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," and it further assigns as one of the causes for the separation from the mother country and the establishment of an independent government, "for depriving us in many cases of the benefits of trial by jury."

The Constitution of the United States which creates our judiciary gives to it whatever power it can possibly exercise and limits its jurisdictions, says:

First amendment—Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Sixth amendment—In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defence.

Ninth amendment—The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

Tenth amendment—The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

Thirteenth amendment, Section 1—Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

It must be apparent to even the most casual investigators that the courts of the United States hold the same relationship to the Government of our country that the courts of Great Britain held and now hold to the legal power. No one will contend that any judge in Great Britain, either at the time of the adoption of our Constitution, or since that time, could have any greater power than that conferred by regal authority expressed by the Parliament and approved by the King. It naturally follows that our courts can have no greater power than that granted to them by the Constitution.

When the Constitution granted to our judiciary jurisdiction in equity, it could not have conveyed any wider authority than that which existed in English jurisprudence at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, and the quotations we have cited from the Magna Charta, the Bill of Rights and the Declaration of Independence, absolutely deny the right of equity courts to infringe upon personal liberty or existing law. Our government is not only one of delegated powers, but also of reserved powers. The same instrument that created the judiciary and delegated powers to it, reserves all the powers that are not thus delegated to the various States and to the people. When, therefore, any court assumes to exercise powers not delegated to it by the Constitution, it invades the rights specifically reserved by that document to the States and people; its action becomes void from lack of jurisdiction and should not be obeyed.

We are consequently in hearty accord with President Gompers when he says:

"When a judge so far transcends his authority and assumes functions entirely beyond his power and jurisdiction; when a judge will set himself up as the highest authority in the land, invading constitutionally guaranteed rights of citizens; when a judge will go so far in opinion, decision and action, that even judges of the courts of appeal have felt called upon to characterize his action 'unwarranted' and 'foolish'; under such circumstances it is the duty of the citizen to refuse obedience and to take whatever consequences may ensue.

"I repeat and emphasize this fact, that the doctrine that the citizen must yield obedience to every order of the court, notwithstanding that order transcends inherent, natural, human rights guaranteed by the Constitution of our country, is vicious and repugnant to liberty and human freedom, and that it is the duty, the imperative duty, to protest."

Notwithstanding the constitutional limitations mentioned, modern injunctions have taken three distinct lines, two of which are unconstitutional, arbitrary and unjust.

1. Injunctions are issued to protect property rights from irreparable injury where there is no remedy at law. That is the only province in which an injunction properly belongs.

2. Injunctions have unwarrantably been issued for the purpose of enforcing existing statutory and common law arbitrarily invading the jurisdiction of the legislatures and the law courts, thus wiping out of existence that protection against false accusations that free men have fought for and forced from the hands of autocratic kings and tyrannical governments and defended at the cost of their lives, from the days of Guthram the Dane to the present generation of man, the right of trial by jury.

When the legislative branch of the government has specified the punishment for any violation of law, it has provided what, in its judgment is an adequate remedy, and means of prevention, and having provided such remedy, no court has any right to step in over the head of the legislature and provide another remedy.

3. Modern American courts assume the right to issue injunctions interfering with the personal rights of man in exercising free speech, free press, peaceable assemblage, and in their personal relationship with each other. The rights of free speech, free press and peaceable assemblage are specifically guaranteed by the Constitution. They are the fundamental safeguards of a free people which neither courts, kings nor cajolery should be permitted to destroy. The personal relationship between man and man comes clearly within the jurisdiction of the law courts and has no place in the courts of equity, unless upon the assumption by the courts that man is property, an assumption repugnant to the sense of right of all civilized communities and specifically forbidden by the XIII Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. It is under this class of injunctions that the courts have assumed jurisdiction in the now famous Buck's Stove and Range Company case.

In this case, the court, in violation of the expressed terms of the Constitution, enjoins the right of free speech, free press and peaceable assemblage, in addition to proclaiming the false doctrine that patronage and good will in business is property.

Business is divided into two elements. The first element, the stock in trade is property beyond question. The second element, patronage and good will can not by any stretch of the imagination, or by any method of reasoning or logic be considered the property of the man engaged in business. If it is property at all, it can only be the property of the man who has the patronage or the good will to give.

We are pleased to note that upon an appeal to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, Chief Justice Shepard dissents from the decision of the majority of the court.

The division of opinion of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia in this case, together with the widely divergent opinions expressed by different federal courts in various parts of the country, making it practically impossible for even those that are learned in the law, not to mention the ordinary layman, to determine with any degree of accuracy the extent of the jurisdiction and powers of our courts in injunction cases, shows the imperative need that the Supreme Court should pass upon the entire subject matter involved. No better case has yet presented itself for that purpose than the Buck's Stove and Range case and the contempt proceedings growing out of it.

We, therefore, recommend that the Executive Council be instructed to take such steps as may be necessary to carry this injunction case, and the contempt cases growing out of it, to the Supreme Court of the United States in order that we may secure a decision that will define our rights in so far as it can be done in considering these cases, and we further recommend that the Executive Council be authorized to raise funds, either by assessment or appeal, if more be needed, to carry the former recommendation into effect. No matter what position the Supreme Court may take upon the cases at issue, our experience with injunctions during the past 30 years makes it necessary to secure such legislation as will clearly mark the dividing line between Equity Courts and Law Courts and prevent the Equity Courts from ever again usurping the powers of our legislatures and our courts of law.

We have examined H. R. 25188, introduced in the 61st Congress by Representative Wilson of Pennsylvania, and believe it will accomplish the results desired, if enacted into law, and that in addition it will remove the strained construction of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law made by the Supreme Court and destroy any possibility of making the said Sherman Anti-Trust Law apply to the laborer instead of to the product of his labor.

We recommend that this bill be endorsed, and every effort be put forth by the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated branches to secure its enactment into law.

We deem it incumbent upon us to emphasize the warning of President Gompers against the so-called "Life-Savers" injunction bills, introduced for the various reasons enumerated. Most of these bills concede a statutory right to the courts which they do not now possess—to issue injunctions in labor disputes, and then provide a trial by jury in contempt proceedings. Our contention is that when an injunction is issued in a labor dispute, irreparable injury is done to the parties enjoined and to the cause of labor, which no court can compute and no bond can indemnify. The remedy lies in remanding the courts to their proper functions in law and equity, as defined in the Wilson Bill.

Until some change has been secured in the practices of the courts, either through Supreme Court decisions, or legislative enactment, we recommend that every answer to a writ of injunction or a citation for contempt shall insist upon our constitutional right of free speech, free press, peaceable assembly and freedom from interference with our personal rights by the Equity Courts, and the denial of their authority to assume that anyone has a property right in man, his good-will or his patronage.

We can not pass from the consideration of this question without entering our earnest protest against the unjudicial and intemperate language of Justice Wright when passing sentence upon Brothers Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

We reindorse the Wilson Bill 25188 and recommend that it be introduced and its passage urged in every State legislature, and we further recommend that the President's admirable letter to Representative Moon of Pennsylvania, together with a copy of the Wilson Bill, H. R. 25188 be published in pamphlet form for general distribution.

Congress—Its Decadence and Renaissance.

We endorse what the President says upon this subject and would urge upon the members of Congress to insist upon the House of Representatives maintaining the position it was intended to occupy by the founders of our Government, that is the mouth-piece of the people in expressing their desires for legislation and protecting them against the unwarranted, unjust and arbitrary encroachments upon their rights by the executive or judiciary. If this is done there can be no question about the renaissance of Congress.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

House New Rule.

We are pleased to note the change in the rules in the House of Representatives making possible a motion to discharge a committee from consideration of any public bill or joint resolution referred to such committee. We trust that this change will lead to the "lifting of the lid" which has been so firmly held down over labor legislation in the various committees to which it has been referred and we express the hope that the rules may be further amended so as to make the House of Representatives in fact, as it is in name, a house representative of the people.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Summary and Status of Labor Legislation.

We are pleased to note the progress that has been made in securing remedial legislation for the workers, but regret that the Postal Savings Bank Bill was so mutilated and changed as to make it a menace to the interests of the people.

While the law makes provisions for the acceptance of savings in certain postoffices, and thereby gives the security we have been asking for, its beneficence, in a great measure, is destroyed by placing in the hands of the Postal Savings Bank Commission the power to remove 30 per cent, and in the hands of the President the power to remove 65 per cent more of the savings from the communities in which they originate. The remaining 5 per cent goes into a reserve fund for the redemption of certificates of deposit.

We sympathize with the fear that the power to withdraw 95 per cent of the deposits from the community in which they originate will be used whenever it suits the interests of the money power to do so, thereby making the community from which it is withdrawn still more dependent upon the financial centers for the finances with which to transact their local business.

In reviewing the summary and status of labor legislation presented by the President, we note the bills that labor is interested in which have not yet been enacted by Congress, and urge that the Legislative Committee and the Executive Council use their utmost endeavors to have these bills enacted into law during the coming session.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Hughes Amendment—Prosecution of Labor.

Nothing could more clearly show the temper and disposition of the present Congress than its treatment of the Hughes Amendment exempting labor organizations from prosecution under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

The congressional debate upon the passage of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law in 1890, shows plainly that it was not the intention to bring either the organizations of labor or of agriculture within its scope. Indeed, an amendment offered in the Senate by the late Senator George, of Mississippi, was substantially in the language of the Hughes Amendment.

It was afterwards stricken out. It being contended that it was superfluous, as the bill without the amendment, did not include labor or agricultural organizations.

Before passing from the consideration of this matter, we desire to express our appreciation of the intelligent energy of Representative Hughes, of New Jersey, in pressing in the House of Representatives this and other measures in which labor is interested.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Irrational Antagonism to Organized Labor's Protest and Progress.

We endorse the position of the President upon this subject.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Extension of Eight-Hour Law.—Child Labor.—Labor of Convicts.—Employers' Liability.—Compensation.—Department of Labor.—Second-Class Mail Rates.—Insurance Laws and Trade Unions.

We endorse the position taken by the President upon these subjects and commend him, the Executive Council and those associated with them, for their energetic and intelligent work in endeavoring to secure the enactment into law of labor's measures dealing with these subjects and we recommend that these efforts be continued. We further recommend that the different State Federations and central labor unions and the membership within the various States put forth every effort to secure the enactment of such legislation relative to insurance as may be necessary to prevent the interference with the rights of organized labor in the humane work in which our trade unions are engaged."

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Immigration—General and Asiatic.

We are pleased to note in the President's report that: "Great interest has manifested among the representatives (in Congress) on the general subject" of immigration.

We hope that "the veritable flood of bills designed to check immigration" and the work of the Immigration Commission will result in the enactment of legislation which will protect the workers in this country from the unfair competition resulting from indiscriminate immigration.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Asiatic Exclusion.

We are pleased to note that through the efforts of Representative Hayes, of California, some progress has been made towards securing the exclusion of Chinese, Japanese, Koreans, Hindoos and Malays from our shores, and express the hope that the work in this direction may be carried to a successful consummation at an early date.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Oklahoma Constitution—Constitutions of Arizona and New Mexico—Oregon.

We are well pleased at the progress made in protecting the interests of the people in Oklahoma and Oregon and trust that the constitutions of Arizona and New Mexico will do as well, if not better in that direction.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Labor's Practical Political Action.

The success which labor has attained in the recent political campaign has, in our judgment, been due to keeping steadily in mind that labor is partisan to a principle and not to a party; and if we are to continue to be successful, we must keep the same idea constantly in mind. Those we have supported in the recent campaign may or may not carry into effect the principles for which we stand. We must be ever vigilant to defend those principles, even though it becomes necessary for us to oppose those we have recently supported.

We heartily concur in the position of the President when he protests against labor being reduced to a "bargain-counter commodity," and we might add, any other commodity. Labor power is an attribute of life and as such is produced by life and stored up in man. It is a part of man and cannot be separated from him until by its exercise by him it flows from him and then ceases to be a part of him, but becomes instead a product of labor power or of man. While labor power remains stored up in man and is a part of him, it cannot be bought and sold without buying and selling the man of which it is a part.

When labor power is exercised by man it passes from him in the process, is no longer a part of him, but instead is a part of the products of his labor power. Then, and not till then, it becomes a commodity. Then, and not till then, when it is no longer a part of him, it is property. The ownership of one man by another man being repugnant to all conceptions of human right and human liberty, and labor power being created and stored within man, and a part of him ceasing to be labor power the moment it is used, becoming then the product of labor, we protest against the theory propounded by many economists and accepted by some courts and legislators, that labor is property or a commodity than can be bought and sold.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Labor's Rights and Its Economic Power.

We endorse the position of the President upon this subject.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Police Oppression—The "Third Degree."

We endorse what the President says speaking as follows: "While it is the very first maxim in criminal law that every man is presumed innocent of crime until proven guilty, the police 'sweat-box' proceedings are based on the idea that when a man has been arrested the presumption that he is guilty must amount almost to a certainty, and that if sufficiently frightened or put in pain he will tell the truth."

The President protests against this cruelty that has no warrant for its existence except the brute power of barbarism and the traditions derived therefrom.

The exercise of torture, mental or physical, is prohibited alike by law and by ordinary human feeling. Its practice on the part of the police is usurpation that must be stopped.

To this end we recommend to the State Federations and to city central bodies that they urge upon the legislatures of their separate States the enactment of such law as shall put an end to this barbarism perpetrated upon those accused of crime and guard the rights inherent in humanity and presumably sacred in every citizen.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Maintain Labor Day's Significance—Labor Sunday.

We endorse the statements made by President Gompers relative to the significance of Labor Day and Labor Sunday and the impetus given to the labor movement by their proper observance.

We recommend the continuance and extension of the same in accordance with the suggestions of the President.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

International Secretariat.

We are pleased to learn that the correspondence growing out of our affiliation with the International Secretariat has already been productive of good to our movement, notwithstanding the misrepresentation of our movement made by the so-called Industrial Workers and other enemies to our movement. We hope that the closer relationship which must necessarily follow from the personal contact of our delegates with the leaders of the labor movement of Europe will be still more beneficial.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Vital Statistics.

We heartily endorse what the President states in his report relative to this subject. We fully realize that statistics of this character are not as complete and reliable as they should be, and thereby give the opportunity to evade laws already in existence, particularly the Child Labor Law.

We recommend that the International officers of our affiliated organizations and the officers of State Federations and Central Labor Unions endeavor in every way possible to carry out the suggestions made in the President's report.

Our Effective Corps of Organizers.

We have already expressed our appreciation of the effective and intelligent work done by our organizers, and thoroughly endorse all that the President has to say upon this subject.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

The Labor Press.

One of the most effective channels through which trade union propaganda is conducted is the bona-fide Labor Press of our country. Many of the editors of these papers are self-sacrificing enthusiasts in the cause of humanity. We commend the suggestions of President Gompers relative to the Labor Press to the careful consideration of all who are interested in the trade union movement or the "important social problems of the day."

The report of the committee was concurred in.

American Federationist.

We heartily commend the American Federationist to our members and friends, realizing the advantages that can be obtained in the way of information and education from the contributed articles and editorials contained therein upon every phase of the labor movement. We note with interest the improvement in the magazine during the past year, and the high-class of articles contained therein, and recommend that this standard be continued. We also desire to impress upon the members and friends of organized labor the necessity of giving greater support to the magazine by subscribing for the same to a greater degree in the future than has obtained in the past.

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "Labor Representation Committee's Report," the committee reported as follows: We endorse the work that has been done by the Executive Council and the Labor Representation Committee toward securing labor representative in Congress and the State legislatures, and recommend that the work be continued.

The recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

On that part of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "Affiliation With International Secretariat," the committee recommended concurrence in the following recommendations of the Executive Council:

We recommend that a delegate be selected by this convention to attend the Congress at Budapest in 1911.

We also recommend that the following, which we authorized President Gompers to submit to the Paris Congress in 1909 and which the Congress referred to the forthcoming Congress and which was approved by the Toronto Convention, be an instruction to the delegate from the American Federation of Labor to the Congress of the International Secretariat at Budapest, 1911:

Resolved, That the International Trade Union Congress recommends to the trade union centers (General Federation of Congresses) of all countries the discussion of the proposition of establishing an international federation of labor, the autonomy of the trade union movement of each country being ordained and guaranteed, the purpose of the federation being for the protection and the advancement of the rights, interests and justice of the wage-workers of all countries and the establishment of international fraternity and solidarity.

Resolved, That it shall be the purpose of the labor movement of all countries to endeavor to the fullest extent to prevent the workers from one country being induced to emigrate to other countries during periods of industrial depression or when trade disputes exist or are in contemplation; that it shall be the duty of the recognized representatives of the labor movement of the country affected to notify the International secretary, who in turn shall at once communicate the situation to the representatives of the trade union movement of each country.

We also recommend that such delegate be instructed to secure action from the Congress that shall put an estoppel to the promulgation, at least through an official source, to the scandalous misrepresentation of the labor movement from one country into another.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 10—By the delegates of the International Longshoremen's Association:

Whereas, In view of the recent ruling of the Solicitor-General of Immigration that there was no law at the present in the statutes to prevent Chinese, Japanese, or other Asiatic members of the crew of foreign vessels from landing in this country and working the cargo of their respective vessels, and neither the Geary Exclusion Act or the Allen Contract Labor Law afford any protection to the waterfront workers; and

Whereas, All other crafts are afforded protection under these laws from the coolie invasion in their respective callings, except the longshoremen and seamen; and

Whereas, The above ruling of the Solicitor-General of Immigration is past distinction, as it protects only certain crafts and not all citizens of the United States; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, do hereby empower their Executive Council to prepare a memorial to Congress, to legislate either by statute, law or treaty, to the end that all Asiatics (laborers) be excluded from the United States and from the merchant marine of our nation as seamen and to rigidly investigate the rulings of the immigration officials of the Pacific Coast making it possible, as is at present, the custom of admitting hordes of the lowest type of Hindoo coolies to the Pacific ports of the United States; and be it further

Resolved, That every delegate to this convention consider himself a committee of one to agitate this vital question in his home locality, for upon the completion of the Panama Canal this problem must be solved in the Gulf and Atlantic ports, as well as by their brothers on the Pacific Coast.

The committee reported that the subject matter had been dealt with in the report of the committee on the President's report, and that further action was unnecessary.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be concurred in.

Delegate Flynn (J. J.): I believe the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor should make strenuous efforts in regard to the Contract Labor Law. We find that men come into this country at any time the bosses want them. The law at the present time is inadequate. All they need to do is to circulate the statement that labor cannot be secured in this country; that they cannot get men to work. They cannot get men to work ten hours a day for $1.75. That same law covered the photographers when they were out on strike, because men would not work the hours and for the wages they wanted, but they brought men into the country. I believe a committee should be appointed by the Executive Council to try to have the law on contract labor amended.

The motion to adopt the report of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 15—By Delegates W. D. Huber, Frank Duffy, Wm. B. Macfarlane, Thomas Flynn, W. J. Kelly, Carl Young, A. M. Swartz, of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America:

The Sixteenth Biennial Convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, held in Des Moines, Iowa, in September, 1910, instructed its delegates to the A. F. of L. Convention to present the following report of a special committee appointed to consider the question of the payment of insurance or benefits by labor organizations, to the end that some definite action may be taken to protect labor organizations in the payment of said benefits:

To the Officers and Delegates of the Sixteenth Biennial Convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, in Convention Assembled:

Brothers—We, your Committee on Insurance, desire to respectfully submit the following for your consideration:

Having carefully considered the various communications submitted by the general secretary in reference to the demands made by the legal representatives of claimants who have insisted that payment of benefit should be made, and when informed that such payment would be in violation of benefit laws of the United Brotherhood, have invoked the aid of the insurance laws of the several States in which they reside, by inducing the Insurance Commissioners of said States to bring action against the United Brotherhood and its members, in order to secure, if possible, said benefits. Said Insurance Commissioners having stated that the benefit system or laws as set forth in the constitution of the United Brotherhood at this time, was in violation of the insurance laws of said States, and, after having considered sections of said laws with reference to the benefit laws of the United Brotherhood governing the payment of death, disability and other benefits, we are of the opinion that there is a very great necessity for a change in said laws, if we are to avoid the continued threats, demands and litigation that may arise in the future upon the refusal of the general secretary to pay such claims as are in violation of the laws of the United Brotherhood.

Your committee would therefore recommend that all sections of the constitution pertaining to death, disability, and other benefits or claims be so changed that they can not be legally construed as being in violation of the insurance laws of any State, and that the words "beneficial members" be stricken out of our constitution and the words "members in good standing" be inserted; that the word "benefit" be changed to read "donation," and that all sections where reference is made to the payment of death, disability and other benefits shall be so arranged that they shall clearly define and show that the intent under our constitution shall be to make donations to members in all cases of death, disability and other benefits, and in similar amounts as at present stated in the constitution of the United Brotherhood.

We would further recommend that this matter of insurance be referred to the Committee on Constitution for their consideration as recommended, and that such recommendations as shall be made by said committee, if approved by convention, shall be referred to the members of the United Brotherhood for their approval or rejection at the time that other amendments to the constitution are sent them.

We would also recommend that the general secretary and the General Executive Board continue their effort to maintain our laws and protect our organization and its members from all unjust demands or claims, where same has been made by the Insurance Commissioners of any State operating under such laws.

We would also recommend that the question of the payment of benefits, as the same may apply to other trade organizations, shall be referred to the American Federation of Labor at its coming convention, for the purpose of securing the co-operation of all trades represented, to the end that uniform insurance laws may be enacted in the several States, such as will protect all trade organizations and exempt them from the operation of the insurance laws of all States, and that will permit of their continuing the payment of benefits to their members without interference or litigation.

Respectfully submitted,

A. M. SWARTZ, Secretary,
A. D. SLYE,
LEONARD DIEDENRICHS,
J. A. ROBINSON,
M. C. TEBO,

Committee.

The committee reported that the subject matter of the resolution was covered in the report of the committee on the President's report, and that further action was unnecessary.

On motion, the report of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 59—By Delegate Norval White, Jefferson City Trades and Labor Assembly:

Whereas, It is a well-known fact that the first Monday in September is set apart by many State governments to be observed as Labor Day; and

Whereas, The men of labor are losing sight of the importance of observing the day as it should be; therefore, be it

Resolved, By this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, assembled at St. Louis, Mo., that all of the national and international unions so amend their constitutions so as to compel its local unions to take part in the Labor Day celebrations in the localities where they are held, so as to bring credit and not discredit to the labor movement; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to send each national and international union a circular letter within ninety days after this convention adjourns to carry out the request of this resolution.

The committee reported that the subject matter of Resolution No. 59 was covered in the report of the committee on the President's Report and that further action was unnecessary.

The report of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 77—By the delegation representing the Cigar Makers' International Union:

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor, in annual session assembled, that we neither seek nor desire special privileges, but do desire an equal opportunity with all classes.

That we believe and hereby declare that successful and permanent government must rest primarily upon the recognition of the rights of men and the absolute sovereignty of the people.

That no man has natural authority over his fellowman. The basis of his authority is mutual agreement. In society the individual surrender is not to a particular person, but to all. His compensation is the acquisition of an equivalent right over every other member of this community. The people as a whole are sovereign and each individual participant in that sovereignty.

That the success and duration of representative government depends upon responsibility and accountability—the responsibility of the people for their laws and selection of their public servants and the accountability of the public servants directly to the people. Under popular government, meaning in its present evolution the initiative and referendum, and efficient direct primary, corrupt practices and recall laws, general welfare must be the basis of every law and goal of every public servant. The people are responsible for their laws, and the public servant is directly accountable to the people, the result being the necessitated development of both the electorate and the public servant.

That under delegated government, still in vogue in most of our States, the people have no voice in their legislation, thus restraining the development of the electorate, nor have they any voice in the selection of their public servants, thus debauching public service because of the direct accountability of the public servant to the political boss or special interest for his nomination.

That under the convention system every public servant knows the interest of the individual to whom he owes his nomination, hence his inclination to serve a selfish interest.

That under the direct primary law, the public servant is nominated, not by any known individual or interest, but by the composite electorate, hence his inclination must be to serve the general welfare.

That we therefore urge organized labor throughout the United States to make the adoption of the initiative and referendum the issue in every campaign without regard to party lines until such amendment has been adopted and that then a campaign be commenced for adoption of the direct primary, corrupt practices act and recall.

That we urge every council of the American Federation of Labor to study and discuss the Oregon system of Popular Government as explained by Honorable Jonathan Bourne, Jr., in the speech delivered by him in the United States Senate, May 5, 1910.

That we urge all citizens to question candidates for legislative offices as to their attitude upon these questions and refuse to support any candidate, regardless of party, who is not pledged to every voter in his State to work and vote for the initiative and referendum, direct primary, corrupt practices act and recall, substantially in the form of the Oregon laws which have been demonstrated by practical experience to be the best thus far evolved by the brains of man.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 97—By Delegate Thomas Bone, of Central Labor Council, Stockton, Cal.:

Whereas, The first Monday in September of each year has been, and is now set aside as labor's own day, and is so observed throughout the entire country by the members of organized labor, and

Whereas, Organized labor in general observes that day as a holiday, by resting from labor and by fitting celebrations, and

Whereas, Nearly all the national and international unions and associations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor make it compulsory for their members to refrain from work on said Labor Day, thereby causing them to lose a day's pay for that day; and

Whereas, The San Joaquin County Central Labor Council, representing some twenty-nine affiliated locals (and sixteen unaffiliated locals) has at all times been a willing and faithful observer of said Labor Day, its members, with the exception of one union, freely and strictly sacrificing the day's work and its accompanying wage and marching annually unpaid on the streets and otherwise faithfully and fittingly observing and celebrating the day, and

Whereas, It is our sincere belief that all unions should be required to parade on Labor Day without pay on an equal basis without exception, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the San Joaquin County Central Labor Council hereby urges the American Federation of Labor to use its best efforts to have the American Federation of Musicians so amend their constitution that their affiliated locals may be permitted to donate their services in parade on Labor Day, free of charge.

The committee recommended nonconcurrency in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 105—By Delegate Thomas Bone, Central Labor Council, Stockton, Cal.:

Whereas, It is absolutely necessary for the best interests of organized labor, that local unions shall have the right to complete autonomy and self-government in all local affairs, to the end that they may be in a position to meet and successfully combat any and all attacks that may be made upon local organized labor, and

Whereas, Local unions are at all times the best judges of their own local interests in the places where they exist, especially so in matters demanding their immediate attention and decisive action, and

Whereas, It is often the case that the very life of a local union depends upon the prompt and instant moral and financial support and assistance of the other local union in that locality, and

Whereas, Said prompt and instant moral and financial support and aid is often times denied and prohibited to local unions, which are forced by circumstances not of their own creation, to demand said local support in order to preserve their very existence, and

Whereas, The denial and prohibition of prompt and instant moral and financial aid and support to local unions in need of such help, is caused solely by certain unreasonable laws and restrictions of the national and international unions and associations with which the various locals are affiliated, to-wit:

First—The law refusing a local the right to declare a sympathetic strike (locally) without the consent of the national or international, with which it is affiliated.

Second—The law refusing the local the right to assess its members in time of local trouble, without the consent of the national or international with which they may be affiliated.

Third—The law refusing the local the right to place a special initiation fee on "rats" and "scabs" who have worked as strike-breakers; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the San Joaquin County Central Labor Council, representing some twenty-nine affiliated local unions, does hereby respectfully and earnestly urge that the American Federation of Labor (with which this body is affiliated) in regular annual convention assembled in St. Louis, Mo., take decided and prompt action, recommending and instructing the various national and international unions and associations affiliated with said American Federation of Labor, to amend or strike from their respective constitutions and by-laws the above mentioned laws, to the end that locals may be in a position to successfully combat all sudden attacks of any kind that may be made upon them, and, be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor be apprised of the fact that the San Joaquin County Building Trades Council (affiliated with the California State Building Trades Council, and the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor) and representing some twenty-six local unions, has by official action endorsed the above set of resolutions and concurred in this joint request to the American Federation of Labor.

The committee recommended nonconcurrency in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 147—By Delegates Matthew Woll, of International Photo-Engravers' Union, and Andrew J. Gallagher, San Francisco Labor Council:

Whereas, Local Photo-Engravers' Union of the City of Boston, Mass., with approval of the International Photo-Engravers' Union of N. A., in the ordinary and lawful conduct of its organization, solicited into membership craftsmen in this city, unaffiliated with our movement, and in so doing met with the combined and organized opposition of employers to such an extent that membership in the union was cause for their dismissal, notwithstanding their published statement of neutrality, and

Whereas, This combined and organized opposition of employers compelled members of the local photo-engravers' union to assert and protect their rights of association, affiliation and organization by endeavoring to collectively bargain and contract for a better working condition, viz.: reduction of working hours to forty-eight hours per week, payment of time and one-half for overtime, double time for Sundays and holidays, establishment of a minimum wage scale, regulation of apprentices, and protection of their right of association and organization, resulting in a strike, after several months' attempt to negotiate for these improved working conditions, and having made every possible effort to avoid friction, and

Whereas, The employers even before the strike became effective sought to prevent the strike by means of an injunction writ, and have since the calling of the strike secured a number of permanent injunctions not only declaring our strike illegal, because of our attempt to protect our right of association and of organization, and permitting us to defend this right by force of perfect organization, but denying us the right to continue the strike for any other purpose or purposes, such as the establishment of a minimum wage scale, payment of time and one-half for overtime, double time for Sundays and holidays, and regulation of apprentices, and to this end have enjoined us from paying strike benefits directly or indirectly to our members, and

Whereas, The local union was, by order of court, not only compelled to call off our strike and stop paying strike benefits for any purpose, but the employers at the present time, by perverting our motives and misinterpreting our actions, are now attempting to prevent us from paying to members unemployed in this city, by reason of the employers refusing to treat with our members as a union for any purpose, "out of work benefits," by citing the local officers, the international president and international organizer into court for contempt of court for paying benefits to members unemployed, and asking for jail sentence for paying these unemployed benefits, and

Whereas, The success of employers in these proceedings has not only served to prevent the payment of strike benefits, and may serve the purpose of preventing us from paying out of work benefits, thereby laying the foundation for the complete destruction of the power, influence and efficiency of trades unions to enforce a better working condition for its members and prevent future attacks upon working conditions already established, and in addition can only serve the purpose of a precedent, and prove an incentive and encouragement for a still greater destructive exercise of the judiciary power in labor controversies.

Therefore, be it resolved, that the American Federation of Labor take cognizance of the conditions confronting the Photo-Engravers' Union in the city of Boston, and that of organized labor generally, protest this exercise of the equitable power of the judiciary, instruct its president and Executive Council to thoroughly inquire into the situation confronting the Photo-Engravers, and all organized labor, related in the fore part of this resolution, and take such action in this legal and industrial controversy as will secure to the Photo-Engravers and to all organized labor, the rights which rightfully and justly belong to the workers, and obtain for them the conditions of labor deemed fair, just and equitable.

The committee offered the following substitute for Resolution No. 147:

Whereas, The courts have invaded the rights of the Photo-Engravers in the City of Boston by the issuance of injunctions contrary to the letter and spirit of our law; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council be instructed to investigate the situation and render such help to the Photo-Engravers as, in their judgment, is necessary.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be adopted.

Delegate Woll: I want to add a little explanation, something I think the officers of the American Federation of Labor and the affiliated unions should know. While the court in restraining us from continuing our strike and compelling us to call it off based its decision on the union clause in our agreement, during the hearing the court said that our agreement also contained a clause wherein we ask that the foreman be a union man, and that even if we had not the closed shop, as interpreted by him in our agreement any strike to compel the foreman to be a union man was in the nature of a closed shop demand, and would also be illegal. He went further and stated that because we had in our contract an arbitration clause wherein we asked if any differences arose in our shop they might be submitted to arbitration, we could not force by strike a clause of that nature compelling an employer to submit any question of difference to arbitration. Even if he had not founded his ruling on the closed shop he had two others to fall back on to declare our strike illegal. In this case they have prevented us from paying strike benefits.

The question was discussed at length by Delegate Woll.

The motion to adopt the report of the committee was carried by unanimous vote.

Secretary Willson: That completes the report of the Committee on President's Report, all of which is respectfully submitted.

ANDREW FURUSETH,
JOHN S. WHALEN,
OWEN MILLER,
JAMES J. CREAMER,
JAMES L. GERNON,
JOHN A. MOFFITT,
P. J. McARDLE,
JOHN J. KEEGAN,
GEORGE P. FOSTER,
GEORGE BECHTOLD,
THOMAS F. TRACY,
W. B. WILSON,

Secretary Willson: I move the adoption of the report of the committee as a whole. (Seconded and carried by unanimous vote.)

President Gompers: Our fraternal delegates from Great Britain have been in cable communication with the representatives of labor on the other side. As you know, Brother Brace is a member of Parliament of Great Britain, and he has been informed that the election in his district or division will occur on the 13th day of December. He is summoned home in order that he may give his attention, not to his interests, but to the interests of the people he represents. I am sure that he will take with him our very best wishes for his successful return. Having in mind the fact that Parliament has been dissolved and that the general elections will occur, and having in mind the Toronto resolutions in regard to the impending struggle of the workers and of the common people of Great Britain, I drafted two resolutions of a general character supplementary to the resolutions we adopted at Toronto. I shall read them, with your permission, and if permitted I shall ask for their consideration and adoption.

Resolution No. 151—Introduced by President Gompers:

Resolved, That the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at St. Louis, November 14 to 26, 1910, repeats its expressions of appreciation, commendation and encouragement to Britain's great commoner, Lloyd George, in the magnificent contest which he has led and is leading for the establishment of the principle that in any conflict between the rights of humanity and property rights, mankind must be accorded the first and best consideration.

Resolved, That America's parliament of labor extends to the toilers of Great Britain fraternal greetings and sincere good wishes in their great economic struggles and in their impending political contests, that immediate success and permanent triumph in the cause of Britain's common people and humanity in general may be the full measure of their efforts.

The motion offered by President Gompers was adopted by unanimous vote.

Fraternal Delegate Brace and Fraternal Delegate Turner addressed the convention at some length, regretted that they were forced to leave the convention before its close, and again expressed their appreciation of the kindnesses and courtesies that had been shown them during the convention and during their stay in the country.

As the fraternal delegates retired from the convention all the delegates arose and remained standing until they had left the hall, sending them on their way with three hearty cheers.

The President stated that the hour for the special order of business had arrived, and the question of the affiliation of the Western Federation of Miners would be taken up.

Vice-President Duncan: The secretary will reread the report for information only, because the question is already before the house under a motion to adopt.

Secretary Morrison read Resolutions Nos. 128 and 141, and the matter in connection with the application for affiliation contained in the report of the Executive Council, and also read the report of the Committee on Resolutions on the matter.

Delegate Lewis (T. L.): I desire to offer an amendment to the report of the committee. I move to strike out all of the committee's report beginning with the last paragraph on page 3, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "That the Executive Council be instructed to issue a charter to the Western Federation of Miners, giving to them jurisdiction over all permanent workers employed in connection with metalliferous mines, mills and smelters." (Seconded.)

Delegate Walker (J. H.): I would like to offer a motion that has to do with the consideration of the proposition. I move that during the consideration of this question the four representatives of the Western Federation of Miners who are here be given the privilege of the floor for the purpose of discussion. (Seconded and carried.)

Delegate Lewis spoke at length in support of the amendment.

Delegate Ryan (F. M.): I wish to offer an amendment to the amendment. I do this because I have not had an opportunity to attend the conferences mentioned in the report of the Executive Council, and to preserve the rights of my organization.

I move as an amendment to the amendment that we substitute the recommendation of the Executive Council for the committee's report, with the following addition: "That the recommendation of the Executive Council in the machinists' case shall apply to all organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor." (Seconded.)

Delegate Ryan: I understand that at least half a dozen organizations did not have any chance to attend those conferences, and they should have been given that opportunity.

Delegate O'Brien asked for an explanation of the term "permanent workers," used in the substitute.

Vice-President Mitchell: The Western Federation of Miners, under this charter, if it is granted, will not claim jurisdiction over men doing structural work. If a carpenter, an iron worker or a machinist is sent to the plant to erect machinery or do construction work, to work sixty days, or even six months the Western Federation men say, he will not be asked to transfer his membership to the Western Federation of Miners. The word "permanent" must be understood in that connection.

Delegate Walker (J. H.), spoke at length in favor of the amendment.

The question was further discussed by Delegate Ryan (F. M.), who spoke in favor of the amendment to the amendment, and in opposition to the amendment and the report of the committee.

Delegate Kline discussed the matter at some length, and in concluding his remarks, said: "Some time ago I received a resolution from our Butte, Mont., lodge of blacksmiths. It was a protest against the Western Federation of Miners claiming jurisdiction over those blacksmiths at the present time, or that they were going to take them into their organization. We have also had complaints in different parts of the West where we had organized blacksmiths that the Western Federation had put up posters claiming they were a dual organization and they would try to put them out of business. These resolutions were sent to the American Federation of Labor, and it seems to me the Executive Council and the Committee on Resolutions has entirely ignored them, and today we hear of the International Association of Machinists being protected by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor and all the other organizations ignored. We do not intend to give the blacksmiths over to the Western Federation of Miners without a protest.

The question was further discussed by Vice-President Mitchell and Vice-President O'Connell.

Vice-President O'Connell stated that he had no objection to the admission of the Western Federation of Miners, that he would be glad to have them come back to the American Federation of Labor, but he protested against the American Federation of Labor giving jurisdiction over the machinists to any other organization. In concluding his remarks Vice-President O'Connell said he was in favor of the amendment offered by Delegate Ryan and considered it strictly in compliance with the laws of the organization.

Delegate McNulty, for the Electrical Workers, protested against the American Federation of Labor admitting the Western Federation of Miners without defining the jurisdiction and protecting the work of other trades.

Delegate Tobin (D. J.), for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, stated that if another conference were held the teamsters would expect to take part in it and reach an understanding that would protect their rights before a charter would be issued to the Western Federation of Miners.

President Moyer, of the Western Federation of Miners, discussed the matter at some length in a general way, and replied specifically to many statements that had been made by the speakers who had preceded him.

Vice-President O'Connell: In order that we may have a clear understanding, one that may be a guide to us now and in the future, I make this point of law: Section 11, of Article IX of the constitution of the American Federation of Labor says:

"No charter shall be granted by the American Federation of Labor to any national, international, trade, or federal labor union without a positive and clear definition of the trade jurisdiction claimed by the applicant, and the charter shall not be granted if the jurisdiction claimed is a trespass on the jurisdiction of existing affiliated unions, without the written consent of such unions."

I raise the point that this application is a trespass upon the affiliated organizations of the International Association of Machinists; that I have not given my written consent or consent in any way to the charter being granted. I ask the chair to rule whether the application for the charter and the consideration of it at this time is in order.

President Gompers: The chair will state that he is unprepared at this moment to rule on the point of order raised.

Vice-President O'Connell: Will you permit me to make a motion? I move that this convention adjourn to 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, and that the President in that time rule upon the motion. (Seconded.)

Delegate Furuseth: I move to amend by striking out the instructions to the President.

President Gompers: If the point of order is maintained the chair will make answer to it when he has had opportunity to think it over.

Delegate Lewis: I rise to a point of order on the motion made by Vice-President O'Connell.

President Gompers: A motion has been made that we adjourn to 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. Before we adjourn the chair has a matter he thinks is necessary to bring before the convention. I am in receipt of a telegram from Ybor City, near Tampa, which reads as follows:

"Johnson, International Agent, ordered out of town by Citizens' Committee; demands protection.

(Signed):

"JOINT ADVISORY BOARD."

Mr. Johnston is the representative of the international Union located at Tampa as the agent of the Union for the purpose of endeavoring to bring about any adjustment possible with the employers. Of course, I refer to the Cigar Makers' troubles.

Secretary Morrison: I move that President Gompers be authorized in the name of the American Federation of Labor to send a protest to the Governor of Florida against the treatment being accorded representatives of labor in that State, and demand protection.

The motion offered by Secretary Morrison was seconded, and carried by unanimous vote.

At 6:40 p. m. the convention was adjourned, to reconvene at 9 o'clock a. m., Saturday, November 26th.

Eleventh Day's Proceedings—Saturday, November 26, 1910.

The convention was called to order at 9 a. m., Saturday, November 26, President Gompers in the chair.

Absentees—DeVeaux, Kennedy, Koch, Glover, Dougherty, Dolan (C. T.), Duffy (Frank), Richardson (P. F.), Humphrey, Barnes, Fay, Monaghan, Healy, Bechtold, Meyer, Dyche, Wettengel, Nestor, Moffitt, Maher, Grahame, Gehring, Coakley, Vurpia, Price, Call, Perry, Valentine, Dunachie, Winkler, Carey (D. A.), Kelley (Samuel), Evans (D. J.), Carey (J. T.), Dold, Donlin, Smyth, Murphy (Patrick), Nelson, Roth, Berry, Mallin, Carrigan, Riley, Hart, Berry, McHugh, Mitchell (M.), Evans (Jo), Grimshaw, Teagarden, Carolan, Hatch, Drake, Mikel, Skaggs, Pfeiffer, DeNedrey, Lee, Eckenrod, Murray, Creamer, Berger, Joyner, Cathon, Maddox, Hirsh, Jennings, Baum, Hudson (Fred), Courtenay, Klefer, Andrick, Zepp, Britt, Wentz, Kleyhauer, Nystrom, Wilson (G. F.), Smith (J. U. P.), Silger, Laws, Fear, Bramlette, Hippert, Smith (O. P.), Fahey, McGill, Zeigler, Hunter, Bell, McGeary, Keough, McDonald, Wood, Niven, Cotter, Rizzie, James, Stafford, Goodwin, Skelley, Gaede, Siebert, White, Swenson, Carter (C. A.), Bartholomew, Hubbard, Leibowitz, Greenbaum, Miller (A.), Dunne, Lippert, Harris, Hudson (Mabel), Goldstein, Nihil, Davis, Lorenzen.

Secretary Morrison read communications containing invitations to hold the next convention in Atlanta, Georgia, from Local No. 23, Journeymen Barbers' International Union; from the Building Trades Council of Atlanta; from the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of America, and from the Georgia branch of that organization; from the Atlanta Federation of Trades, and Local Union 1004 Carpenters and Joiners of America.

Secretary Morrison read telegrams from Indianapolis, Indiana, inviting the convention to be held in that city, from Mayor S. L. Shank, former Mayor Bookwalter, the Commercial Club, Chief of Police Martin Hyland, and from Governor Thomas R. Marshall.

A communication was read from the Niagara Falls Bureau of Conventions, inviting the American Federation of Labor to hold its next convention in that city.

The order of business pending at the time of adjournment, Friday evening, November 25, the consideration of the application for a charter of affiliation by the Western Federation of Miners, was deferred until the printed proceedings of the previous days' session could reach the hall.

Report of Committee on Labels.

Delegate Tobin (J.) for the committee, reported as follows:

Your committee on Labels submits the several resolutions referred to it for consideration and report as follows:

The following recommendations are made in the opening of this report so as to cover the requirements of such of the resolutions as contain features that appeal to our judgment as deserving of favorable action by this convention.

Complaint being made that irregular methods in the use of the labels of the American Federation of Labor by employers and by locals to which labels are issued, your Committee reports in favor of instructing the officers of the American Federation of Labor to prosecute under the law any illegal use of the label, and to see to it that local unions receiving labels shall be required to safeguard the proper use of the same.

Your Committee suggests for the purpose of narrowing down the fixing or responsibility for careless or improper use of the label, that the number of the local to which the labels are issued shall be printed in red ink on each label.

We further recommend that wherever possible a cloth label be used and that it be stitched on neckties, suspenders and such other merchandise where it is possible or practical to have the label sewed or stitched in.

We also advise that labels shall be issued at the net cost price, and shall not be made a source of profit either by the American Federation of Labor, or the locals to which they are issued.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee as far as read, be adopted.

The report was discussed briefly by Delegate Sullivan (J. L.), and Delegate Tracy (T. F.).

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 31—By Delegate C. F. Russi, Jr., delegate from San Antonio Trades Council:

Whereas, It has been the custom of merchants throughout the country to cheat and defraud union men when demanding the union label on goods by removing labels that are glued on goods and placing them on non-union-made goods; therefore, be it

Resolved, That all labels issued by the American Federation of Labor be sewed on all union-made goods.

Chairman Tobin: Your committee reports adversely because of the manifest impossibility of carrying out the requirements of the resolution.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be concurred in. (Carried.)

Resolution No. 35—By delegates of the Coopers' International Union:

Whereas, The Coopers' International Union having adopted a new label to be used on repaired slack barrels, respectfully requests the American Federation of Labor to give the same its endorsement; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that the new label of the Coopers' International Union for repaired slack work as above depicted be, and the same is hereby endorsed.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 50—By Delegate D. W. Robinson of Central Council, Portland, Ore.:

Whereas, The present method of labels, emblems, etc., existing in the affiliated organizations of the American Federation of Labor is very confusing; and

Whereas, It should be our desire as union men to cement the interests of all workers into as close and compact a relationship as possible, and

Whereas, We believe that the establishment of one universal label will result in much good to the entire labor movement; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention that the Executive Council is hereby authorized and instructed to make a thorough investigation of the matter and report to the next annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Chairman Tobin: Your committee recommends non-concurrence in the resolution because of its being impractical. It is our opinion that well established labels would suffer a serious setback and the difficulty set forth in the resolution would be overcome and all labels benefited if more energy and financial support was given to establish the obscure labels by the organizations controlling them.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in. (Carried.)

Resolution No. 58—By Delegates Henry Koch and Chris Kerker, of Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union:

Whereas, The label of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America represents bread and other bakery and confectionery goods made under fair and sanitary conditions, honest wages, living hours, and by union men, and

Whereas, The label of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America is the only proof of same, as it distinguishes union from nonunion; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, re-endorse the label of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America; and be it further

Resolved, That every member of each affiliated union be and is hereby requested to ask for the union label on all products he or she may purchase, thereby showing or proving his or her loyalty to the cause of unionism in a substantial manner.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 72 was referred by the Committee on Labels to the Committee on Law.

Resolution No. 56—By Delegate Samuel Leibowitz 12674, Mineral Water Workers:

Whereas, The label of the American Federation of Labor is being counterfeited by several manufacturers in the city of New York; and

Whereas, The counterfeiting of said label of the American Federation of Labor, is very detrimental to the progress and welfare of the different federal local unions of the American Federation of Labor in the City of New York; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that the President and Executive Council be and are hereby instructed to take this matter up at once, and prosecute the offending manufacturers, and stop the counterfeiting of the label of the American Federation of Labor.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 36—By Delegate John S. Whalen, of New York State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, There has been successfully carried on for a number of years by the Brooklyn Central Labor Union, what is known as the Union Label Fair, which has effectively promoted the sale of union-made goods. Realizing that the plan would be more effective if such fairs were held in different parts of the country and promoted by the American Federation of Labor, and through them the manufacturers of union-made articles throughout the country would be induced to exhibit; be it

Resolved, That we endorse the plan conducted by the Brooklyn Central Labor Union and recommend the same to the American Federation of Labor Convention, to be held in St. Louis, and that the delegate of this body be instructed to present the same to the convention for action.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 23 be amended to read as follows:

Resolution No. 23—By Delegate T. J. Carolan, of International Brotherhood of Tip Printers:

Whereas, The value and utility of the union label as an organizing factor is firmly established among trades unionists, and

Whereas, The International Brotherhood of Tip Printers, who do gold, silver and metal printing and embossing in hats, caps, badges and novelties, has the greatest difficulty in organizing the tip printers in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and other cities, because of the fact that the master tip printers have seen fit to lock them out for a number of years, and openly declared that no union man shall ever work in their shops again, a threat which they have lived up to to a man, and all because the tip printers had courage to ask a little more wages so as to keep themselves and families from want, and

Whereas, Some of the master tip printers have gone so far as to degrade their men by putting up a prize of $10 every six months, and the man working the most flesh from his hands, and the largest amount of blood out of his veins is the winner of this miserable and degrading prize, and

Whereas, A very large amount of the printing done in the non-union shops is placed in union hats and caps, and this work comes from union hat and cap manufacturers, who send the printing to non-union shops to have it printed and then place it in their union goods, and

Whereas, We believe that we have a just right to demand from organized labor that it should see that all printing in union hats, caps, badges, etc., is strictly union and done by union men, bearing the label of the International Brotherhood of Tip Printers; therefore, be it

Resolved, That all organizations, national or federal, having in their organization members working on tip printing presses and doing work which rightfully belongs and comes under the jurisdiction of the International Brotherhood of Tip Printers, be instructed by this convention to surrender all such members who are doing tip printers' work and working on tip printing presses, to the International Brotherhood of Tip Printers.

Resolved, That we protest against the premium system and deplore the fact that workers are so blind as to lend themselves to the man-killing method pace-making which degrades the workers and reduces the wages of the average worker below the living point.

The committee recommended that the last Resolve be referred to the Adjustment Committee, and that the rest of the resolution be adopted as amended.

Delegate Kelley (W. J.): I move that the last Resolve be referred to the Executive Council. (Seconded and carried.)

The recommendation of the committee in regard to the rest of the resolution was adopted.

Chairman Tobin: This report was prepared several days ago while the various committees to which resolutions are referred were in active operation.

Resolution No. 20—By Delegate J. T. Carey of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers:

Whereas, A great bulk of news paper, book paper and writing papers are generally purchased in large quantities, over which the individual purchaser has no control; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor shall, immediately after the adjournment of the convention, communicate with the officers of the Newspaper Publishers' Association, in an endeavor to have all paper used by publishers who are members of said association bear the label of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, and, be it further

Resolved, That the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, either by circular letter or otherwise, request that committees from all local unions, central bodies and State federations use their best endeavors, by the adoption of resolutions, communications or by conferences with all publishers in their respective localities to secure paper bearing the label of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers; and be it further

Resolved, That all national and international unions, local unions, central bodies, State federations and consumers of paper use their best endeavors to procure paper bearing the label of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers in all trade union publications and stationery used by them, and use their best endeavors to advance the use of paper bearing the label of the International brotherhood of Paper Makers.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 2—By the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America:

Whereas, The stock label of the American Federation of Labor denotes a strictly union-made article when appearing on same; and

Whereas, Badgemakers throughout the United States are using the A. F. of L. stock label on badges that bear non-union-made metal parts, thereby deceiving the purchasers of strictly union-made products; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at St. Louis, Mo., November, 1910, do hereby order badgemakers using A. F. of L. stock label to purchase union-made steel parts bearing the union label and all parts coming under the jurisdiction of the International Jewelry Workers' Union of America; and be it further

Resolved, That the A. F. of L. stock label be withdrawn from badgemakers not complying with this law.

Chairman Tobin: Inasmuch as the authors of the resolution did not appear before your committee or express a desire to be heard, we report non-concurrence in the resolution, because it seems impossible to meet the requirements of the resolution.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be concurred in. (Carried.)

Resolution No. 40—By Delegates A. McAndrew and E. Lewis Evans, of Tobacco Workers' International Union:

Whereas, The promotion of the union label of each respective trade or craft in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor is one of the chief essentials of success,

Whereas, The Tobacco Workers' International Union has adopted a union label to distinguish the union from the non-union products on tobaccos, cigarettes and snuff, and

Whereas, The Tobacco Workers' International Union have been for the past fifteen years and at the present time are consistently engaged in a continual educational and agitation campaign to create a greater demand for tobaccos, cigarettes and snuff that bears the label of the Tobacco Workers' International Union; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the delegates to the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled in St. Louis, November, 1910, realize it our duty to aid and assist with our moral support in creating a greater demand for union labeled tobaccos, cigarettes and snuff; and be it further

Resolved, That at the present time there are some two or three thousand brands of tobaccos, cigarettes and snuff on the market bearing the label of the Tobacco Workers' International Union, superior in quality and cleanliness to non-union brands; that we therefore assert that there can be no valid excuse for members of organized labor for purchasing non-union products with money earned under union conditions.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 117—By Delegate Walter Gazzolo, I. A. B. P. and B. of A.:

Greeting: The International Alliance of Bill Posters and Billers, being a young organization, and desirous of bringing their labor in more common use amongst the various crafts who should use it; therefore, be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, through which delegates at this convention instruct the affiliated local, both national and federal, and city central body, to see that the label of the International Bill Posters is placed on all advertising matter, such as cards and posters.

Chairman Tobin: Your committee recommends that the purposes of the resolution be carried out as far as practicable.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 107—By Delegate J. C. Skemp, of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, by request of Local Union 201, Albany, N. Y.:

Whereas, The private trade-marks placed upon goods by manufacturers are calculated to confuse or mislead those who desire to buy union goods, in some instances are designed for that purpose, and

Whereas, The increasing number of genuine union labels and devices to distinguish union-made products and union establishments are themselves confusing to union men and their friends who desire to patronize union labor, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Label Department of the American Federation of Labor devise and copyright a union label for general and universal use by all crafts affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and that upon the special label be provided a space for the insertion of the title of the organization issuing it and of the individual firm or corporation manufacturing the goods upon which it is placed, so that the intending customer may be fully informed as to the conditions under which the goods are produced.

Chairman Tobin: The committee non-concurs in the resolution, because it is believed that greater confusion would result if it were adopted.

On motion the report of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 100—By Delegate Thomas Bone, of Central Labor Council of Stockton, Cal.:

Whereas, The Union label on union made products and the demand for goods bearing said label is one of the most potent, if not the most powerful, weapons within the hands of members of organized labor for the betterment of the conditions of the wage-earners of the land; and

Whereas, There are at this time so many and so varied union labels of the different trades and crafts that a great many members of organized labor do not know the labels of the other crafts, and those outside the ranks of labor (whose sympathies are with labor) must of necessity be confused by such numerous labels and the work of the Label Leagues is greatly hampered by so many and so different labels, and believing that this confusion could and should be eliminated; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in annual convention assembled, take action at this time to arrange for a joint committee with representatives from all national unions having emblems, labels or union signs, that some form of universal union label may be adopted for the use of all unions affiliated with said American Federation of Labor, and that this convention does now declare itself in favor of such a universal union label.

The committee recommended non-concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the report of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 96—By Edw. P. Baum, Belleville, Ill., Trades and Labor Assembly; Thomas Rumsey, Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers and Brass Workers' International; Frank Grimshaw, Stove Mounters' International Union:

Whereas, The Union Label of some of the trades working in the stove and foundry industry has been in a good many instances issued to companies who are unfair to other craft unions, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Board of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to confer with the International officers of all the International Unions affiliated with the Metal Trades Department, with a view of establishing an allied Metal Trades Union Label.

The committee recommended that Resolution No. 96 be referred to the Metal Trades Department.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Chairman Tobin: That concludes the report of the committee.

Vice-President Duncan: For some time there has been a contention between the Structural Iron Workers and the Boiler Makers, and many efforts have been made to have a final adjustment. Among themselves they settled a great many things, but a few were left on which they could not agree. The presidents of both organizations came to me since this convention has been in session and asked that I agree to act as an arbitrator in these disputes. Both parties agreed that the arbitration would be final and binding and settle the disputes that have been going on between them. I have attended to the duty, and it is the wish of the two organizations as well as myself as arbitrator to make the decision a part of the records of this convention.

Mr. F. M. Ryan, International President International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers:

Mr. J. A. Franklin, International President,
Brotherhood of Boiler Makers and Iron Ship Builders:

Dear Sirs and Brothers:—

In accordance with your joint request that I should arbitrate certain points in dispute between your International Associations I accept the position of arbitrator and herewith render a decision on the points submitted for my arbitration which were as follows:

"As to the jurisdiction of each organization to the following work:

1. All sectional or other steel stocks erected in office buildings and hotels; all stacks erected in small power plants in connection with hotel or office buildings, and all extensions to such stacks in buildings herein mentioned.

2. All other steel or iron stacks, viz.: All stacks in connection with power plants, blast furnaces, rolling mills and manufacturing plants and all other power plants, not included in Section No. 1.

3. Repairs to stacks mentioned in Sections 1 and 2.

4. All connections between boilers and stacks (commonly known as breeching) built of sheet steel or iron. All trusses, supports or hangers for same."

I decide as follows:

Section No. 1. All sectional or other steel stacks erected in office buildings and hotels. All stacks erected in small power plants, in connection with hotel or office buildings. All extensions to such stacks in buildings herein mentioned shall be considered as structural iron workers work.

Section No. 2. All other steel or iron stacks shall be considered Boilermakers work viz.: All stacks in connection with power plants, blast furnaces, rolling mills and manufacturing plants and all other power plants, not included in Section No. 1 to be erected by Boilermakers.

Section No. 3. Repairs on the stacks awarded to the Structural Iron Workers, shall be done by Structural Iron Workers and repairs on stacks awarded to Boilermakers shall be done by Boilermakers.

Section No. 4. All connection between boilers and stacks (commonly known as "Breeching") built of sheet steel or iron, shall be done by Boilermakers. All trusses, supports or hangers erected for same to be done by Structural Iron Workers.

Respectfully submitted,
JAMES DUNCAN,

First Vice-President American Federation of Labor Arbitrator.

Vice-President Duncan: I move that this award be ratified by this convention, and made part of the official proceedings. (Seconded and carried.)

Report of the Committee on Law.

Delegate Tazelaar, secretary of the committee, reported as follows:

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 26, 1910.

The Committee on Law begs leave to submit for your consideration the following subjects which were referred to them, also the recommendations of the committee.

Resolution No. 1—By Hair Spinners' Union No. 12353:

Whereas, We consider the strike benefits paid by the American Federation of Labor too small compared with the high cost of living, and we believe we can get better results in case of trouble by keeping the members together, because we find when the money runs low they become dilatory and indifferent to their obligation and duty; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Section 5 of Article XIII of the constitution of the American Federation of Labor be amended by striking out "$4 per week for each member" and inserting "$6 per week for each member."

The committee recommended non-concurrence in the resolution.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 25—By Delegate John B. Lennon of the Tailors' Union:

Amend Section 1 of Article III, to read:

Section 1. The convention of the Federation shall meet annually at 10 a. m., on the second Monday in August, at such place as the delegates have selected at the preceding convention.

The committee recommended that the third Monday in November be substituted for the second Monday in August.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be concurred in.

Delegate Wilson (James): I move as an amendment to the report of the committee that the convention of the American Federation of Labor shall meet annually at 10 o'clock a. m., on the second Monday in June, at such place as the delegates have selected at the preceding convention, beginning with 1912. (Seconded.)

The question was discussed at length by Delegate Wilson (J.), Treasurer Lennon, Delegate Young, Delegate Furuseth, Delegate Lavin, Delegate Keegan, Delegate McCullough (E. S.), Delegate Mahon and Delegate Flannery.

On motion debate was closed.

The amendment offered by Delegate Wilson was lost, 45 votes being cast in the affirmative and 136 in the negative.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was lost.

Vice-President Huber in the chair.

Resolution No. 84—By Wm. J. Tracy, United Association Plumbers, etc.:

Whereas, The organizers of the American Federation of Labor are compelled to visit all sections of the country in the interest of our movement, and

Whereas, The organizers are continuously required to meet the constantly increasing expenses of hotel and other accommodations, the present allowance of $2.50 per day being inadequate, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Executive Council is hereby instructed to allow the organizers not less than $3.50 per day for hotel expenses.

Secretary Tazelaar: The committee finds that the matter is now covered by the constitution of the Federation, Section 7, Article IX, and therefore recommends the same favorably to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 118—By Delegate Geo. F. Golden, of the Illinois State Federation of Labor:

Whereas, It is universally conceded by the trades unionists that the State branches of the American Federation of Labor are important factors in advancing the welfare of organized labor, both in the industrial field and in securing legislation favorable to the workers; and,

Whereas, It is extremely difficult, without the active co-operation of the American Federation of Labor, to secure affiliation of all local branches of the national and international organizations, thereby throwing the burden of financing the State Federations upon a portion of the union men and women of the several jurisdictions. With a united membership much more effective organizations would be placed in the field at a smaller individual cost than at present and the work of the State Federations be more nearly in accord with the theory advanced for the formation of such bodies; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Article X, Section 1, of the Constitution be amended to empower the secretary of the American Federation of Labor to collect one-half cent per capita per month, on the full membership of all trades affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, the same to be forwarded to the secretaries of the various State Federations on a pro rata basis of the union men in their jurisdiction.

The committee recommended non-concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 124—By Victor L. Berger, of Wisconsin State Federation of Labor. Affiliation of Locals with Central Bodies:

Whereas, It is now universally acknowledged by the trade unionists throughout the United States that the State Federations of Labor are an important factor to obtain favorable legislation and other benefits for the toilers; and

Whereas, Under the present law of the American Federation of Labor it is found to be impossible for the international unions to compel their local unions to join State Federations, thereby failing to contribute their share of the labor and expense required in the enactment of protective laws for the toilers; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Section 2 of Article XI, of the Constitution of the American Federation of Labor be abolished, and the following section substituted:

"The national and international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor shall, on or before the first day of May, 1911, notify their local unions that they must, within sixty days after notification, join the chartered central labor bodies and departments in their vicinity, also join the chartered State Federation of Labor in their respective States. Any local union failing to carry out said instructions within sixty days after said instructions are received, shall have its charter revoked by the national or international union with which said local is affiliated."

Secretary Tazelaar: Your committee recommends non-concurrence, offering the following substitute:

1. "That the Executive Council be, and are hereby directed to communicate with the Executive Officers of all National and International Unions requesting them to urge all local unions to affiliate with State Federations and City Central Bodies and Departments, and at the same time request all affiliated International and National Unions to adopt laws requiring every local union to affiliate with State and City Central Bodies and Departments, a communication also to be forwarded to all conventions of National and International Unions affiliated with the Federation, and when it is possible the Council shall send a representative to such convention and urge this matter upon the attention of the delegates.

2. "The secretaries of all State and City Central Bodies are requested to notify the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor of the non-affiliation of local unions of the affiliated National and International Unions."

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 126—By Delegates E. Frank Moorehouse, Dan J. Evans, Sam Kelly, Jacob Tazelaar, J. C. Skemp, Delegates of Brotherhood of Painters, and Decorators, and Paper Hangers of America:

International or national organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and in good standing, shall not be discriminated against when applying for membership in any of the departments where such trades or organizations have been granted jurisdiction over the work which the department controls.

On applications for admission the department shall issue a certificate of affiliation without delay.

Secretary Tazelaar: Your Committee on Law recommends non-concurrence in this resolution and offers the following substitute:

"That while each department should be permitted to determine the character of their membership through the affiliation of national and international unions, we still hold that all laws of the American Federation of Labor must be observed, and that departments failing or refusing to admit to membership any national or international union making application, shall give to the American Federation of Labor the reasons for so doing and the grounds upon which such affiliation is denied."

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Your committee also recommends that Section 1 of Article X be amended by striking out the words "one-half" and insert in lieu thereof the words "three-fourths," so that the section would read:

Article X.—Revenue.

Section 1. The revenue of the Federation shall be derived from a per capita tax to be paid upon the full paid-up membership of all affiliated bodies, as follows: From International or National Trade Unions, a per capita tax of three-fourths of one cent per member per month; from Local Trade Unions and Federal Labor Unions, ten cents per member per month, five cents of which must be set aside to be used only in case of strike or lockout; Local Unions, the majority of whose members are less than eighteen (18) years of age, two cents per member per month; from Central and State bodies, $10 per year, payable quarterly.

A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed by Delegate Mahon, who opposed the recommendation of the committee.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was lost.

Secretary Tazelaar: That completes the report of the committee.

Delegate McDevitt: Resolution No. 91 was submitted to the Committee on Laws, and has not been reported on.

The committee stated that a report would be made on Resolution No. 91 later.

President Gompers: The proceedings of yesterday's session are here. The consideration of the application for a charter by the Western Federation of Miners will be taken up. The secretary will read the matter under consideration.

Secretary Morrison read the report of the committee on Resolutions No. 128 and No. 141, and the various motions pending.

President Gompers: The chair desires to ask whether Delegate O'Connell presses his point of order for a decision.

Vice-President O'Connell: That was my purpose in making it.

Delegate Lewis (T. L.): Last evening I raised a point of order, but was not permitted to state it, according to these references. I desire to state it now.

President Gompers: The chair submits that there can be no point of order on a point of order.

Delegate Lewis: I am not going to raise a point of order on the point of order. The point of order I was making last evening was on the motion made by Delegate O'Connell, offered to instruct the President of this convention to make a ruling. The point of order I was going to make is to this effect:

Delegate O'Connell himself was a party to the conference in Indianapolis, a party to the tentative agreement. He considered the application as a member of the Executive Council. The report of the Executive Council was considered here, the resolutions bearing on this subject were introduced. Later on the matters were referred to a special committee, and a motion was made to adopt the report of that committee. An amendment was entertained by the chair, after I asked if an amendment was in order. Delegate O'Connell discussed the question. Then he raised the point on the law.

President Gompers: The instructions contained in the proposed motion of Delegate O'Connell were not adopted by this convention. I therefore had no instructions in regard thereto.

On the point of order raised by Delegate O'Connell the chair has this to say: The point of order is based upon Section 11, Article IX of the constitution of the A. F. of L., reading as follows:

"No charter shall be granted by the American Federation of Labor to any national, international, trade, or federal labor union without a positive and clear definition of the trade jurisdiction claimed by the applicant, and the charter shall not be granted if the jurisdiction claimed is a trespass on the jurisdiction of existing affiliated unions, without the written consent of such unions."

The question involves the point of whether a charter can be issued to the Western Federation of Miners with the claim of the delegate of the International Association of Machinists that its jurisdiction is being trespassed, and that it has not given its consent to the issuance of the charter. The constitutional provision quoted as a barrier was adopted in the convention of the American Federation of Labor in the year 1900. The following year the convention of the American Federation of Labor appointed a special committee for the purpose of more clearly defining the policy of our Federation upon the question involved, and as developed by the results of the operation of Section 11, Article IX of the Constitution. That special committee reported to the convention of 1901, and that report was adopted. That declaration of the 1901 convention contains the following:

"We realize that it is impossible to define the exact line of demarcation where one trade or form of labor ends and another begins, and that no hard and fast rule can be devised by which all our trade unions can be governed or can govern themselves.

"We emphasize the impossibility of the establishment of hard and fast lines; but if history and experience in the labor movement count for aught we urge upon our fellow workmen that toleration and forbearance which are proverbial of our movement; for, without the recognition and application of these qualities any decision we may formulate will be futile. We therefore, recommend as follows:

"As the magnificent growth of the American Federation of Labor is conceded by all students of economic thought to be the result of organization on trade lines, and believing it neither necessary nor expedient to make any radical departure from this fundamental principle, we declare that, as a general proposition, the interests of the workers will be best conserved by adhering as closely to that doctrine as the recent great changes in methods of production and employment make practicable. However, owing to the isolation of some few industries from thickly populated centers where the overwhelming number follow one branch thereof, and owing to the fact that in some industries comparatively few workers are engaged over whom separate organizations claim jurisdiction, we believe that jurisdiction in such industries by the paramount organization would yield the best results to the workers therein, at least until the development of organization of each branch has reached a stage wherein these may be placed, without material injury to all parties in interest, in affiliation with their national trade unions."

Then the declaration proceeds to state that this declaration shall not change decisions of the American Federation of Labor regarding jurisdictional claims heretofore made. That declaration of the 1901 convention has not been changed by the American Federation of Labor. It was a deliberate act of the convention of the American Federation of Labor, and, fully conscious of the existence of Section 11 of Article IX of the constitution; and, in so far as that declaration is concerned, it is a modification of and a construction upon Section 11 of Article IX of the constitution.

The chair holds that it is for this convention to determine the limitation upon which a charter may be issued to the Western Federation of Miners, but that the point of order, as raised by Delegate O'Connell, is not sustained.

Vice-President O'Connell: This is the first time in the history of the American Federation of Labor since I have been connected with it, that I have been compelled to take an appeal from the decision of the chair, and I do so.

President Gompers: Vice-President O'Connell takes an appeal from the decision of the chair. He has the floor.

Vice-President O'Connell made an extended statement in regard to his taking the appeal.

President Gompers made a statement of his reasons for declaring the point of order raised by Vice-President O'Connell not sustained.

The decision of President Gompers was sustained by a vote of 146 in the affirmative to 48 in the negative.

Vice-President O'Connell: I ask for a roll call, Mr. President.

President Gompers: On the appeal?

Vice-President O'Connell: Yes, sir.

President Gompers asked if a sufficient number of delegates desired a roll call to order it.

Secretary Morrison stated there were 387 delegates seated, and it would require 39 delegates to ask for the roll call in order to warrant its being called.

President Gompers: A sufficient number has not asked for the roll call. The question recurs on the status of the case before the house.

Delegate Furuseth: I am not going to discuss the merits of the case, but there is something I would like to bring to the attention of the convention. I would like to make a motion and then make a statement afterwards as to why I do so.

I move that the whole question at issue be referred to the Executive Council, with instructions to try to bring about an amicable adjustment, to the end that the Western Federation of Miners may obtain a charter without overriding the principles of the American Federation of Labor. (Seconded.)

The question was discussed at some length by Delegate Furuseth.

Delegate Comerford, of the Steam Engineers, stated that he had no objection to reference of the matter to the Executive Council, but desired to take part in any conference that might be called.

Similar statements were made by Delegate Shamp, of the Stationary Engineers, and Delegate Collins, of the Electrical Workers.

Delegate Hayes (F. J.) discussed the question at some length, and opposed reference to the Executive Council.

Vice-President Duncan discussed the question, and spoke in favor of the adoption of the motion to refer to the Executive Council.

Delegate Flynn (J. J.) discussed the question, and favored the motion to refer to the Executive Council.

Delegate Lewis (T. L.) discussed the question at some length, and opposed the motion to refer to the Executive Council.

On motion debate was closed, by a vote of 110 in the affirmative to 13 in the negative.

Delegate Walker (J. H.): I believe this matter is of such vital importance that we should have a roll call vote.

President Gompers: On the motion to refer?

Delegate Walker: Yes.

More than one-tenth of the delegates indicating a desire to have a roll call, Secretary Morrison proceeded to call the roll, with the following result:

Ayes—Noschang, Fischer (Jacob), Kalpetzky, Anderson (Ed.), Gazzolo, Kline, Glover, Dougherty, Franklin (J. A.), Flynn (Jos.), Flynn (T. H.), Glockling, Tobin (J. #### Executive Council Supplementary Report.

St. Louis, Mo., November 26, 1910.

To the officers and delegates of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor:

Greeting:—In view of the very grave misrepresentation by the press of the statement upon the negro question, made by President Gompers in an address which he delivered in this city on the evening of November 17, and in addition to the refutation which he made on the floor of this convention on the following day, we feel that it is due the American Federation of Labor and the great cause of labor which we represent that we, as your duly constituted officers, should take cognizance thereof.

Numerous telegrams and letters, newspaper clippings and editorials, from every section of the country, all protesting against the declaration which he was alleged to have made, have been received by President Gompers, thus demonstrating that the misrepresentation of his statement has been given wide publicity, something which is not only a grave injustice to him but a great wrong to our cause, the organized labor movement of the country, which this convention of Federated labor has the honor to represent.

It is inconceivable that in view of President Gompers' record of long years of life devoted to the cause of the wage-earners, of those who toll, that he, and through him the American Federation of Labor, should be placed before the world in the position of declaring that any class of wage-earners, no matter of what race, creed, sex or nationality, should be "read" out of the labor movement.

So far from closing the doors of the organized labor movement against any wage-earner, no matter of what creed, of what color, of what nationality, of what calling, of which sex, the American Federation of Labor annually exerts its efforts and spends large sums of money in spreading the gospel of trade unionism among all who toll in the endeavor to bring them within the beneficent fold of the trade union movement every toiler of every trade and calling without respect to color or sex, religion or nationality. Reference to the report of our secretary from year to year, showing the amounts spent annually in organization work will confirm us in this statement.

The conventions of the American Federation of Labor have repeatedly declared for the organization of all wage-earners without regard to class, race, creed, religion, sex or politics. This declaration is embodied in some of the literature which is kept constantly on hand at our headquarters and which is widely distributed from year to year.

The Constitution of the American Federation of Labor, Article 11, Section 6, provides that:

Separate charters may be issued to Central Labor Unions, Local Unions, or Federal Local Unions, composed exclusively of colored members, where, in the judgment of the Executive Council it appears advisable and to the best interest of the Trade Union Movement to do so.

There are now affiliated to the A. F. of L. under that provision a number of local unions of colored workmen and a number of city central bodies composed entirely of the representatives of local unions of colored workmen. There are a number of colored workmen, members in good standing of the unions of their trades, holding commissions as organizers for the A. F. of L. They keep in constant touch with headquarters, and are doing good work among the toilers of their race.

President Gompers has accepted an invitation to address the colored people of the First Baptist church of this city tomorrow evening so that there may be afforded still further opportunity of correcting the great wrong which has been done him and our movement.

In view of all this we recommend that this convention shall again reiterate its often repeated declaration that the American Federation of Labor, in its endeavor to organize all the toilers of our country so as to protect and advance their rights and interests, knows no race, no color, no creed, no nationality, no political party.

Fraternally submitted,

SAMUEL GOMPERS,
JAMES DUNCAN,
JOHN MITCHELL,
JAMES O'CONNELL,
DENIS A. HAYES,
WILLIAM D. HUBER,
JOSEPH F. VALENTINE,
JOHN R. ALPINE,
H. B. PERHAM,
JOHN B. LENNON,
FRANK MORRISON,

Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor.

Delegate Feeney: I move that the report as read be adopted, that copies be furnished the local press of St. Louis and the Associated Press, and that the American Federation of Labor request that as much publicity be given to it as was given to the statement attributed to President Gompers. (Seconded.)

Delegate Sullivan (J. S.): I move, as an amendment, that Delegate Feeney include all the other press associations.

Delegate Feeney: I will include all press associations.

Vice-President Perham in the chair.

The question was discussed by Delegate Sullivan (J. S.), Delegate Gallagher (J. J.), Delegate Wilson (W. B.) and Delegate Furuseth.

The motion offered by Delegate Feeney was carried by unanimous vote.

Report of Committee on Boycott.

Delegate Lynch (J. M.), secretary of the committee, reported as follows:

Resolution No. 19—By Delegates W. D. Huber, Frank Duffy, W. B. Macfarlane, Thomas Flynn, W. J. Kelly, Carl Young and A. M. Swartz of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America:

Whereas, The Homestake Mining Company, which company owns and operates one of the most valuable gold producing properties in the United States or in the world, and employs several thousand working men of different craft in the operation of its mines and mills, on November 24, 1909, declared a lockout against employees on account of their affiliation with various labor unions, as will be shown and fully explained by the following card:

Lead, South Dakota, November 24, 1909. I am not a member of any labor union, and in consideration of my being employed by the Homestake Mining Company, agree that I will not become such while in its service. (Signed by employee.)

Whereas, The members of Local Union No. 1440 of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, together with the members of all other labor organizations, have been discriminated against by the Homestake Mining Company since its declaration of this lockout, which became effective on November 24, 1909; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the delegates of the Sixteenth Biennial Convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, in convention assembled, declare the Homestake Mining Company, whose works are located in South Dakota, to be a non-union concern and that we pledge our moral and financial support and assistance to all union men who may be involved in or affected by the lockout of the Homestake Mining Company; and be it further

Resolved, That our delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to present the cause of the lockout men in South Dakota before said convention and to solicit the aid and assistance of the American Federation of Labor in the cause of our Brothers who are maintaining this struggle against oppression and greed, to the end that organized labor may not be defeated, and that our brothers shall not be forced nor compelled to forfeit any rights of citizenship or to violate their honor as men.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council, with the suggestion that effort be made to adjust the difficulties, and if unsuccessful, to take such further measures as may be advisable.

On motion, the report of the committee was adopted.

Resolution No. 48—By Delegates James M. Lynch, of International Typographical Union; George L. Berry, International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union; Robert Glockling, International Brotherhood of Bookbinders; Matthew Woll, International Photo-Engravers' Union; James J. Freel, International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union:

Whereas, Arrangements have been made to print the eleventh edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica in a non-union printing office in Chicago, Ill.; and

Whereas, Many trades unionists and sympathizers were purchasers of former editions of the Encyclopedia Britannica; therefore, be it

Resolved, That all friends and sympathizers with organized labor and members of trade unions who contemplate purchasing the eleventh edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica immediately write the promoters thereof requesting that the mechanical work thereon shall be performed in a strictly union printing office, and in event of refusal to accede to such request that the promoters and publishers be informed that members of organized labor can not consistently patronize a non-union publication.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion the report of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 60—By Delegate Archie Grant, United Trades and Labor Council, Erie County, N. Y.:

Whereas, The Larkin Soap Company, of the city of Buffalo, N. Y., is having practically all its printing done without the union label, keeping one of the largest printing offices in that city in operation under non-union conditions; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, instruct its Executive Council to take this matter up with the Larkin Company, and use its good offices in assisting the Printing Trades Council of the city of Buffalo in having the Larkin Soap Company's printing done under union conditions.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 62—By Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union:

Whereas, The Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America has been engaged in a severe contest with the American Baking Co., composed of the following branches: Heydt, Condon, St. Louis, Freund, Welle-Boettler, Hauck-Hoerr and the Home Bakeries of St. Louis, Mo., and

Whereas, Said trust controls a large portion of the baking industry, thus making it difficult for the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America to successfully push a boycott against each branch of the American Bakery Co. and all brands of bakery products made by the trust, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, through its officers and organizers, give special aid and assistance to the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America in pushing a boycott against each individual product or brand of goods made by the American Baking Company, and, be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor request by circular letter all affiliated unions, federal unions, central bodies, state federations and National and International Unions to give a helping hand to the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America by vigorously pushing a boycott against the unfair products sold in their respective localities, and, whereas, the above resolutions were adopted by the twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth conventions and referred to the Executive Council for action, be it further

Resolved, That the above recommendations be carried out by electing a committee at this convention, who, with the representatives, shall try and settle the differences, and report back to this convention as to their action and recommendations.

Secretary Lynch: Your committee recommends that the proposition be referred to the Executive Council, with the suggestion that if possible the firm shall be interviewed immediately following the adjournment of the convention.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 64—By Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union:

Whereas, The fight against the McKinney Bread Co., of St. Louis, Mo., as endorsed and re-endorsed by annual conventions of the American Federation of Labor; and

Whereas, The McKinney Bread Co. still refuses to make a settlement with the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America, and

Whereas, The twenty-eighth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor made an effort to bring about an adjustment of the long-standing controversy, and if not successful that a vigorous campaign be started to make their declaration of unfairness effective, therefore be it

Resolved, That the thirtieth convention of the American Federation of Labor reaffirm and place upon the unfair list the McKinney firm of St. Louis, Mo., and if not successful in bringing about successful endeavors satisfactory to the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America, and whereas, the above resolutions were adopted by the twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth conventions and referred to the Executive Council for action, be it further

Resolved, That the above recommendations be carried out by electing a committee at this convention, who, with the representatives, shall try and settle the differences, and report back to this convention as to their action and recommendations.

Secretary Lynch: Your committee recommends that the proposition be referred to the Executive Council, with the suggestion that if possible the firm shall be interviewed immediately following the adjournment of the convention.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 65—By Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union:

Whereas, The Drexler Baking Co., of Springfield, Mass., and the Schultz Baking Co., of New York and Hudson County, and the Fleishman Baking Co., of New York, have declared open war upon our members of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union, who are doing all within their power to uphold and defend their constitution, and

Whereas, Mr. Drexler, of Springfield, Mass., is vice-president of the Massachusetts Master Bakers' Association and Mr. Schultz of the pool of the Master Bakers' Boss Association, of New York and New Jersey, which in the name of master means nothing but bringing about a slavish condition; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, through its president, officers and organizers, give special aid and assistance to the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America in bringing about a suitable settlement, and be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor request, by circular letter, all affiliated unions, federal unions, central unions, state Federation, national or international unions to give a helping hand to the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union in trying to bring about a settlement, and if not successful, that a vigorous campaign be inaugurated against the products, which are everything but fair.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 67—By Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union:

Whereas, The Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America has been engaged in a severe contest with the American Baking Co., composed of the following branches: Heydt, Condon, St. Louis, Freund, Welle-Boettler, Hauck-Hoerr and the Home Bakeries, of St. Louis, Mo., and

Whereas, Said trust controls a large portion of the baking industry, thus making it difficult for the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America to successfully push a boycott against each branch of the American Bakery Co., and all brands of bakery products made by the trusts, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, through its officers and organizers, give special aid and assistance to the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America in pushing a boycott against each individual product or brand of goods made by the American Baking Company, and be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor request, by circular letter, all affiliated unions, Federal Unions, Central Bodies, State Federations and national or international unions, to give a helping hand to the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America by vigorously pushing a boycott against the unfair products sold in their respective localities, and whereas, the above resolutions were adopted by the twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth conventions and referred to the Executive Council for action, be it further

Resolved, That the above recommendations be carried out by electing a committee at this convention who, with the representatives, shall try and settle the differences, and report back to this convention as to their action and recommendations.

Secretary Lynch: The foregoing proposition is a duplicate of Resolution No. 62, of which disposition has just been made.

The recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 88—By Delegate Frank Grimshaw, of the Stove Mounters' International Union:

Whereas, The Favorite Stove and Range Company, of Piqua, Ohio, in January, 1908, imposed a change of conditions in the mounting department, embodying a reduction in day wages and piece prices, and an increase in the hours of labor from nine to ten, and because the Stove Mounters' Union No. 23, affiliated with the Stove Mounters' International Union, would not accept these conditions the company declared that no more would a union of stove mounters be tolerated, and

Whereas, Stove Mounters' Union No. 23 was endorsed in its position by the Stove Mounters' International Union, by the Piqua Trades and Labor Council, and by the Ohio State Federation of Labor, and

Whereas, This strike was being prosecuted with apparent success until in June, 1909, a circular letter was issued by Local No. 94, International Molders' Union, of Piqua, Ohio, under seal and signed by five officers of said local, in which the action of our organization in prosecuting a strike against the Favorite Stove and Range Company is condemned, and untrue statements made regarding the standing of said company with organized labor, and

Whereas, Our efforts to bring about a settlement of this trouble are practically nullified by the circulation of the aforesaid false statements, which are still being issued to the detriment of our cause, and

Whereas, This matter has been brought to the attention of the International Molders' Union and the Metal Trades Department without any relief as yet being received, be it, therefore

Resolved, By this the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that this matter be referred to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, for the purpose of investigation, and if the statements herein made are found to be true that action be taken as the facts warrant, and that the position of the Stove Mounters' International Union in its controversy with the Favorite Stove and Range Company be endorsed; and that an effort be made by the Executive Council to bring about an adjustment of this long standing controversy.

Secretary Lynch: Your committee recommends that the third and fourth paragraphs be stricken from Resolution No. 88, and that in its amended form it be referred to the Executive Council for such action as the Council may deem expedient.

It was moved and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed briefly by Delegate Wheeler and Delegate Carr.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

Resolution No. 111—By Delegate Geo. F. Golden:

Whereas, Organized labor has ever jealously guarded the ethics and principles of the cause that has proven so decided a factor in the development of modern civilization, and

Whereas, The aforesaid ethics have invariably found expression in the religious observance of contractual provisions in existence between employer and employee, and

Whereas, In many instances the employer has flagrantly ignored similar duties incumbent upon him by a deliberate disregard of all contract requirements, thereby meriting the rebuke of all honest minded people, and

Whereas, The Inter-Ocean, a daily newspaper of the city of Chicago, has been guilty of breaking faith with the Chicago Allied Printing Industry in that city, by discharging its web pressmen and operating that department with non-union help, and

Whereas, The Inter-Ocean management insolently declined to recede from its arrogant position upon the solicitation of committees from both the Chicago Federation of Labor and the Chicago Allied Printing Trades Council, necessitating the withdrawal of the union label privileges heretofore enjoyed by the publication and placing the same on the unfair list, and

Whereas, The above recited action logically demands similar action by the central body representing the toilers of the State of Illinois to the end that they may not unconsciously render aid to an admitted enemy of organized labor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the delegates of the Illinois State Federation, in regular session assembled, denounce the perfidy of the Chicago Inter-Ocean in its deliberate violation of contract provisions and declare it unfair to organized labor because of such action, and, be it still further

Resolved, That the Chicago Inter-Ocean be placed on the "We don't patronize list," of the Illinois State Federation of Labor and the secretary be instructed to acquaint every affiliated union and central body with the action taken.

Secretary Lynch: As the foregoing proposition is worded, it conveys no definite request to this convention, but your committee assumes that the intent is to ask this convention to indorse a boycott on the Chicago Inter Ocean. The Chicago Inter Ocean press room is under the jurisdiction of the I. P. P. and A. U., an international union, affiliated with this Federation. Your committee believes that any request for a boycott such as is outlined in the proposition under consideration should come from the international organization directly concerned. Your committee recommends, therefore, that Resolution No. 111 be referred to the Executive Board of the I. P. P. and A. U. for the consideration of that board.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 130—By Delegates representing Cigar Makers' International Union:

Whereas, For some time past there has been displayed in various localities moving pictures that pretend to represent instances that occur in so-called strikes, that are not only unwarranted, but are base misrepresentations; and

Whereas, It is self-evident that the scenes produced have emanated from those who are unfriendly to the cause of labor, and their purpose is to prejudice the minds of the general public against our movement by falsely and maliciously misrepresenting it by these pictures; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor places itself on record as condemning such pictures as being untruthful representations of labor's cause, and declaring that those who are interested in providing them have this object in view; and be it further

Resolved, That we urge our members and friends to use all legitimate means in their power to discourage the exhibition of such moving pictures that falsely pretend to represent instances in connection with our movement.

Secretary Lynch: Your committee concurs in the foregoing resolution, and recommends its adoption by the convention. Your committee further urges that central bodies and local unions give consideration to the subject covered by Resolution No. 130, and that where local exhibition in moving picture theaters is given to pictures of the character described in the resolution, committees be appointed to protest to the local management, and, if this protest be ineffective, that such further measures, through publicity avenues and otherwise, be resorted to as will direct public attention to this moving picture falsehood and the reasons underlying its perpetration.

The disapproval of trade unionists should also be given to those actors whose mediocre ability and craving for a laugh at any cost, are always attested by such expressions as "I can't do it, I'm a union man," or "Impossible; I belong to the union," horse play that is rewarded by the momentary approval of that portion of an audience whose easily excited risibilities are evidence of an undeveloped intelligence.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Resolution No. 102—By Delegate Chas. D. Wheeler, of Chicago Federation of Labor:

Whereas, The convention of the American Federation of Labor in regular session at Toronto, Canada, disposed of the proposition dealing with the controversy existing between the Printer Roller Makers' Union 10638, American Federation of Labor and the Samuel Bingham Sons Manufacturing Company, both of Chicago, Ill., by referring same to the Executive Board; and

Whereas, The Samuel Bingham Sons Manufacturing Company has, through its agents, taken advantage of the lack of definite expression and action by the American Federation of Labor to spread a distorted version of the actual facts in the case best suited to serve their interests; and

Whereas, Every effort on the part of the Chicago Printer Roller Makers' Union 10638, aided by the Chicago representatives of the American Federation of Labor, to secure an amicable adjustment of the situation, has been met by a defiant attitude on the part of the representatives of the Samuel Bingham Sons Manufacturing Company; and

Whereas, It is the aim and object of Chicago Printer Roller Makers' Union 10638, in its plea for equity and justice, to acquaint the delegates to this convention in brief form with the exact status of the controversy through the medium of the attached pamphlet; and

Whereas, The facts as therein stated undoubtedly warrant compliance by the convention to the request of its affiliated local, the Chicago Printer Roller Makers' Union 10638, to place the firm of Samuel Bingham Sons Manufacturing Company on the unfair list; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the delegates to the American Federation of Labor in regular session assembled in condemnation of the methods employed by the Samuel Bingham Sons Manufacturing Company to justify their maintenance of non-union conditions in their printer roller making establishments and that the firm's persistent and arrogant declination to settle the controversy on a basis consistent with honor and equity demands that the firm of Samuel Bingham Sons Manufacturing Company be placed upon the unfair list and all affiliated unions be officially notified of such action.

Secretary Lynch: Your committee recommend that the foregoing resolution be referred to the Joint Conference Board of the international unions of the printing trade, with the request to that board that it use its influence to establish amicable relations between the Samuel Bingham Sons Manufacturing Company and Chicago Printer Roller Makers' Union No. 10638, of the American Federation of Labor, and that this board make report to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor.

On motion, the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Secretary Lynch: Your committee reiterates the sentiment so often expressed by the previous committees that the boycott should only be resorted to after all efforts at adjustment had failed, but that, when instituted, it should be made so effective that speedy agreement between the firm and union will follow. It should be borne in mind that in the multiplicity of boycotts lies the safety of the unfair manufacturer and purveyor. One boycott assiduously prosecuted and pressed to final victory is better than one hundred boycotts apathetically maintained. The boycott is a means to an end, and not simply the expression of a grievance. Resorted to on this basis, persistently maintained, given wide publicity, it will achieve its object, and thus make for the advancement of the union's cause.

Your committee reaffirms the report of the Committee on Boycotts to the Toronto convention, which, together with the speech of Vice-President Mitchell following the adoption of that report, has since been printed and given wide circulation. Your committee would recommend the continued circulation of a pamphlet containing that report and the speech alluded to as label propaganda. Respectfully submitted,

On motion, the final section of the report of the committee was adopted, and the report of the committee as a whole was adopted.

Report of Committee on Law.

Delegate Tazelaar, secretary of the committee, reported as follows:

Resolution No. 91—By Delegate R. A. McDevitt, of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters:

Whereas, The credentials of Brother Jules Scarcerioux, a bona-fide member of Local Union 45, National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, were rejected by the Central Labor Union of Trenton, N. J., in which jurisdiction said local union is situated, on the ground that Brother Scarcerioux had shown an active interest in the "Industrial Workers of the World;" and

Whereas, This action of Trenton's central body was appealed from to President Samuel Gompers, and said action by him sustained upon what, to Local Union No. 45, seems untenable grounds; therefore, it is

Resolved, That this convention is appealed to to hear the evidence in the case, and the question decided on its merits.

Secretary Tazelaar: It was almost too late to get a meeting of the committee, but the committee has been individually polled on Resolution No. 91, and the expression is in favor of referring to the Executive Council. We therefore recommend that it be referred to the Executive Council.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

Secretary Tazelaar: That completes the report of the committee, which is respectfully submitted by JOHN B. LENNON, Chairman.

T. L. HUGHES,
JOHN H. WALKER,
R. E. WOODMANSEE,
P. J. FLANNERY,
M. F. RYAN,

LEE M. HART,
C. L. SHAMP,
JOHN A. VOLL,
JOHN MANGAN,
ALEX. R. SMITH,
J. TAZELAAR, Secretary.

Secretary Tazelaar: I move the adoption of the report of the committee as a whole. (Seconded and carried.)

Vice-President Mitchell: The Committee on Law referred Resolution 47 to the Committee on Organization.

Resolution No. 47—By Delegates A. Miller and M. Greenbaum, of Neckwear Cutters' Union 6939 and Neckwear Makers' Union 1106:

Whereas, In the city of New York the neckwear cutters and the neckwear makers are well organized and are enjoying higher wages and shorter hours than any other part of the country; and

Whereas, There are several large cities throughout the country that are yet practically unorganized, namely, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Baltimore, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Louisville, Buffalo and Rochester; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor that the president be, and is hereby instructed to have all organizers of the American Federation of Labor pay special attention to the above-named cities, for the purpose of thoroughly organizing them, with the object in view of forming a National organization.

The committee recommended that the resolution be referred to the Executive Council, and that the parties interested be given a hearing.

On motion the recommendation of the committee was concurred in.

President Gompers: In compliance with the authorization of this convention a telegram was sent to the Governor of Florida, and an answer received. The secretary will please read:

Secretary Morrison read the following telegram:

November 25, 1910.

Hon. A. W. Gilchrist, Tallahassee, Fla.:

The delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor, representing the wage-workers of all parts of our country, learned with the deepest indignation that the agent of the Cigar Makers' International Union, Mr. J. C. Johnson, has been ordered deported by a "vigilance" committee, or so-called Citizens' Committee, of Tampa. I was instructed by unanimous vote of the convention to enter protest to you against such a procedure, and to demand that you, as Governor of Florida, protect in their lawful and constitutional rights, those citizens of the United States within the State of Florida. Mr. Johnson is the representative of the Cigar Makers' International Union, has been, and is, authorized to bring about a peaceful adjustment of the present controversy between the cigar makers and the manufacturers. He is a peaceful and law-abiding citizen, and his exile, expulsion, or deportation from Tampa is an outrage.

SAMUEL GOMPERS,

President American Federation of Labor.

Tallahassee, Fla., Nov. 26, 1910.

To Hon. Samuel Gompers, President American Federation of Labor, St. Louis:

Your telegram received. Have instructed Tampa officers to prevent violation of law.

ALBERT W. GILCHRIST,

Governor.

President Gompers: The chair will say he has no further information by telegram. The morning papers state that Mr. Johnson is not now in Tampa, but has been forced to go to Jacksonville. That is the way the law is carried out in Florida.

Report of Committee on Secretary's Report.

Delegate Evans, secretary of the committee, reported as follows:

To the Officers and Delegates of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor:

We, your committee on secretary's report, beg leave to submit the following report:

In comparing the report submitted by the secretary and that of the treasurer, together with the auditor's report, we find the report of the secretary to be correct in every detail, and take occasion to highly commend the secretary for the efficient manner in which the records of the office of the American Federation of Labor must be kept to admit of extensive detail exhibited in the report he has submitted, covering, as it does, every department committed to his care.

In reviewing the figures exhibiting the receipts and disbursements for the publishing of the American Federationist, we desire to call attention to the economy of management during the current year beginning October 1, 1909. At that time there was shown a deficit of $2,554.84. September 30, 1910, the report presents a surplus of $705.31.

We cannot refrain from congratulating the American Federation of Labor upon the fact that the secretary's report, despite the ceaseless efforts of our opponents to negate the work of the organization of our fellow craftsmen yet unorganized, shows a net increase of over 200,000 members distributed among the various affiliated unions over that of last year.

A source of congratulation arises from the fact that the issuance of charters to newly organized unions nearly doubled during the year just closed over that of last year, there being issued last year 176 and this year 334. While the work of organization may have been more costly, we may feel ourselves amply paid by the result.

We direct attention to the splendid beneficiary features that have grown up within our national and international unions, as set forth in the report of the secretary. During the year just closed there has been returned to the membership of the various affiliated unions in benefits, for injuries received and in cases of death, the magnificent sum of $2,341,075.14.

We feel that this showing is especially worthy of mention, and commend the establishment of beneficiary features to the favorable consideration of those of our affiliated unions in whose laws there is now no such provision.

Your committee indorses the report of the Secretary in its entirety, and recommends its adoption by this convention.

To the Officers and Delegates of the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Your committee on treasurer's report beg leave to report the following:

We have carefully examined the treasurer's report, and have compared the same with the report of the Auditing Committee, and find the report, as submitted to this convention, to be correct.

We take this opportunity of commending Treasurer Lennon for the careful manner in which he has conducted the affairs of his office, and, especially so, for the safeguarding of the funds of the American Federation of Labor.

Respectfully submitted,

Report of Special Committee Appointed to Adjust Differences Between The United Carpenters and The Amalgamated Carpenters.

Delegate Keegan, for the special committee, reported as follows:

To the President and Delegates to the Thirtieth Annual Convention:

Your committee appointed to consider the difference existing between the U. B. of C. & J. of A. and the Amalgamated Carpenters, beg leave to submit the following report.

At the Toronto Convention the following appeal from the decision of the Building Trades Department was received from the Amalgamated Carpenters.

Resolution No. 31—By Delegates Herbert Crampton and James Reid of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners:

Whereas, The Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners is a self-sustaining, autonomous and independently financed international union, affiliated with National Congresses, Councils, and Executive bodies of Labor in the various countries in which the society operates, more especially the American Federation of Labor, with which affiliation has been complete for nearly twenty years; and

Whereas, The income for American districts has been for the past two years $321,842.80, and the expenditure, for strikes and lockouts, unemployed benefit, sick benefit, death benefit, accident benefit, tool insurance, traveling benefits, superannuation benefits, and assistance to other trades of $158,852.86; and

Whereas, At the second convention of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, Tampa, Florida, October, 1909, a recommendation following a report upon a local matter of dispute was presented and referred to as a plan, which in substance was as follows: "To wrest from the Amalgamated Society its autonomy and organic entity," to place all its funds in the hands of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, this plan was not endorsed by the Tampa Convention; and

Whereas, A so-called minority report introduced by one member of an Adjustment Committee at the Tampa Convention was passed by a viva-voce vote despite the fact that a substitute motion was duly made and seconded, the said minority report having for its object the ordering of international officers to do and perform certain acts contrary to the Constitution of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners, beside imposing conditions and time of consolidation so vaguely presented as to prevent intelligent action thereon; and

Whereas, These destructive acts can only have been conceived by minds in collusion for the purpose of obtaining the dissolution or disintegration of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners to be followed by inroads upon other bona-fide organizations, their autonomy and their funds; therefore, be it

Resolved, By this 29th Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, that the Executive officers of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor be instructed, and they are hereby instructed to desist from further attempting to consolidate the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners with any organization or to send, or cause to be sent, any committee to confer with the general officers of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners under the conditions laid down in the minority report referred to.

The Toronto Convention referred the matter to the Executive Council, establishing the Council as the first court of appeal.

We find from the records of the Executive Council as well as their report to this convention that owing to the fact that the Amalgamated Society asked that the matter be not taken up until October of this year. The committee further reports that owing to a pressure of business at that time of the year that it was impossible for them to take action thereon.

Your committee therefore recommends that the matter be referred back to the Ex-Council for their consideration and decision.

In the matter of suspension of Amalgamated Carpenters' charter asked for by the U. B. of C. and J., your committee refers the entire matter to this convention without recommendation.

T. J. O'DONNELL,
J. TAZELAAR,
DANIEL J. TOBIN,

Delegate Keegan: I move that the matter of the appeal be referred to the Executive Council, and that the matter of repeal of charter be referred to this convention. (Seconded.)

Delegate McSorley: I move that the entire subject matter be referred to the Executive Council for them to bring both parties together. That carries with it the charges for the repeal of the charter as well as the appeal.

The matter was briefly discussed by Delegate Kelley (W. J.), and Delegate Ryan (F. M.)

The amendment offered by Delegate McSorley was carried.

Report of Committee on Education.

Delegate Olander, for the committee, reported as follows:

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council, under the caption, "At Peace With the Buck's Stove and Range Company," the committee reported as follows:

Your committee has noted with decided pleasure and interest that part of the Executive Council's report contained under the heading "At Peace with the Buck's Stove and Range Company." The successful termination of the industrial phase of this long-standing controversy, resulting in the establishment of union conditions and wages for the workers employed by the company, must necessarily be a source of gratification to the labor movement of our country.

We congratulate the new management of the Buck's Stove and Range Company for its exhibition of fairness and good judgment in agreeing to the settlement, and we compliment this Federation, the President and the Executive Council, and the affiliated unions, upon the results obtained.

Perseverance, determination, and above all an understanding of the justice and correctness of our cause, have brought about the settlement with the company. Your committee desires to express its belief that continued exercise of the same virtues, applied to the questions now before the courts arising out of this and similar cases, will bring about a complete recognition of the justice and legality of our contentions by the courts and legislative bodies of our country.

The industrial settlement with the Buck's Stove and Range Company we believe to be satisfactory to all concerned, and we therefore agree with and approve of the report of the Executive Council "that the company, like all other employers fairly disposed toward organized labor, is entitled to the courtesy, consideration and patronage of all."

Further, We desire to report we have learned that the anti-trade union forces in the United States have endeavored to visit their severe displeasure upon the present management of the Buck's Stove and Range Company for its action in effecting a friendly adjustment of all questions which had arisen between it and organized labor. Personal attacks have been made upon the present management of the Buck's Stove and Range Company, in which they were accused of being the enemies of the employers' best interests, and unfaithful to the principles upon which our country is founded. Pamphlets have been widely distributed by some anti-trade union association with the evident purpose of prejudicing retail dealers and the public against the product of this firm. In view of the efforts being made to injure the Buck's Stove and Range Company, because of its friendly attitude towards organized labor and its public avowal that workmen were entitled to all of the rights and benefits which follow united action, which are enjoyed by employers of labor. We recommend that every legitimate effort be made by organized labor to overcome the antagonism now being directed at the Buck's Stove and Range Company.

On motion, the report of the committee was adopted.

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption, "Uniform Laws to Protect Human Life," the committee reported as follows:

Your committee recommends approval of that part of the Executive Council's report entitled, "Uniform Laws to Protect Human Life." In the matter of uniformity, however, we believe it is not the intent to sacrifice more progressive measures in some States simply because it is difficult to obtain consideration of equally progressive legislation in other States. Desirable uniformity may be best attempted, we believe, by having the Executive Council draft model bills to be submitted to the various State Federations of Labor and city central bodies, along with full explanation of same, for the information of such bodies, and upon which the efforts to secure progressive legislation can be based with desirable uniformity. We recommend that this be done.

In the matter of workmen's compensation acts, your committee desires to express its opinion that extreme care should be used to prevent bills having in view the enactment of such legislation from being so drafted as to become proposals for reducing the present legal liability of the employers. Beyond this your committee does not deem it necessary to discuss the matter at this time, owing to action having already been taken by this convention instructing the Executive Council to secure legal advice upon the subject.

We recommend that city central bodies which have not already selected a local legislative committee, be requested by this Federation to select such committee without delay.

On motion the report of the committee was adopted.

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "Investigation of Women and Child Labor," the committee reported as follows:

Your committee recommends approval of the part of the Executive Council's report under the title "Investigation of Women and Child Labor," and that the desired authority be given by this convention to continue the efforts to secure the establishment of a special department in the Bureau of Labor for such investigation purposes.

On motion the report of the committee was adopted.

On that portion of the report of the Executive Council under the caption "Conservation of Natural Resources," the committee reported as follows:

The subject of "Conservation of Natural Resources," contained in the Executive Council's report, your committee believes to be of vast and growing importance, and that it will develop until its principle demand will be for the conservation and improvement of the moral and physical lives of our people. We report favorably upon the recommendation of the Executive Council that the Federation Committee be continued during the coming year.

On motion the report of the committee was adopted.

Resolution No. 30—By John S. Whalen, delegate, New York State Federation of Labor.

Whereas, New York State has a model law regulating state prison labor.

Whereas, There does exist in many States of the Union convict labor;

Whereas, This convict labor is a menace to free labor of this and other states; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention recommend to the American Federation of Labor Convention to use its best efforts for the passage of a federal law abolishing prison labor; and be it further

Resolved, That the Legislative Committee be instructed to secure the passage of a bill to the end that each individual article made in a penitentiary, reformatory or state prison shall be stamped.

On Resolution No. 30 the committee reported as follows:

Your committee believes that the end sought therein, so far as it applies to the Federal Government, may best be obtained by the enactment into law of the prison labor bills, as endorsed by the American Federation of Labor, and which are now before Congress, known as H. R. 12000 and H. R. 12001.

We recommend that such State Federations as have not already familiarized themselves with the aforesaid bills, do so at once.

We further recommend that the matter of obtaining legislation to compel proper marking of all prison-made goods offered for sale as intended by the resolution, be referred to the various State Federations of Labor in order that such State organizations may inaugurate efforts to secure proper legislation upon the subject.

On motion the report of the committee was adopted.

This completes the report of the Committee on Education, and it is respectfully submitted by the committee:

Committee on Education.

On motion the report of the committee as a whole was adopted.

Vice-President Perham: The Committee on Local and Federated Bodies beg leave to report upon that part of Resolution No. 75 referred to it, which reads as follows:

Resolved, That any international union which does not compel its local organizations to affiliate with the Building Trades Council and Central Trades and Labor Union, be instructed by the American Federation of Labor, to revoke that local's charter, and on their failure, the international charter, be revoked, until such time as they comply with said constitution. The said resolution to apply to all organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Your committee non-concurs in the resolution, for the reason that the subject was passed upon and adversely decided by this convention when it considered the report of the Committee on Local and Federated Bodies.

This completes our report, which is signed by

CHARLES LAVIN.

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be concurred in.

The question was discussed by Delegate O'Flaherty, Delegate Grow, Delegate Gehring and Delegate Hawley.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

Secretary Morrison: Resolution No. 112 has not been reported on. It was referred to the Committee on Law. The secretary of that committee states that the delegates who introduced it, the Painters' delegation, are satisfied to allow it to be referred to the Executive Council.

Resolution No. 112—By Delegates of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America:

Whereas, The American Federation of Labor recognizes that the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America has jurisdiction over all painters and decorators, including those employed in the painting and decorating of railroad cars, engines and other equipment, and

Whereas, In order to secure proper consideration for the demands of its members employed by railroad companies it is necessary that the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America have direct representation upon committees to confer with the railroad officials regarding wages, hours and conditions of labor, and

Whereas, Such representation can be properly and effectively secured only through the affiliation of the said brotherhood with the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor, and

Whereas, Said brotherhood has made application for admission, accompanied by the initiation fee, and no action has as yet been taken upon its application, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Railway Department of the American Federation of Labor be advised that the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America is eligible to admission to membership and requested to seat its delegates at its coming convention.

On motion Resolution No. 112 was referred to the Executive Council.

Report of Committee on Resolutions.

Secretary Frey, for the committee, reported as follows: Your committee desires to offer the following resolutions from the committee:

Resolution No. 152—By Committee on Resolutions.

Whereas, The rapid changes which are taking place in our industries, and the increasing number of women who have entered into competition with men as breadwinners, has made it more essential to their rights that the ballot should be placed in their hands.

Resolved, That this convention reaffirm the previous actions of conventions of the American Federation of Labor endorsing the principle of female suffrage.

The resolution was adopted by unanimous vote of the convention.

Resolution No. 153—By Committee on Resolutions.

Resolved, That the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, take this method and opportunity of expressing its appreciation of the cordiality of the welcome which was extended by the city's chief executive and the governor of the State,

That the local committee on arrangements and entertainments are entitled to our sincere thanks for the efforts which were made on their part, previous to the convention, for the convenience and comfort of the delegates, and for their constant efforts since the convention began its sessions, to make our sojourn in their city such as to recall pleasant memories, after our departure.

That the local committee, the wives and daughters, of St. Louis trade unionists, and the organized women of the city have won our admiration for their careful and attentive interest in the comfort and social enjoyment of the lady delegates, and other ladies in attendance at this convention.

That the many social and fraternal organizations of St. Louis, whose hospitality was most generously extended to our delegates, have added to their previous reputation as exceptionally successful entertainers.

That our appreciation and thanks are due to the St. Louis Street Car Company for its kindness in placing its cars at the disposal of our delegates, for transportation to and from the convention hall.

That we give our sentiments of keenest pleasure and appreciation to the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra for the masterly and inspiring music with which its members entertained the delegates upon the opening day of this convention.

That the delegates to this convention have indicated their qualification to truly and ably represent the great trade union movement of this country during our sessions.

The resolution was adopted by unanimous vote of the convention.

Secretary Frey: That completes the report of the convention, which is signed by the entire committee:

JAMES DUNCAN, Chairman,
JAMES WILSON,
B. A. LARGER,
D. D. MULCAHY,
EDWIN PERRY,

T. V. O'CONNOR,
GEO. B. HOWLEY,
THOMAS FLYNN,
EDWARD MCGIVERN,
M. A. MURPHY,
JOHN P. FREY, Secretary.

Secretary Frey: I move the adoption of the report of the committee as a whole.

The motion was seconded and carried by unanimous vote.

Delegate Keegan obtained permission for the introduction of a resolution, and presented the following:

Resolution No. 154—By Delegate J. J. Keegan, of International Association of Machinists:

Whereas, The working people of our country are the principal sufferers of poor and unsanitary dwellings and tenements; be it

Resolved, That this Thirtieth Convention of the American Federation of Labor recommend to the Legislative Committee of the various affiliated State Federations of Labor, the drafting and presentation to their respective legislatures, bills looking to the improvement of the regulations governing the building of renting houses and tenements, to the end of having renting houses and tenements built with more regard for the health of the occupants, by compelling that renting houses, and tenements, be built from plans assuring more air, more light, more room, as well as looking to general sanitary improvements.

On motion, the report of the committee was adopted.

Delegate Sullivan (J. L.): I have no desire to prolong the sessions of this convention, but I am surprised that some of the delegates interested in this matter did not introduce a resolution in regard to a bill before our law-making body in Washington. The bill is entitled, "Net Contents of Container Bill." Every man and woman in the country is interested in it. Inasmuch as no resolution has been offered, if it is possible for the President to advise the Legislative Committee of the American Federation of Labor to take cognizance of this matter, I would like to have him do so.

President Gompers: The President of the American Federation of Labor suggests that Delegate Sullivan communicate the substance of his suggestion to the officers of the American Federation of Labor, and I am sure that, no matter who are the officers, if the bill has any merit, it will be considered. The constitution of the Federation gives the Executive Council the authority to initiate legislation, or to work in the interests of such legislation.

Vice-President Perham stated that the Railway Department of the American Federation of Labor had held two meetings in St. Louis during the two weeks of the convention, but had not completed its business. He stated that the meeting of the department would be adjourned to January 10, 1911, and that the meeting would be at the Saratoga Hotel, Chicago, Ill. He requested that all those having business with the department who wished to appear before the meeting be in Chicago at that time.

Election of Officers, Fraternal Delegates and City in Which to hold the 1911 Convention of the A. F. of L.

Delegate Miller: I move that the vote be made unanimous for Delegate Tobin. (Seconded and carried.)

Vice-President Duncan placed in nomination for Delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress William J. Tracy, of the International Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers. No other name being presented nominations were closed and the Secretary was instructed to cast the unanimous vote of the convention for William J. Tracy. The Secretary complied with the instructions of the convention, and the chairman declared William J. Tracy duly elected fraternal delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress.

President Gompers placed in nomination for delegate to the conference of the International Secretariat to be held in Budapest in 1911, First Vice-President James Duncan.

No other names being presented, nominations were declared closed, and the Secretary was instructed to cast the unanimous vote of the convention for Vice-President Duncan. Secretary Morrisson complied with the instructions of the convention, and Vice-President Duncan was declared duly elected as delegate to the International Secretariat.

Each of the newly elected fraternal delegates made a short address, in which he thanked the convention for the honor conferred upon him.

President Gompers in the chair.

When nominations for cities in which to hold the next convention were called for Delegate Whalen placed in nomination the city of Rochester, New York. Delegate Gallagher (J. J.) placed in nomination Atlanta, Georgia. Delegate Adams placed in nomination Washington, D. C.

Delegate Jones, Delegate Moorehouse and Delegate Gallagher seconded the nomination of Atlanta, and spoke in favor of that city.

Delegate Leonard and Delegate Whalen spoke in favor of Rochester, New York.

Delegate Whalen: I move that Atlanta be made the unanimous choice, and hope the delegates will have a pleasant time in that city.

The motion was seconded by Delegate Adams, and carried.

President Gompers: Every report, resolution, recommendation or suggestion that has come before this convention has received the earnest consideration of the delegates. There are many gatherings of men and women in which things that are thought inconvenient or unacceptable are suppressed by reference to a committee, where they are killed and buried. The American Federation of Labor has this record, that, no matter what opinion may be held by a delegate, if he expresses it in the form of a resolution it is given consideration by the convention. We realize the thought and the principle that that country is best, that organization is best where the greatest freedom obtains and where the rights of the minority are guaranteed. I am sure it must be a source of great gratification to all of us to know that after our two weeks' sessions, to which the delegates have given assiduous and earnest attention, we are prepared to close this convention without one thought suppressed or without one suggestion which has not been given due consideration. There have been rules established for the debates of the convention, yet I think I am safe in saying, and entirely within the truth, that every delegate has had a full and ample opportunity to present the thoughts he desired to give expression to.

One of the delegates in this convention called attention to a condition in which he and two other delegates to this convention are placed. We do not know whether the three officers of the American Federation to whom he referred will have the pleasure of being in attendance at Atlanta. I think I express your hope, as it is mine, that the highest judicial tribunal in our land will by its edict absolutely set its seal of disapproval against the attempt to invade the constitutional and inherent and natural rights of American citizenship. That that may come must be the devout wish of all of us. It will clarify the air, it will rudely awaken men who attempt to imperialize with autocratic power the wealth producers of our country. We aim to tear down nothing. Our work and our hopes are constructive. If the courts should determine otherwise than that for which we contend, it will simply make our task additionally difficult, and we shall be compelled to appeal to the legislative branch of our government to restore to the workers the rights of which they have been deprived. If in that contest some men must suffer, they will not be the first, and perhaps may not be the last, but in the effort to maintain or to retain human right and human liberty no sacrifice is too great, no burden too hard. Man born of woman is made to bear burdens, and he would be unworthy of the confidence of his fellows or the ennobling title of manhood did he shrink from the responsi-

I am more than gratified with the work of this convention. Great tolerance has been shown, in spite of perplexing problems. This is not an academic club; this is not a meeting where men indulge themselves in fanciful flights of oratory, having really no basis in human activities. Our discussions are the result of the needs of the day and of the time, springing out of the wants, the hopes and the aspirations of the workers and the common people generally.

Having come to the conclusion of our work, having come to the point where we have left nothing untouched and undecided as our best judgment might direct, it is a happy conclusion. So far as I am concerned I have had the full meed of honor bestowed upon me, and I could not in words express to you the great gratification I feel. If out of this convention's work shall spring an inspiration among us and among our fellow-workers of the country to work on and on, if it shall give us new energy and new hope to do our duty in the day's work and in the world's work for human uplift, it will have paid. I am sure that out of the deliberations of this convention we shall find reflected in the economic, in the material, in the industrial, in the political and in the moral life of our people, a great uplifting influence. And out of the deliberations of our convention will come, written upon the statute books of our country and of our states, the demands which the modern labor movement makes upon society.

May I express this hope, that you may have a safe return to your homes; that you may find your families and friends and those others who are dear to you in the very best of health and spirit; that you will find your fellow-workers inspirited by your deliberations and activities; that the spirit and gospel of labor may spread throughout the length and breadth of our continent; that the banner of labor, the banner of human justice may be unfurled and flung to the breeze to bring hope and encouragement to our fellow men.

There being no further business to come before the convention, upon motion of Treasurer Lennon, the convention was adjourned without date.

OF THE

1912

PREAMBLE.

WHEREAS, A struggle is going on in all the nations of the civilized world between the oppressors and the oppressed of all countries, a struggle between the capitalist and the laborer, which grows in intensity from year to year, and will work disastrous results to the tolling millions if they are not combined for mutual protection and benefit.

It, therefore, behooves the representatives of the Trade and Labor Unions of America, in Convention assembled, to adopt such measures and disseminate such principles among the mechanics and laborers of our country as will permanently unite them to secure the recognition of rights to which they are justly entitled.

We, therefore, declare ourselves in favor of the formation of a thorough Federation, embracing every Trade and Labor Organization in America, organized under the Trade Union system.

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.—NAME.

This Association shall be known as THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR, and shall consist of such Trade and Labor Unions as shall conform to its rules and regulations.

ARTICLE II.—OBJECTS.

SECTION 1. The object of this Federation shall be the encouragement and formation of local Trade and Labor Unions, and the closer federation of such societies through the organization of Central Trade and Labor Unions in every city, and the further combination of such bodies into State, Territorial, or Provincial organizations to secure legislation in the interest of the working masses.

SEC. 2. The establishment of National and International Trade Unions, based upon a strict recognition of the autonomy of each trade, and the promotion and advancement of such bodies.

SEC. 3. The establishment of Departments composed of National or International Unions, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, of the same industry and which Departments shall be governed in conformity with the laws of the American Federation of Labor.

SEC. 4. An American Federation of all National and International Trade Unions, to aid and assist each other; to aid and encourage the sale of union-label goods, and to secure legislation in the interest of the working people, and influence public opinion, by peaceful and legal methods, in favor of organized labor.

SEC. 5. To aid and encourage the labor press of America.

ARTICLE III.—CONVENTION.

SECTION 1. The Convention of the Federation shall meet annually at 10 a. m., on the second Monday in November, at such place as the delegates have selected at the preceding Convention.

SEC. 2. At the opening of the Convention the President shall take the chair and call the Convention to order, and preside during its sessions.

SEC. 3. The following committees, consisting of fifteen members each, shall be appointed by the President: First, Rules and Order of Business; second, Report of the President; third, Report of the Secretary; fourth, Report of the Treasurer; fifth, Resolutions; sixth, Laws; seventh, Organization; eighth, Labels; ninth, Adjustment; tenth, Local or Federated Bodies; eleventh, Education; twelfth, State Organization; thirteenth, Boycotts; fourteenth, Building Trades (to which shall be referred all grievances that involve only building trades, and all other matters pertaining exclusively to the building trades).

SEC. 4. The President shall direct the chief executive officers of three National or International Unions, at least ten days previous to the holding of the Annual Convention, to appoint one delegate each from their respective delegations-elect, who shall compose an Auditing Committee. The committee shall meet at such place as the President of the American Federation of Labor may direct, and at such time prior to the Convention as the President may determine is necessary for the proper performance of their duty; and they shall audit the accounts of the Federation for the preceding twelve months, and report upon credentials immediately upon the opening of the Convention. The expense of said committee shall be paid out of the funds of the Federation.

SEC. 5. Resolutions of any character or propositions for changes in this Constitution can not be introduced in the Convention after the fourth day's session, except by unanimous consent.

SEC. 6. The Convention shall have power to order an executive session at any time.

SEC. 7. None other than members of a bona fide Trade Union shall be permitted to address the Convention or read papers therein, except by a two-thirds vote of the Convention.

SEC. 8. Party politics, whether they be Democratic, Republican, Socialistic, Populistic, Prohibition, or any other, shall have no place in the Conventions of the American Federation of Labor.

SEC. 9. The rules and order of business governing the preceding Convention shall be in force from the opening of any Convention of the American Federation of Labor until new rules have been adopted by action of the Convention.

SEC. 10. A quorum for the transaction of business shall consist of not less than one-fourth of the delegates attending a Convention.

SEC. 11. No grievance shall be considered by any Convention that has been decided by a previous Convention, except upon the recommendation of the Executive Council, nor shall any grievance be considered where the parties thereto have not previously held a conference and attempted to adjust the same themselves.

ARTICLE IV.—REPRESENTATION.

SECTION 1. The basis of representation in the Convention shall be: From National and International Unions, for less than four thousand members, one delegate; four thousand or more, two delegates; eight thousand or more, three delegates; sixteen thousand or more, four delegates; thirty-two thousand or more, five delegates, and so on. From Central Bodies, State Federations, Federal Labor Unions, and Local Unions having no National or International Union, one delegate; provided, however, that Local Unions and Federal Labor Unions herein referred to located in one city shall have the right to unite in sending a delegate to represent them unitedly. Only bona fide wage workers who are not members of, or eligible to membership in, other Trade Unions, shall be eligible as delegates from Federal Labor Unions.

SEC. 2. The delegates shall be elected at least two weeks previous to the Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, and the names of such delegates shall be forwarded to the Secretary of this body immediately after their election.

SEC. 3. Questions may be decided by division or a show of hands, but if a call of the roll is demanded by one-tenth of the delegates present each delegate shall cast one vote for every one hundred members or major fraction thereof he represents, but no City or State Federation shall be allowed more than one vote.

SEC. 4. The Secretary shall prepare for use of the Convention printed poll lists, containing the number of votes the delegates from National and International Unions are entitled to, based upon the average membership during the year, from reports made to the office of the Federation not later than September 30 preceding the Annual Convention.

SEC. 5. No organization or person that has seceded, or has been suspended, or expelled, by the American Federation of Labor, or by any National or International organization connected with the Federation, shall, while under such penalty, be allowed representation or recognition in this Federation, or in any Central Body or National or International Union connected with the American Federation of Labor, under the penalty of the suspension of the body violating this section.

SEC. 6. No organization shall be entitled to representation unless such organization has applied for and obtained a certificate of affiliation at least one month prior to the Convention, and no person shall be recognized as a delegate who is not a member in good standing of the organization he is elected to represent.

ARTICLE V.—OFFICERS.

SECTION 1. The officers of the Federation shall consist of a President, eight Vice Presidents, a Secretary, and a Treasurer, to be elected by the Convention on the last day of the session, and these officers shall be the Executive Council.

SEC. 2. The President and Secretary shall be members of the succeeding Convention in case they are not delegates, but without vote.

SEC. 3. All elective officers shall be members of a local organization connected with the American Federation of Labor.

SEC. 4. The terms of the officers of the American Federation of Labor shall expire on the first day of January succeeding the Convention.

SEC. 5. The President and Secretary shall engage suitable offices in the same building at Washington, D. C., for the transaction of the business of the organization.

SEC. 6. All books and financial accounts shall at all times be open to the inspection of the President and Executive Council.

ARTICLE VI.—DUTIES OF PRESIDENT.

SECTION 1. It shall be the duty of the President to preside at the Annual Convention; to exercise supervision of the Federation throughout its jurisdiction; to sign all official documents, and to travel, with the consent of the Executive Council, whenever required, in the interest of the Federation.

SEC. 2. The President shall submit to the Secretary, at the end of each month, an itemized account of all moneys, traveling and incidental, expended by him in the interest of the Federation; and shall report his acts and doings to the Annual Convention of the Federation.

SEC. 3. The President, if not a delegate, shall have the casting vote in case of a tie, but shall not vote at other times. He shall be required to devote all his time to the interest of the Federation.

SEC. 4. The President shall call meetings of the Executive Council, when necessary, and shall preside over their deliberations, and shall receive for his services such sum as the Annual Convention may determine, payable weekly.

SEC. 5. In case of a vacancy in the office of President by death, resignation, or other cause, the Secretary shall perform the duties of the President until his successor is elected. In that event it shall be the duty of the Secretary to issue, within six days from the date of vacancy, a call for a meeting of the Executive Council at headquarters for the purpose of electing a President to fill said vacancy.

ARTICLE VII.—DUTIES OF SECRETARY.

SECTION 1. The duties of the Secretary shall be to take charge of all books, papers, and effects of the general office; to conduct the correspondence pertaining to his office; to furnish the elective officers with the necessary stationery; to convene and act as Secretary at the Annual Convention, and to furnish to the Committee on Credentials at the Convention a statement of the financial standing of each affiliated body; to forward on March 1st and September 1st of each year to the secretaries of all affiliated organizations a list of the names and addresses of secretaries and organizers.

SEC. 2. The Secretary shall keep all letters, documents, accounts, etc., in such manner as the Annual Convention may direct; he shall receive and collect all moneys due the Federation, and pay them to the Treasurer, taking his receipt therefor; provided, that he may retain in his hands a sum not exceeding $2,000 for current expenses, which money shall be paid out only on the approval of the President.

SEC. 3. The Secretary shall submit to the Auditing Committee, for their inspection, vouchers for all moneys expended; close all accounts of the Federation on September 30 of each year, and all moneys received or disbursed after such date shall not be reported in the general balance account of the ensuing Convention. He shall publish a financial report monthly in the "American Federationist," and send one copy to each affiliated body, and such additional number of copies as may be ordered and paid for by any organization connected with the Federation.

SEC. 4. The Secretary shall give a bond of $2,000 for the faithful performance of his duties, and for his services he shall receive such sum as the Annual Convention may determine, payable weekly.

SEC. 5. The Secretary shall issue stamps to Local and Federal Labor Unions, which shall be used by such unions with which to receipt for members' dues.

SEC. 6. It shall be the duty of each International, National, Local Trade and Federal Labor Union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to furnish to the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor a copy of all official reports issued by such affiliated organizations, containing a statement of their membership in good standing, and to furnish such additional statistical data as may be called for by the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor as may be in the possession of the respective unions.

ARTICLE VIII.—DUTIES OF TREASURER.

SECTION 1. The Treasurer shall receive and take charge of all moneys, property, and securities of the Federation delivered to him by the Secretary or other officers of the American Federation of Labor. All funds of the American Federation of Labor, exceeding fifteen thousand dollars, shall be deposited by the Treasurer in bank, or banks, on interest bearing certificates of deposit in the name of the American Federation of Labor, and in order to be cashed shall require the signatures of the Treasurer, the President, and Secretary of the Federation. The Treasurer shall collect the interest on all such certificates or other deposit at the expiration of each six months, and pay the same over to the Secretary. The Treasurer shall deposit in open account in bank, or banks, in the name of the American Federation of Labor as Treasurer, all amounts in his possession not on certificates of deposit, and before any money thus deposited can be drawn, each check shall be signed by him as Treasurer. A copy of this section shall be forwarded by the President of the Federation to each bank upon which the Federation holds certificates of deposit.

SEC. 2. The Treasurer shall pay, through the Secretary, all warrants regularly drawn on him, signed by the President and countersigned by the Secretary, as required by this Constitution and none others.

SEC. 3. The Treasurer shall submit to the Annual Convention a complete statement of all receipts and disbursements during his term of office, and at the expiration of his term of office he shall deliver up to his successor all moneys, securities, books, and papers of the Federation under his control; and for the faithful performance of his duties he shall give a bond in such sum as the Executive Council may determine. The annual salary of the Treasurer shall be $500.

ARTICLE IX.—EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

SECTION 1. It shall be the duty of the Executive Council to watch legislative measures directly affecting the interests of working people, and to initiate, whenever necessary, such legislative action as the Convention may direct.

SEC. 2. The Executive Council shall use every possible means to organize new National or International Trade or Labor Unions, and to organize Local Trade and Labor Unions, and connect them with the Federation until such time as there is a sufficient number to form a National or International Union, when it shall be the duty of the President of the Federation to see that such organization is formed.

SEC. 3. When a National or International Union has been formed the President shall notify all Local Unions of that trade to affiliate with such National or International Union, and unless said notification be complied with within three months their charters shall be revoked.

SEC. 4. The Executive Council shall also prepare and present to the Convention, in printed form, a concise statement of the details leading up to approved and pending boycotts (and all matters of interest to the Convention), and no indorsement for a boycott shall be considered by the Convention except it has been so reported by the Executive Council.

SEC. 5. While we recognize the right of each trade to manage its own affairs, it shall be the duty of the Executive Council to secure the unification of all labor organizations, so far as to assist each other in any trade dispute.

SEC. 6. Whenever the revenue of the Federation shall warrant such action, the Executive Council shall authorize the sending out of Trade Union speakers from place to place in the interests of the Federation.

SEC. 7. The remuneration for loss of time by members of the Executive Council, organizers, or speakers engaged by them, shall be $5.00 per day, hotel expense and actual railroad fare.

SEC. 8. The Executive Council shall have power to make rules to govern matters not in conflict with this Constitution, or the constitution of affiliated unions, and shall report accordingly to the Federation.

SEC. 9. In the event of a vacancy of any member of the Executive Council, other than that of the President, by reason of death, resignation, or other cause, the President shall make such vacancy known to the Executive Council, and shall call for nominations. The names of all nominees shall be submitted to the Executive Council, and it shall require a majority vote of the Executive Council to elect. Upon each unsuccessful balloting the name of the candidate receiving the lowest number of votes shall be dropped.

SEC. 10. All Local Trade Unions and Federal Labor Unions holding charters direct from the American Federation of Labor desiring the assistance of the American Federation of Labor in trade disputes, shall submit to the President of the American Federation of Labor for approval by the Executive Council, the full statement of the grievance, and shall receive within twenty (20) days from the President an answer as to whether they will be sustained or not, and no benefits shall be paid where a strike takes place before the Local Union has received the approval of the Executive Council.

SEC. 11. No charter shall be granted by the American Federation of Labor to any National, International, Trade, or Federal Labor Union without a positive and clear definition of the trade jurisdiction claimed by the applicant, and the charter shall not be granted if the jurisdiction claimed is a trespass on the jurisdiction of existing affiliated unions, without the written consent of such unions; no affiliate International, National, or Local Union shall be permitted to change its title or name, if any trespass is made thereby on the jurisdiction of an affiliated organization, without having first obtained the consent and approval of a Convention of the American Federation of Labor; and it is further provided, that should any of the members of such National, International, Trade, or Federal Labor Union, work at any other vocation, trade, or profession, they shall join the union of such vocation, trade, or profession, provided such are organized and affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

SEC. 12. The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor shall only have power to revoke the charter of an affiliated National or International Union when the revocation has been ordered by a two-thirds majority of a regular Convention of the American Federation of Labor, by a roll-call vote.

ARTICLE X.—REVENUE.

SECTION 1. The revenue of the Federation shall be derived from a per capita tax to be paid upon the full paid-up membership of all affiliated bodies, as follows: From International or National Trade Unions, a per capita tax of two-thirds of one cent per member per month; from Local Trade Unions and Federal Labor Unions, ten cents per month, five cents of which must be set aside to be used only in case of strike or lockout; Local Unions, the majority of whose members are less than eighteen (18) years of age, two cents per member per month; from Central and State bodies, $10 per year, payable quarterly.

SEC. 2. Delegates shall not be entitled to a seat in the Annual Convention unless the tax of their organization, as provided for in Section 1 of this Article, has been paid in full to September 30 preceding the Convention.

SEC. 3. Any organization affiliated with this Federation not paying its per capita tax on or before the 15th of each month shall be notified of the fact by the Secretary of the Federation, and if at the end of three months it is still in arrears it shall become suspended from membership by the Federation, and can be reinstated only by a vote of the Convention when such arrearages are paid in full, as provided in Section 2 of this Article.

ARTICLE XI.—LOCAL CENTRAL BODIES.

SECTION 1. No Central Labor Union, or any other central body of delegates, shall admit to or retain in their councils delegates from any local organization that owes its allegiance to any other body, National or International, hostile to any affiliated organization, or that has been suspended or expelled by, or not connected with, a National or International organization of their trade herein affiliated, under penalty of having their charter revoked for violation of their charter, subject to appeal to the next Convention.

SEC. 2. It shall be the duty of all National and International Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to instruct their Local Unions to join chartered Central Labor Bodies, Departments, and State Federations in their vicinity where such exist. Similar instructions shall be given by the American Federation of Labor to all Trade and Federal Labor Unions under its jurisdiction.

SEC. 3. Where there are one or more Local Unions in any city belonging to any National or International Union affiliated with this Federation, they may organize a Trades Assembly or Central Labor Union, or shall join such body, if already in existence.

SEC. 4. The Executive Council and Local Central Labor Unions shall use all possible means to organize and connect as Local Unions to National or International Unions the organizations in their vicinity; to aid the formation of National or International Unions where none exist, and to organize Federal Labor Unions where the number of craftsmen precludes any other form of organization.

SEC. 5. No Central Labor Union, or other central body of delegates, shall have the authority or power to order any organization, affiliated with such Central Labor Union, or other central labor body, on strike, where such organization has a national organization, until the proper authorities of such National or International organization have been consulted and agreed to such action.

SEC. 6. Separate charters may be issued to Central Labor Unions, Local Unions, or Federal Labor Unions, composed exclusively of colored members, where, in the judgment of the Executive Council, it appears advisable and to the best interest of the Trade Union movement to do so.

SEC. 7. No Central Labor Union, or other central body of delegates, shall have authority or power to originate a boycott, nor shall such bodies indorse and order the placing of the name of any person, firm, or corporation on an unfair list until the Local Union desiring the same has, before declaring the boycott, submitted the matter in dispute to the Central Body for investigation, and the best endeavors on its part to effect an amicable settlement. Violation of this section shall forfeit charter.

SEC. 8. No Central Body, or Department, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor shall reject credentials presented by a duly elected or appointed delegation of a Local Union, chartered by a National or an International Union having affiliation with the American Federation of Labor; provided, however, that upon written charges signed by at least three delegates, any delegate of an affiliated Union may, upon conviction, after a fair trial, be expelled or suspended. Action of the Central Body, under this section, shall be subject to appeal to the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor and no delegation representing Local Unions affiliated, as herein described, shall be suspended or expelled until like action is taken.

SEC. 9. No Central Body shall take part in the adjustment of wage contracts, wage disputes or working rules of Local Unions, affiliated with a National or International Union, unless the laws of the National or International Union permit, except upon the request or consent of the executive officer of the National or International Union affected.

SEC. 10. Local Unions of National or International Unions affiliated with the Departments attached to the American Federation of Labor, in any city where a Local Department exists, shall not be eligible to membership in any Local Department unless they are connected with the chartered Central Body, nor shall they be eligible to membership in the Central Body unless they are affiliated with the Local Department.

ARTICLE XII.—ASSESSMENT IN DEFENSE OF NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL UNIONS.

SECTION 1. The Executive Council shall have power to declare a levy of one cent per member per week on all affiliated unions for a period not exceeding ten weeks in any one year, to assist in the support of an affiliated National or International Union engaged in a protracted strike or lockout.

SEC. 2. Any Union, International, National, or Local, failing to pay within sixty days the levies declared in accordance with Section 1, shall be deprived of representation in Convention of the American Federation of Labor, and in City Central Bodies, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

ARTICLE XIII.—DEFENSE FUND FOR LOCAL TRADE AND FEDERAL LABOR UNIONS.

SECTION 1. The money of the defense fund shall be drawn only to sustain strikes or lockouts of Local Trade and Federal Labor Unions, when such strikes or lockouts are authorized, indorsed, and conducted in conformity with the following provisions of this Article:

SEC. 2. In the event of a disagreement between a Local Union and an employer which, in the opinion of the Local Union, may result in a strike, such Union shall notify the President of the American Federation of Labor, who shall investigate, or cause an investigation to be made, of the disagreement, and endeavor to adjust the difficulty. If his efforts should prove futile, he shall take such steps as he may deem necessary in notifying the Executive Council, and if the majority of said Council shall decide that a strike is necessary, such Union shall be authorized to order a strike, but that under no circumstances shall a strike or lockout be deemed legal, or moneys expended from the defense fund on that account, unless the strike or lockout shall have been first authorized and approved by the President and Executive Council.

SEC. 3. When a strike has been authorized and approved by the President and Executive Council, the president of the Local Union interested shall, within twenty-four hours, call a meeting of said Union, "of which" every member shall be regularly notified," to take action thereon, and no member shall vote on such question unless he is in good standing. Should three-fourths of the members present decide, by secret ballot, on a strike, the president of the Local Union shall immediately notify the President of the American Federation of Labor of the cause of the matter in dispute; what the wages, hours, and conditions of labor then are; what advances, if any, are sought; what reductions are offered, if any; state the number employed and unemployed; the state of trade generally in the locality, and the number of persons involved, union and non-union. Also the number of members who would become entitled to the benefits herein provided should the application be authorized and approved.

SEC. 4. No Local shall be entitled to benefit from the defense fund unless it has been in continuous good standing for one year; and no member shall be entitled to benefit from said defense fund unless he has been a member in good standing in the American Federation of Labor for at least one year.

SEC. 5. When a strike has been inaugurated under the provisions of Sections 2 and 3, the American Federation of Labor shall pay to the bonded officer of the Union involved, or his order, for a period of six weeks, an amount equal to four ($4) dollars per week for each member. Each Local Union shall require its treasurer to give proper bond for the safe-keeping and disbursement of all funds of the Local. No benefit shall be paid for the first two weeks of the strike. The Executive Council shall have the power to authorize the payment of strike benefits for an additional period.

Sec. 6. No member of a Local Union on strike shall be entitled to weekly benefits unless he reports daily to the proper officer of the Local Union while the strike continues, and no member who shall receive a week's work, three days to be a week, shall receive benefits. Any member refusing other work while on strike (providing said work is not in conflict with labor's interests) shall not be entitled to any benefits.

Sec. 7. Any Union inaugurating a strike without the approval of the Executive Council shall not receive benefits on account of said strike.

Sec. 8. In case of lockout the Executive Council shall have power to pay benefits if, upon investigation, it is found that the Local Union whose members are involved did not by their action or demands provoke the lockout by their employer.

Sec. 9. During the continuance of a strike, the executive board of the Local Union shall make weekly reports to the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, showing the amount of money distributed for benefits, and to whom paid, furnishing individual receipts to the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor from all members to whom such benefits have been paid, and all other facts that may be required.

Sec. 10. Before a strike shall be declared off, a special meeting of the Union shall be called for that purpose, and it shall require a majority vote of all members present to decide the question either way.

Sec. 11. In the event of the defense fund becoming dangerously low through protracted strike or lockout, the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor shall have the power to levy an assessment of ten cents on each member of Local Trade and Federal Labor Unions, assessments to be restricted to not more than five per year; and, further, that there shall always be a surplus of five thousand ($5,000) dollars in the defense fund.

Sec. 12. That no Local shall be entitled to any of the benefits of the defense fund unless it requires its members to pay not less than fifty (50) cents per month.

Sec. 13. That the Local Trade and Federal Labor Unions set aside for the maintenance of a local defense fund not less than five cents a month from each member.

ARTICLE XIV.—MISCELLANEOUS.

SECTION 1. Certificates of affiliation shall be granted by the President of the Federation, by and with the consent of the Executive Council, to all National and International Unions and local bodies affiliated with this Federation.

Sec. 2. Seven wage-workers of good character, following any trade or calling, who are favorable to Trade Unions, whose trade or calling is not organized, and are not members of any body affiliated with this Federation, who will subscribe to this Constitution, shall have the power to form a local body to be known as a "Federal Labor Union," and they shall hold regular meetings for the purpose of strengthening and advancing the Trade Union movement, and shall have power to make their own rules in conformity with this Constitution, and shall be granted a local certificate by the President of this Federation; provided, the request for a certificate be indorsed by the nearest Local or National Trade Union officials connected with this Federation, but not more than three Federal Labor Unions shall be chartered in any one city. Employers who are working for wages, may, upon regular ballot, be admitted to membership in Federal labor or local unions, directly affiliated with the A. F. of L., subject to the approval of the president of the A. F. of L. Such members shall not attend meetings of the union or have a vote in controlling the affairs of the unions; they must comply with the scale of wages and rules adopted by the union of which they are members. The President of the American Federation of Labor shall have authority to appoint any person who is a member of any affiliated union to audit the accounts of such Federal Labor or Local Trade Unions as the President of the American Federation of Labor may direct and report the result thereof to the President of the American Federation of Labor. The books and accounts of each Federal Labor and Local Trade Union shall be at all times open to the inspection of auditors appointed under this section.

Sec. 3. The certificate fee for affiliated bodies shall be five ($5) dollars, payable to the Secretary of the Federation, and the fee shall accompany the application.

Sec. 4. The American Federation of Labor shall refer all applications for certificates of affiliation from Local Unions or Federal Labor Unions from a vicinity where a chartered Central Labor Union exists to that body for investigation and approval.

Sec. 5. Certificates of affiliation shall not be granted by State Federations of Labor. That power is vested solely in the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor and the executive officers of National and International Unions affiliated therewith.

Sec. 6. Fraternal delegates attending the Convention of the American Federation of Labor shall be entitled to all the rights of delegates from Central Bodies.

ARTICLE XV.—GENERAL RULES GOVERNING DEPARTMENTS OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

SECTION 1. For the greater development of the labor movement, such departments subordinate to the A. F. of L. are to be established from time to time as in the judgment of the A. F. of L., or of its Executive Council, may be deemed advisable. Each department is to manage and finance its own business.

SEC. 2. To be entitled to representation in any department, organizations eligible to join must first be, and remain in affiliation to the A. F. of L., and to be entitled to representation in local councils of departments, local bodies shall first be and remain in affiliation to central labor unions chartered by the A. F. of L.

SEC. 3. The fundamental laws of each department are to conform to, and be administered in the same manner as, the laws governing the A. F. of L. No department or local council of same shall enact laws, rules or regulations in conflict with laws of the A. F. of L., and in the event of change of laws of the latter, departments and local councils are to change their laws to conform thereto.

SEC. 4. Each department to be considered the official method of the A. F. of L. for transacting that portion of its business.

SEC. 5. All departments of the American Federation of Labor shall have their headquarters located in the City of Washington, D. C., and, if possible, in the same building with the Federation Headquarters.

THIRTY-FIRST ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR 1911

REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS

First Day—Monday Morning Session

The Auditorium, Atlanta, Georgia, November 13, 1911.

Pursuant to law, the regular meeting of the Thirty-first Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor was called to order at 10 a. m., by Mr. Louis P. Marquardt, representing the Atlanta Federation of Trades.

Chairman Marquardt: It is my pleasure and distinction to call to order the Thirty-first Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor. In behalf of the Atlanta Federation of Trades Convention Committee I greet you and extend to you a most hearty and cordial welcome. I now have the pleasure and honor of presenting to you the President of the American Federation of Labor, Samuel Gompers.

President Gompers in the chair.

President Gompers introduced to the convention Honorable Courtland S. Winn, Mayor of Atlanta. Mayor Winn stated that Governor Hoke Smith was to have been the first speaker of the session, but owing to the fact that the governor could not reach the Convention until later he desired to welcome the Convention to the city. In welcoming the Convention Mayor Winn said in part: It is with a great deal of pleasure that I welcome to Atlanta this distinguished body of Americans and fraternal delegates. The eyes, not only of the United States, but of Canada and the American colonies are directed toward Atlanta today, and they are watching and listening with deliberation as to the outcome of what this great body will do in its two weeks' session.

I find peculiar pleasure, gentlemen, in welcoming you to Atlanta, because Atlanta has always held in highest esteem the principles of organized labor and the men who represent organized labor in this country. I greet you as men who stand for the uplift and the betterment of humanity. I greet you as men who have followed the illustrious example and precept of that great English King, Alfred the Great, who in the ninth or tenth century first proclaimed to the world that it was proper to institute the eight-hour labor day. I believe King Alfred the Great is the first man of note that history records as being an advocate of the eight-hour work day. He it was who enunciated the principle and belief that mankind ought to work eight hours, that eight hours should be given to recreation and rest and eight hours to the improvement, intellectually and socially, of men. This is not a new fad, but it has come down through the centuries and it has grown and grown until it is not only recognized as a correct principle by American working men, but by conservative, thinking men whether they belong to the creeds and crafts of labor or not.

I greet you as men who have consistently advocated at all times the abolition of child labor. We believe with you that the factory, the mill and the work shop is no place for childhood, but that the children ought to be taken out of factory environment, out of sweatshops and put into the schools, permitted to use the playgrounds, to breathe God's pure air and enjoy the bright sunshine that the Great Architect of the universe has given, and thus equip and prepare the better for the duties of citizenship that ultimately await them.

I greet you as men and women who are interested in bettering the sanitary conditions and surroundings of the workshop where men and women labor. I greet you, my friends, as men and women who are for the uplift of humanity and mankind the world over, whether they work at the forge, in the shop, in the factory, on the railroad or wherever they may be. The great principles and teachings of organized labor are for the uplift and the betterment of mankind, no matter where or when it is taught to the sons and daughters of men.

All Atlanta feels honored that you have selected this Southern City in which to hold the Thirty-first Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor. You will find from all our citizens of every class, whether they belong to Union Labor or whether they belong to the professions or commercial life, a warm Southern greeting. You will find extended to you during your stay here that proverbial hospitality for which the South and the Southern people are noted. You are not in an alien city, a city inimical to your teaching. We want you to feel that you are among your friends in Atlanta. We are glad to see among your number so many ladies. We welcome them to the hospitality of this city of the Southland. They bless, they brighten, they beautify, they adorn any occasion to which they lend their presence and their aid.

Gentlemen, not only in behalf of the men and women who hold membership in the union labor organizations in Atlanta, but in behalf of its 200,000 loyal patriotic American citizens, I bid you welcome to this Queen City of the South, and I hope your stay will be as pleasant to you and as profitable to you as it will be pleasant to the people of Atlanta.

President Gompers introduced to the Convention Honorable Hoke Smith, Governor of Georgia and United States Senator-elect from Georgia.

In welcoming the Convention on behalf of the State, Governor Smith said in part:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I extend to you a most cordial welcome to our state and I wish to tell you that you are in a state where the great majority of the people honor and respect Union Labor. I believe in the organization of the members of the crafts and the Federation of the organizations. Transportation and industrial business are conducted through the investment of money and the labor of men. Both must unite to bring either to transportation or industrial enterprises success. It is therefore but right that each should receive a fair proportion of the profit made by their united efforts. If all the men who engage in these enterprises were organized into a corporation, and all of the money scattered among many disorganized holders, the men solidly organized would be more than human if they failed to claim for themselves more than a fair part of the profits. Then it is but reasonable to say that if the money is all organized in Corporations and the men remain disorganized as individuals, the money would claim more for itself than a fair part of the profits. I am attributing to it no more greed than might justly be attributed to the men. Those who handle the money are human, the men themselves are human. Then how can it be expected that the men will receive their fair part of the profits unless they organize their crafts and federate their organizations?

I welcome you to Georgia because you represent the Federation of the Crafts. The highest human service comes from contribution to the development of men. The greatest work any man can do is to promote the progress of his fellow men. Money is necessary, but finally it is useless except where it contributes to the development of the human race. All legislation, all administration should have in view the development of the individual, the broadening of his opportunity by checking that concentration of power above that takes from him an opportunity.

I welcome your organization to Georgia because you are engaged in the effort to broaden this opportunity and to help prepare the individual man better to use his opportunity. If I were a member of a craft I would always carry with me my Union Card, and I would always seek to maintain a good standing in my Union. I have no sympathy with prejudice against Union Labor; it comes from narrowness and lack of comprehension. I am as far as any man from uttering a thought that would seek to stir prejudice or bad feeling between men and money; but I would have those who possess a larger share of the money sympathize with my desire to see the improvement of my fellow citizens.

I believe in Union Labor. I do not expect all of you to be perfect. Nobody ought to expect it. When we become perfect we will all be translated. But I do say that I believe that Union Labor has made just as few mistakes as the men who handle the money. I believe in Union Labor because for more than a quarter of a century I have studied what those who handle Union Labor have been doing and I have seen the fruits of their effort. I know that Union Labor has helped to build the manhood of American citizens.

Your organizations are essential. We long for the upbuilding of our fellow men, for their growth mentally, morally, spiritually and financially. Financial success, at least to a reasonable extent, is almost essential to moral, mental and spiritual growth. How can you expect a man to grow if his family is scarcely fed and his children scarcely clothed? How can you expect a man to grow if he has no hours of leisure for thought and study? How can you expect him to grow as a citizen if from daylight to dark he must toil, and then after dark see those dear to him almost destitute? I put it broadly as a National proposition, not as a selfish proposition that belongs simply to you. If our country is to be great it must be great in the greatness of the individual citizens of our states. The whole scheme of our Government was based on that theory that here between the oceans, the lakes and the gulf we would set a type of that plan of Government which would develop the greatest number of splendid men and women. What a power the different Unions and your organization is to accomplish this result. You are essential to that work which will give fair pay for a day's efforts. You are making progress, you are making splendid progress, and you will continue to make progress until you accomplish a result which will bring to every man full pay for what he does.

But there are other lines upon which you are doing splendid work. You are building men, you are caring for children, you furnish a powerful influence to see that every child has a chance. You stand against the sweatshop for children, you stand for education of children, you stand for their preparation for the responsibilities, the trials and the pleasures of full grown life. But you can do a great deal more, and you are doing it. Growth should be the aspiration of manhood. Improvement should be the effort even of those who have reached maturity, even of the man who has passed from the days of apprenticeship to the days of Artisan, greater skill in our various lines of work, no matter what they may be, the awakening of aspirations to do better whatever we are called on to do in our line of occupation, as citizens, as home-makers, as fathers and mothers.

I welcome you to Atlanta because you are engaged in the great work of co-operating with your fellow men for the benefit of your fellow men. And I want to say to you that here you have a cordial welcome. Here you are among your friends. We are glad you are with us, and nine-tenths of our people cordially endorse your efforts and will be glad to help you in everything you desire to accomplish.

President Gompers introduced to the Convention Mr. N. H. Kirkpatrick, President of the Atlanta Federation of Trades.

President Kirkpatrick—Ladies and Gentlemen: I take great pleasure in extending to you in a few words the welcome of organized labor in the City of Atlanta. You have been cordially and ably welcomed to Georgia by our Governor and Senator-elect, who has only recently on this platform been elevated to membership in the Blacksmiths' Union. You have been welcomed to the City of Atlanta by our Honorable Mayor, who is himself a member of the Brick-layer's Union. I am sure these two gentlemen have voiced the sentiment of organized labor, not only in Atlanta, but throughout the State of Georgia. We sincerely hope and trust that you will be pleased with Atlanta as your Convention City. Our chief aim in the last few months has been to provide for your comfort and pleasure in this convention. We hope you will be made to feel at home. Most of the homes of our cities are occupied by the industrial classes, and not a few of them are owned by members of organized labor. I am instructed to say to you that the latch-string hangs on the outside for every delegate and visitor to the Convention.

The Local Unions of our city have always adhered consistently and strictly to the principles laid down by the American Federation of Labor. We have at all times entertained the highest regard for and confidence in the executive officers of the Labor movement of this country, and as a result we have been rewarded in this section of the South with a Trades Union movement as pure as the air we breathe and as sure of prosperity in the future as is the land in which we live.

We are pleased to have you as our guests. We know the principles for which we stand are as broad as the universe, and it is to you gentlemen who have given your time, your thought and in many instances consecrated your lives to this work, who have made the Trade Union movement up-to-date. Therefore, in behalf of the Atlanta Federation of Trades I take pleasure in saying that we not only extend the hand of welcome, but pledge you our support and confidence in the future as we have given it in the past.

President Gompers introduced to the Convention Hon. William Schley Howard.

In welcoming the Convention on behalf of the Fifth Congressional District, Mr. Howard said in part: Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen of the Convention: With all the cordiality of my nature I welcome you to the Sunny South, to its Empire State and its Capital City. We are delighted that you have honored us by holding this Convention here. We hope that while you are here you will feel perfectly at home. The principles for which you gentlemen stand and have labored are just and right, and the only thing I cannot understand is that the 18,000,000 men in the United States of America who follow industrial employment are not members of Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Great strides are yet to be taken. Many problems perplexing in their nature will have to be met. My honest opinion is that the rock upon which this nation shall finally stand is the friendly relation and hearty co-operation that must and will exist between Capital and Labor. The first step to be taken in the direction of the accomplishment of this is a complete unobscuring of the secrets of "big business." First there must be a flood of water squeezed from the organization of large Corporations who predicate the wage scale they pay to their employees, upon dishonest organization.

It is a great pleasure to have been thrown with the chief officer of your magnificent organization and with his co-workers at the National Capital. From what I have seen of them, from what I know of their untiring efforts for the uplift of humanity, permit me to say, Mr. President, that the honors have been most worthily bestowed. It will be my pleasure, and I will deem it a distinguished privilege, to help in my humble way, so long as I shall remain as an official in Washington, in the upbuilding of the principles of organized labor. I do not say this here because I am in your presence. I believe that disorganization can accomplish nothing, and when the trades are thoroughly organized and follow the wise guidance of such men as I see before me we can accomplish things that will redound to the glory of the men and women who toil for their living.

I hope you will be wisely guided in your deliberation here. May what you do and say redound to the glory of the cause of organized labor. May what you recommend be wise in its conclusions, and then in my humble capacity I will assist in carrying out your recommendation.

We greet you. We are in hearty accord with your every sentiment. As our distinguished Governor has welcomed you to Atlanta and our distinguished Mayor has welcomed you to Atlanta, I desire to extend the jurisdiction and welcome you to the Fifth Congressional District of Georgia, which contains practically everything that is good in Georgia.

President Gompers introduced to the Convention Hon. C. T. Ladson, Attorney for the Atlanta Federated Trades and the State Federation of Labor.

Mr. Ladson, in addressing the convention, said in part:

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: I hardly know where I come in in a meeting of this kind. It is quite appropriate that the very able and distinguished Governor of Georgia should extend you a welcome on behalf of the State and that the Mayor, whom we all love, should welcome you to the city, that the local Federated President and the officers of the State Federation of Labor should join in such a welcome, but where the balance of us came in I was not quite clear when I read the program. But now that I am here I am going to say a few words, and at the risk of being somewhat inappropo I am going to discuss from a lawyer's standpoint a vital question which threatens to become more vital with the passing years, as to a change in the law whereby no court shall have the right to imprison a citizen of this country for contempt of court unless that citizen has first been accorded a trial by a jury of his countrymen and has been found guilty by such a jury. I shall incidentally refer to a great case wherein as defendants your honored chief, Mr. Gompers, the Secretary of your organization, Mr. Morrison and Mr. Mitchell were concerned. I approach the discussion of this subject by reason of those personalities involved, for fear some gentleman on the floor might deem it inappropriate, and I hope I will not offend in that respect. I secured copies of all the records in that case, and when I got through with a study of those records I was almost paralyzed with amazement at the culmination of that alleged trial and the extraordinary sentences imposed upon those three men. I do not believe the American people have fairly grasped the real issues of that memorable case.

Now, gentlemen, it is but a stale platitude that courts must be respected. So they must. It is undeniably true that upon the judiciary of America and of every free land there must rest much of liberty and law and order and everything that spells for the glory of a Republic. There is no man who respects a judge in the abstract more than I do, or more in the concrete, when he measures up to the ideal of a just judge; but I for one as a free man do not believe that any divinity doth hedge a judge about. I for one believe that a judge is the just subject of just criticism. And, more than that, I am not unmindful of the fact that history, particularly English history, shows the sad fact that in many memorable struggles for liberty judges have been made the engines of tyrannical power. If time permitted I should cite innumerable instances of such facts.

Mr. Ladson spoke at length and in detail of the issuing of the injunction in the Buck Stove and Range Company, and the trial and sentencing of President Gompers, Vice-President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison for alleged contempt of court.

Following his statement of the details of the case Mr. Ladson said: Now, gentlemen, I do not believe that the founders of the Constitution ever contemplated that its citizens could be sent to jail for twelve months for contempt of a court's order, whether in a civil or a criminal case, without trial by jury. I have studied the Constitution of the United States. Like all lawyers I have studied Magna Charta, the great charter wrung from King John in 1215 on the banks of the Thames by the barons and the yeomanry of England. I have tried to reason out how it has come about that judges under a pretended exercise of law could ever dare to sentence a citizen for twelve months as a common felon in a common jail without a verdict and judgment of his peers. The Constitution of the United States says "the trial of all crimes except in cases of impeachment shall be by jury." It further says, "excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted." And it further says, "In suits at common law where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars the right of trial by jury shall be preserved."

If in a civil case where more than $20 is involved the Constitution of the United States says that the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, how much more should it be reserved in a case such as I have cited. I say if the framers and makers of the Constitution were so jealous of the rights of trial by jury as to provide that in cases where more than $20 is involved a citizen shall have the right of trial by jury, surely they never dreamed that judges would assume to sentence men into common jails for alleged contempt of court.

I would not have you gentlemen believe that I lack in respect for the courts, but it is the duty of American free men and lovers of human liberty to resist tyranny wherever it shows its head. They have not put Messrs. Gompers, Morrison and Mitchell in jail yet, and I hope they will not. I am sure neither one of them wants to play role of martyr, but I am equally sure neither one of them would blanch in the face of a sentence under such a decree. And I am equally sure that if ever such a thing happens, or a similar thing happens in this country, the public conscience will be at last aroused to judicial tyranny and there will never be a repetition of it.

Mr. Ladson spoke at some length of famous English trials in which juries had freed men whom judges desired to have sentenced, and in concluding his address said: In all the history of the American judiciary there has been, to the glory of the American federal judiciary, but one case of impeachment in one hundred and twenty-five or one hundred and thirty years. The point I wish to make is that there must never be grounds for another; that public sentiment must hold judges, whether State or Federal, up to a true sense of justice. And I say this as a member of the profession from which judges are recruited. I say this with a pride in the profession, that there has never been a struggle for human liberty anywhere under the sun that the lawyers have not been foremost in the phalanx championing human liberty. I have a pride in my profession. I have a pride in our judiciary, but I am not blinded to the fact that wherever great power is vested the temptation for tyranny springs in the human breast. And I do not want the belief to become current in America that anybody, be he judge or president or what not, is free from criticism, or is above justice.

I thank you and I thank the Atlanta Federation of Trades for according me a position on this program.

President Gompers—It affords me pleasure to present to this Convention a gentleman who perhaps is as well known to the delegates who have attended the Conventions of the American Federation of Labor for years as any other generally regular attendant. He is perhaps more responsible than any other one delegate for bringing this Convention to Atlanta. We know him well and favorably. He speaks better for himself than any one can speak for him. He will make himself better understood than I can present him to you—our genial, eloquent, faithful friend, Jerome Jones.

In addressing the Convention Mr. Jones said in part:

Mr. President and Fellow Delegates: The question has again been asked on the floor and really I have been somewhat embarrassed in the last three or four days by just such questions—"How about the roses and the sunshine?" We did say something in St. Louis about roses and sunshine, and if age has not dimmed your vision or stubborn youth will not allow you to see, you can view them every minute in the day in Atlanta, the roses on the faces of our womanhood and the sunshine in the faces and hearts of all our people. You are going to get sunshine. I have no doubt it will be warm in the Convention, and we will make it warm for you outside of the Convention. We told you of flowers and sunshine when we asked you to come here. This sort of weather is foreign to us, and if some of you gentlemen brought it along with you, while we dislike it, as a stranger we will bid it welcome.

Now, Mr. President and Delegates, it would be impossible, utterly impossible, for me to express to you the pleasure that the people of Atlanta and Georgia feel at your coming. It is in no perfunctory way we welcome you. These people have heard of you for years. They know what you have done, they know the figure you have cut and the impetus that you have given to a movement in the State of Georgia that has done more for the advancement of Georgia than any other known human agency. Every smile upon the face of a child taken from the factory and placed in the school room, every bit of happiness that comes to the woman that has been emancipated from drudgery and toil, every bit of sunshine that has been thrown into the homes of the workers of the South has come through efforts of the American Federation of Labor. All the laws on our statute books favorable to labor and all the laws that have been unfavorable to labor that failed of passage are due to the magnificent efforts of this body.

Every citizen of Atlanta and of Georgia and of the South bids you welcome. Don't you think for one minute that they do not know you and your reputation; don't you think for one minute that they do not fully realize what you have done for the toilers of the South, and don't you think for one minute that they are unappreciative of the services you have rendered. Every class of citizen appreciates your visit and bids you welcome. The unorganized people and the organized people have looked forward to this Convention knowing well what it would mean to all the people of the country. We know what you people do, we know that your legislation makes for a higher manhood, a lovelier womanhood and a sweeter childhood. We want it said when this Convention adjourns that legislation has been enacted for the advancement of labor organizations and the workers of the country, legislation that will hereafter be the law of the land, that it was enacted in Atlanta and in the State of Georgia. We know it and we feel it in every pulsation of our hearts, and it is not too much to say, Mr. President, that we really and truly believe here that when the first meeting of the American Federation of Labor convened then it was that the first American Congress was in session, and when the preamble and constitution of the American Federation of Labor was written it was the first genuine and real declaration of independence to the American people.

Gentlemen, make yourselves at home. If you see anything you want, take it. Charge it to the Governor. We all expect to shake hands with you. These people are a people that want to take a fellow by the hand—and for the ladies, well, they take them by both hands. We want you to enjoy yourselves. We won't let you have a dull time. We despise it. We want you to have a rattling good time and we know you are going to have it. The happiest minute of my life is just now when I can look my old friends in the face and welcome them to Atlanta. May your visit here be one of such pleasure that when you go home you will heave a heavy sigh and say "this is a departure of regret."

President Gompers introduced to the Convention Hon. James L. Mason, City Attorney of Atlanta.

Mr. Mason said in part:

Mr. President and Friends: The Governor has welcomed you to the State, the distinguished Congressman to the District, the Mayor to the City, and Mr. Jones to himself. There is nothing left for me to do, they have covered it all, but as an Atlantan I am very glad to occupy a place on the stage, to take part in these proceedings and to say to you gentlemen that we people who are giving you a thorough welcome in words mean it in fact, and that these men who are stating that they are your friends are telling the real, downright truth, not simply talking for effect. When the Senator first started The Atlanta Journal he turned off every scab in it and put in Union men. And he is a leading member of the Blacksmiths' Union as he said, but he ought to have been in the Printers' Union. And the Mayor, whose heart is as ruby as his hair is red, is a member of the Bricklayers' Union, and when he says he is your friend he is simply repeating what all Atlanta knows. And when Bill Schley Howard steps before you and says, he is your friend, he is. He is a leading member of the Farmers' Union and raises more pumpkins and cane in DeKalb County than any one in it. And when the City Attorney attempts to speak he speaks as a full-fledged member of that great and glorious Union, equalled by few and excelled by none, the International Association of Machinists. When they admitted me they were in some doubt as to the class of work to put me to, but Mike Kelly and Henry Garrett held a consultation and decided that by reason of my long acquaintance with those particular machines they would put me in charge of the hot air furnaces and gas engines. So we are all good laboring men and we prove our faith by our works running not back through the past few minutes, but through years and years.

My friends, as one who in part sits aside and looks upon this great movement, I only wish it were mine to see its full fruition. There can be no doubt that organized labor and those institutions working with it are engaged in the one great epochal work of the day. In the middle ages it was the members of the great great crafts of the cities who first began to wrest power from the throne and who threw up the first breastworks against brutal power and licensed outrage. Today the baron who was then in his castle is removed, but we have equally great power reaching out in many directions, and it is to organized institutions we must look to wrest power again from concentration and diffuse it among the people. You are going to succeed because of the fact that you are organized. The great mass of the people fail because they are not organized. The old bundle of sticks story is as true now as it was in the days when Aesop first told it, and these great concentrations on the other side have but one thing to fear in America, and that is organized labor. And, gentlemen, it is up to you to work it out. Now, we do not expect any revolution. There is not going to be any revolution. This thing is going to be a quiet proposition in the next century. I still have confidence in the hearts of the people, and it does seem to me, as a man on the outside looking in, that if this organization and that other great organization come together they can settle all these questions very shortly.

President Gompers, in responding to the addresses of welcome said in part:

Governor Smith, Mayor Winn, representatives of the city government and civic activities, representatives of organized labor, fellow delegates and friends: I think we have all of us been greatly impressed, not only with the addresses which have been delivered to us, but, better than all, by the spirit back of them. For your cordial welcome to Atlanta and to the State of Georgia I want you to believe me, gentlemen, that I feel confident I but bespeak, and faintly bespeak, the great appreciation which the delegates to this Convention would have me express. For myself let me say that they have made a great impression upon my mind and they have left their impress upon my being, and I am sure I am within the limits of truth when I say they will have a great influence upon the judgment and upon the actions, not only of this Convention, but of the great rank and file of the working people and the people of the country generally.

I ought not to let this opportunity pass with a mere formal expression of appreciation and gratitude. As you gentlemen have addressed this Convention some thoughts have come to me and I feel the time is opportune for their expression. All through this country, all through this continent, all through Europe, all through Australasia, even to the Far East, there is a manifest discontent and unrest among the people for a better conception of justice and right which must prevail. The American Federation of Labor is but the heir, is but the continued effort of the masses of the people from time immemorial, to take up the cause of the common people, to struggle for right, for justice, to relieve the masses from burdens unnecessarily imposed and tyranny unjustly and unnecessarily exercised. That unrest finds its expression in different forms in different countries. In England and on the continent of Europe within the recent past, within the past six months there has been an uprising of those who occupy the lowest stratum in the entire human family. When the almost stagnated dumb giant of labor simply stepped from that position it occupied and folded its arms kingdoms and crowns and empires, commerce and industry stood still and at the mercy of the weakling labor. In our border country of Mexico a great transition has occurred in the recent past. In China there is now going on a struggle undreamed of five years ago for the overthrow of a tyranny and a dynasty and a system of Government and society obsolete in every other portion of the globe. It is a great upheaval that has for its demand a constitution which in its essentials shall vouchsafe liberty and guarantee a greater degree of right and justice.

Look where you will all over the world and the same unrest and discontent is seen, and yet in our country where we endeavor to so crystallize the discontent and unrest that it shall be constructive in character, upon lines and principles as we understand it among English speaking people of the world, our efforts are attempted to be outlawed by that part of the judiciary which invades the powers of the law-making and the executive departments of our country.

Just one word in connection with the presentation of the law upon this subject. If any man of labor is guilty of violating a law, if it be criminal, lodge an information or an indictment against him and try him by a jury of his countrymen. But I deny the right of a judge to issue an injunction forbidding me to do anything which the constitution guarantees me that I have a right to do. It is not so much a question of a trial by jury as the assumption of power and the assumption of jurisdiction. Let a judge assume jurisdiction and if it is undisputed it becomes a precedent upon which judges thereafter regard that jurisdiction as theirs. Our protest is against the assumption of jurisdiction. There are no property rights in men and no injunction should be issued unless there are property rights involved.

Although I speak as a layman, I have had my fur rubbed up the wrong way on this proposition so often that I feel I am speaking with a certain amount of authority.

No matter what the outcome of this trial may be, what matters it? John Mitchell, Frank Morrison and I do not want to go to jail, but if it must come about, then all we can say is that other as good, perhaps better men than we, have gone to jail in the cause of right, in the cause of humanity. And perhaps that may occur with others hereafter, but come what may I feel that the remark made to me last Friday in the City of Washington by a former member of Congress is true. He said: "Mr. Gompers, the American Federation of Labor is the only consistent and persistent and militant organized body of the people of the country which now stands for the rights of and for justice for the people of the country."

This American Labor movement, like the Labor movement of the civilized world, is going on. We will grow. We will grow with the good will of those who wish us well, we will grow in spite of the most bitter and relentless opposition. This Labor movement is here, not to stay, but to keep on going. It is the movement of living men and women with red blood in their veins, who have come to understand what is meant by the Declaration of Independence, who propose to translate the language of the Declaration of Independence to the every day rule of life among the people of our country.

In concluding his address, President Gompers said: In behalf of the American Federation of Labor permit me to extend a fraternal greeting to the delegates from the British Trades Union Congress, Brother Crinlon and Brother Roberts, to the delegate from the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, Brother Glockling, to you gentlemen who have honored us by your presence and addresses this morning, and to you delegates I want to express my appreciation.

I now declare this Thirty-first Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor duly open and ready for the transaction of business.

Delegate Jerome Jones, on behalf of the Woman's Auxillary of the Printers' Union of Atlanta, presented to President Gompers a handsome bunch of chrysanthemums.

Report of Committee on Credentials.

We have received a protest from the International Association of Car Workers against the seating of the delegates from the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, on the grounds that a charter was issued to the latter organization in violation of the constitution of the A. F. of L. On this protest we beg leave to report that inasmuch as the St. Louis Convention seated the delegates from the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, we can see no reason why this protest should be entertained at this time, and therefore recommend the seating of the delegates representing the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, namely, M. F. Ryan, G. F. Mounts, George A. Nolte and John J. Gallagher, with 269 votes.

We have credentials from the Ladies Garment Workers' International Union, but the organization is indebted for per capita tax for July, August and September, 1911, and under the constitution of the A. F. of L. their delegates cannot be seated until same is liquidated.

We have a credential from Thomas J. McNamara as delegate from the Heat and Frost Insulators and Asbestos Workers International Association, which is protested by Andrew J. Kennedy, the President of the organization, on the grounds that he is the only duly accredited delegate, having been elected by their regular Convention which met in August, 1910. The Committee requests that the contestants appear for a hearing, at eight o'clock this evening at Room 102, New Kimball Hotel.

We have received the following protest:

Atlanta, Ga., November 13th, 1911.
To the Credential Committee of the A. F. of L. Convention.
Brothers:—

We, the undersigned delegates to this convention, hereby make protest to the seating the delegates of the Electrical Workers representing the McNulty Faction (so-called) for the very potent reasons, to-wit:

That they do not represent the majority of Organized Electrical Workers of the United States and Canada.

That they are a menace to the peace of the Labor Movement as a whole.

Also, that they have defied the mandates of the St. Louis convention of the American Federation of Labor, which convention adopted a plan and was carried in conjunction with the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. to amalgamate the forces of the Electrical Workers.

Mr. McNulty and his associates have refused to abide by the rulings of the A. F. of L. and to seat them would mean a continuance of our industrial disturbances.

Fraternally submitted,

E. J. BRAIS,

Delegate Journeymen Tailors' Union.

A. ROSENBERG,

L. G. W. Union.

In view of the fact that the delegates from the Electrical Workers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, have been seated at several previous conventions since their internal dispute first arose, we would recommend that the protest be not entertained, and the delegates representing the Electrical Workers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, be seated.

D. A. CAREY, Chairman,

S. L. LANDERS,

E. FRANK MOORHOUSE,

Secretary.

President Gompers—You have heard the report of the Committee on Credentials. What is the pleasure of the Convention?

Delegate O'Connor (T. V.)—I move you that the report of the committee be received and that the delegates reported by them as entitled to seats be seated. (Seconded.)

Vice-President O'Connell—I think it would be well to accept that portion of the report which provides for seating the delegates to whose seating there has been no question. Then the balance of the report can be discussed. I move to amend the motion to that effect. (Seconded.)

Delegate Richardson—I move as an amendment to the amendment that delegates against whom no protests have been entered shall be seated in this Convention, in accordance with the recommendation of the committee, and where protests have been entered that they shall remain open for individual discussion as to the merits or demerits of the protest.

Vice-President O'Connell—That is exactly my motion.

Delegate Richardson—With that understanding I will withdraw my amendment. I want the protests to stand for discussion.

Delegate Brals—I desire to offer an amendment to the amendment in regard to the part of the report dealing with the Electrical Workers' credentials. Inasmuch as the Executive Council has handled this for three annual conventions and it has not as yet been settled, and as there are a large number of organized workers who wish to be represented, I desire to offer an amendment.

President Gompers—The amendment of Vice-President O'Connell is that the delegates reported by the committee against whose seating no protests are offered, shall be seated. The amendment accomplishes the purpose you have in view.

Delegate Tobin (J. F.)—Is there a representative from the San Francisco Labor Council?

Secretary Moorhouse—Yes, Anton Johanssen. He has not as yet arrived.

Delegate Tobin—I move that action on his credential be postponed until he arrives. (Seconded and carried.)

The amendment offered by Vice-President O'Connell was carried, and the original motion was adopted as amended.

At 1 o'clock, on motion of Vice-President Hayes, a recess was taken to 2:30 p. m.

First Day---Monday Afternoon Session

The Convention was called to order at 2:30 p. m. Monday, November 13th, President Gompers in the chair.

Absentees—Koch, Golden (Willis R.), Flanagan (Thomas), Schaffer (John C.), Butterworth, Humphrey, Conway, Pfeil, Thomas, Hughes (Andrew C.), Scoby, Glass, D'Andrea, Flore, Williams (John), Roach, Coakley, Price, Hayes (Frank J.), Lewis, Walker, McCullough, Moyer, Cannon, Williams (J. C.), Mahoney, Weber, (Jos. N.), Mallin, Mulhall, Gallagher (John J.), Taber, Commons, Gaviak, Connors (James B.), Morgan, McKenna, Lawrence, Coffey, Dowd, Blakey, Kellew (Williams E.), Anderson (W. H.), O'Brien (William H.), Hurley, Hardy, Jones (John R.), Munn, Oliver, Hassard, Evans (J. F.), Schaffer (Charles), Scoggan, Quick, Gray, Schneider (John), Hobbs, Wendt, Davis, Fuller, Winchenback, Morton, Becerril, Ford, Belt, Creamer, Dwyer, Donnelly, Saum, Engdahl, Schaub.

President Gompers—In accordance with the rules, the chair appoints, subject to confirmation by this Convention, W. G. Gredig, Typographical Union No. 48, Atlanta, as Assistant Secretary; T. N. Scales, Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance, Sergeant-at-Arms, and A. M. Copeland, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms or Messenger. Is there objection to these appointees? Hearing none, they will act.

Secretary Morrison read the report of the Committee on Credentials in regard to the protests of the International Association of Car Workers against the seating of the delegates from the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, as follows:

We have received a protest from the International Association of Car Workers against the seating of the delegates from the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, on the grounds that a charter was granted the latter organization in violation of the Constitution of the A. F. of L. On this protest we beg leave to report that inasmuch as the St. Louis Convention seated the delegates from the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, we can see no reason why this protest should be entertained at this time, and therefore recommend the seating of the delegates representing the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, namely, M. F. Ryan, G. F. Mounts, George A. Nolte and John J. Gallagher, with 269 votes.

Delegate Carey—I move the adoption of the report of the Committee. (Seconded.)

Delegate Richardson—I would like to have the protest read.

Secretary Morrison read the following protest:

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 8, 1911.
To the Committee on Credentials of the the Thirty-first Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Dear Sirs and Brothers:

The undersigned, in behalf of the International Association of Car Workers, begs leave to call your attention to the fact that under date of August 9, 1910, the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor issued a charter of affiliation to the Brotherhood Railway Carmen of America, in violation of the Constitutional rights of this Association, and in violation of Article IX, Section 11, of the Constitution of the American Federation of Labor, which reads, in part, as follows:

"Section 11. No charter shall be granted by the American Federation of Labor to any National, International, Trade or Federal Labor Union without a positive and clear definition of the trade jurisdiction claimed by the applicant, and the charter shall not be granted if the jurisdiction claimed is a trespass on the jurisdiction of existing affiliated Unions, without the written consent of such Unions."

In this connection, I wish to call your attention to the fact that the Brotherhood Railway Carmen of America is an organization, the membership of which is engaged in occupations and trades within the admitted and recognized jurisdiction of this Association, and that by the issuance of a charter of affiliation to that organization, it was an unlawful invasion of our Constitutional rights, and as that organization is now, and has been a dual organization to this Association, its jurisdiction not only trespasses upon, but completely covers the jurisdiction of this Association.

For your information, I might state that the Toronto Convention in violation of the Constitutional rights of the International Association of Car Workers, adopted the recommendation of the Adjustment Committee relative to the proposed amalgamation of these two organizations, which is, as follows:

"Committee recommends that a conference of the Executive Officers of the Association of Car Workers and Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, together with the President of the A. F. of L. or member of the Executive Council be held in the City of Washington, D. C., at the earliest possible date to arrange terms of amalgamation of the Car Workers and Railway Carmen organizations.

"Failure to agree upon terms of amalgamation the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. shall outline the terms of amalgamation and issue a charter to the Amalgamated organizations."

The Executive Council issued the charter in open, ruthless violation of Section 11, of the Constitution above quoted, as well as in open, ruthless violation of the action of the Toronto Convention, unlawful though it was, and issued this charter to the Brotherhood Railway Carmen without a semblance of authority, except assumed autocratic power, that same power so frequently exercised in the issuance of injunctions by the judiciary denying and depriving the men of labor of their Constitutional Rights under the written law.

The I. A. of C. W., since its affiliation with the A. F. of L., has conformed to the principles of that body and has striven as ceaselessly as conditions would permit, to in every manner work for, defend and uphold these principles. In times of strike, or trouble, involving the membership of other affiliated organizations, we have given them our moral support and such financial support as the treasuries of our Grand and Subordinate Lodges would allow.

We would further call your attention that as long as an affiliated organization conforms to the laws, rules and regulations of the American Federation of Labor, its rights and franchise cannot be lawfully placed in jeopardy, or in any way interfered with or infringed upon, much less given away. If an affiliated organization may be denied and deprived of its guaranteed and ordained constitutional rights, and its franchise sold like the seats in Wall Street Stock Exchange are sold to the highest bidder, to satisfy the wishes of the members of the Executive Council, then the rights of no organization are secure.

It is our understanding that the Constitution of the American Federation of Labor is the highest authority of that body and it is not within the province of any one or all of its officers to in any way alter, amend or annul any part of it for any reason whatsoever, nor is it within the province of even the Convention itself to amend any part of it, unless such amendment applies equally to all organizations or persons, no more than it is the right of a legislative body to pass a law applying only to one citizen.

After a careful review of the whole situation, it seems to us that the only basis for the action of the Executive Council can be that the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen has a larger membership than this Association; that the terms sought to be imposed upon this Association to amalgamate with the Brotherhood Railway Carmen were such as did affect the financial liability of the members of this Association, requiring them to become a part of an organization heavily in debt and legally obligating themselves for such indebtedness.

We are in no position to deny that the Brotherhood Railway Carmen has a larger membership than this Association, as in our opinion a decision in a matter involving the rights of an affiliated organization must be left to something other than the mere strength of members.

This question is one involving right or wrong. The action of the Executive Council in this case shows clearly that the non-affiliated organization was given more consideration than the affiliated organization and the former was benefited at the expense of the latter.

The policy of throwing down organizations that have tended to build up the American Federation of Labor and recognize organizations that have tended to tear down and disrupt, is not in our opinion one that will commend itself to members of the Labor Movement of this country.

I, therefore, hereby enter protest against the seating of the delegates who may represent the Brotherhood Railway Carmen in the Thirty-first Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, which convenes in Atlanta, Ga., on the thirteenth of this month.

I ask your Committee to give this protest your most liberal consideration to the end that absolute justice may be accorded to a small organization as well as a large one, and that no injustice or wrongs may be imposed upon this Association because its membership may not be as large as the membership of some affiliated organization.

We not only ask, but we demand equality before the law and before the Executive Council, that same equality which other organizations affiliated with the Federation demand and enjoy, of which the Executive Council has unlawfully denied and deprived the International Association of Car Workers by methods below the dignity of men holding such offices.

It is to be hoped that your recommendation on the premises and the action of the Convention thereon will show that the Constitution of the American Federation of Labor is still the highest authority of that body and that the Executive Council is subordinate to and not above it.

Fraternally submitted,

P. F. RICHARDSON,

President.

President Gompers—Has delegate Richardson anything to add to the statement that has been read?

Delegate Richardson—I would like to speak on the motion, but first I want to raise a point of order. The Executive Council has issued a charter of affiliation to the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America in open violation of the Constitution of the A. F. of L., and in violation of the ordained and guaranteed charter and constitutional rights of the International Association of Car Workers. My point of order is that under such circumstances the delegates representing the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America are not entitled to seats in this Convention.

President Gompers—The chair decides the point of order not well taken. The Toronto Convention adopted the recommendations of the Executive Council directing that conferences be held for the amalgamation of both organizations, and that a charter would be issued to the amalgamated body. The conferences were held, and to the satisfaction of the Executive Council. The failure to amalgamate the two organizations rested upon the representatives of the organization to which Delegate Richardson belongs. Thereupon a charter was issued to the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen. The matter was reported fully to the St. Louis Convention last year, and that Convention by an overwhelming vote sustained the position taken by the Executive Council in the issuance of the charter. Therefore, and for many other reasons it is not necessary to state at this time, the point of order is not well taken.

The matter was further discussed briefly by Delegate Richardson.

Vice-President O'Connell—I rise to a point of order. The chair has decided that the delegates from the organization whose credentials have been contested are entitled to seats in this Convention. Further discussion is out of order. The further action of the organization feeling offended is against the Executive Council.

President Gompers—The chair rules that point not well taken. The motion is in order; delegates may vote in favor or against it, exactly as the delegates may vote for or against the credentials of any delegate from any organization.

Treasurer Lennon—I arise to a point of order. The document read by Secretary Morrison is in no way a protest against the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, but is a protest against the action of the Executive Council. I therefore contend that the delegates are seated under the original vote.

President Gompers—The chair prefers that the Convention shall determine. The question is upon the motion to adopt the report of the Committee, which recommends the seating of the delegates from the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen.

The motion to adopt the report of the Committee was carried by a vote of 177 in the affirmative to 3 in the negative.

Secretary Morrison re-read the report of the Committee on Credentials, stating that the Ladies' Garment Workers' International Union was in arrears for per capita tax for July, August and September, and read the following telegram:

"Frank Morrison, American Federation of Labor Convention, Atlanta, Ga.

"Am mailing check to cover full amount of per capita."

The telegram was signed by John A. Dyché, Secretary of the Ladies' Garment Workers' International Union.

Delegate Carey, chairman of the Committee on Credentials, stated that under the circumstances the Committee recommended the seating of delegates from the Ladies' Garment Workers' International Union, with 668 votes. On motion the recommendation of the Committee was concurred in.

Secretary Morrison—The Committee requests that the Heat and Frost Insulators and Asbestos Workers' International Association appear before the Committee this evening.

Secretary Morrison re-read the following protest against the seating of the delegates representing the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and the report of the Committee thereon:

"We, the undersigned delegates to this Convention, hereby make protest to the seating of the delegates of the Electrical Workers representing the McNulty faction (so-called) for the very potent reason, to-wit:

"That they do not represent the majority of the organized Electrical Workers of the United States and Canada.

"That they are a menace to the peace of the Labor movement as a whole.

"Also that they have defied the mandates of the St. Louis Convention of the American Federation of Labor, which Convention adopted a plan, and was carried out in conjunction with the Executive Council of the A. F. of L., to amalgamate the forces of the Electrical Workers.

"Mr. McNulty and his associates have refused to abide by the rulings of the A. F. of L., and to seat them would mean a continuance of our industrial disturbances.

Fraternally submitted,

E. J. BRAIS.

Delegate Journeymen Tailors' Union.

A. ROSENBERG.

Ladies' Garment Workers' Union."

The report of the Committee on Credentials on the above protest is as follows:

"In view of the fact that the delegates from the Electrical Workers are affiliated with the A. F. of L. have been seated at several previous Conventions since their internal dispute first arose, we would recommend that the protest be not entertained, and the Electrical Workers affiliated with the A. F. of L. be seated."

Delegate D. A. Carey—I move the adoption of the recommendation of the Committee. (Seconded.)

Delegate Brals—I move as an amendment that this part of the report of the Committee be deferred until the Executive Council makes a report on the floor of this Convention.

Vice-President O'Connell—I rise to a point of order on the motion. There is no protest setting forth that the delegates of the Electrical Workers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor are indebted for per capita tax, or other financial reasons that would debar them from representation in this Convention, nor having violated the fundamental laws of this organization to cause their credentials to be protested by any affiliated organization. If there is some alleged grievance to be presented there is a proper place for it. Therefore the question of contending the right of the delegates to be seated in this Convention is in violation of the laws of the A. F. of L. and not in order.

President Gompers—The grounds upon which the protest is based, to deny the delegates from the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers representation in this convention by delegates, goes farther than their right to representation. It strikes at their affiliation to the American Federation of Labor. They cannot be denied those rights upon an assumption of guilt, at least until after they have had a fair trial. The grounds of the protest are therefore declared out of order. The point of order as raised by Delegate O'Connell is sustained. The question recurs upon the adoption of the report of the Committee. The chair will call for a vote by show of hands.

The motion to adopt the report of the Committee, which recommended the seating of the delegates of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, was carried by a vote of 175 in the affirmative to 14 in the negative.

Delegate D. A. Carey—I move the adoption of the report of the Committee on Credentials as a whole. (Seconded and carried.)

Vice-President Duncan presided during the reading of the report of President Gompers.

At the conclusion of the reading Vice-President Duncan stated that printed copies of the reports of the President, Secretary and Treasurer would be distributed to the delegates before adjournment, and that the report of the President would be referred to the Committee on President's Report when appointed. (See pages 21 to 80 inclusive.)

President Gompers—I wish to speak of a correction the Secretary of the Building Trades Department wishes me to make in the part of my report dealing with the Building Trades Department. I ask that the letter of Secretary Spencer be made part of the records in order to show the correction.

Vice-President Duncan—If there are no objections the document will take its place in the proceedings as a correction. Hearing none, it will be included in the report.

Following is the communication from Secretary Spencer of the Building Trades Department:

Washington, D. C., Nov. 9, 1911.

Mr. Samuel Gompers, President American Federation of Labor, Ouray Building, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir and Brother—

In the data which I furnished you for that portion of your report covering the subject of the Building Trades Department, two clerical errors were unfortunately made.

In the fourth paragraph of the quoted matter, the following statement is made: "Indeed in numberless instances there has been a ready acquisition in the declared policies, decisions and awards of the Department in the past year, etc., etc." The word "acquisition" is a clerical error and should be substituted by the word "acquiescence", so that the sentence will read:

"Indeed in numberless instances there has been a ready acquiescence in the declared policies, decisions and awards of the Department in the past year, etc., etc."

The other clerical error is contained in the statement setting forth the agreements entered into by a number of affiliated trades. The report shows an agreement to have been entered into between the Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers and the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, when it should read that the Department rendered a decision in the matter of controversy between these two Organizations.

If it is impossible to correct the statement in the report which you have already printed when the same goes into permanent form, I ask that this letter be incorporated in the permanent proceedings of the Atlanta Convention of the American Federation of Labor, so as to avoid any dispute upon these subjects.

Fraternally yours,

WM. SPENCER,

Secretary-Treasurer Building Trades Department.

Secretary Morrison read a summary of his report. (See pages 81 to 103 inclusive.)

President Gompers—I have had the pleasure of reading the Secretary's report, which he showed me after its completion. I was very much interested in the summary and analysis of that report. To me the analysis appears of such an important character to direct the attention of the readers to the essential facts of the report that I move it be made part of the printed proceedings and as an addenda to the report of the Secretary. (Seconded and carried.)

Summary of Secretary Morrison's Report Read to the Convention.

To the Officers and Delegates of the Thirty-first Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor:

Fellow-Unionists: I have the honor to submit a report to you of the receipts and expenditures for the past twelve (12) months, beginning October 1, 1910, and ending September 30, 1911.

It is with a great deal of pleasure that I report at the close of this fiscal year $189,579.56 in the treasury. Of the amount on hand, $133,782.34 is in the defense fund for the local trade and federal Labor Unions, and can be used to pay benefits only in the case of a strike or lockout of the members of these local unions. The balance, $55,797.22, is in the general fund. Of that fund only $15,155.29 is available for the general expenses of the American Federation of Labor. The balance, $40,641.93, is divided as follows: In the fund created by the one-cent assessment levied in accordance with the recommendation of the Norfolk Convention, and the receipts from the appeals issued for the same purpose, i. e., to be used for the legal defense of the officers of the American Federation of Labor and officers and members of affiliated unions in the injunction suit, $22,433.15. In the fund created by the three-cent assessment for the Hatters' strike, $226.45. In the fund created by the two-cent assessment levied to take an appeal from the decision rendered against the United Hatters in favor of Leewe & Company, $17,909.48. In the fund created by the one-cent assessment levied in accordance with the recommendation of the Norfolk Convention, for the purpose of placing organizers in Los Angeles and other cities, $72.85.

The Total receipts from all sources are $182,188.63; the total expenses are $175,524.08; leaving a balance of receipts over expenditures of $6,664.60.

On page 81 of the printed report you will find a statement giving the receipts and expenses for the twelve months ending September 30, 1911. On page 82 the expenses are detailed under their respective heads.

On pages 86 and 87 is furnished a table showing the voting strength of the affiliated organizations from the years 1903 to and including 1911, which will indicate the growth of membership.

Charters—Reports from the Secretaries of 85 of our National and International organizations furnish us with the information that 2,345 charters have been issued during the past year, and 1,358 surrendered—1,129 of the charters surrendered were locals of the National and International Union, and 229 affiliated direct with the American Federation of Labor.

Gain in Membership—The gain in membership reported by the Secretaries of 63 International organizations over the membership on the first of September last year is 117,596.

Strikes—Reports from 74 National and International organizations and from local unions directly affiliated with the American Federation of Labor show that there were 1,359 strikes, in which there were 170,526 involved. Of that number 104,655 were benefited, and 16,179 not benefited. The total cost of the strikes reported on was $4,709,550.69. Adding to that amount $173,302.06, donations made by local unions to other unions, we have a grand total of $4,882,852.75 expended to sustain members on strike during the past year.

Statistics covering the subjects will be found in the printed report on pages 88, 89 and 90.

On page 91 of the printed report is furnished a table showing the amount of benefits paid by the International organizations during the past year.

American Federationist.

The receipts on account of the American Federationist for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1911, are $18,213.98, which is $2,699.58 less than the expenses. Notwithstanding that fact, the receipts from the American Federationist for the past eight years has come with $935.05 of paying expenses. To offset that amount there are $3,713.15 unpaid bills due the Federation for advertisements that have been published prior to September 30, 1911.

Itemized report will be found on page 88 of printed report.

Organizing Expenses.

During the twelve months ending September 30, 1911, the American Federation of Labor expended $46,962.05 for organizing expenses.

On page 99 of the printed report is a statement giving the names of the respective organizers who were under salary permanently and by special appointment, showing the amount paid each and the districts in which they were employed.

Membership.

A resume of the growth of the American Federation of Labor, numerically, during the past thirty-one years, cannot but encourage the trade unionists to redouble their efforts to educate, organize, and federate the wage-earners of the world. The growth of the American Federation of Labor from 1881 to 1893 was gradual. During that time it increased from 50,000 to 275,000, and remained about that number up to 1899. In 1899 it reached very nearly 350,000; in 1900 it passed the 500,000 mark; in 1901, 750,000; in 1902 it passed the million mark, and in 1903 very nearly reached the million and a half point, and in 1904 shot up above the million and a half, reaching a membership of 1,676,200. Thus the growth of the American Federation of Labor from 1899 up to and including 1904 was phenomenal. This marked increase in membership could not occur other than by organizations being formed rapidly within a short period, and as a natural consequence it must be expected that in adjusting the membership of the unions the membership must decrease somewhat from the high-water mark which it reached while the organization wave held sway.

There was a decrease in the membership in 1905 and in 1906 from the high-water mark of 1904. This decrease was almost entirely caused by internal strife which led to secession and a number of ill-advised and unsuccessful strikes of a few international organizations.

During 1907 and 1908 the membership climbed up over 1,500,000 and receded again to a little below the 1,500,000 mark, when the tide again changed, and in 1910 it passed the 1,500,000 mark, and this year the increase in the membership of the international organizations and the addition of the 51,300 which came with the affiliation of the Western Federation of Miners, forced the average paid-up and reported membership of the international organizations to 1,756,735, which is an increase of 199,723 over the membership of last year, and 85,635 members over the high-water mark of 1904.

That the membership of the International Unions is steadily on the increase is indicated by the fact that the paid-up and reported membership of the directly affiliated local unions and international organizations for the month of September of this year is 1,768,614, which indicates that notwithstanding the hostile forces that are working against the labor unions that the coming year will show an increase over the membership reported upon this year.

The table on page 101 will show that the membership of the Federation has increased from 264,825 in 1897 to 1,761,835 in 1911.

A chart has been arranged and appears on page 102 of printed report showing the growth in membership.

On page 103 will be found the list of the union labels that are now used by affiliated international bodies, which have been indorsed by the American Federation of Labor.

In conclusion, I desire to express through the delegates present, my appreciation of the splendid efforts put forth by the organizers, and the assistance and encouragement received from the officers of the international organizations, and from my colleagues of the Executive Council.

Respectfully submitted,

FRANK MORRISON,
Secretary, American Federation of Labor.
Vice-President Duncan—The report will be referred to the Committee on Secretary's Report when appointed.

President Gompers read the following communication:

"Los Angeles, California, Nov. 12, 1911.
"Samuel Gompers, Atlanta, Ga.

"Sincere fraternal greetings to the officials and delegates to the Atlanta, Ga., Convention of the American Federation of Labor. May your deliberations redound to continued advancement of the great labor movement. Permit us to sincerely thank the Federation officials and through them the representatives of affiliated organizations and departments for their untiring efforts in our behalf.

"J. J. and J. B. McNAMARA."

President Gompers—If there are no objections the telegram will be made part of the records of this convention. There appearing no objection, that course will be pursued.

Delegate Wilson (J.)—I move that the President of this organization be authorized to send a message to J. J. and J. B. McNamara, expressing to them the belief of the delegates of this Thirty-first Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor in their innocence of the crime with which they have been charged, and pledge them our continued moral and financial support. (Seconded and carried by unanimous vote.)

Treasurer Lennon read his annual report. (See pages 103 and 104.)

Vice-President Duncan—The report will be referred to the Committee on Treasurer's Report when appointed.

Secretary Morrison read the following telegrams:

"Boston, Mass., Nov. 13, 1911.
"Samuel Gompers, President, American Federation of Labor, Auditorium, Atlanta, Ga.

"May the deliberation of your convention deepen the conviction of your delegates in the strength and justice of our cause and may your message awaken hope in the hearts of the unorganized workers of our land.

"SARA A. CONBOY, Vice-Pres.,
"Boston Womans Trade Union League."

"New York, November 13, 1911.
"Samuel Gompers, American Federation of Labor Convention, Atlanta, Ga.

"Accept our heartiest congratulations on the Thirty-first Annual Convention, wishing it to be a harmonious and progressive meeting.

"SUSPENDER MAKERS' UNION, 9560, New York."

The telegrams were made part of the proceedings of the Convention.

Committee on Resolutions—James Duncan, John P. Frey, B. A. Larger, D. D. Mulcahy, John T. Smith, Thos. Flynn, Edward J. McGivern, Jos. N. Weber, M. F. Ryan, W. D. Mahon, A. P. Sovey, Edward F. Ward, Sol. Sontheimer, Chas. P. Fahey and John A. Voll.

Committee on Laws—John B. Lennon, Daniel J. Tobin, John H. Walker, James J. Hannahan, Jacob Tazelaar, Timothy Healy, John Mangan, A. Rosenberg, W. S. Pierce, John Roach, M. W. Kelliher, T. J. O'Donnell, Edward Menge, John J. Barry and John Dowd.

Committee on Labels—John F. Tobin, Jere L. Sullivan, Louis Kemper, A. M. Swartz, Max Zuckerman, Harry Meyer, J. Mahlon Barnes, Chris. Kerker, J. J. Handley, Chas. Doid, Edward Johnson, E. J. Brais, Max S. Hayes, A. McAndrew and Ed. Anderson.

Committee on Adjustment—James O'Connell, John Golden, Matthew Woll, John A. Moffitt, T. W. McCullough, Wm. E. Klapetzky, Jos. A. Franklin, Thos. S.

Farrell, Frank Gehring, Edward Flore, Michael J. Hallinan, Percy Thomas, Wm. Taber, Victor Altman and H. C. Shai-voy.

Committee on Education—Jos. F. Valentine, Willis R. Golden, James J. Freel, Wm. J. Kelly, Chas. E. Pfeil, S. Polakoff, M. B. Cain, T. M. Daly, C. E. Mahoney, Ernest Bohm, John Murtaugh, Daniel J. Evans, W. A. McKenna, Groce Lawrence and G. E. Soyster.

Committee on State Organizations—John R. Alpine, Chas. H. Moyer, Wm. Clark, J. W. Wilkinson, J. R. Humphrey, Stephen J. Fay, William J. Brennan, George Miller, Joe Bobb, Richard D. Selway, Joseph Proebstle, John L. McNamara, George Meyers and George Leary.

Committee on Local and Federated Bodies—H. B. Perham, John Carroll, Thomas Flanagan, Joseph D. Cannon, James P. Holland, Frank X. Noschang, W. E. Bryan, Samuel Kelly, Patrick Murphy, Oscar F. Nelson, G. F. Mounts, J. M. Gavlak, Joe Birnes, E. W. Blakey, and Maurice De Young.

Committee on Building Trades—Wm. D. Huber, James A. Short, Frank M. Ryan, M. O'Sullivan, John Donlin, Wm. J. McSorley, F. J. McNulty, Wm. J. Tracey, Frank Feeney, J. T. Kinsella, George F. Hedrick, O. A. Tveitmo, Paul Bianchi, D. D'Alessandro and C. W. Fry.

Committee on Boycotts—D. A. Hayes, James M. Lynch, Frank J. Hayes, James B. Connors, J. M. Kaefar, Wm. A. Neer, Will J. Cooke, Thos. J. Durnin, Jos. Smith, Thos. J. Smith, Ed. H. Ryan, E. R. Torrey, Frank R. Heck, Thos. Connors and H. M. Munn.

Vice-President Huber—Inasmuch as the Carpenters are not part of the Building Trades Department, I decline to serve on the Committee on Building Trades.

President Gompers—If the convention will support the president in the decision and the appointment he will decide that is not good grounds for declination.

Vice-President Huber—I have other grounds. If the Brotherhood of Carpenters is not good enough to be affiliated with the Building Trades Department I am not good enough to serve on that committee.

President Gompers—And that is not a good ground. Delegate Huber is chairman of the Committee on Building Trades. In the labor movement membership is voluntary, duty is obligatory.

The chair has made these appointments as provided by the constitution. It has been my practice to ask of the convention for confirmation of these appointments. Is there objection to the confirmation of these appointments to committees? There appearing none, they stand as the appointments of the president confirmed by this Convention.

President Gompers called the attention of the delegates to the fact that in former conventions the rules of a preceding convention governed until new rules were adopted. He stated that in St. Louis, owing to the distance of the convention hall from hotels, the unusual procedure of convening at 12 o'clock noon and adjourning at 6 had been adopted.

Vice-President Duncan—I move that the rules that now exist be suspended, that we meet at 9:30, remain in session until 12:30, reconvene at 2 o'clock and remain in session until 5:30. (Seconded and carried.)

Vice-President Duncan stated that committees often waited before beginning their reports until all the resolutions could be printed in the daily proceedings, and urged that all delegates having resolutions present them early in the session.

At 6 o'clock p. m. the convention was adjourned, to reconvene at 9:30 a. m., Tuesday, November 14.

PRESIDENT GOMPERS' REPORT.

ATLANTA, GA., November 13, 1911.

To the Officers and Delegates to the Thirty-first Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor:

FELLOW TRADE UNIONISTS: Herewith, in accordance with the rules of our Federation, I have the honor to submit, as its President, a report for the last twelve months.

In the nature of things, this report is a review of obstacles encountered, of the larger features in the struggles of trade unionism throughout the country, of the special endeavors being made by your representatives in organizing and in obtaining legislation favorable to the wage-workers and in promoting the high aims of our movement. In all these respects, it is a pleasure to report progress.

The American Federation of Labor through its affiliated organizations has today the largest membership in its history. Its standing is sound and prospects are bright. In its long-drawn-out legal contests there is more reason than ever to assume that labor's cause will win. In a number of important strikes during the year, we have had gains, and there has been a tendency to continue the shortening of the workday, to do away with child labor, and to animate the unorganized masses with a desire to take part in the great labor movement.

In the various phases of the work of our Federation reviewed under the headings which follow, and in the reports which the Executive Council and our Secretary will submit there will be found much reason for hope and satisfaction and some little for disappointment. Our Federation, resting on a solid foundation, is erecting a structure adapted at all times to its purposes and of a lasting character.

Our movement has no schism within. All opposition to its policies, its procedures, its form of organization, and its tactics, comes from without. All who would divert it from its established principles are enemies, working for the promotion of institutions foreign to its character. Those who would change its aim at its disintegration.

This is true whether the antagonist in view is the college president who believes in the right of the non-unionist to work below the union scale alongside of the unionist; or the philanthropist who believes unions should be mere benevolent societies; or the editor who believes that the unionist should be always in his party and a supporter of his interests, or the politician who demands that the unionist must always vote his ticket.

But, it can safely be said, our trade unionism is to witness no integral change in structure or principle; for these are all adaptable to circumstances as they arise—to conditions as they develop.

There exist within the scope of the trade unionism of America, as it was long ago conceived and for many years has been maintained in its integrity, the possibilities for continuous reform, both in economics and politics, to whatever extent at any time is possible.

The strength, the firmness, the consistency, and the reasonableness of our trade unionism have convinced the great body of the citizens of this continent, wage-workers and others, that change, and even radical change, in the laws which govern society being inevitable in accordance with justice, the American Federation of Labor, as the dominant body of wage-workers, is the fitting and effective organization to lead the masses in carrying on to the end the great work of transformation.

The ground-work principle of America's labor movement has been to recognize that first things must come first. The primary essential in our mission has been the protection of the wage-worker, now; to increase his wages; to cut hours off the long workday, which was killing him; to improve the safety and the sanitary conditions of the workshop; to free him from the tyrannies, petty or otherwise, which served to make his existence a slavery. These, in the nature of things, I repeat, were and are the primary objects of trade unionism.

Our great Federation has uniformly refused to surrender this conviction and to rush to the support of any one of the numerous society-saving or society-destroying schemes which decade by decade have been sprung upon this country. A score of such schemes, having a rational scope, and being for the passing day subject to popular discussion, have gone down behind the horizon and are now but ancient history. But while our Federation has thus been conservative, it has ever had its face turned toward whatever reforms, in politics or economics, could be of direct and obvious benefit to the working classes. It has never given up its birthright for a mess of pottage. It has pursued its avowed policy with the conviction that if the lesser and immediate demands of labor could not be obtained now from society as it is, it would be mere dreaming to preach and pursue that will-o'-the-wisp, a new society constructed from rainbow materials—a system of society on which even the dreamers themselves have never agreed.

It is untrue that this Federation is conservative in the sense of dissenting from propositions intended to affect far-reaching changes in our political institutions. We would conserve that which has been proved to be conducive to the welfare of the country as a whole, which means first of all the masses, but we would change as speedily as possible whatever has been injurious to the country, and especially to the masses. We would abolish all privilege, would establish a pure democracy, and would turn the tide of all volume of the products of labor into the hands of labor. We would end every form of aristocracy and bring to their end all institutions which refuse to recognize the people as the origin of legislation, of justice, and of domination.

Striking and irrefutable evidence has recently been furnished that these principles are the true ones on which labor may effectively and continuously advance its just cause. The severest blows ever dealt class privilege, plutocratic domination, and judicial greed for power were made possible last year through the forces of democracy patiently built up in the course of years in accordance with the established policy of the American Federation of Labor. I refer to the events taking place especially on the Pacific Coast, either in the promotion of the Initiative, Referendum, and Recall, or in acts of the masses of the people through those purely democratic instrumentalities. Those events have brilliantly and convincingly illustrated the power of the people. They indicate a coming leap in the progress of genuine democracy throughout the country. The new mechanism of that democracy will loosen the throttle hold which politicians have long had upon the people, relegate the political machines to the background, and bring to the front from all ranks of society, and especially from the wage-workers, men of truly patriotic and humanitarian principles, who are willing to work, not for partisan advantage or personal preferment, or the selfish interests of any clique or circle, but for the good and welfare of community and nation, and consequently all mankind. To trade unionists in general, at the present stage of their dearly-bought experience with political manipulators, and of their practical education in economics, parties count for little, while principles, objects, and achievements are everything. We confidently look forward, now that the principles and the mechanism of the people's power have been discovered, made clear, and applied, to a rapid succession of extraordinary adaptations of the institutions of this country to popular ideals and aspirations. The old spirit of partisan hatred, wrangling, bitter personalities, and cynicism over alleged failure in popular government must give way to the new spirit which interprets the general moral and intellectual level of a people of high intentions, generous emotions, and unquenchable aspirations for fair play, which must eventuate finally in economic justice. It matters little whether any party, whatever its avowals and intentions, succeeds in one place or another, now and again, in this State or that. The things desirable, in contrast to party organization, methods, war-cries, and promises, are those resulting in permanency of efficient methods, in possibilities of advancing one by one the propositions favorable to wage-workers, and in the opportunities for the full play of the powers of all the individuals of the community capable of promoting through legislation the welfare of the country and especially of the masses. This condition is being rapidly established, as we have said, through the energy and activity and concentration of aim of the American Federation of Labor. No other scheme of procedure for the advancement of the interests and well-being of the working classes measures up with the policy of our Federation in the slightest degree.

The history of the working-class movement of Europe in recent years is one of recession from cloud-land utopias and of approach toward the policy of our Federation. Revolution is to come by way of reform, and not by social cataclysm. The human conscience is to be society's guide. The social struggle is to be good and right against evil and wrong. The attainment of the maximum of liberty for every individual, the abolition of poverty, the best order in the production and equitable distribution of wealth—in a word the establishment of the conditions for the highest possible earthly happiness for mankind—all this must come through taking the best that civilization has given us and lopping off, one by one, its imperfect growths and its baneful excrescences.

Under the various headings which follow, sufficient statement is made of the various activities of our great organization to indicate many causes for our encouragement. We invite all to give the statements, as herewith recorded, a careful reading. The utmost care has been taken in their preparation. It has been a matter of study that they should contain nothing that would mislead, nothing that would offend honest investigators, nothing that would excite enemies where friends are desirable, nothing that would bring embarrassment to trade unionists, nothing which on being read in future years could be regarded as unworthy. With these hopes and sentiments I pass to the consideration of the various phases of the work of our Federation for the last year.

ORGANIZATION AND GROWTH.

For the fiscal year ending September 30, 1911, there were issued by the American Federation of Labor 326 certificates of affiliation (charters), as follows:

International unions.....	3	Local trade unions .....	207
City central bodies .....	61	Federal Labor Unions .....	55
Total .....			326

At the close of the fiscal year there were affiliated to our Federation:

International unions.....	115	Local trade unions .....	493
State Federations.....	38	Federal Labor Unions.....	187
City central bodies .....	631
Total .....			1,464

The international unions enumerated have approximately 28,000 local unions under their jurisdiction. To avoid error by casual hearers, or readers, attention is called to the system under which the American Federation of Labor is organized. It is, as its name suggests, a federated body. Each of its international unions has jurisdiction for one trade or calling over Canada, the United States, and the dependencies of the latter. No rival international unions including members of the same calling are permitted. Each international union is made up of directly affiliated local unions, of which there is usually but one for each occupation in each locality. The State Federations of Labor and the city central bodies are made up of delegates from the various local unions. In the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, each international or local union has a representation and a vote based upon the number of its members. Other bodies have each a single representative, with one vote, thus avoiding duplicate voting for the same membership.

In every way within, and to the fullest limits of our opportunities, the American Federation of Labor has been of the greatest value to our affiliated international unions and directly chartered local unions, as well as in the general work for the protection, advancement, and the common uplift of all the workers of America. Several of our directly affiliated local unions have been engaged in controversies, some of which are yet being waged. The laws of the Federation, in so far as concerns financial as well as moral assistance to local unions, have been liberally and generously interpreted so that the defense fund could be of real practical value to the workers engaged in any controversy. And better than all, the directly affiliated local unions have had the advice and supervision of the officers as well as the support of the American Federation of Labor. These factors have aided materially in securing improved conditions for the workers of those unions without the necessity of a recourse to strike.

The State Federations and central bodies have likewise profited by affiliation, and they in turn, as all other organizations affiliated, contributed toward the common concert of action in achieving the largest measure of success in the general trend and upward course of the labor cause.

This year the organizations affiliated to the American Federation of Labor have reached the largest membership in its history. This despite the battle which has been waged against it, not only by certain employing class organizations, but by pretending pseudo friends. The fact of our increased strength stands as a contradiction and challenge to our enemies, wherever they may be found.

Under this heading it is appropriate again to proclaim that our slogan ever has been, and is: Organize, Agitate, Educate!

BUILDING TRADES DEPARTMENT.

Secretary-Treasurer Spencer of this Department has prepared the following statement of its work and present status, which I incorporate herein:

Since the adjournment of the St. Louis Convention of the American Federation of Labor there has been a decided change in the personnel of the Building Trades Department.

Two organizations were suspended for violation of decisions previously rendered, these being the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the International Association of Steam and Hot Water Fitters and Helpers, with a consequent defection in membership amounting to 189,312. Against this sustained loss, however, it is gratifying to report the addition of the International Association of Machinists and the Slate and Tile Roofers' International Union, with a joint membership of 67,445.

At the same time it is gratifying to report that in nearly every instance the general membership of the international unions affiliated with the Building Trades Department has been augmented, so that the actual loss is reduced to 98,500.

While on the surface it might appear that a reactionary movement has set in, and that the solidarity of the Department has been threatened, a directly contrary condition will be found to exist under a thorough investigation. Not only has each international union identified with the Department increased its membership, as before stated, but what is more important the international unions comprising the Department have exhibited a display of toleration for the rights of others never before equalled in the building industry. Whether this condition is a direct result of the suspension of the two organizations named must of necessity be a matter of conjecture, nevertheless the fact remains that those organizations that are contestants in jurisdictional controversies have been decidedly more loth to show a deliberate and wanton invasion of the rights of others than has prevailed in the past. Indeed, in numberless instances there has been a ready acquisition in the declared policies, decisions, and awards of the Department in the past year by all affiliated organizations, and wherever a clash has occurred, or lines have been drawn more rigidly than usual in the building industry, the agitation has been created by those who have openly espoused a denial of the declared purposes of the Department.

It should be borne in mind that jurisdictional conflict is a struggle between international unions which the Building Trades Department was primarily organized to adjust, and any settlement between factions must necessarily be through the course of mutual agreement, or when the parties thereto fail the Department must exercise its prerogative of reaching a decision intended to be final and binding on both parties. It is, however, considered to be essentially the best policy that international unions should of their own volition eliminate any cause for dispute between them, and to this end it is indeed a pleasure to report that satisfactory agreements have been entered into by the following organizations: American Brotherhood of Cement Workers and Operative Plasterers' International Association; Ceramic, Mosaic, and Encaustic Tile Layers and Helpers' International Union and Operative Plasterers' International Association; Hod-carriers and Building Laborers and United Brotherhood Carpenters and Joiners of America; Bridge and Structural Iron Workers and United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; International Union Marble Workers and United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America and Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America and Ceramic, Mosaic, and Encaustic Tile Layers and Helpers' International Union; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America and International Association of Marble Workers; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America and International Brotherhood of Composition Roofers, Damp and Waterproof Workers; International Association Marble Workers and International Association Bridge and Structural Iron Workers; Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance and Wood, Wire, and Metal Lathers' International Union; Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance and International Association Bridge and Structural Iron Workers; Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance and United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; American Brotherhood of Cement Workers and International Union of Hod-carriers and Building Laborers; International Union Steam Engineers; International Association Bridge and Structural Iron Workers; Wood, Wire, and Metal Lathers' International Union and International Association Bridge and Structural Iron Workers; International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; Ceramic, Mosaic and Encaustic Tile Layers and Helpers' International Union and Slate and Tile Roofers International Union; International Brotherhood Composition Roofers and International Union Slate and Tile Roofers; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America.

The value of reasoning together, of friendly intercourse in the elimination of any cause for friction, will be obvious to all, and it requires but a moment of reflection to understand what greater measure of progress would have been made did all international unions give willing assent to decisions and awards when rendered.

There are now affiliated with the Building Trades Department twenty international unions with a total membership of some 294,345.

The financial condition of the organization is most flattering, more especially when the loss in membership is taken into consideration. Receipts from the general revenues for the year just closed are $22,322.05, as against total annual disbursements of $19,086.09, showing a balance on hand of $3,235.96.

METAL TRADES DEPARTMENT.

The principal features of the work of this Department for the last year as reported by Secretary-Treasurer Berres were as follows:

In conjunction with the legislative representatives of the American Federation of Labor and of the International Association of Machinists, the Legislative Committee-man representing the Executive Board of the Metal Trades Department worked in favor of the eight-hour amendment to the labor bill when it was up for consideration in committee and before Congress. The joint committeemen were successful not only in keeping the eight-hour amendment intact, but in promoting the passage of an amendment that is stronger and broader in its scope. The joint committee was also active in obtaining from the Comptroller of the Treasury, during the month of July, a decision which in effect is that the eight-hour day applies to all construction of navy vessels in the plant or the yard of a firm getting a contract direct from the United States Government. It is the intention of the officials of the Metal Trades Department to try to get the amendment so worded that it will apply to the vessel in its entirety, regardless of where the parts are being constructed.

The Department took up the matter of per diem employes on the Isthmus of Panama receiving only two weeks' annual leave with pay as against six weeks for per annum employes. The matter was brought up, in November last, before the President of the United States and the Canal Commission. On December 4 a communication from the White House was received by the Secretary of the Metal Trades Department conveying the information that beginning with January 1, 1911, employes on the Canal Zone were to be granted four weeks' leave with pay instead of two weeks, and allowed to accumulate leave by postponing two weeks for the following year, thus having six weeks instead of four in the second year.

The molders employed at the Watertown Arsenal recently went on strike because one of their members was discharged for refusing to work under the conditions imposed by the installation of the "Taylor system." The Metal Trades Department, on taking the matter up with the officials of the War Department, were promised that an investigation should be begun immediately, and therefore it proposed that all the men, including the molder first discharged, should resume work pending the inquiry, and their proposition was accepted. The report of the investigator, a naval officer, has not yet been received. However, the Secretary of the Department has been informed that one of the most objectionable features of the system, the use of the stop watch, has been discontinued.

On the occasion of the strike at the Baldwin Locomotive Works, the Department was interested from beginning to end. Although the international officers, as well as the local representatives of the union, had advised against the strike, when it took place all the support possible was given to the 12,000 men who went out. In the twelve weeks of the strike no doubt much good was done, and the union spirit promoted, and the result on the whole was not disheartening either to the wage-workers directly concerned or those of Philadelphia in general. Like all great struggles, this strike taught many lessons which will be beneficial in future.

The Los Angeles metal trade's strike has been waged now for seventeen months. One result of it has been proof of the wisdom of the formation of this Department. Never has a better fight for right been waged, and the feeling on the part of the executives of the Department is that the unions will win in the end, even against the powerful forces aligned against them.

The Metal Trades Council of San Francisco is conferring with the local employers relative to the continuance of the eight-hour agreement. The Northwestern Coast will in all probability receive consideration at the coming convention of the Department. A campaign for a shorter workday, it is expected, will be carried into this territory. The policy of encouraging the signing of annual agreements is progressing.

Since the last convention, seventeen new councils have been organized, and it is expected that many more will be added to the roster within the coming year. Affiliation of the United Association of Plumbers, etc., and of the Stationary Firemen is shortly expected. The financial condition of the Department is good, and all the affiliated bodies in it are in good standing. Since the last convention, the membership in the Department has increased 35,234. During the year an organizer was set to work in Erie, Pennsylvania, another at Newport News, and for a period of three months another at Trenton, New Jersey, it being the desire of the Department to organize the ship-building industry, so that a better opportunity will be afforded for the establishment of the union scale and union workday in the construction of Government and private vessels.

RAILROAD EMPLOYES' DEPARTMENT.

The enormous task of federating a dozen large classifications of wage-earners in the employ of the railroads of this country is yet in its initial stages. Years of experience must be required in the education of the rank and file of these various classifications in common activities. Long accustomed to separate and distinct organization, the membership of a number of the unions concerned needs the tutelage of time to bring all to conviction of the necessities for general federation. On the whole, it can be said that the desire for a systematic and orderly method of federation is gaining ground rapidly, the methods and customs of the hitherto separated local unions being considered. Railroad employes, through the nature of their work, are scattered over the country to such an extent that it is a gigantic task to get their views crystallized as to the best methods to be pursued in united action, but it is the conviction of the officials of the Department that this work is being accomplished surely, if necessarily somewhat slowly. One of the obstacles encountered in the work is the idea, promoted by enemies of trade unionism, that the federation of railroad employes is a menace to society, as likely to result some time in a general paralysis of business. The railroad managers who oppose the federation of the wage-workers ignore the fact that the employers themselves are federated in the General Managers' Associations and the American Railroad Association.

The influence of the Railroad Employes' Association up to the present time has been mostly of the silent kind. Its power is well understood. The ability, integrity, and courage of the eleven chief executives who conduct its councils are generally recognized by the employers of labor. Every representative and committeeman of each organization in the Federation knows what a forceful reserve it has behind it, and because of this fact it daily obtains better results and recognition. The executive officials of the Federation are persuaded that their scheme is safe and workable, and that it will continue to redound to the benefit of all classes of railway employes and wax in strength with the coming years.

UNION LABEL TRADES DEPARTMENT.

Thomas F. Tracy, Secretary-Treasurer, Union Label Trades Department, has submitted the following report:

"The work, as carried on by the Department during the year, has undoubtedly been to a very great degree satisfactory. While there have been no new affiliations of international unions, the work has gone on with a greater degree of activity and energy than during any time in the history of the labor movement, or to my recollection and knowledge.

"One of the great factors in the advancement of the sale of union label products and the patronizing of union establishments is the organization of local departments wherever possible. During the year we have organized seven local departments and now have in affiliation thirty-four located in practically all the large industrial sections, covering cities in the United States from Boston to Sacramento and several in Canada. In the reports received from these local departments, splendid results have obtained in almost every instance.

"During the year, this Department operated a Union Label Moving Picture Show, demonstrating the various union labels, shop and store cards. In connection with this show, an entertainment was given, which, from reports received, demonstrates that both features of the show were highly appreciated in the various cities and towns where performances were given. Eighty-three shows were given in the States of Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Vermont, and in the Province of Ontario, Canada; in all, covering a period of about four months, and the various shows were witnessed by approximately 50,000 people. The cost of maintaining this show for that period, being the salaries and expenses of the persons who were connected with it, was $4,700. Already numerous requests have been received from various places asking that the show be repeated.

"It is my personal opinion that this method of agitation, particularly in the small cities, is one that brings about good results.

"I also beg leave to report that Resolution No. 54, which was referred to this Department by the last convention of the American Federation of Labor, and which asked for an agitation to be started among the farmers of Tennessee, was carried out to a considerable degree of success.

"Volunteer organizers Albert E. Hill and Charles P. Fahey of Nashville were assigned to this work and they visited thirty-five different farmers' unions, or rallies, as they are termed, and addressed in the aggregate about 15,000 people, all farmers, in the interests of the union label.

"From the reports made by these gentlemen, it is quite evident that they have met with a considerable degree of success in this direction, and it is the intention of this Department to continue and extend this method of agitation during the coming year in other States.

"The Department has also given considerable attention to the question of convict labor, and has assisted in distributing literature upon this all-important subject in the various States with considerable success. We shall also continue to use our best efforts to have passed during the coming session of Congress the Booher bill, H. R. 5601. The Department has distributed a large amount of literature to the various local unions in affiliation with their international unions, as well as to State Federations of Labor, city central bodies, and local unions affiliated to the American Federation of Labor; also to all the organizers, special and volunteer.

"The most distinctive literature which has been distributed has been the Directory as issued by this Department, containing cuts of the various labels and the names of the manufacturers in the different industries who use the union label upon their product. Fifty thousand copies of this Directory have already been published and another issue is now being printed. Together with other literature distributed during the year, there have been sent out from this office during that time approximately 150,000 pieces of mail matter dealing with various subjects.

"Through the efforts of the Department, an agreement was arrived at with the editors of many of the official journals of international unions, whereby cuts of various labels and appropriate reading matter to accompany the same were to be published. At the present time twenty-seven international journals publish monthly four different cuts of labels, as described above, thus bringing to the attention of a large number of the members of international unions not only a description of these various labels, but the manner in which they are used and appear upon various commodities.

"It will, of course, be of interest to you to know the increase in the output of union labeled commodities during the year ending July 10, 1911, and for your information I transmit to you a few figures as taken from my report to the coming convention of the Union Label Trades Department:

	1910.	1911.	Increase.
Travelers' Goods and Leather Novelty Workers.....	8,000	11,000	3,000
American Federation of Labor.....	8,465,000	9,309,000	844,000
Cigarmakers' International Union.....	27,422,900	27,795,900	373,000
United Brewery Workmen.....	41,930,000	44,922,000	2,992,000
United Garment Workers.....	45,866,674	48,234,136	2,367,462
Journeyman Tailors' Union.....	447,578	511,000	63,422
United Cloth Hat and Cap Makers.....	3,721,572	4,015,000	293,428
Bakery and Confectionery Workers.....	494,837,000	548,210,590	53,373,590
Piano and Organ Workers' Union.....	4,600	8,200	3,600

"Of course, these figures do not deal with the increased output upon articles bearing the union label which are either a stamp or an imprint, such as the label of the Allied Printing Trades, the stamp of the Boot and Shoe Workers, and other organizations.

"I feel confident that these figures will impress you that the work as carried on by our affiliated organizations and the Department during the past year has been highly successful.

"This briefly relates some of the important features of the work as carried on during the past twelve months, and I feel confident that from reports received from various sources the movement for the furthering of the sale of union labeled products and the patronizing of union establishments will apply to a greater degree during the coming year than it has during the past. I say this because not only of the interest manifested by our members but also of the interest manifested in many instances by business men and merchants who want to be in harmony with organized labor and give their assistance, which is demonstrated by the numerous inquiries received for information and the Directories, as issued by this Department, to business men in various sections of the country."

CANADA.

Between the union wage-workers of Canada and the United States the sentiment which is promoted is not reciprocity but unity. We are advised by the union officials of Canada that its workers are imbued with the feeling that they should persistently strive for the solidification of the international trade union movement. They are actuated by unanimity of purpose and breadth of view. Reports from the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada show a continued increase in the membership of its affiliated bodies. The revenues are sufficient for whatever work has been undertaken. The last year has witnessed the practical disappearance of any manifestations of dissatisfaction or endeavors to undermine the international movement. No legislation directed toward this end was attempted, owing to the watchfulness of the legislative committees of the Congress. On the other hand, measures of importance to organized labor were the subject of discussion in the Dominion Parliament and in the various provincial Legislatures. A number of acts helpful to the laboring classes were placed upon the statute books. On the whole, the position of organized labor in Canada is in strict harmony with the trade union movement of the United States.

PORTO RICO.

In Porto Rico, twenty-two new local unions have been organized in the last year, while several which had been temporarily suspended were reinstalled in the Federation, which has now a total membership of more than 8,000. The number of local unions is 132. The American Federation of Labor organizer for the island reports that the spirit of organization is at the present time more efficient than during all of the preceding years. The economic and social conditions of the working classes of Porto Rico have improved to a marked degree. Now and then in the course of the last year a partial strike has occurred, but on the whole it may be described as having been peaceful. The actual number of strikes was eighteen, the trades involved being cigarmakers, shoemakers, carpenters, tobacco selectors, and tobacco strippers. Nearly all terminated satisfactorily to organized labor. The strikers in most cases were contending for the right to organize unions or to resist reduction of wages, as well as for increase of wages. In the course of one strike thirty-three union men were imprisoned, charged with complicity in the killing of a manufacturer by a man who was later proven to be insane. All the men thus arrested were released. On another occasion the editor of the "Union Obrera," condemned for libel to two years in prison, was pardoned by Governor Colton.

The organized workers of Porto Rico share in the general concern of Porto Ricans over the constant failure of Congress to frame a law fixing the political status of the people of the island. The practical question with the people is whether they are to acquire citizenship under the United States, or whether Congress is to keep the island in the position of a great factory, exploiting cheap labor for the benefit of large corporations of the United States.

The promises made in 1898, when our nation took possession of Porto Rico, that its inhabitants would be recognized and treated as full-fledged American citizens, have not been fulfilled. This bad faith has reacted to the detriment of the American Federation of Labor. The dissatisfied Porto Ricans make their protest felt by refusing to give voluntary assistance to any national organization or institution of the United States. This course, feeble and inconsistent as it is, can be understood by all who have witnessed the usual actions of men actuated by blind resentfulness. The American Federation of Labor has never ceased in its efforts to obtain from Congress all the rights of a free people for the inhabitants of Porto Rico. Its support of the Olmsted bill and the special efforts of Representative Wilson of Pennsylvania are well known. The Olmsted bill, after having been approved in the House, was pigeonholed in the Senate, an act of the most flagrant injustice. At present in Porto Rico, those inhabitants who by education are Spanish, a part of the press, and some of the discontented native politicians are openly proclaiming the idea of independence for the island. The organizers for the American Federation of Labor find an obstacle, in their endeavor to educate and organize the masses, in this frame of mind of a considerable part of the population. The general belief of the inhabitants of the island is that their economic welfare would be greatly improved through home rule. Whereas the sum of the exports and imports in 1897 was $14,500,000, they were in 1911 nearly $79,000,000. But this increased wealth has not brought with it corresponding evidence of benefits to the laboring masses.

Labor Day was celebrated in most of the cities of the island, the local and consular authorities taking part in the demonstrations.

The American Federation of Labor organizer for Porto Rico, Santiago Iglesias, asks the various national and international unions to send to the island in the Spanish language all printed matter which they issue for the assistance of organization.

INTERNATIONAL SECRETARIAT.

The biennial conference of the International Secretariat was held at Budapest, Hungary, August 10-12. The decision most interesting to American trade unionists was that relating to the repudiation of the so-called Industrial Workers of the World. One of the articles of the constitution of the Secretariat prescribes that but one national body from each country shall be represented in its conference. The effrontery of any one presenting himself as a representative from America in opposition to the delegate from the American Federation of Labor, it might be thought, would be appreciated at once at its proper value by the delegates from the other countries, but inasmuch as the would-be delegate from the corporal's guard that composes the Industrial Workers of the World professed to support the policies and program of the Confédération Générale du Travail of France, his pretensions were supported by the latter organization. Between them he and its delegates managed to bring up sufficient discussion to consume the entire first day of the conference. At the close of the debate, the Industrial Workers of the World aspirant to a seat was rejected, all the votes being against him excepting that of the Confédération Générale du Travail. The case against the Industrial Workers of the World delegate was conducted in a masterful manner by the delegate from the American Federation of Labor, First Vice-President James Duncan. The decision on this and other questions during the sessions of the conference tend to show that the true position of the American Federation of Labor in the great labor movement of the world is becoming better known and appreciated by the representatives of labor in Europe. Not only is the sentiment for a unity among the wage-workers of the different countries advancing, but recognition is being made of the points on which solidarity may become practical.

Among the resolutions passed was one introduced by Delegate Duncan proposing that labor organizations of all countries prevent by all means possible the migration of workmen from one country to another in time of labor disputes.

The two propositions, the one for an International Federation of Labor brought forward by America two years ago, and the other, for an International Congress of Labor, introduced by France, were sent back to all the national bodies for discussion.

It was voted that the International Secretariat could in exceptional cases initiate a wage movement where the number of workers engaged were so great that the necessary funds could not be furnished by either a national organization or an international union interested. The Secretary's report showed that the American Federation of Labor paid on 1,700,000 members, Germany being the only country with a higher number. The total membership was 6,033,500. Carl Legien was unanimously re-elected Secretary. The country in which to hold the session of 1913 is to be determined in the early part of that year by consulting the wishes of the affiliated national organizations.

That the Budapest conference served to promote a sentiment of international unity among the wage-earners, and to clear away misunderstandings that existed between those of one nation and another, has become evident in the comments of the labor press of the various countries since the gathering. The labor movement of America stands better with the Secretariat representatives of the European countries than it did two years ago, before our case was plainly put by an American delegate, speaking, upon an equality, face to face with the other members of the conference. It may, however, take years to disabuse the minds of many who are active in the movement abroad of their prejudices against our movement, so long was it exposed to misrepresentation by men in this country who were trying to divert its aims and change its policies. With experience, it has become clear to the representative men of labor in all countries that each country has its peculiar problems, which must be worked out by its own working classes by the methods they deem most applicable and advantageous.

The advice, "Workmen of all countries, unite!" can not be carried into actual practice to the extent of similarity of organization and procedure. In trade unionism, the possibilities are promising for internationality in respect to recognition of union membership, in refraining from black-legging, and in financial and other support in case of great strikes and lockouts. But politically, no two countries are on the same plane. There may be a general sentiment favoring the emancipation of labor everywhere from its disqualifications, an agreement upon many points in an analysis of the injustices of society as now organized, and even common assent as to certain principles or maxims for guidance in forming the better society that is coming, but to fix hard and fast rules by which the wage-earners in all countries are to work in building for the future is an impossibility.

The important things for American trade unionists to consider, in connection with the International Secretariat, as well as other of our international associations, are such as relate to trade union work, as brought up through the mobility of labor made possible by today's means of transportation, or as suggested by the experience of the unions of the different countries. Comparison of methods, in organizing, in scale making, in negotiating with employers, is valuable, and in this respect the exchange of fraternal delegates between Great Britain and the United States has helped both countries. This year, as has been the custom for nearly two decades, two fraternal delegates have been sent to our convention from the British Trades Union Congress and one from the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress. In extending them a hearty greeting, we feel assured that they, as well as ourselves, will profit by their coming.

The peoples of all civilized countries are coming to the realization that in many respects they have a cause in common—that of justice, freedom and humanity. There is no force in society so potent to crystallize that sentiment and the establishment of human brotherhood as the historically developed and developing labor movement of the world.

EIGHT-HOUR LAW EXTENSION.

My report this year on the extension of the eight-hour law as applied to work done for the United States Government by contractors and sub-contractors should be read in connection with the report I had the honor to submit to the St. Louis convention. In this report I have necessarily to cover action on this subject by the Sixty-first Congress, as well as to make reference to the status of the bill before the present Congress.

In the Sixty-first Congress the House Committee on Labor and the Senate Committee on Education and Labor took no action upon the eight-hour bills which had been referred to them. In fact, it was impossible even to get these committees, during the short session of the Sixty-first Congress, to hold a meeting to consider anything; but, in spite of the attitude of the two Labor Committees, efforts were continued along the line of making provision for an eight-hour workday in the appropriation bills on the same lines as proved to be successful in the previous session. Consequently every effort was made by the opposition forces to circumvent such legislation.

On January 12, 1911, the Secretary of the Navy appeared before the House Committee on Naval Affairs and asked that the committee abolish the eight-hour provision in the previous Naval Appropriations bill. He also urged the committee to so amend that act that he would not be compelled to build one of the battleships authorized last year in a Government navy yard, giving as his reasons the extra cost because of the eight-hour law being operative in Government yards. He did his best to fortify his argument with the charge that the eight-hour provision put into the Naval bill at the last session added to the cost of construction from 25 to 35 per cent, absolutely ignoring the savings that have been secured to the Government since Government competition with private contractors has been instituted in the line of battleship construction.

The House Committee on Naval Affairs, however, reported its appropriation bill January 28, 1911, including the reactionary recommendations of the Secretary, as follows:

- (1) The repeal of provision in last year's act authorizing one battleship built in a navy yard.
- (2) Repeal of the provision in last year's act whereby the contracts for construction should contain an eight-hour clause.
- (3) Repeal of provision that not more than one of the battleships in last year's act should be built by the same contracting party.
- (4) Repeal of provision that the collier authorized in the Naval act of 1908 be built in a Pacific Coast navy yard, and that it be given out to private contractors.

It will be readily noted that this part of the Naval Committee's report was grossly antagonistic to labor's best interests. The Naval Committee's report was apparently unanimous; if any of the committeemen dissented they failed to make a minority report, and when, on February 21, the bill came up in the House, and they had the opportunity to do so, not one of the committeemen said a word in behalf of labor's contention for an eight-hour day or for the public economy in construction of one of the battleships in a Government yard. After the Secretary of the Navy had given his testimony before the Committee on Naval Affairs, and before the measure was taken up by the House, I addressed a letter to the President registering our protest against the Secretary's unfriendly criticism of the eight-hour clause contained in the law of the previous year, and called the attention of the President to that part of his message in which he recommended eight-hour legislation. To that letter the President made reply. For the sake of the record I incorporate in my report these two letters:

LETTER TO THE PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 10, 1911.

SIR: In the Naval Appropriation bill passed in the last session of the Sixty-first Congress, the following section was adopted:

"And the contract for the construction of said vessels shall contain a provision requiring said vessels to be built in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled 'An Act relating to the limitation of the hours of daily service of laborers and mechanics employed upon the public works of the United States and of the District of Columbia,' approved August first, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, and shall be awarded by the Secretary of the Navy to the lowest best responsible bidder having in view the best results and most expeditious delivery."

In the message which you sent to Congress upon the opening of its present session, under the caption of "Eight-hour law," you said:

"Since 1868 it has been the declared purpose of this Government to favor the movement for an eight-hour day by a provision of law that none of the employees employed by or on behalf of the Government should work longer than eight hours in every twenty-four. The first declaration of this view was not accompanied with any penal clause or with any provision for its enforcement, and, though President Grant by a proclamation twice attempted to give it his sanction and to require the officers of the Government to carry it out, the purpose of the framers of the law was ultimately defeated by a decision of the Supreme Court holding that the statute as drawn was merely a direction of the Government to its agents and did not invalidate a contract made in behalf of the Government which provided in the contract for labor for a day of longer hours than eight. Thereafter, in 1892, the present eight-hour law was passed, which provides that the services and employment of all laborers and mechanics who are now or may hereafter be employed by the Government of the United States, by the District of Columbia, or by any contractor or sub-contractor on any of the public works of the United States and of the said District of Columbia is hereby restricted to eight hours in any one calendar day. This law has been construed to limit the application of the requirement to those who are directly employed by the Government or to those who are employed upon public works situate upon land owned by the United States. This construction prevented its application to Government battleships and other vessels built in private shipyards and to heavy guns and armor plate contracted for and made at private establishments.

Pending Bill.

"The proposed act provides that no laborer or mechanic doing any part of the work contemplated by a contract with the United States in the employ of the contractor or any sub-contractor shall be required or permitted to work more than eight hours a day in any one calendar day.

"It seems to me from the past history that the Government has been committed to a policy of encouraging the limitation of the day's work to eight hours in all works of construction initiated by itself, and it seems to me illogical to maintain a difference between Government work done on Government soil and Government work done in a private establishment, when the work is of such large dimensions and involves the expenditure of much labor for a considerable period, so that the private manufacturer may adjust himself and his establishment to the special terms of employment that he must make with his workmen for this particular job. To require, however, that every small contract of manufacture entered into by the Government should be carried out by the contractor with men working at eight hours would be to impose an intolerable burden upon the Government by limiting its sources of supply and excluding altogether the great majority of those who would otherwise compete for its business.

"The proposed act recognizes this in the exceptions which it makes to contracts, 'for transportation by land or water, for the transmission of intelligence, and for such materials or articles as may usually be bought in the open market, whether made to conform to particular specifications or not, or for the purchase of supplies by the Government, whether manufactured to conform to particular specifications or not.'

Substitute for Pending Bill.

"I recommend that, instead of enacting the proposed bill, the meaning of which is not clear and definite and might be given a construction embarrassing to the public interest, the present act be enlarged by providing that public works shall be construed to include not only buildings and work upon public ground, but also ships, armor, and large guns when manufactured in private yards or factories.

Provision for Suspension in Emergencies by President.

"One of the great difficulties in enforcing this eight-hour law is that its application under certain emergencies becomes exceedingly oppressive and there is a great temptation to subordinate officials to evade it. I think that it would be wiser to allow the President, by Executive order, to declare an emergency in special instances in which the limitation might not apply and, in such cases, to permit the payment by the Government of extra compensation for the time worked each day in excess of eight hours. I may add that my suggestions in respect to this legislation have the full concurrence of the Commissioner of Labor."

Your attention is respectfully called to the fact that Honorable George von L. Meyer, Secretary of the Navy, appearing before the Naval Appropriations Committee, made statements which, to say the least, unfriendly criticised the clause contained in the Naval Appropriations law, providing for the construction of battleships, etc., under the eight-hour provision of the law. The Secretary, in referring to the fact that the shipbuilders of this country obtained a contract for two great battleships from Argentina, said (page 340 of the printed proceedings of the hearing):

"Unfortunately, right in the very first stages of their competing successfully with the shipbuilding concerns of other countries, an amendment is put on the appropriation bill which forbids these companies to build a United States battleship unless the work done is on an eight-hour basis, which means an increase in the cost of about 20 per cent, and which means that it will be difficult to compete in the future with foreign shipbuilding concerns. It would probably necessarily mean two organizations in one shipyard."

You, as President of the United States, recommended the passage of a law for the extension of the eight-hour law, and it seems exceedingly peculiar that the Secretary of the Navy, under your administration, and a member of your Cabinet, should seek the repeal of a law already on the statute books in line with your Presidential recommendation,

Because the men of labor are so intensely interested in this species of legislation, it would be interesting to know whether you, as expressed in your message, or the Secretary of the Navy, as expressed before the Naval Committee, represents the actual wishes of your administration in regard to eight-hour legislation.

Trusting that I may have an answer at your early convenience, I have the honor to remain,

Yours, very respectfully,

SAMUEL GOMPERS,

President, American Federation of Labor.

Hon. WILLIAM H. TAFT, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPLY.

THE WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON, February 18, 1911.

MY DEAR SIR: I have yours of February 10, and beg to advise you that I have not changed in any way my opinion in respect to the eight hours a day law. I have referred your letter to the Secretary of the Navy, who advises me that he declined to express an opinion on the main question when pressed by the Naval Committee; that he simply gave them the facts with reference to the additional cost arising upon the necessity for a limitation of eight hours a day in the work in a private shipyard, and thinks it was all that he should do.

If Congress enters upon the policy I have recommended, it should know exactly what the additional cost to the Government is.

The expression you quote from the Secretary was an expression of his own opinion and not of the administration, and was a casual expression and incidental to the conference in which he was engaged, and not intended to be a declaration one way or the other.

The attitude of the administration upon the subject is unchanged.

Sincerely yours,

WM. H. TAFT.

SAMUEL GOMPERS, Esquire, 801 G Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

During the consideration of the Naval Appropriations bill, in the House on February 21, when the sections were reached providing appropriations for the construction of new battleships, torpedo boats, colliers, etc., Representative Hughes of New Jersey offered the following amendment:

"Provided, that no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the construction of any boat by any person, firm, or corporation, which has not at the time of commencement and during the construction of said vessels established an eight-hour workday for all employees, laborers, and mechanics engaged, or to be engaged, in the construction of the vessels named herein."

The chairman of the committee, Mr. Foss of Illinois, made a point of order that this amendment was new legislation. It was sustained by the chair, Mr. Currier of

New Hampshire, who took as his precedent a ruling by Mr. Mann of Illinois, on a former similar occasion. A spirited debate ensued. Messrs. Fitzgerald of New York, Kendall of Iowa, and Poindexter of Washington, made elaborate and powerful arguments in favor of the contention made by Mr. Hughes; the chair was overruled by a vote of 111 "nays" to 96 "yeas." (I report this in detail, because of the great significance and important principles it establishes—First: The House decided its own power over the rulings of its presiding officer or the peculiar inclinations of a departmental Secretary. Second: The House emphatically decided that it was perfectly parliamentary for it to include contractual specifications in its appropriation bills.) The same proviso was offered by Mr. Hughes in two other sections of the bill, both of which carried without further contest.

When those sections of the bill were reached proposing to repeal the eight-hour proviso in last year's bill and the other sections I have already referred to, points of order were made against them and they went out of the bill in short order; in fact, the House did not divide upon any of them.

Chairman Foss and his committee then acted as though they had lost all interest in the fate of the Naval Appropriations bill.

When the bill came up in the Senate, the second eight-hour proviso was amended to make it apply specifically to battleships, and the bill was strengthened by adding sufficient appropriations to complete last year's battleship in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and the collier authorized in 1908 to be completed at the Mare Island Navy Yard.

The Secretary of the Navy then took the matter up with the Comptroller of the Treasury, inquiring as to the eight-hour provision, and Comptroller Tracewell rendered the following opinion:

"I am of opinion that the limitation on the use of the appropriation in question applies to the employes, laborers, or mechanics engaged or to be engaged in the construction of these vessels, of the person, firm, or corporation to whom the contract for their construction is let, and is limited to such employes, laborers, or mechanics as are in the employ of such contractor and subject to his hiring or discharge, and not to the employes, laborers, or mechanics of other persons, firms, or corporations who in the usual course of business may furnish to such contractors materials entering into the construction of said vessels. Giving the act a different construction than the above would make it practically impossible to secure a contractor and would result in penalizing him, if obtained, on account of matters which he is powerless to control. I do think, however, that the restriction operates in favor of the employes, laborers, and mechanics engaged in the construction of these vessels wherever they may be, provided they are in the employ of a person, firm, or corporation who has contracted directly with the Government to build one of these vessels, or parts thereof, and all such persons, firms, or corporations in order to secure payment under such contract should show that all their employes, laborers, or mechanics engaged in the construction of these vessels, wherever their situs, are working under an eight-hour employment day."

This action of Congress and decision of the Comptroller mark an advance in governmental recognition of the eight-hour law.

I have reported this matter more in detail than usual—first, because the substance of the contest should be recorded; secondly, because certain important precedents and principles have been established that may be observed in future with other appropriation bills, such as that of Rivers and Harbors, Fortifications, etc.; thirdly, because it demonstrates that Congress is favorably disposed to an eight-hour day; fourthly, because it is a rebuke to the standpat obstinacy that has dominated the House and Senate Committees on Labor for so many years; fifthly, because it demonstrates the cohesive, persistent, and resourceful qualities contained in the organizations composing the American Federation of Labor in the remarkable contest they have waged so continuously to extend the beneficent effects of the eight-hour law on Government work.

In the special session of the present Congress, Representative Hughes of New Jersey introduced H. R. No. 9061 and Senator Borah, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, introduced S. No. 2791. These bills are identical in character and are in line with labor's demands. They have been introduced for the purpose of still further extending the operations of the eight-hour law. The House Committee on Labor through its Chairman, Representative William B. Wilson, reported the Hughes bill favorably to the House, on August 21, with an amendment which strengthens the bill. It is my opinion that this measure will pass the next session of Congress, provided our organizations urge it as persistently and as vigorously as they have similar measures in past years.

WOMEN AND CHILD LABOR INVESTIGATION.

The official investigation of the condition of working women and children, which the American Federation of Labor was successful in persuading the Fifty-ninth Congress to institute, has been concluded. Eleven of these volumes are published and being distributed. No. 1 treats with women and children engaged in the cotton textile industry; No. 2, in the ready-made clothing industry; No. 3, in the glass industry; No. 4, in the silk industry; No. 5, in stores and factories; No. 6, the beginnings of child labor legislation in certain States—a comparative study; No. 7, the conditions under which children leave school to go to work; No. 8, juvenile delinquency and its relation to employment; No. 10, history of women in trade unions; No. 11, employment of women in the metal trades. They are so exhaustive that it is impossible to give even an epitome of them at this time, but I urge our members to apply to the United States Commissioner of Labor, Washington, D. C., for copies of these reports in which they are especially interested.

The results of this investigation have fully justified the action of the American Federation of Labor in behalf of such an inquiry being made. The last volume, No. 11, in speaking of "Accidents in the metal trades," contains five specific conclusions, as follows:

"The conclusions to which a student of accidents in the metal trades must come, as set forth in the foregoing pages (of this inquiry), may be summarized as follows:

"1. The hazard to women in these industries is distinct and considerable.

"2. When men and women work at the same task its dangers menace the woman much more seriously.

"3. The employments of children have in general only those dangers common to all factory work. Their employment at dangerous tasks is rare and seems to be decreasing.

"4. Negligence of the worker as a cause of accident has been greatly over-emphasized.

"5. The accidents of most frequent occurrence are largely preventable."

What more can be said other than to extend a creditable recognition to the public officials who will make such a faithful, honest report?

The contentions of the American Federation of Labor in behalf of this investigation are herein held justified, and if the cold-blooded facts and figures contained in these reports are properly presented to responsible committees in the several State Legislatures, they will be sufficient to substantiate and prove the need of suitable legislative remedies in behalf of the reasonable restriction of females and minors in dangerous employments and of better safety devices installed with more rigid and intelligent inspection for the welfare of all the workers.

CHILD LABOR AND CHILDREN'S BUREAU.

The bill introduced in the Senate in the Sixty-first Congress by Senator Flint of California for the purpose of establishing a Children's Bureau in the Department of Commerce and Labor passed the Senate on February 14, 1911. It was reported to the House and referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Commerce and Labor, and every possible effort made to get that committee to report, but without success. Consequently, the bill died in the House committee. During the present Congress it has been reintroduced as S. No. 252 by Senator Borah of Idaho and as H. R. No. 4694 by Representative Peters of Massachusetts, and referred to the Committee on Labor and Education in the Senate and the Committee on Labor in the House. On August 14 Senator Borah, Chairman of the Senate committee, reported the bill favorably without amendment. From the sentiment prevailing in favor of this measure there is little doubt that favorable action on this measure will be taken during the coming session; provided, of course, that our organizations press it home upon their Representatives that they desire this legislation.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY—WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION.

This part of my report should be considered as a continuation of the matter I reported to the St. Louis Convention upon the subject of employers' liability and workmen's compensation, and in which were summarized the employers' liability laws of the several States or groups of States, and in which special attention was called to the evils of the defenses known as "Fellow-Servant Doctrine," "Assumption of Risk," "Contributory Negligence," and the "Waiving of Rights" to secure employment.

Resolution No. 131, adopted by the St. Louis Convention, instructed the officers of the Federation to "supply copies of the different laws now in existence and in force relative to employers' liability and workmen's compensation acts, as well as copies of such bills as may be proposed, dealing with this subject, to the various secretaries of the State Federations of Labor, where such laws do not exist and where it is intended to try and have such laws enacted, to the end that the best information may be at their command for their guidance in the presentation of bills before such legislative bodies as may have to deal with this subject."

It can be safely stated that the full spirit and intent of these directions have been followed by the officers of the Federation during the past year. The correspondence from and to headquarters on the subject of liability and compensation has equalled that on any other subject, so far as matters of legislation are concerned. Copies of employers' liability bills abrogating all of the old common-law defenses were drafted and very generally distributed, not only to the constituent elements of the American Federation of Labor but to many citizens who were making a special study of this subject, as well as to many members of State Legislatures and executive officials in State governments.

A number of conferences were held by officers of the Federation on the special feature of preparing a "sketch model" workmen's compensation bill for introduction in the several State Legislatures or for consideration by the commissions that had been appointed in the States of Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Montana, Washington, Idaho, Kansas, Missouri, Michigan, and Iowa. This educational work has been persistently carried on during the year to such an extent that we can very consistently say that the American Federation of Labor has been the hub upon which the greatest dependence has been placed by the people of our States giving these grave subjects their serious consideration. In fact it has been the clearing-house for information on such matters.

The further spirit of the resolution in which the President and Secretary were instructed to supply copies of the various laws now in existence and in force for circulation was carried out to the fullest possible extent, and in every case where correspondence was had with union members special requests were made for them to promptly advise the Federation as to the results they secured. Many of these correspondents faithfully responded, and it is deemed fitting to add at this time that it should not be necessary for us to urgently prompt all of our people to see to it in future, as soon as a new law affecting the interests of labor is proposed in any Legislature that copies be forwarded to the Federation for its counsel and advice, and, particularly, to furnish the Federation with copies of such laws enacted as affect the interests of labor, particularly on vital subjects, so that we will always be in a position to accurately advise inquirers. This is mentioned because it is one of the most practical methods of attaining the goal of uniform State legislation; not only uniform in kind but of the best character.

It is gratifying to report that, from our latest information, progressive legislation on the subject of liability and compensation has been enacted by the States of Massachusetts, Mississippi, New Jersey, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, California, Florida, Illinois, Kansas, Vermont, Washington, and Wisconsin. During the recent sessions of the Legislature in these States the old statutes were either amended or new ones were enacted that will prove great blessings to the workers of those States, and will prove blessings to citizens in neighboring States by the stimulus of good example. As the Executive Council will report upon this matter in complete detail I will not duplicate that part of its report, other than to add that the progress made upon these subjects through the influence of the American Federation of Labor has been fairly satisfactory. But the matter is not concluded, and no time must be taken to indulge in rest so long as the evils complained of under the peculiar reasoning of many of our courts exist. The antiquated judicial fallacies of "fellow-servant," "assumption of risk," "contributory negligence" must be consigned to the limbo of tradition with no regrets that they have finally reached their lasting, peaceful resting place. We must steadfastly continue to be on guard at every session of every Legislature, in State and nation, in order to see that the best interests of the workers are not merely conserved but advanced.

The Federal Commission appointed by the Sixty-first Congress to inquire into the general subject-matter of employers' liability and workmen's compensation held extended hearings, and it has been industriously at work during the summer. It is expected it will make a report early during the next session of Congress.

During the session of Congress just closed the following bills were introduced: H. R. No. 1681 by Mr. Gillette of Massachusetts and H. R. No. 1695 by Mr. Sterling of Illinois, for the purpose of amending the present law governing compensation for accidents to Federal employes. These bills have been urged by the American Federation of Labor in order to so amend the present law as to bring it up to the standard and within the requirements of the original bill drafted by the American Federation of Labor and urged for passage before the Sixtieth Congress. They have been referred to the Committee on Judiciary, and it is hoped that after the report of the Federal Commission has been considered by the Judiciary Committee that the bills already mentioned may meet with a favorable response from the committee and Congress. Other bills have been introduced by several members proposing amendments to the present Federal law to include employes in additionally hazardous occupations not included in the present act.

LOCOMOTIVE BOILER INSPECTION.

The first step has been taken by the Congress, in response to the demands made upon it by the organizations of labor, in behalf of the inspection of locomotive boilers. On January 10, 1911, the bill, S. No. 6702, was passed by the Senate without division. It was reported to the House on January 23, and passed that body without material change on February 7. It was approved by the President February 17. This law provides for the appointment by the President, with confirmation by the Senate, of a chief inspector and two assistant chief inspectors, who shall have practical knowledge of the construction and repairing of boilers and be otherwise properly qualified. They are required to have a force of fifty district inspectors, to be selected after competitive examination under Civil Service rules. The district inspectors must have had practical experience in the work of construction, repairing, operation, and testing of locomotive boilers. There is no doubt that this law has had, and will have, a widespread influence for good and be the means of saving many lives and preventing much suffering, and, while it may be said that it does not go as far as might be desired, yet, in the light of all experience obtained in the development of safety-appliance legislation on railroads, this first step as applied to locomotive boiler inspection is more far-reaching than earlier efforts have been looking to the safety of life and limb on the interstate railroads of our country.

THE HATTERS' CASE.

On April 10 the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals for the district of New York and New England handed down its decision upon the appeal in the Hatters' case. The decision reversed the judgment of the trial Federal court over which Judge Platt presided and in which under his instructions the jury returned a verdict mulcting the Hatters in the sum of $232,240.12. It will be remembered that the original case was started at Danbury, Connecticut, over seven years ago, resulting from a strike which was called in the Loewe Factory July 25, 1902, 242 employes, union and non-union, ceasing work. Suit was brought by Loewe & Co. August 31, 1903, under the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust law, $80,000 damages were alleged, and threefold damages under that law claimed.

The Hatters claimed that the Hatters' Union and other unions were not engaged in trade or commerce, and therefore did not come under the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust law. Relying upon these points the Hatters made no defense upon the bill of complaint. Judge Platt of the Federal Circuit Court of Connecticut maintained this position and dismissed the complaint. Loewe, or rather the Anti-Boycott Association, appealed to the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals, and both parties agreed that that court should certify the case and ask the question of the United States Supreme Court as to whether a suit of the kind could be maintained under the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust law. February 3, 1908, the United States Supreme Court decided that the case could be maintained. The case was then tried before Judge Platt and a jury, and lasted over four months. Judge Platt instructed the jury that they must find for Loewe &

Co. and left to the jury the question only of how much damage Loewe & Co. showed they sustained. The jury, as stated, awarded $232,240.12.

Since the starting of the suit in 1902 and the beginning of the trial, 26 of the 240 defendants died. Attachments were issued against the homes and savings of 100 of the defendants. The Anti-Boycott Association and the Manufacturers' Association stood behind Loewe & Co. The American Federation of Labor aided in the legal presentation of the case, and in addition gave its moral support to the Hatters. With this verdict against the Hatters, the American Federation of Labor appealed the case for the Hatters to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and retained as counsel Judge Alton B. Parker, Hon. Frank L. Mulholland of Toledo, Ohio, and Judge John K. Beach of New Haven, Conn. In their brief masterful arguments were made to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and the unanimous decision of the court reversed the judgment and remanded the case for a new trial. In connection with this famous case it would be well to call your attention to the review of it given in the March, 1908, and the March, 1910, issues of the American Federationist.

Our attorney was then requested to take action to secure the refunding of the cost of the appeal to the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals, which was incurred by the Federation and in due course of time the American Anti-Boycott Association paid over the amount of $5,348.90, which has been placed in the fund for the defense in this case.

We are now advised that the Anti-Boycott Association, in the name of Loewe & Co., has asked for an assignment of the case for retrial and that it is likely to be reached during the January term of the Federal Court in the State of Connecticut.

In reviewing this case it is well to understand just what matters of law have been passed upon by the various courts giving considerations to the questions involved. As heretofore said, the demurrer filed to the complaint of Loewe & Co. admitted for the purposes of the hearing thereon, the truth of all matters correctly pleaded, and the only question which came before the Supreme Court of the United States was whether a cause of action, under the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust act, was stated in the complaint. As already stated the court so interpreted that law as to declare that upon the basis of the question submitted, a cause of action existed. It must be borne in mind, however, that the Supreme Court of the United States has not passed upon the state of facts submitted to the court and jury upon the trial of this cause, but has decided that the complainant made a case upon paper sufficient to state a cause of action under the Anti-Trust act.

The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, in granting a new trial on the merits, reviewed somewhat the decision of the Supreme Court, in the following language:

"This decision [of the United States Supreme Court] also has fixed the law in this case. It is needless to inquire whether boycotts generally, or this variety of boycott, are or are not unlawful at common law, or under the statutes of some particular State. If it be shown that individuals have combined together to induce a manufacturer engaged in interstate commerce to conduct his business as they wish, and, upon his refusal, further combine not only to prevent him from manufacturing articles intended for interstate commerce, but also to prevent his vendees in other States from reselling the articles which they had imported from the State of manufacture, or from further negotiating for the purchase and inter-transportation of such articles, the combiners intending thereby to destroy or obstruct an existing interstate traffic, such combination of individuals must be held to have essentially obstructed the free flow of commerce between the States. A combination to effect such an obstruction is a violation of the Anti-Trust act."

Attempting still further to define the law as applicable to this particular case, the Circuit Court of Appeals in granting a new trial said:

"It may be well, however, that we should indicate for the guidance of the Circuit Court in the new trial that, as we understand the decision of the Supreme Court in this case, there may be a distinction drawn between—

"(a) A combination to cause a strike in a manufactory located in a particular State, where the important object is the unionizing of the factory, although a part of its product, if manufactured, would have become the subject of interstate trade; and

"(b) A combination directly to restrain and put a stop to the importation by a person in one State of goods produced at a manufactory in another State, although the ultimate result sought to be obtained by such restraint might merely be the changing of conditions in that particular manufactory."

The above quotations appear to settle the law, as laid down by the courts, upon this branch of the case as nearly as can be stated in any general proposition. It will still be a question, of course, in any particular case, of what amounts to a "prevention" or "putting a stop to" the importation of articles from another State.

Upon the trial of this case before Judge Platt of the Federal Court for the State of Connecticut, the Anti-Boycott Association claimed—and succeeded in impressing the court with the opinion—that mere membership in the organization known as the United Hatters of North America, and the payment of dues therein, made one a party to a conspiracy to commit the unlawful acts charged against certain individual members and officers of that association. The Court of Appeals in its opinion granting a new trial properly disposes of that contention. We quote:

"It has been argued here that the mere fact that an individual defendant was a member of, or contributed money to the treasury of, the United Hatters' Association made him the principal of any and all agents who might be employed by its officers to carry out the objects of the association, and responsible as principal if such agents used illegal methods or caused illegal methods to be used, in undertaking to carry out those objects. We can not assent to this proposition. . . . Something more must be shown, as, for instance, that, with the knowledge of the members, unlawful means had been so frequently used, with the expressed or tacit approval of the association, that its agents were warranted in assuming that they might use such unlawful means in the future; that the association and its individual members would approve or tolerate such use whenever the end sought to be obtained might be best obtained thereby."

The Anti-Boycott Association, through its attorneys, contended that the payment of dues by certain defendants after they had received knowledge of the alleged unlawful acts of their officers, through the service upon them of summons in this case, was competent evidence tending to show that the acts of their officers were authorized at the time they were performed, and the anti-boycott attorneys succeeded in convincing Judge Platt, the trial Judge, that this contention was correct. The Court of Appeals, however, took exceptions to the admission of such evidence and held this testimony incompetent.

From what we are able to gather from the decisions of the courts, it is apparent that upon the retrial of this case each individual defendant will have to be in some way connected with the alleged conspiracy set forth in the bill of complaint before a verdict for the plaintiff can be secured. We understand that the courts have decided that the pecuniary liability of a defendant in this action does not depend solely upon his continued membership in a labor union whose officers and agents have committed the alleged unlawful acts, but that further evidence must be introduced tending to show that such defendant either participated in or authorized the performance of the unlawful acts in question. This case now stands for a new trial on the merits, and is not unlike any other conspiracy case. These men will not now be presumed guilty of conspiracy. It will not be assumed that merely because they are union men they have entered into an "unlawful combination," but each defendant will stand upon his own defense, and will not be charged with responsibility for alleged unlawful acts committed in the furtherance of a conspiracy, until it has been clearly established by competent evidence that he was a party to the "conspiracy."

INJUNCTION-CONTEMPT-APPEAL-RETRIAL.

Since my last report much has happened in connection with the contempt proceedings and other litigation growing out of the original action of the American Anti-Boycott Association brought in the name of the Buck's Stove and Range Company.

An adjustment having been obtained in regard to our former difficulties with that company, when the appeals on the injunction were reached in the Supreme Court of the United States, that court indicated its conclusion that there was no longer a real legal dispute between our organization and the company, and that it would be unwilling to pass upon a case which was then purely moot. Following this intimation, the Supreme Court directed that the appeals taken by both the company and ourselves should be dismissed, the costs to be equally divided.

With regard to the contempt case against Messrs. Mitchell and Morrison and myself, the history was somewhat different. After Mr. Justice Wright, in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, had found all of us guilty of contempt, and sentenced Mr. Mitchell to a punishment of nine months in jail, Mr. Morrison to six months and myself to a year, we, through our attorneys, considering the decision unjust, took an appeal. Our attorneys regarded the petition filed by the plaintiffs as civil in its nature, and the appeal was arranged accordingly. Upon the hearing in the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, that court confirmed the sentences of Judge Wright, and held that the appeal was not taken in such manner as enabled it to consider the merits of the case, it having been treated as an appeal in equity, which would have been proper as a civil contempt, while the court regarded it as a purely legal matter, which should have been the subject of what is technically known as a bill of exceptions.

We applied to the Supreme Court of the United States for the issuance of a writ of certiorari, representing to that body the magnitude of the case and the importance of the questions involved. The Supreme Court granted the writ, and the case, on our own part as well as our appeal in the principal case, was argued at great length on our behalf by Judge Alton B. Parker and Mr. Jackson H. Ralston, there appearing against us Joseph J. Darlington and Daniel Davenport, who, the Buck's Stove and Range Company having dropped out of all real interest in the conflict, represented the so-called American Anti-Boycott Association.

After a full hearing, the Supreme Court of the United States upheld the contentions of our attorneys that the proceedings were civil in their nature, and that the appeal to the Court of Appeals was properly taken in the manner it was. Following largely the lines laid down in the argument of our counsel, the Supreme Court held that the petition in contempt, originally filed in the name of the Buck's Stove and Range Company, was civil in its nature, and not criminal, but that the punishment undertaken to be meted out to the respondents was of a criminal character, its purpose having been apparently to vindicate the dignity of the court rather than to remedy the ills from which the company claimed originally to have suffered and desired to be cured. Considering, therefore, that the company had asked for something which was remedial in its nature, whereas the relief granted by Mr. Justice Wright was simply punitive, the Supreme Court reversed the decision of Justice Wright, which had been affirmed by the Court of Appeals, and sent back the cause to the lower courts, in the following language:

"The judgment of the Court of Appeals is reversed and the case remanded with directions to reverse the judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia and remand the case to that court with direction that the contempt proceedings instituted by the Buck's Stove and Range Company be dismissed, but without prejudice to the power and right of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to punish by a proper proceeding contempt, if any, committed against it."

On the morning after the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States was orally rendered, and before any official or authentic copy of the decision was obtainable by any one, Justice Wright, taking advantage of the decision of the court, appointed a committee, consisting of the attorneys in the original injunction and contempt case, Messrs. Darlington, Davenport, and Beck, to make an investigation and report whether there be good cause for believing that Messrs. Mitchell, Morrison, and I were guilty of contempt of court.

The "committee" formulated charges and presented them to the court, and my colleagues and myself were cited to show cause why we should not be punished for contempt.

Our attorneys sought to have the case tried before another Judge than Justice Wright. This was overruled, and at a later session, because in the meantime I had testified before a committee of the United States Senate, during the course of which the course pursued by Justice Wright was brought by me to the attention of this committee, Justice Wright took cognizance of my statement to the Senatorial committee for further justification of his refusal to have another Judge try the case. Whereupon, because Justice Wright had in the previous case shown that his mind was biased against us, and because of his latest expression in regard to me, our counsel renewed the motion for the case to be tried before another Judge of the same court, which in turn Justice Wright overruled.

The committee of attorneys appointed by the court asked Justice Wright to refer the taking of testimony in the contempt proceedings to an Examiner. Our counsel opposed, and urged that the case be heard in open court, where irrelevant testimony would be excluded and my colleagues and myself guaranteed the rights to which we were entitled, to be confronted by our accusing witnesses, and to answer the same if necessary.

At this writing Justice Wright has under consideration his decision upon this point. In either event, the case will proceed shortly, whether in open court or before an Examiner, to be subject to the court's decision.

It should be understood that when a case of this character is referred to an Examiner, obedience to subpoena, even to the defendants to testify against themselves, is expected to be obeyed, and that they are expected to answer any and all questions put, no matter how irrelevant they may be. It is true that counsel may object to the questions, but the answer is expected and under order of the court compelled to be given. It is true that when the written testimony is presented, the court may exclude these questions and the answers, but they have been written and are read by the Judge, and must have some influence in forming his judgment and decision.

POLICE OPPRESSION—THE THIRD DEGREE—EXTRADITION.

In the report which I had the honor to submit to the St. Louis Convention, reference, together with recommendations for a remedy, was made to police oppression and the infliction of what has become notorious as the "third degree." The committee to whom was referred the subject-matter indorsed not only the declarations, but the recommendations, and it was decided to urge the State Federation and city central bodies to have enacted, by their respective State Legislatures, a law that shall put an end to this species of barbarism perpetrated upon accused persons and to safeguard the rights inherent to every citizen of a civilized community.

On December 29 last, a circular was issued to the State and central bodies upon this subject. In reply, much encouraging information was received, and a determination expressed on the part of all to see to it that the laws shall be so amended, or so enforced, as to guarantee the right of presumption of the innocence of unconvicted men, even though they be suspected and accused. In several States reformatory action, either by law or administration, has followed.

The U. S. Senate Committee on Judiciary adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That a select committee of five members of the Senate be appointed by the Vice-President to inquire into and report to the Senate the facts as to the alleged practice of administering what is known as 'the third degree' ordeal by officers or employes of the United States for the purpose of extorting from those charged with crime statements and confessions, and also as to any other practices tending to prevent or impair the fair and impartial administration of the criminal law," etc.

The committee made an extended investigation, on July 8 giving me a hearing. I made an extended argument citing numerous cases of police oppression under "the third degree" ordeal, and particularly emphasized the kidnapping of John J. and James B. McNamara. I recited to the Senate committee the details of the methods employed by the Burns Detective Agency men in their sensational farce tragedy circuitous routes in transporting the McNamaras to Los Angeles, evidently planned to avoid habeas corpus or other legal processes being served. I especially pointed out to the committee that it is only workingmen in the United States of America upon whom such dastardly outrages are perpetrated.

The select committee made a report to the Senate on August 4, 1911, in which it stated that from its investigation and from testimony elicited from Major Sylvester, Superintendent of the Metropolitan Police, Washington, D. C., who has also been President of the International Police Chiefs' Association for ten years, that it was his experience, that while there were instances of brutality by police officers from time to time in various parts of the country, they were sporadic and were not the regular practice." The special committee also reported:

"It appears from testimony taken before the committee that in important cases involving violations of the Federal statutes, upon application by the District Attorney, the Department of Justice authorizes the employment of special United States Marshals and specially appointed investigators to watch the jury for the purpose of preventing jurymen from being tampered with. This committee deprecates this practice or custom, although it may be justified upon the ground that, inasmuch as the accused or his friends may employ men to watch the jury, therefore the Government should be allowed the same privilege. This committee regards the employment of men by either the prosecution or the defense for the purpose of shadowing jurymen as liable to great abuse. The spectacle of a sworn jury shadowed by secret employes of both parties to the suit during the entire period of a trial does not seem to this committee to comport with the impartial administration of justice."

The committee closed its report with the following:

"Clause 2 of section 2 of Article IV (United States Constitution) provides for what is known as the extradition of a person charged with crime who shall flee from justice and be found in another State. Under the authority of this clause of the Constitution several instances have occurred where persons alleged to have committed a crime in one State and fled into another State have, upon the requisition of the State where the crime was alleged to have been committed, and the warrant of the Governor of the State to which the person so charged with crime had fled, been taken before a court and remanded to the custody of the agent of the State in which the crime was alleged to have been committed and by him returned to the State from which he was alleged to have fled, without affording any opportunity to the person so charged with crime to test the legality of the proceedings against him or the jurisdiction of the court granting judgment against him. The courts have held that if the person so charged with crime is within their jurisdiction when produced for trial they will not inquire into the legality of the proceedings by which he was brought within their jurisdiction. Although such a proceeding may not strictly fall within the province of this committee as a practice tending to impede the impartial administration of the Federal criminal law and may not be resorted to so frequently as to properly constitute a practice, still, in the opinion of this committee the extradition of a person charged with crime and his transfer from one State to another—perhaps far distant and by a route calculated to prevent his obtaining a writ of habeas corpus to test the validity of the proceedings which resulted in his arrest and transportation—presents a condition of affairs, which, if possible, should be made impossible, by legislation.

"If the court, before whom the person charged with crime is brought, in reality has no jurisdiction, and the person is deprived of any opportunity to test that question by reason of his hasty transportation to and custody in a remote part of the United States, he has to all intents and purposes been kidnapped, and such person would seem to have been deprived of his liberty without due process of law. We therefore recommend to the consideration of Congress whether Congress can not constitutionally provide some remedy against the possibility of injustice in the execution of extradition under clause 2 of section 2 of Article IV of the Constitution of the United States, either by providing that the person so charged with crime shall not be removed from the State in which he is found within a certain number of days, thus affording him an opportunity to test the validity of his arrest and extradition in habeas corpus proceedings, or in some other manner if authority for any such exists."

While Congress was recently in session the following measures were introduced bearing upon the subject of extradition, the action taking its inspiration from the extraordinary procedures connected with the hasty and alleged illegal extradition of the McNamaras. On the first day Congress convened, Representative Henry of Texas introduced a bill, H. R. 4658, for the purpose of amending section 5278 of the Revised Statutes of the United States bearing upon extradition procedures. Bill H. R. 8469, very similar in character, was later introduced by Representative Korbly of Indiana, also H. R. 11174 by Mr. Wilson of Pennsylvania; H. R. 13241 by Mr. Good of Iowa, and H. R. 13804 by Mr. Buchanan of Illinois, and on April 25 Representative Berger of Wisconsin introduced House Concurrent Resolution No. 6, citing part of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, which ordains that no State shall deprive any person of "life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws," followed by this resolution: "That a committee of each house be appointed to investigate the arrest and extradition of the said McNamaras, and to report its findings to the two houses at the earliest practicable moment." This resolution was referred to the Committee on Rules, and two days later, on April 27, hearings were had, which were continued for two days. Representative Berger defended his resolution, the Chairman, Mr. Henry, adding that all the Congressmen had received many memorials. Frank M. Ryan, General President of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Union, Leo M. Rappaport, attorney for that organization, Representative Wilson of Pennsylvania and others appeared before the committee in behalf of the resolution. As it was impossible for me to be present in person, on account of a previous engagement, I addressed the following letter to the Chairman, which was made a part of the record:

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR,

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 24, 1911.

HON. R. L. HENRY, Chairman, Committee on Rules, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: Your favor of the 22d instant, advising me that you have called a meeting of the Committee on Rules for Saturday morning, May 27, at eleven o'clock, and inviting me to be on hand at the time for the purpose of making a statement to the committee in favor of the resolution introduced by Hon. Victor Berger, came duly to hand.

I regret to say that it will be impossible for me to be at the session of the committee. Your letter reached me on Tuesday. On Monday I received an urgent telegram and later a long-distance telephone message, and found it necessary to make an engagement to deliver an address at Cooper Union, New York City, on Friday evening, May 26, and incidentally have made other arrangements which will necessitate my remaining in New York for the following day.

May I take advantage of this opportunity to submit to you and the committee a few of the reasons why, in my judgment, an investigation should be had either by joint committee of Congress or by a committee of the House of Representatives?

While attending to his official duties on Saturday evening, April 22, 1911, John J. McNamara, an officer of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' International Union, in the city of Indianapolis, Ind., was arrested without warrant, and taken to a police court, which had no jurisdiction in matters of extradition. He was denied the right to be heard by himself or by counsel, and was then manacled and in that condition taken out of the State of Indiana across the continent, and confined in a jail in Los Angeles, Cal.

It is needless for me to say that no self-respecting, humane citizen can have any sympathy, either with killing or the policy of killing, and this without regard whether the crime has been committed by a high official or one of the submerged in the social strata. Our civilization presumes the highest regard for human life and human liberty.

The meanest man in all our country is guaranteed rights which neither State nor nation is warranted in taking from him, even though he be suspected of or charged with crime. Every man in our country is assumed to be innocent of any crime until he has been proven guilty and so pronounced by a jury of his peers; and until John J. McNamara has been proven guilty, after fair and impartial trial, the law holds him innocent. The abduction from his home State is a crime against justice, liberty, and the rights of man. Mr. McNamara was not a fugitive from justice.

The Governor of a State in which a crime has been committed may certainly make demand upon the Governor of another State in which the person charged with crime is located for the surrender of the person so charged, but the person demanded has always been granted the right to be heard before such a demand or requisition has been honored and complied with, that he or others in his behalf may have an opportunity before the courts of the State in which he is found to review and determine whether the requisition papers are ample or authentic; whether the grounds of complaint are sufficient; whether there exists an illegal or improper design even under the forms of law to take a citizen away from his home and from his State and to take him to a foreign State for an ulterior purpose.

The law and the practice are that a person shall be protected by the government of the State in which he lives against being deprived of his liberty or his life without due process of law, or being handed over to the Governor of another State without the opportunity of setting up even a preliminary or formal defense so as to show that he has a right to the protection of the State against an untenable or unlawful demand of another State.

Ample evidence is at hand that the safeguards guaranteed by law were flagrantly disregarded, and John J. McNamara surrendered without a moment's preparation or opportunity to avail himself of his lawful rights and railroaded to a California prison.

Right here I should say that under our Government the States are as much foreign to each other in the administration of their criminal law as is, say, for instance, a foreign country to the Government of the United States, except that in the former—the State—the State Governors and courts are the arbiters and in the latter the President of the United States and the potentates of the foreign countries and their representative courts are the determining officials.

Is it conceivable that the President of the United States would have surrendered an American citizen to a foreign government upon its requisition without giving him an opportunity to avail himself of his lawful rights and a chance to show that some mistake, some terrible mistake, has been made?

Suppose such a citizen might be able to show that a conspiracy had been entered into by some foreign power to get him into its jurisdiction and domain with the ulterior purpose of taking his life or depriving him of his liberty.

Would and should not an American citizen be given the chance to show these?

If these contentions are true, and no liberty-loving, right-thinking American will dispute it, then it follows that this course should also have been pursued by the Governor of Indiana, and that he should not have done as he has done, allow the practical kidnapping of these men.

The entire proceedings in this case thus far have been characterized by high-handed outrage and violation of the constitutional and statutory guarantees, and are repugnant to the conception of human justice as understood and accepted by our American life, our American manhood, since the foundation of our Republic.

It is not appropriate here to even refer to the guilt or innocence of Mr. McNamara. That many of our fellow-citizens and I believe in his innocence is not a question for your committee to consider, but that a great outrage and violation of fundamental guaranties has been committed; that the subject is one deserving of the investigation of a special committee of the House of Representatives; that at least in the future the same travesty on law and outrage of justice may be prevented, should appeal to every right-thinking and patriotic American citizen. I sincerely hope that the Committee on Rules will report such a resolution favorably to the House of Representatives, and that the same will be adopted.

Very respectfully yours,

SAMUEL GOMPERS,
President, American Federation of Labor.

The committee showed a sympathetic interest in the matter, Mr. Madison, one of its members, going so far as to say: "The committee has been very favorably impressed with the candor and fairness and the information which has been given." The chairman, Mr. Henry, after summing up the position of the committee in favor of having the whole subject-matter referred to the Judiciary Committee, said: "Personally, speaking for myself, I see no objection to reporting this testimony to the House for whatever action they may want to take. Then, of course, the Committee on the Judiciary can give hearings." Mr. Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, one of the members of the committee, added: "I think this testimony should be submitted to the Committee on the Judiciary if it has a bill before it which is germane." Mr. Berger, after consultation with friends of his resolution, responded as follows: "I believe it would be satisfactory to me to send it to the House, because after all, McNamara is to be tried in California. In fact, he is to be tried now. Just report it to the House with any findings you may make, and that will be satisfactory as far as I am concerned." The chairman concluded the hearings by saying: "We will just submit this hearing to the House and then you can go before the Committee on the Judiciary and have additional hearings." That course was satisfactory to all.

In accordance with this decision of the Committee on Rules, it reported to the House on June 6 as follows: "The Committee on Rules has had under consideration House Concurrent Resolution No. 6, providing for the appointment of a committee on investigation, and report that they held hearings at which the proponent and all others desiring to be heard appeared and gave testimony. In the opinion of your committee it covered all the material facts that could be elicited by a select committee, and further investigation would throw no additional light on the transaction, and is therefore unnecessary. The testimony is herewith submitted for the information of the House with a view of determining whether or not further legislation is necessary. It is recommended that House Concurrent Resolution No. 6 do lie on the table."

During the debate upon this report, Mr. Henry, chairman of the Committee on Rules, said in the House:

"It is my intention to ask unanimous consent that the testimony taken by the Committee on Rules be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, in order that such committee may inquire whether or not further legislation is necessary in regard to the extradition laws."

Mr. Henry, later in the debate, asked unanimous consent that both testimony and report be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, to which the House agreed.

This matter will be given proper attention during the next session of Congress, when the bills herein referred to on the subject of extradition are duly considered by the Judiciary Committee.

Senator La Follette has introduced bill S. 2694 for the purpose of amending sections 5270 to 5274 of the revised statutes regulating the practices in extradition cases. This was referred to the Senate Committee on Judiciary. Nothing further on this subject has been done by the Senate other than what I have included in the earlier part of this section of my report in reciting the substance of the hearings which I attended before the Select Committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

THE POST SUIT AGAINST A. F. OF L.

Since the time of my last report, and following the action of the Supreme Court of the United States, Mr. Post, the owner of Postum Cereal and Grape Nuts, as a stockholder in the Buck's Stove and Range Company, commenced an action in St. Louis to restrain the Buck's Stove and Range Company from carrying out the terms of its settlement with the American Federation of Labor, and also claiming, as a result of the making of such settlement, threefold damages under the Sherman act for the Buck's Stove and Range Company, in which he (Post) was interested as a stockholder. These damages he fixed at $750,000. The defendants to this action, against which this relief was prayed, included the Buck's Stove and Range Company, the American Federation of Labor, and practically all of its officers and the officers of the local organization in St. Louis, and others.

Our counsel, Mr. Jackson H. Ralston, demurred to the complaint upon the ground that no cause of action whatsoever was stated by it against the American Federation of Labor and the organizations and individuals affiliated with it. This demurrer was fully heard last May, and in the following month was decided by Judge Dyer of the United States Court at St. Louis in our favor and the bill directed to be dismissed. From this decision of Judge Dyer an appeal has been taken to the United States Court of Appeals, and the cause on appeal will come on for hearing in January. Our attorneys assure us that they confidently expect an affirmation of the decree of Judge Dyer—that is, that the dismissal of the suit will be sustained. However, regardless of the fact that there is no merit in the suit brought by the unscrupulous labor hater Post, we must needs defend our rights in this litigation or be mulcted in damages by default.

ANTI-TRUST AND INJUNCTION LIMITATION BILLS.

During the whole of the existence of the Sixty-first Congress it was an absolute impossibility to obtain any direct action from either the Judiciary Committee of the House or that of the Senate upon the bills introduced at the instance of the American Federation of Labor for the purpose of amending the anti-trust law or for the limitation of the issuing of injunctions, but during the short session, when the bill for the "Codification of Laws Relating to the Judiciary" came up in the House, on December 7, 1910, Representative William B. Wilson of Pennsylvania took advantage of an opportunity to offer his bill dealing with injunction limitation as an amendment to the "Codification" bill.

Some expert parliamentary athletics were immediately indulged in by Mr. Moon of Pennsylvania and others who were anxious to rush the "Codification" bill through with some special features attached in which they were keenly interested. The amendment offered by Mr. Wilson evidently gave them much anxiety. They finally succeeded in having Mr. Wilson's amendment sidetracked on a point of order that it was not germane to the particular section in which it was offered.

On December 14 the "Codification" bill was brought up for further consideration, and again Mr. Wilson offered his injunction limitation bill as an amendment to a section in which he considered it perfectly appropriate for it to be included. More points of order were raised upon Mr. Wilson's amendment, on the plea of its not being germane to the particular section, but Mr. Wilson soon deprived the opposition of that objection by informing the House that it was immaterial to him under what section of the "Codification" bill it should come so long as he could obtain a consideration of it at some time, and he thereupon moved that the House should by unanimous consent take the injunction limitation amendment up and consider it at a proper time while the "Codification" bill was before the House. It was thereupon agreed that when sections 249 to 252 of the "Codification" bill should be reached the injunction limitation proposition be considered in connection with either of those, whereupon other Representatives who had introduced injunction regulation bills also offered them as amendments to the "Codification" measure. Finally, acting as though it were a premeditated arrangement Representative Sterling of Illinois, a member of the House Judiciary Committee, offered a pro injunction bill which had been introduced by Mr. Moon of Pennsylvania in the previous session, and which had received a strong indorsement by President Taft, as a substitute for the amendments made by Mr. Wilson and the other members on the injunction proposition.

It will be remembered that I called particular attention of the delegates to the St. Louis Convention to the dangers lurking in that bill of Mr. Moon's, fathered by President Taft, and at the same time I reported a protest I entered and urged organized labor to register its vigorous objections to the enactment of any bill of the character and species of which the Moon bill was a type.

Immediately after these tactics of Mr. Sterling had been brought to my attention, I sent the following letter to all of the members of the House of Representatives on December 20, 1910:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 20, 1910.

DEAR SIR: You are aware that Mr. Moon of Pennsylvania, Chairman of the Committee on Revision of the Laws, called up for consideration in the House, on December 7 (Calendar Wednesday), the bill H. R. 23377, "to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary." On Wednesday, December 14, this same bill again occupied the attention of the House, and the expectation seems to prevail among many members that this bill may continue to be considered on each Calendar Wednesday until it is finally disposed.

On December 14, Representative Wilson of Pennsylvania offered an amendment to the bill (see Congressional Record, page 93, December 7, and page 314, December 14).

On December 14 it was agreed by the House that Mr. Wilson's amendment would be in order when section 249, 250 or 251 of the bill or some other appropriate section of that chapter of the bill is reached. Your attention is called to the fact that at the same time several other amendments were offered to the bill and were similarly referred.

Mr. Sterling of Illinois offered an amendment as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. Wilson, to be considered in connection with that amendment, when it comes up. The Sterling substitute is the Moon injunction bill, introduced by Mr. Moon at the last session of Congress.

May I respectfully suggest that you make an effort to be present in the House on each Calendar Wednesday while this bill is under consideration, and to express the hope that you give your active support to the amendment offered by Mr. Wilson of Pennsylvania?

The substitute offered by Mr. Sterling (the Moon bill), or any other bill of the character and species of which it is a type, is inimical to the rights and interests of labor, and by unanimous direction of the American Federation of Labor at its convention last month I enter an emphatic protest against its passage. The men of labor of our country contend for the principles contained in the Wilson bill. May they not count upon you to make every possible effort for its enactment?

Respectfully yours,

SAMUEL GOMPERS,
President, American Federation of Labor.

The "Codification" bill came regularly before the House on each "Calendar Wednesday" thereafter, namely, January 11, 18, and 25; February 1, 8, and 15, but the sections in which Representative Wilson's injunction limitation amendment could be appropriately introduced and considered, according to the agreement previously referred to, were not reached, and in spite of the fact that this exceptionally long bill was so frequently brought up in the House it was generally understood that it was being used for dilatory purposes and as a scheme to offset other pressing legislation that the people were demanding. It became quite apparent that the members of the House of Representatives as a general thing showed neither anxiety nor inclination to reach those sections of the bill on which they had unanimously agreed the Wilson injunction limitation bill would be germane, and by their actions they brazenly demonstrated that they did not wish to have the merits of the proposition discussed for their own information and enlightenment, nor to be placed on record on the subject, as they surely would have been had the section been reached, because the bill was being debated while the House was sitting in regular session and not while it was sitting in Committee of the Whole.

The whole farce of these contemptible tactics was ruthlessly exposed by Representative William Hughes of New Jersey, on February 15, when with great indignation he passionately and mercilessly flayed the reactionary standpatters, in part, as follows:

"This afternoon we have been conducting a sham battle in the interests of delay. . . . I do not see what anybody can do to compel the gentleman in charge of the bill to go on and take up the really important pressing matters that are to be considered by this House if this bill is to be finished at this session of Congress. I do not know what the plan or program or scheme is, I only know that I and other members of Congress have been sitting around patiently waiting for the particular propositions in which we are all interested to be reached in order that we may debate them and have the House pass upon them. But gentlemen have wasted the afternoon conducting an Alphonse and Gaston burlesque across the aisle. I have seen three-quarters of an hour wasted this afternoon debating an amendment which everybody agreed to and nobody opposed. It seems that the more unanimity there was regarding an amendment the more time was taken up in discussing it. I confess that for one I do not know what is going on. I would like to find out, and I propose, if the gentleman in charge of the bill does not do it himself, to move that the House adjourn and put an end to this farce."

The few "managing" members of the House who were present evidently realized the exposure of their tactics by Mr. Hughes, and amidst considerable merriment they acted upon the motion of Mr. Hughes and adjourned the House, evidently considering that they had been the actors in a great comedy and that they flattered themselves on their artistic ability, and deemed it a great joke to so sidetrack one of the greatest issues before the organizations of labor and the American people. It was either through their effrontery or their debasement that they avoided the opportunity of declaring by positive legislation, in harmony with the fundamentals of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States, what should be the clear-cut legal definition of the inherent rights of man.

The conduct of the majority in the House of Representatives in the last Congress once more illustrated their subservency to the "interests" rather than their care for the rights of the people. It is regrettable that criticism such as this should be necessary of a great, responsible public body, but I deem it my duty to not only call the attention of the members of organized labor to these things, but to herald them forth so that all the world may know, with the hope that it may arouse the spirit of our countrymen to such an extent that they will see to it that they send men, real men, to represent them in Congress instead of marionettes, who are ready to jump, dance, run, or kneel, as the vested interests, the power behind the throne, may dictate.

Now let me report what took place in the other chamber—the Senate. While the farce just related was being played in the House, Senator Heyburn of Idaho, Chairman of the Committee on the Revision of the Laws, was taking advantage of every possible opportunity to advance the "Codification" bill in the Senate. Previous to the Senate reaching sections 249 to 252, many Senators were approached by our Legislative Committee and urged to introduce the Wilson injunction limitation bill as an amendment. Most of them declined under the excuse that they did not consider the "Codification" bill open to amendments, and asserting that it was pure codification and not new legislation, in spite of the fact that new legislation was enacted in several parts of the bill. However, when section 251 was reached, Senator Martin of Virginia, true to his pledge to us, offered the Wilson bill as an amendment and urged its adoption. Senator Heyburn promptly moved to table the amendment, and the motion was declared carried by the Chair without a division. In a few moments after this occurred the bill was completed and was passed by the Senate.

On February 23, while the House was working under the parliamentary order of suspension of the rules, which order usually prevails during the last few days of a session, Representative Moon moved to suspend the rules, take up the "Codification" bill reported from the Senate, and pass it in the House. The motion carried and the bill was passed. This lightning-like rapidity of the House, after the dilatory practices which had previously prevailed upon this bill to which I have already referred, shows to what sharp practices those mis-Representatives of the people resorted in order to prevent a review and open discussion of the injunction abuse.

It should be clearly understood that this part of my report is only a brief résumé of the many important incidents occurring in our efforts to obtain remedial injunction limitation legislation. Time will not permit personal experiences to be recounted here.

The anti-trust and injunction limitation situation in the Sixty-second Congress is as follows:

Early in the first session of the Sixty-second Congress, just adjourned, Mr. Hughes of New Jersey introduced a bill known as H. R. No. 40 for the purpose of amending the anti-trust law, granting relief to labor. His bill is a verbatim copy of the original amendment that was unanimously passed by the United States Senate in 1890, while the Senate was in Committee of the Whole and giving its consideration to the Sherman Anti-Trust bill. It was then known as the "George" amendment and has been referred to many times by us in our conventions, in the columns of the American Federationist and by our speakers at public and union meetings:

Mr. Wilson introduced H. R. 11033, which has been approved by the American Federation of Labor, and which I herewith produce in order that its contents may be made a matter of record and the public generally afforded an opportunity to become conversant with the measure. The second section contains the substance of the bill H. R. No. 40, introduced by Mr. Hughes, previously referred to.

H. R. 11033.—A Bill to more clearly define the Act of July second, eighteen hundred and ninety, entitled "An Act to protect trade and commerce against any unlawful restraints and monopolies."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That nothing in the Act of July second, eighteen hundred and ninety, entitled "An Act to protect trade and commerce against any unlawful restraints and monopolies," is intended, nor shall any provision thereof hereafter be enforced so as to apply to organizations or associations not for profit and without capital stock, nor to the members of such organizations or associations as such, except where such organization or association not for profit and without capital stock, or the members of such organizations or associations shall become directors or managers of corporations which are organized for profit and which have capital stock.

Sec. 2. That nothing in said Act of July second, eighteen hundred and ninety, is intended, nor shall any provision thereof hereafter be enforced so as to apply to any arrangements, agreements, or combinations among persons engaged in agriculture or horticulture made with a view of enhancing the price of their own agricultural or horticultural products when sold or offered for sale by themselves.

Sec. 3. That all Acts and parts of Acts in conflict with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed.

Mr. Martin of Colorado introduced H. R. 11718 for the purpose of amending the anti-trust law. He incorporated in his bill the exclusion clause, applying to labor organizations, fraternal organizations, and such other organizations or associations not for profit and without capital stock, as was contained in the exemption provisions applicable to such organizations enacted in the Corporation Tax Law, which passed the Sixty-first Congress as a revenue producing measure as a supplement to the Aldrich-Payne tariff bill. The Corporation Tax Law has been contested through several Federal courts and finally carried to the Supreme Court of the United States. The latter tribunal declared the measure to be constitutional, including the exemption clause, and in accordance with this decision Representative Martin is confident that a similar application and exemption should be made in the anti-trust law to labor organizations and other associations not for profit.

Representative Wilson of Pennsylvania introduced bill H. R. 11032 for the purpose of defining and limiting the meaning of so-called "conspiracy," to regulate the issuance of restraining orders and to outline a method of procedure thereon. This is labor's injunction limitation bill. Together with the others formulated as amendments to the anti-trust law, it has been referred to the Committee on Judiciary, but no action thus far has been reported by that committee. It is generally understood that the session of Congress just closed was a special session called by the President for the purpose of giving consideration to special legislation referring to reciprocal trade relations with Canada, and while it is true that the Congress gave some attention to other revenue producing bills, there was little expectation that any material consideration would be given to other measures coming under the classification of general legislation in that special session of Congress.

Such opportunities to make progress as were available were taken advantage of in the advancement of our bills during that session, and at this moment we stand in a better equipped and possibly better strategic position than we have ever before occupied. Let me specify:

First. Our bills are clearly and positively written; they have been regularly introduced and referred to appropriate committees; most of the members of these committees now know not only the numbers of the bills advocated by labor, but the substance of them.

Second. The coming session of Congress is the long business session, when it is customary to give general legislation some serious consideration.

Third. Next year the people will be called upon to elect a President and a new Congress.

Fourth. Let organized labor make its wants clear and in no uncertain tones; the people of the country are in the mood to stand true to the cause of justice, freedom, and humanity. Let the delegates return to their homes carrying with them the declarations from this convention and have their demands repeated in every village, hamlet, town, county, and State by every local organization and city central body and State Federation. Let the voice of labor be heard distinctly, vigorously, and persistently. If this be done, no repetition of the disgraceful performances herein recited as to what transpired in the Sixty-first Congress will ever be repeated.

If these suggestions are observed and duly carried out, it will so supplement the efforts of the officers of the American Federation of Labor that the probability is much greater good can be accomplished in the advancement of effective legislation in the interest of the workers and the people generally during the next session of Congress than could be possible without such co-operation from local sources.

RELIEF FROM JUDICIAL USURPATION—THE WILSON BILL.

The movement for legislative relief against judicial abuses in the issuance and enforcement of injunctions and restraining orders was, during the years from 1905 to 1908, general and aggressive. With the incoming of the present administration the opposition to our efforts in that direction, which had been previously concealed, for the most part, by hypocrisy and the confusion caused by the offering of ineffective makeshifts, assumed the form of open, defiant, uncompromising hostility. President Taft, during his first candidacy, profusely assured the interested public that when, or if, elected he would approach this subject with an open mind. He was careful, however, not to clearly define his attitude toward the Pearre (now the Wilson) bill. Early in his administration he outlined a scheme of legislation which was embodied in the Moon bill. The shortcomings and evil purpose of that bill were fully exposed in my last annual report. It was only necessary to unmask its objectionable features to have it condemned, not only by organized labor but by all fair-minded men.

It is useless to further dwell upon the Moon bill. It is dead beyond recall, and its authors and supporters stand discredited. Let the authors and sponsors for other subterfuges, and all would-be "life savers," take notice and be forewarned. The real friends of labor will stand for the Wilson bill. It has stood the test of every objection and criticism, constitutional and otherwise. The opposition to it, in default of meritorious objection, has resorted to appeals to selfishness and directed their efforts to arousing every form of employing class prejudice.

The greatest importance should be attached to this practical reform. We are now, in this matter of injunctions, at a crisis which should arouse all the latent energies of the organization. It is the opportune time for a united and mighty forward effort. If we act unitedly, wisely, and vigorously, the bill can be put through the House and Senate at the coming session. Even if President Taft should veto it, we still would take a long stride in the right direction. I wish to be entirely fair to the President. I prefer to believe that he has heeded the arguments on only one side of this issue, and that if he were placed where decisive action was unavoidable, he would give the subject the consideration its importance warrants from all viewpoints. I must say, however, that his attitude, as clearly and repeatedly defined and declared, is not such as to justify us in expecting any voluntary assistance from that source. You have not forgotten that immediately after his inauguration, in the absence of emergency or provocation, and apparently without any immediate object in view, he transmitted to the extra session of Congress in 1909, a bitter, denunciatory tirade against the Pearre bill, nor how at the close of the regular session in 1910, he put forth extraordinary, and I regret to say successful, efforts to strangle a provision in an appropriation bill which forbade the use of public funds, under the Sherman anti-trust act, in prosecutions against labor and agricultural associations. In my last year's report I gave a somewhat detailed account of the President's extraordinary conduct with reference to this matter. Inasmuch as the situation then presented is likely soon to recur, if not in the same form at any rate in some form, I deem it worth while to remind you of the episode. The amendment just mentioned, proposed by Representative Hughes of New Jersey, was debated and adopted by the House in Committee of the Whole, reported and passed by the House, but was defeated in the Senate. The disagreement between the two houses necessitated the appointment of a joint conference committee. Passing over the formal proceedings in such cases, we come to the deadlock between the House and Senate. One motive in the President's action was his fear that the important appropriation bill, in which the amendment had been inserted by the House, would fail. But the sharpest spur was his anger at the thought that the friends of labor had developed sufficient strength to insert the amendment in the first instance. My former report contained a paragraph which I here insert without change:

"The situation evidently angered the President, as he immediately took the matter into his own hands. He suspended other public business and swept aside every engagement. He called 'wavering' Representatives to the White House and insisted upon their active opposition, even going so far as to say that, if it cost him the support of every laboring man in the country, he would not approve of such a proviso in the law. It is reported that when he learned that the House had receded from its insistence upon the proviso by the close vote of 138 to 130, he made no effort to conceal his great gratification because he had succeeded in defeating labor to this extent."

But under stress of political exigencies he has been known to make amazing changes of front on questions of great importance. As we do not know Mr. Taft's uttermost capacity for shifting his position, let us hope that he will ultimately conclude that the cause of justice which this measure represents will outlive his lease of power, and that it is a movement whose successful culmination is among the things inevitable, whether he approves or disapproves.

The very best arguments have been presented to the Judiciary Committee of the House, before which this measure was pending, and the opposition, as far as argument goes, has been thoroughly discomfited. Non-action has not been for the lack of conviction with respect to the merits of the bill, but because of the inertia of some members of the committee and the hostility, open or secret, of others. Indeed, the situation prior to the Sixty-second Congress was such, owing to the complete subservience of the House membership to a Speaker and Rules Committee which were controlled by special interests, that it seemed scarcely worth while to put forth our reserve forces. But, unless I am greatly mistaken, the changed situation, in the matter of House and Committee organization and the formation of rules, encourages prompt and aggressive action at this time, and suggests the folly of either delay or half-hearted action.

Political history is made largely through the ebb and flow of public opinion. We are just passing from an era of reaction, otherwise designated as "standpatism." The particular reform we are now advocating is in harmony with the present progressive trend, and if we do our full duty in having it catalogued among the important causes to be pressed forward for legislative action we shall only be acting in accord with the spirit of the times.

In self-defense, labor and its officials have in times past been compelled to criticize judicial action. For this course our spokesmen have been censured in unmeasured terms. But we are no longer singled out for targets by the subsidized organs of the privileged. The list of critics of the judiciary now includes the best thought, the best talent, and the best character of the nation. It required, however, something other than ultra-jurisdictional injunctions in labor disputes to bring about the situation in which about the only defenders of the injunction courts and of their most important recent decrees are the President and his Attorney-General. But let me remind you that, before the House Judiciary Committee and elsewhere, I and my co-workers often predicted that if the courts were permitted to annex to rightful jurisdiction a discretionary domain, constituting an invasion of legislative power, the courts would not stop with trampling upon the rights of labor. It gave me no pleasure to question or criticize court decisions, and I shall never do so, unless and when absolutely necessary. But no leader of labor in all this land ever so fiercely or successfully attacked a court as did Mr. Justice Harlan. I say successfully, because among the hundreds of lawyers and statesmen who have expressed themselves with respect to the decisions in the oil and tobacco cases few have failed to regard the trend and significance of these decisions as did Justice Harlan, that is to say, as a menace to the very life of the Republic and as a usurpation of legislative power. Even such newspapers as usually assume the task of defending the courts in all circumstances have either remained silent or have evasively and feebly replied to the court's critics.

Here are some of Justice Harlan's words:

"In order that my objections to certain parts of the court's opinion may distinctly appear, I must state the circumstances under which Congress passed the anti-trust act and trace the course of judicial decisions as to its meaning and scope. This is the more necessary because the court by its decision, when interpreted by the language of its opinion, has not only upset the long settled interpretation of the act, but has usurped the constitutional functions of the legislative branch of the Government."

Then, after a review of the history of the act and of the prior decisions thereunder, he thus proceeds:

"It remains for me to refer, more fully than I have heretofore done, to another, and in my judgment, if we look to the future, the most important aspect of this case. That aspect concerns THE USURPATION BY THE JUDICIAL BRANCH OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE FUNCTIONS OF THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT. The illustrious men who laid the foundations of our institutions deemed no part of the national Constitution of more consequence or more essential to the permanency of our form of government than the provisions under which were distributed the powers of government among three separate, equal and co-ordinate departments—legislative, executive, and judicial. This was at that time a new feature of governmental regulation among the nations of the earth, and it is deemed by the people of every section of our own country as most vital in the workings of a representative republic, whose Constitution was ordained and established in order to accomplish the objects stated in its preamble, by the means, but only by the means, provided, either expressly or by necessary implication, by the instrument itself. No department of that Government can constitutionally exercise the powers committed strictly to another and separate department."

The learned Justice was not merely deciding or giving his opinion of the law, but testifying to facts. In that testimony he has been corroborated almost universally, the only dissentients being President Taft and Attorney-General Wickersham.

I have referred to this part of current history because the ignorant and unreasoning have ever heretofore received with incredulity and scorn our complaints that the courts were usurping legislative powers in labor disputes by issuing blanket injunctions where the law had provided legal remedies. The judicial usurpation pointed out by Justice

Harlan is no more flagrant and obvious than in each of dozens of instances to which we have from time to time referred.

Surely the declaration of Justice Harlan in his dissenting opinion is sufficient to give us pause. It not only recalls our declarations, frequently made upon the same subject, but the one which was most emphatically stated in the editorial appearing in the March, 1908, issue of the American Federationist under the caption, "Labor Must Not Be Outlawed—The Supreme Court's Decision in the Hatters' Case," and from which the following is quoted:

"We are proud of the institutions of our country and try to uphold them with all our power, but we do protest against the assumption of law-making power by the courts. In assuming such functions they invade the sphere of the legislative and executive, which must necessarily result injuriously to the very fabric of our republic. Such action by the courts not being contemplated by the Constitution, there are no safeguards, no checks, as to what may be attempted."

A comparison of the utterances of Justice Harlan with this quotation is suggested. The identity of thought, and almost of language, is most complete.

Well may the business men of the country heed Justice Harlan's note of warning. Indeed, all men who love their country and its institutions should fear for their own safety, even if not for that of the men of toil, and should join hands with us in lopping off the sinister, poisonous excrescence of judicial jurisdiction invasion.

Not only workingmen but all classes and callings are at the parting of the ways, the one road leading to government by judicial edict, the other to government by laws enacted by a free people.

Justice Harlan, in the course of his opinion, made a prediction that the majority decision would "throw the business of the country into confusion and invite widely extended and harassing litigation, the injurious effects of which will be felt for many years to come." How literally and exactly his predictions have been fulfilled all know. We are in a position now to extend heartfelt sympathies to business men, for we have known for years what it was to have our rights so unsettled by court "decrees" that we knew not where we stood or what next to expect. We have also known the harassment of litigation referred to by the Justice, as well as its cost. The men of "big" business are at present at a loss in managing their affairs, because they do not know whether they are going to jail or not. The administration whose duty it is to impartially enforce the laws is as much in the dark as are others. One day it says that it will enforce the Sherman act to the letter, and on the next, after having read the morning papers, it fears that it has spoken too strongly and withdraws the statement. One day it indiscriminately denounces all restraints and interferences with interstate commerce, and on the next "roars like a sucking dove," claiming that it was misunderstood or didn't really say anything at all.

It is not my present purpose either to restate the conditions which render the enactment of a Federal law, limiting within its proper sphere the issuance of injunctions, a matter of vital importance, or to repeat the arguments advanced by me on former occasions. The conditions are known to you all, and the arguments were set forth last year at the St. Louis Convention and also have been placed before the rank and file of labor and the public on similar occasions and in various forms. I have myself, aided by others, held up the torch of reason before Congress and its committees so often and so earnestly that it would seem that little more remains to be said. Nevertheless, for the benefit of any who may wish a reminder of the underlying reasons for the legislation asked, I append an exhibit containing their restatement.

In closing this part of my report, I wish to make a practical suggestion. The Wilson bill will not pass itself. Your national officers will, of course, do their part to the utmost of their ability, as heretofore. But that, alone, is not enough. Members of the House and Senate are very much like other men. They are oftener than otherwise creatures of immediate environment and local influences. Many of them, when spoken to upon this measure, put up a barricade which is hard to scale. They say, "Your bill is all right," or, "I have always been in favor of some such legislation, but I don't know what my people think of this particular bill." Now, it is difficult to criticise that attitude, especially in the political atmosphere recently created based on the plea for popular rule to which we are emphatically committed. But this attitude presents a condition which is not only easily understood but can be met without great difficulty. It is only a question of a little expense and some labor to give every member of Congress and every Senator the information which, sincerely or otherwise, he claims to lack. I shall make no recommendations of a plan for meeting it, but suggest that the committee to which this report shall be referred seriously consider the matter and then formulate a simple, feasible method for getting from the various congressional districts, for Congressmen, and from the various States, for Senators, an individual as well as a general expression of opinion, or demand for action, on this measure.

I append a copy of the Wilson bill. It is the product of our own thought, aided by men learned in the law. It is comprehensive without ambiguity and has stood the test of criticism running through several years.

THE PEOPLE—THE JUDICIARY—INJUNCTIONS—DEFENSE.

The signs of the times are portentous for injunction Judges. A movement looming up rapidly in the West indicates that the people are about to have their day. The courts, "that human institution that likens itself to a divine institution," to quote the President, who is a product of that institution, are on the point of finding out that final decisions of justice must come, not from one class in a republic, but from all its people. As time passes, evidence accrues that the injunction habit must go down before common sense and the general sentiment of liberty. Unauthorized edicts from the bench are proving to be naught as against the barriers placed before them by public opinion.

In the course of the long series of attacks upon the trade union movement, made by a certain type of Judges, the attitude of the organized laborers has been strictly that of legal defense, exercised through the usual methods of employing counsel and pleading before the courts. The time may now be opportune to raise the question whether our organizations may not adopt more direct means in obtaining justice for the individuals and the trade unions exposed to a reign of tyranny which has been established by the employing classes through the instrumentality of subservient courts. The continual drain on the finances of the unions, the uncertainty of the fate of accused union officials and other labor representatives, the doubt in the minds of the working classes as to what the law really requires, the possibility of our enemies on the occasion of labor disputes obtaining the aid of court machinery against us—these facts all present reasons for the trade unionists endeavoring to make short work of ascertaining what their rights are and of enlightening the public upon the question.

How great the obstacles interposed by courts have been to the organization of labor, and to the exercise of the fundamental legal rights of trade unionists, may be inferred from the number of injunctions petitioned for and the number granted in the course of a decade. As in the State of Massachusetts, from 1898 to 1908, employers petitioned for injunctions in sixty-six cases, and injunctions were actually issued in forty-six, it may be estimated that the entire number granted throughout the United States in that time reached not less than a thousand. The damage to trade union effort lies not only in the injunctions actually issued, but also on occasions in the partial paralysis of union activity because of the threat of injunctions by employers and because of the aggressions of police authorities acting on the assumption that injunctions already granted give them extraordinary powers in case of strikes or lockouts.

Now, what are the rights claimed by the trade unionists which have been interfered with by the courts? The trade unionist asserts, first of all, that his labor power is his own, to be exercised or not, according to his own will. He asserts, as well, that his purchasing power is his own, to be applied, with respect to all things legitimately on sale, according to his own discretion and judgment. The trade unionist's right to the so-called "primary" boycott has been recognized by the higher courts in the country, and he asserts the same right in every successive application he deems fit to make of it. A trade unionist further holds that his union is legal; that it has a right to exclude unqualified workmen from membership; that its rules and by-laws are an element in determining the legitimacy of a strike. He holds that it is not unlawful to attempt to peacefully persuade persons not to enter or remain in the employment of any one against whom a strike is being carried on. He, of course, holds that a strike is lawful when directed against an employer with whom the striking workmen have a direct dispute with regard to wages or conditions of labor for the purpose of obtaining a betterment of these conditions. He also holds that no restraining order or injunction should be issued by any court as against striking or locked-out employes which would not be issued against other citizens and not even against workers who were not engaged in a strike or lockout with employers. He holds that an injunction rightfully lies to protect from injury property or a property right of the party making the application for which injury there is no adequate remedy at law, such property or property right to be described in detail in the application. He holds that no right to continue the relation of employer and employe can lawfully be construed as property. He holds that it can not lawfully be regarded as a conspiracy for two or more persons to agree concerning the terms or conditions of employment of labor or the determination of any relation between employer and employe, nor concerning any act to be done or not to be done with reference to a labor dispute, unless the act or thing agreed to be done or not to be done would be unlawful if done by a single individual.

The trade unionists hold that in case of lockout or strike, their representatives, in their rightful enjoyment of the common property of the community, may go about anywhere in the public highways just as may be done by other citizens—no more, no less. They hold that they have a right to approach persons in the public highway and in a peaceful manner converse with them for the purpose of informing them of actual conditions, facts, and circumstances in regard to labor disputes, and if possible inducing them not to enter into or not to continue in the service of an employer. In all cases trade unionists regard a trial by jury as a fundamental right of a citizen charged with an offense against the laws. They are prepared at all times to maintain as a primary principle that courts should be restrained from enjoining members of a union, as they are restrained from enjoining other citizens, from exercising the rights of free speech and of a free press.

Often have decrees and decisions issued by the lower courts been revised and modified by the higher courts. Nearly all labor officials of experience are today acquainted with the clearly illegal character of those decrees of the lower courts which have often been eliminated, at least partially, by their superiors or have been refused by other courts, their equals. Whereas, for example, peaceful "picketing" and "patrolling" are frequently forbidden by one court, they are upheld by another. The same is true of approaching non-unionists on the streets, or, in the words of an injunction, "interfering with any person or persons who now are or may hereafter be in the employment of the complainant or desirous of entering the same," etc. Likewise as to union action, or, in legal parlance, "any scheme or conspiracy among unionists for the purpose of preventing persons from continuing in the employ of certain employers." Unionists have been enjoined from "following any products of the plaintiff's business for the purpose of learning what person or persons have purchased such products;" "or in any way interfering with the conduct of business by the plaintiff as now carried on by him," etc., etc.

All such indefinite and far-reaching inhibitions find no legitimate place in injunctions. They are a perversion of the intent and purposes of the injunctive writ. If any trade unionist should be guilty of violating any law, we ask no immunity for him; we insist that the course to be pursued by justice is arrest, indictment, and trial by jury.

It is time that the unjustifiable peremptory charges, brow-beating, censures, and threats of fines and imprisonment by injunction Judges should cease.

It is time for the laboring people to know precisely how far their rights carry them when facing courts in labor disputes.

We have been assured by high judicial authority that "the modern writ of injunction is used for purposes which bear no more resemblance to the ancient writ of that name than the milky way bears to the sun." Judges have not only restrained and punished the alleged commission of crimes defined by statute, but they have proceeded to frame a criminal code of their own, extended as they have seen proper, by which various acts innocent in law and morals have been made criminal. The tendency of the jurisdiction of the "equitable octopus called injunction," has been to "grow and extend perpetually and unceasingly."

The people of this country have witnessed, in the course of a celebrated injunction case, how it has dragged on until years have been consumed, how the trade unions have been subjected through it to extraordinary expenditures, and how the injunction which began it has been used during all that time as a menace to prevent the proper and rightful activities of workers.

To our 1908 Denver Convention, I took occasion to report:

"It is quite evident that it is the purpose of labor's opponents to entangle us in constant litigation before the courts, involving not only our time and attention, but enormous expense for legal counsel, printing, and court fees. The expenditures of time and money have been enormously increased in recent times, since the further abuse of the injunction writ and the Hatters' decision of the Supreme Court, all of which have been taken advantage of by all union haters." . . .

"The contempt proceedings against Messrs. Mitchell, Morrison, and myself have just closed. The Executive Council or I may again be cited for contempt of court because I have undertaken to report the status of the case to this convention; and no one can foretell to what limits the contempt proceedings, injunction cases, and other suits may extend. For one, I am free to say that I shall not recommend the levying of additional assessments or making appeals for voluntary contributions in legal defense of these cases. If it is the intention of those who are hostile to the interests of the toilers of our country, to take advantage of the trend of court decisions for the usurpation of the toilers' rights by the injunctions, let them proceed as they will without our assuming to do the impossible—that is, to be represented by competent legal counsel. If the situation is to become so acute, let us personally, as best we can, defend our rights before the courts, taking whatever consequences may ensue. For one, I can see no remedy for these outrageous proceedings, unless there shall be a quickening of the conscience of our Judges or the relief which the Congress of our country can and should afford."

The committee to which this subject was referred made a report, upon which ensued a prolonged discussion and which was finally amended and adopted by the convention, as follows. (The committee quoted part of my report upon the subject, which has already been mentioned herein):

"Bearing this in mind your committee desires to state that whenever the courts issue any injunctions which undertake to regulate our personal relations either with our employer, or those from whom we may or may not purchase commodities, such courts are trespassing upon our relations which are personal relations, and with which equity power has no concern; that these injunctions are destructive of our rights as citizens, as well as of popular government, and we therefore declare that we will exercise all the rights and privileges guaranteed us by the Constitution and the laws of our country, and insist that it is our duty to defend ourselves at all hazards, and we recommend that such be our action, taking whatever results may come.

"We further recommend that when cited to show cause why such injunctions should not be issued, we should make no defense which would entail any considerable cost, and we further recommend that when cited for contempt the proper policy is as outlined above. We further desire to warn our fellow unionists that testimony extorted under equity process may be partially used in a damage suit under the Sherman Anti-Trust law.

"However, your committee feel constrained to say that when blanket injunctions are applied for or issued by the courts against the members of unions for no other reason except that they are members of the unions, and these injunctions are applied for or issued solely for the purpose of intimidating the members, we believe that such legal advice and protection as may be necessary should be provided for them by the organizations in interest."

Since that declaration of our 1908 convention the situation has not materially changed, except that events have made it, perhaps, more acute.
